The summer winds came dancing in ...

Relive summer memories and view some cool things for Fall that could make coming back a little easier (See Arts & Living)

Campus leaders address the issues

This year's Student Leadership Conference offers members more with an extended agenda (See page 81)

UMass football set for a championship

Running back Rene Ingoglia looks to tackle the Yankee Conference in his final season with the Minutemen (See Sports, D6).

Inside This Issue

Around The Town	Page A5	Local News	Page B1
National News	Page A7	Faculty & Administration	Page B4
International News	Page A8	Comics	Page B9
Editorial/Opinion	Page A10	Arts & Living	Section C
Developing Nations	Page A12	Sports	Section D

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 1 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Back To School, 1995

Peace Plan brings end to Liberian civil war

COURTESY OF ASSOCIATED PRESS

Followers of former rebel leader Charles Taylor took the streets of Monrovia to celebrate the agreement between warring factions that brought peace to Liberia. After a civil war that left more than 150,000 dead and over one million refugees, Liberia now looks to a more promising future.

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

MONROVIA, Liberia — Former rebel chief Charles Taylor offered a grudging apology Saturday for atrocities during the civil war, but said the conflict had made Liberia a better place.

Making his first public appearance since being sworn into a new government Friday, Taylor arrived at City Hall.

He swept up to the back entrance in a blaze of sirens, enclosed in a jeep with vanity plates sporting his middle name, Ghankay.

He entered the auditorium surrounded by security men, who stood in the isles with their arms crossed as the crowd of several hundred erupted in cheers.

Taylor, who led a rebel invasion against the government on Christmas Eve 1989, said the "zeal" with which people entered the uprising accounted for "some of the pitfalls of the exercise."

"It is true many things went wrong," Taylor said. "I ask at least for Liberians' forgiveness" for things we may have done that may not altogether have pleased them.

More than 150,000 people were killed during the conflict that went on for nearly six years. More than half of Liberia's 2.6 million people were forced from their homes.

Still, Taylor insisted, because of the war "Liberians, now more than ever before, appreciate the need for democracy. Today, opportunities abound."

The war came to a formal end Friday when Taylor, his two main rival rebel leaders, and three civilians took their seats on a transitional government that will rule until elections next year.

The four smaller rebel groups not represented in the new government agreed to support the peace plan in exchange for Cabinet jobs.

The first Cabinet appointments announced Saturday gave the bulk of seats to the top three factions, however, raising fears of more political squabbles.

Taylor said he would push the new government to impose price controls on rice and other staples, re-open schools and encourage private investment.

But he refused to say what should be done to compensate victims of the war he began. He portrayed his National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) as a victim.

"I do forgive those who have done things to me and to this organization," he said, without mentioning atrocities in which the NPFL was implicated.

They include civilian massacres and the forced recruitment of child soldiers.

On Saturday, a group of civilians arrived in Monrovia from Taylor's headquarters in Gbarnga and said they had been beaten up and robbed by NPFL soldiers along the highway.

Taylor said trying to correct wrongdoings now would "dig up old wounds," and said the task should be left until after next year's presidential election, which he hopes to win.

Campus drugs affect Amherst

By Paul Hayes and Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Last December a 17-year-old Amherst high school student died of a heroin overdose after allegedly purchasing the drug from a University of Massachusetts student.

John Ciarametaro, 23, of Rockport, awaits trial at the Northampton District Court House on charges of involuntary manslaughter and distribution of a Class A substance.

Harrison Klate allegedly bought the heroin from Ciarametaro at their workplace, the Classe Cafe, according to court documents.

According to Criminal Law and Procedure, any person who knowingly distributes a Class A substance to a person under 18 years of age "shall be punished by a term of imprisonment in the state prison for not less than five nor more than 15 years." A fine may also be imposed.

Klate, who died on Dec. 15, of last year, was described by Ciarametaro as an "avid substance abuser." The two met that fall when Klate began working with Ciarametaro at the Classe Cafe.

Suspected drug dealers

A year before Klate's death, Gloucester authorities notified Amherst Police that Ciarametaro and his brother Mark, were suspected of drug trafficking, according to an article in the August 27, 1995 Boston Globe Magazine, which played up the drug scene at UMass and in Amherst.

On December 19, four days after Klate was found dead, UMass Police entered the Ciarametaros' dorm room in Butterfield with a search warrant. They found five glassine wrappers, three razor blades, and one plastic straw — all with heroin residue, according to court documents. One plastic baggie with marijuana bud content and two packages of rolling papers were also found.

"John was not found in possession of anything but the clothes on his back," said defense attorney Thomas Whitney.

Mark's lawyer, attorney Rick Gorgon, was not available for comment.

John Ciarametaro said he was unaware of any previous investigation by UMass police. UMass police said they did investigate, but refused to comment on the investigative methods.

Although Boston Globe Magazine writer Daniel Golden portrayed Amherst as an area with heavy drug usage and drug trafficking, there were no arrests in Amherst for possession or trafficking of class A substances during the fiscal year from July 1993 to June 1994.

"The [Boston Globe] article basically blames the high school and hippy parents, which I don't think is fair," said Sarah Reid, a friend of Klate for seven years.

Heroin in Amherst

"I knew people who had legal trouble like mine, but they never went to court due to deals and bargains," Ciarametaro said. "People involved in my case would have been prosecuted if they didn't make a deal with the police."

According to Amherst Police lieutenant Jeff Roy, if an individual is found in possession of a Class A substance an arrest is made.

"We didn't have evidence enough to charge anybody in the 1993-94 fiscal year [for such a possession]," Roy said.

The bail for the Ciarametaro brothers was reduced because a third brother plans to attend UMass this semester, and the legal fees were a financial strain on the family, according to Phil Cavanaugh, associate director of the campus police department.

"There has been an open drug scene at the University of Massachusetts for a long time," Ciarametaro said.

Turn to DRUGS, page A9

Calipari signs 10-year contract

$5 million deal keeps basketball coach with Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

The NBA's phone may have been ringing, but he wasn't interested in taking the call — at least not any time soon.

University of Massachusetts' Basketball coach John Calipari agreed to a 10-year contract rumored to be worth an estimated $5 million. His base salary will remain the same but the increase in pay will come in coach Cal's radio and television shows which will now be owned by the University, said media relations.

Other incentives that were already part of his current contract include profits from any road game he wishes, speaking engagements and an incentive for making an NCAA appearance.

According to media relations, the deal will officially be signed at some point during the first week of the semester.

There was wide speculation of his departure for the bright lights of the NBA but that was put to rest with the announcement. Several professional teams, including the Boston Celtics and Miami Heat had expressed interest in the coach.

According to Sept. 2 Boston Globe article, Calipari would not give any exact figures or comments on the contract except to say that, "I am looking forward to being at UMass for a long time."

In raising the level of the basketball program at UMass he has raised the price of his services to that of the top coaches of the collegiate ranks.

In his tenure in Amherst, Calipari has taken an unranked team in 1988, to a club that has been in the top 25 for the past seven semesters, including a number one ranking that held for five weeks last season.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Seven-year Minuteman basketball coach John Calipari decides to make it ten after signing contract with UMass.

In his seven seasons on the bench, UMass' overall record is 158-69. They have only missed a postseason once since his arrival, that being his first year. In the '90s, only Kentucky and North Carolina have more wins than the Minutemen.

This past season was one of pressure for Calipari, as the prior two years had been disappointments to the program being eliminated early in the NCAA tournament both years. In the 1995 edition, he lead his team further than ever as UMass marched into the Elite Eight before falling to Oklahoma State.

Calipari has been a large part of the community surrounding as well as the University itself. Last Spring, in an effort to help upgrade the library, he made a $10,000 donation. He has also been a promoter of business in the area.

UM prof testifies in molestation case

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

The expert testimony of an anthropology professor from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst won the acquittal of a Muslim Albanian-American who was wrongly accused of child molestation.

Dr. Barbara Kerewsky Halpern, an adjunct professor, was a key witness in the Texas court case. When the case was first tried, it ended in a hung jury.

"I convinced most of the jurors," said Halpern.

However, the retrial last year was more successful, Halpern said.

"There was no abuse," said Halpern, "but there was alleged abuse in the eyes of certain observers."

Halpern lived and worked in ethnically Albanian villages in the southern part of former Yugoslavia for over 40 years, both as a scholar and a mother of small children. Therefore, she was not only able to discuss the case with the accused, Sadri Krasniqi, in Serbo-Croatian and Albanian, but she also understands the cultural norms of Albanian society.

The Albanian-American parents, as well as Halpern and other experts in the case, were interviewed by Hugh Downs in a July 18 episode of "20/20."

In court and on television, Halpern was able to show that Albanians are "demonstrative" about their affection for each other. Albanian fathers kiss their daughters "full on the lips," and grown men hold hands, said Halpern, who stressed that there is "no sexual

Turn to TESTIFY, page A3

NATHAN MARTIN/COLLEGIAN

Protesting in the name of motherhood

NORTHAMPTON — At left, a group of women nurse their babies on the steps of the Northampton Courthouse, to protest a court officer's treatment of Connie Forcier, when the officer demanded Forcier stop breastfeeding her child in the courthouse. At right, Kristin Karl, of Holyoke, nurses her seven-month old at the demonstartion. Activists plan to broaden the campaign to make breast-feeding more accepted.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Notices:

Auditions — The Pioneer Valley Cappella will hold auditions on Sept. 5 and Sept. 7 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall at the Fine Arts Center. Openings are available for all voices. Some choral experience and sight- singing ability required. For more information call Tom at 536-3072 or Karen at 259-1646.

Theater — Lost in the field, a new play by Terrance D. Haynes and Geprge C. Eastman will be performed Sept. 8 and 9 at the Northampton Performing Arts Center. All seats are $8. For information call 586-1798.

Auditions — Amherst Leisure Services Community Theater will hold auditions for its January production of Peter Pan on Sept. 10 and 17 from 3 to 6 p.m. at the Bangs Community Center. Youth and adult parts are available. For more information call 256-4065.

Financial Aid — Students receiving William D. Ford Direct Loans and/or Federal Perkins Loans are asked to sign their promissary notes Sept. 11-22 (upperclass and graduate students) or Sept. 18-22 (first-year and transfer students) from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Memorial Hall. A photo identification and the complete name, address and telephone number of two references are required.

Auditions — The Hampshire Choral Society will be auditioning new members on Sept. 12 and 19 at 6:30 p.m. at First Churches, 129 Main St in Northampton. The works in progress are Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and the Brahms Requiem. Annual dues are $40. Waivers are available per financial need. For more information call Judy Wardlaw at 549-6787.

Benefit — "A Celebration of Women's Voices" will showcase the music, poetry and performance art of women on Sept. 14 at 7 p.m. at the First Churches in Northampton. Tickets are $5 to $10 on a sliding scale basis. Profits will go to various non-profit Pioneer Valley organizations. For advance ticket purchases call 582-7961.

Dance — The Hooked on Swing society will hold its monthly swing dance on Sept. 16 at the Northampton Center for the Arts. A Beginner's West Coast Swing Lesson will run from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. and the dance will run from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. For more information call 582-7938.

Are you a budding writer? Interested in Journalism?
!! THE COLLEGIAN WANTS YOU !!
Come down to the newsroom and talk to an editor
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

ART SUPPLIES!
10% Discount with Student ID
20% off Selected Items in our Sale Flyer
Guild Art Center
102 Main St., Northampton
Monday - Saturday, 9:30-5:30 • Thursday Nights until 9:00
Sundays 12:00-5:00
Art Supply - 413-586-6343 • Guild Studio School - 413-584-3299

A MUSEUM OF FINE SEQUENTIAL ART, COMIC BOOK AND FANTASY ILLUSTRATION SPANNING 50 YEARS OF HISTORY IN THE MEDIUM WITH AN EMPHASIS ON THE LAST 20 YEARS.
140 Main Street
Northampton MA 01060
413-586-8545
ADMISSION PRICES
Adults - $3.00
Seniors & Students - $2.00
Children - $1.00
WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM
JULY 15 - OCTOBER 1
THE WORK OF FRANK MILLER
OCTOBER 3 - DECEMBER 3
LIZARDS & BROADS
AN RETROSPECTIVE OF FEMALE AND BABE BIRD
TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, AND SUNDAY 12PM - 5PM
THURSDAY, FRIDAY, AND SATURDAY 12PM - 8PM
STORE OPENS ONE HOUR EARLIER (EXCEPT ON SUNDAY)

The Collegian
Currently has openings for the following positions:
Editor in Chief
Black Affairs Editor
Jewish Affairs Editor
2 Staff Artists
Any undergraduate interested in these positions can obtain an application from the Managing Editor in the Collegian Newsroom
113 Campus Center
(The basement, opposite end from the ATMs)
For more information call 545-3500 weekdays 8:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.

Decorate Your Room, Get Silly with Mickey and Bugs, Godzilla, Betty and Popeye, Dorothy and Toto, Scarlett and Rhett, Star Wars and Star Trek
LULU'S
TOYS • ART • POSTERS
FROM THE MOVIES
271 Main Street/Northampton/(413) 585-9448

The Only Thing We Haven't Changed Is Our Name.
We've invested over two million dollars to make you feel at home in an elegant, spacious new setting, now with 100 stylish rooms designed for your personal comfort. You'll enjoy modern business and communications services, complimentary continental breakfast, easy access to area campuses, shopping and restaurants, and opening in September, an exclusive Premier™ accommodations section for business travelers. Call 1-800-654-2000 for reservations when planning that next business trip. You're going to find the all-new Howard Johnson at Amherst a very refreshing surprise.
HOWARD JOHNSON.
AMHERST/HADLEY
401 RUSSELL STREET HADLEY, MA 01035 (413)586-0114

QUEER AS A THREE DOLLAR BILL

Gays get the blame

On June 15, 9-year-old Rachel Carver was found beaten to death in Washington state. The same day, her uncle, Jason Wickenhagen, was arrested and taken into police custody, where he confessed to the killing. Social workers later reported that the girl had been sexually molested for much of her life by her father, her uncle and her mother's boyfriend.

Almost two months later, on August 9, Spokane, Wash., coroner Dexter Amend held a press conference to discuss the results of his formal autopsy. Amend announced he had found evidence of sexual abuse, including sodomy, and blamed gays for the killings.

"Sodomy is a homosexual act. It is. To have everybody thinking homosexuality is OK is a bunch of baloney," he said. "All they think about is sex and lust all the time."

A protest campaign has been launched by the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, a media and political watchdog organization. As a result of the remarks he made at the press conference, Amend may be subject to disciplinary action and perhaps even forced to give up his elected position as coroner.

FOX does it again

In yet another example of media daring, this fall the FOX network will be premiering a new sitcom called "The Crew" that features an out and, hopefully, fully functional gay character.

The show, which follows the lives of four airplane flight attendants, is the creation of producer-writers (and gay couple) Marc Cherry and Jamie Whooten.

National news shows professor's story intention" in these actions.

TESTIFY, continued from page A1

The producer of "20/20," filmed an Albanian community on Statten Island. The footage proves Halpern's observations of Albanians are accurate.

Although Sadri Krasniqi won his freedom, he has lost his children due to a dual legal procedure which separates family court and criminal court. While Halpern was busy giving the judge and jury her "mini course in cultural anthropology and linguistics" that won the case, Child Protective Services conducted a "hurry-up adoption" finalized two days before the acquittal, according to Halpern.

The fact that the adoptive parents are Born-Again Christians brings further anguish to Sadri and Sabethe Krasniqi, who had been raising their children as faithful Muslims. The Krasniqis immigrated to the United States in 1971 so they could have religious freedom, according to the "20/20" segment.

When Sabethe was granted visitation rights, she found her son wearing a "Jesus Saves" t-shirt and her daughter wearing a Christian cross. She confessed to her mother that she had been forced to eat pork.

The arrest

The story began six years ago when eight-year-old Urtim could not participate in a Tai Kwan Do tournament unless a parent was present. This requirement conflicted with the Albanian norm in which the lives of men are separate from the lives of children, especially school-age children more than seven years old.

However, Sadri attended because his American-born son begged him to go, even though Saturday was the busiest day of the week at the four pizza restaurants the Krasniqis owned.

"Normally child care is exclusively women's work [in Albania]," according to Halpern.

When Sadri's four-year-old daughter, Lima, begged to go along, he consented. The father and daughter, surrounded by spectators in jeans and t-shirts, were conspicuous because of their more formal clothing. Neither Sadri nor Lima understood Tai Kwan Do. During the long tournament, Sadri videotaped his son and played a language game with his daughter.

When Lima grew restless, Sadri "placed her on his knees and tapped her on the buttocks," according to Halpern. "One woman in the bleachers saw the man patting his daughter on the bottom and misconstrued it as inappropriate behavior."

Plainclothes police arrived and charged Sadri with child molestation.

The courts

There is no Albanian word for "child abuse." There is not even such a concept, according to Halpern. In the "20/20" interview, Sabethe said she would have killed her husband if she believed the allegations to be true and that Sadri knows that.

After the conviction, Sadri was advised to admit his "crime" in order to receive a lighter sentence. However, Albanians live by an ancient code of honor that does not permit lying, Halpern said.

Child Protective Services recommended that Sabethe divorce her husband and retain custody of her children. According to Halpern, Sabethe replied, "I am Albanian. We marry for life."

After the first six months, Sabethe inadvertently violated a court order by taking the children to visit their father at one of his restaurants. According to Halpern, Sabethe believed the restraint was only valid in the home. Regardless, the Krasniqis lost custody of their children.

The young social worker judged the Krasniqi home to be unfit. She was appalled to find Urtim in his underwear (an Albanian norm), and to see the two children sharing a bedroom. She did not realize that visiting relatives were staying in one of their bedrooms, Halpern said.

Over the next six years, the children were placed in 13 different care facilities. In the "20/20" interview, Sabethe told the story of how her son tried to commit suicide by jumping out of a second-story windows because he missed his mother. Urtim was stopped by his younger sister.

According to Halpern, the Krasniqis were forced to sell their pizza restaurants to pay legal expenses. They do not know where their children are and they have no visitation rights.

The "20/20" segment explained that Dr. Paul Prescott, the leading Texas authority on child abuse, was never called to testify in family court, although he was the first physician to examine the children, at the request of Child Protective Services. Prescott found "nothing that would substantiate a claim of child abuse."

According to Halpern, the parents are praying national exposure will help them get a retrial, this time with Prescott and Halpern as expert witnesses.

"Perhaps there's a way to redress the terrible wrongs done to this family," said Halpern in a June news release, "wrongs based on a local community's ignorance and misperceptions."

According to Halpern, one week after "20/20" aired, producer Bill Wallace had already received over 500 responses — more responses than any previous segment.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Barbara Halpern helped an Albanian Muslim win his freedom from wrongful charges.

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, as a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating optometrists are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Frederick R. Haines, II, O.D. Optometrist, UHS Eye Care Program

University Health Services • 549-2671 X244

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e) J-1 Waivers
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
National Interest/Extraordinary Ability
Relative Petitions
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1163 Main Street - 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103, 413-781-6370
13 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060, 413-584-3232

"Back to school" sale!
COWLS Kits!
Kit includes
• Lumber (COWLS pine boards)
• Fasteners (KVCorner Clips)
A Bedside Tab $23.99
B Bookcase $28.99
Sale priced thru Sept.30
Bulletin Boards
Corkboard 17"x23" $3.99
Other styles from $6.59-$35.99
Combination Padlock $3.99
Oscillating Fans $9.69-$17.49
Clip Lamp $7.99
COWLS BUILDING SUPPLY
1 mile north of UMASS Campass
7-5 weekdays • 8-3 Saturday
413-549-0001

Advil
Pain reliever / Fever reducer
INDICATIONS: For the temporary relief of minor aches and pains associated with the common cold, headache, toothache, muscular aches, backache, for the minor pain of arthritis, for the pain of menstrual cramps, and for reduction of fever.
SUMMER'S OVER.
Thank goodness there's Advil.® Advanced medicine for pain.*
Pick up your free sample at The University Store.
*While supplies last during back rush. Advil contains ibuprofen. Use only as directed. ©1994 Whitehall Laboratories, Madison, NJ

4 four opportunities to learn about arts management at the Arts Extension Service
1 Introduction to Arts Management, 3 credits
Meets Mondays, 4 to 6:30 p.m. Offered through the Division of Continuing Education (Fee waiver available to qualified students through support from the UMass Arts Council)
2 Internships at AES/credit possible
• Development (fundraising) • Arts for social change research • Publications marketing • Artist Business Library
Meeting: Wednesdays, Sept. 6 and 13, 4 p.m., 602 Goodell
3 Work Study Positions
• congenial staff • nationally respected organization • great experience
4 The Artist in Business Library houses over 600 reference volumes, periodicals, directories and three job listing publications.
Interested? Call AES, 545-2360 or stop by 602 Goodell.
AES is a program of the Division of Continuing Education

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Play from the wrist

Brian Tinkel (center) leads practice for quad–line of the UMass Minuteman Marching Band. (L to R) Jonathan Boisjolie, Tim Cormier, Jared Smith and Steve Mcgrath.

GLBT students receive support from variety of UMass activities

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Compared to most high schools, towns and cities, the University of Massachusetts offers gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender (GLBT) students numerous opportunities to find community and support for their sexual orientation.

These opportunities range from membership in political organizations to outdoor celebrations like last Spring's Queer Fest, held on the Library Lawn.

"Compared to other places its size, the Pioneer Valley is probably a very good place for gay people to live," said Sarah Pease, acting director of the UMass Stonewall Center, the campus GLB resource agency.

"The range of culture is much more limited than in, say New York, Boston, or San Francisco, but next to some county in Pennsylvania or just about anyplace else this size, it's a great place," Pease said.

At UMass, besides the Stonewall Center, there are four major resources and support centers serving the GLBT community: The Stonewall Center, the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, the Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization, the Chancellor's Task Force for GLBT Matters, and the 2 in 20 Floor for GLBT Students and Their Heterosexual Allies.

The Stonewall Center

Celebrating its tenth anniversary this fall, the Stonewall Center was created to serve GLBT students, faculty and community members, as well as heterosexuals.

According to Pease, the Stonewall Center offers many in– house resources at its offices in Crampton House in Southwest, including a free lending library, pamphlets, posters and the largest computer database on GLBT resources in the Pioneer Valley. The center has a full professional staff that keeps the office running 9–5, five days a week.

"Depending on what you come in for, you can use the library for some research, watch a video, or just take advantage of the peace and quiet to read a book," Pease said.

The Stonewall Center operates several other services on campus, including a GLB Speaker's Bureau, a monthly newsletter called Blatant, LAMDA, a 24–hour automated telephone information line and a GLBT information service available on the Internet through the UMass gopher.

The center sponsors the GLB Studies Brown Bag Lecture Series, which brings in speakers from all over the country to lecture on GLBT issues. In the past, speakers have addressed a wide range of topics, from censorship to transsexuality to AIDS to racism. The lectures are held every Wednesday at noon in the Campus Center and are free and open to the public. Students who make advance arrangements can attend the talks for University credit.

Plays, poetry readings, comedians, concerts and the LGB Cafe Series also come to UMass via the Stonewall Center. Kate Bornstein, the Flirtations and several other prominent GLBT performers have visited the University in the past few years.

The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance

Formed as a registered student organization in the early 1970s under another name, the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance (LBGA) continues to serve UMass GLBT undergraduates through meetings, dances and other support services.

The LBGA office, located on the top floor of the Student Union, is a comfortable room filled with couches, books, newspapers, magazines and a large bulletin board listing GLBT resources and events. During the school year, the office is staffed by student volunteers who offer their time to visitors in need of assistance.

Every Tuesday night, the LBGA sponsors "Info–Socials" in the Campus Center that allow GLBT students the opportunity to socialize and exchange information with each other. Discussion topics range from coming out to parents to how to deal with homophobic teachers and roommates. Meetings sometimes feature videos, guest speakers and food.

During the school year, the LBGA is responsible for three main activities. National Coming Out Day on October 11 usually involves a rally on the steps of the Student Union. Last year Queer Fest was an all–day outdoor festival that took place on the lawn next to the Campus Pond. The LBGA also holds monthly dances.

Graduate group and task force

The Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization was formed in 1991 as a graduate–level equivalent of the LBGA. This organization has a representative in the Graduate Student Senate and holds weekly meetings and social activities, including a Friday evening coffee social in the Graduate Lounge.

The Chancellor's Task Force for GLBT Matters is a group of staff, students, administration and faculty that meets to assess the needs of the local community. This organization led the fight for domestic partnership recognition at UMass and continues to advocate the establishment of a GLBT Studies Program. This fall the task for will release a booklet with course listings for GLBT–related classes being offered in the Five College Area.

2 in 20

The 2 in 20 Floor for GLBT Students and Their Heterosexual Allies is a special interest residential program that offers GLBT students the safety and community that might not be available in other on–campus housing arrangements.

UMass is one of the only universities in the country that has a program like the 2 in 20 Floor and since its inception three years ago, the floor has had a lot of success. GLBT students live in a coed environment complete with special workshops and a bi–annual open house.

"The 2 in 20 Floor is a safe space for GLB folks to live without question," said Anne Marie Peavey, who has served as the floor's resident assistant for over two years. "It's a community in which we can support each other and live free of harassment."

Students at UMass have access to many more GLBT resources and services, including classes at UMass and local colleges, GLBT–sensitive counseling, protection from discrimination and mediation provided through several UMass agencies and local GLBT businesses, political organizations and social groups that are open to students.

GEAR UP FOR Campus Survival!

IN THE DORM

49.99 Voice-activated micro answerer
Don't miss important calls when you're not in your room. Remote operation. #43-752MB

24.99 Basic trim phone saves space
Lighted keypad for dialing in the dark. Three colors. White #43-585MB; Almond #43-596MB; Gray #43-587MB

59.99 Upright cordless phone won't tie you down
CCT circuitry provides excellent clarity and range. Handy base-to-handset paging. #43-1005MB

79.99 EACH Shielded die-cast 2-way A/V speaker
Great for use near PC or TV. 4" woofer and 1" soft-dome tweeter. Black #40-2048MB White #40-2059MB

34.99 AM/FM cassette music system with E-Bass
Compact speakers let you share the music, headphones let you listen privately. #14-1209MB

19.99 Indoor TV/FM antenna improves reception
Fine-tuning control for clearer picture and sound. #15-1808MB

IN THE CLASSROOM

39.99 Microcassette recorder
Great for recording class notes. Easy one-hand operation. Two speeds. #14-1159MB

39.99 Scientific calculator
Stores up to 12 frequently used formulas and runs them with just a few keystrokes #65-808MB

49.99 Advanced thesaurus
Small enough to carry in your backpack or purse. #63-2104MB
Franklin is a registered trademark of Franklin Electronic Publishing, Inc

Survival check list
- ❑ Phone cords and accessories
- ❑ Alarm clock or clock radio
- ❑ TV, VCR and video accessories
- ❑ Security devices
- ❑ Computer and accessories
- ❑ Batteries
- ❑ Stereo equipment, speakers and audio accessories
- ❑ Heavy-duty flashlight
- ❑ Smoke alarm
- ❑ Part-time job (see the manager of your local Radio Shack store)

AC accessories to power your dorm
4-outlet adapter. 2-prong. #61-2621MB 2.99
6-outlet surge protector in metal housing. #61-2131MB .. 22.99
6-outlet adapter. For 3-prong outlets. #61-2622MB 3.99
6-outlet power strip. Master on/off switch. #61-2150MB .. 8.99
Single-outlet spike protector. #61-2791MB 6.99
6-ft. 3-outlet ext. cord. White #61-2745MB. Brown. #61-2745MB 1.99
9-ft. 3-outlet ext. cord. White. #61-2746MB. Brown. #61-2747MB 2.39
15-ft. 3-outlet extension cord. #61-2748MB 3.49

Prices apply at participating Radio Shack stores and dealers. Items not available at a participating store can be special-ordered (subject to availability) at the advertised price. A participating store will offer a comparable value if the product is sold out. Independent Radio Shack dealers and franchisees may not be participating in this ad or stock or special-order every item advertised. Copies of applicable warranties are available upon request at stores for inspection before sale, or by writing Customer Relations, 1400 One Tandy Center, Fort Worth TX 76102. FedEx trademarks used by permission.

Radio Shack Gift Express
We can wrap a gift, add a card and ship it anywhere in the US via FedEx® delivery service. For a store near you or to order, call 1-800-THE-SHACK℠

Radio Shack®
You've got questions. We've got answers.℠

THE REPAIR SHOP® at Radio Shack
Out of whack? Out of warranty? We fix most major brands of out-of-warranty electronics. For a store near you, call 1-800-THE-SHACK℠

~ AROUND TOWN ~

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS DE QUETZALCOATL/COLLEGIAN

Jenkins for Mayor

Shelan Jenkins, a 19 year-old Springfield resident, is running on an independent ticket for the position of mayor. She hopes to get people involved in the process of change. The Collegian will be printing an interview with Jenkins on Thursday.

UMass' Quasimodos toll the bells

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Hour after hour, year after year, the bell tolls and hardly anyone thinks twice about the Quasimodo Club.

Jim MacRostie, Director of Operations at the Fine Arts Center and executive secretary of the club, describes himself and his colleagues as "a company of clandestine campanologists." Officially, the four men are known as the Campus Chime and Caroline Committee.

"Do you know what a campanologist is?" MacRostie asked. "Well, campanology is the study of the art of ringing bells in towers."

He stood beside John Nelson, the clock expert, admiring the Old Chapel — its Romanesque arches, the Massachusetts coat of arms over the doorway, the years engraved in stone representing graduating classes from 1890 until 1915. Only a few other miscellaneous years are present, as interest in the chapel started to fade.

"This shows how the students cared about the chapel," MacRostie said.

The engravings were discovered about eight years ago when ivy was removed from the side of the building that currently houses the University of Massachusetts Minuteman Marching Band.

The building called "Old Chapel" was built in 1884, the second oldest building on campus after South College. It functioned as a chapel until 1915, when Bowker Auditorium was opened. Old Chapel became the campus library, until Goodell was built.

In 1890, a classic nineteenth century movement, or tower clock, was installed. Until 1935, students were paid 29 cents an hour to wind the clock once a week, according to MacRostie.

Then the clock, which is still gravity-driven, was set up to wind electrically. However, every time the University clock system was adjusted, the tower clock was unable to keep up because its gears could not function due to the fact only gravity pulls the gears, according to Nelson.

Last fall the clock was put on an electric system independent from the University, Nelson said.

Occasionally, someone will manually ring the bell or the chime, at least once a month and on special occasions. Years ago, it was rung every day, said MacRostie.

"I don't know if I'll go all the way up," said MacRostie, peering up the ladder-like stairway. A moment later, he and Nelson made the climb — MacRostie carrying his cane and Nelson carrying a paper bag.

At the top of the stairs, Nelson deposited a bird carcass in the bag, explaining that in 1986 there were so many of them up there that the clock could not function.

"To ring the bells you've got to have a little muscle," said MacRostie. "You use your hands, your feet and everything else."

That "everything else" includes balance. The rope used to ring the bell hangs down that steep stairwell leading up to the tower.

"Now this is called a chime, not chimes," said MacRostie. To be plural, the chime must have two octaves, he explained.

MacRostie gave the giant wooden keys "a good solid wham." Outside, the chime could be heard clearly. Inside the tower, however, the prominent noise was the banging of the clavier, the set of levers that allows the chime to be played somewhat like a piano.

Although MacRostie did make some noise, only Ken Samond, a nutrition professor, still plays the chime.

Samond learned to play the chime as a high school student in Springfield, Illinois. Years later, when he was a faculty member at Harvard, Samond volunteered to fix the chime at Mission Hill Church in Boston. Then, he played for two years before coming to UMass, where he has rung the chime for four years.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Bell Master Ken Samond plays the "bell chime" in the Old Chapel tower last week.

Congress returns for political fight

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fresh from a summer break, majority Republicans in Congress are ready to engage in historic battle with the Clinton administration and congressional Democrats over how much — and how fast — to shrink the government and its huge budget deficit.

Into the next three months or so, Congress will try to cram years of legislative work on such complex and divisive issues as welfare reform, tax reduction and federal health care spending.

But that's not all. There are other fights to be fought, including a possible attempt to override Clinton's veto of a bill lifting the arms embargo against Bosnia. The Senate commences hearings on the FBI shootout at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, in 1992 and the House still has to act on a Senate-passed counter–terrorism bill offered in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing.

By comparison, congressional action through the first eight months of this year — including the GOP's vaunted "Contract With America" — has been little more than a preliminary skirmish.

Overshadowing it all is the possibility President Clinton and the first Republican-controlled Congress in 40 years will be unable to find common ground on spending and taxes. Such a scenario raises the specter of a protracted shutdown of the government and possibly even a first-ever default on the national debt.

"At some point, if we're going to avoid a real disaster, these folks have got to start talking to each other," said political science Professor Charles Jones of the University of Wisconsin. "But I just think strategically it's to their advantage to push it right to the edge."

In a sense, the big questions already have been answered.

In June, Clinton conceded Republicans' main points: the budget should be brought into balance. Medicare spending should be reined in and there should be some tax cuts.

But GOP lawmakers have so far largely ignored the president's prescription for how to achieve those goals. He wants to balance the budget in nine years — they want to do it in seven. He wants to trim projected Medicare spending by $89 billion over seven years — they want to squeeze $270 billion in Medicare savings. He wants a tax cut of $105 billion and wants to focus much of it on encouraging secondary education — they want to slash $245 billion, dividing the cuts between families with children and businesses.

Unless Republicans unexpectedly alter their plans, Clinton this month and next almost certainly will veto some of the 13 appropriations bills needed to finance government operations during the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The House has passed 11 and the Senate six. But the two chambers have worked out a compromise on only one, a $2.2 billion measure paying for Congress' own operations. After its expected approval by both the House and Senate, it likely will be the first of the 13 to reach Clinton's desk.

To avoid stalemate, Congress and the president eventually will have to compromise because the Republican majorities — 54-46 in the Senate and 233-201 in the House — fall far short of the two-thirds necessary to override a veto.

Reaching a compromise, however, won't be easy. And failure to enact appropriations bills in time could force a shutdown of agencies and departments — anywhere from a few hours to a few days, which has happened as recently as 1990.

After the appropriations bills comes a giant budget reconciliation bill, governing spending on automatically paid benefits such as Medicare, Medicaid and welfare and would include any tax cuts.

Its passage is not required to keep government going but it is essential for reducing the deficit. So, GOP leaders are threatening to tie it to a measure raising the federal debt ceiling from the current $4.9 trillion.

Failure to increase the debt limit eventually would shut down the federal government. The administration could juggle things for a few weeks. But by mid-November at the latest it would face defaulting on Treasury securities. Since that would risk sending financial markets into a tailspin, each side is counting on the other to blink.

No matter how events play out, each side has a lot to lose politically, either from being blamed for intransigently causing a fiscal crisis or for caving in on core principles.

One of the new Republican majority's goals will be to show that it can govern while Clinton's political goal will be to demonstrate he can both work with a Republican Congress and curb its perceived excesses, said former Congressional Budget Office Director Robert D. Reischauer.

"Republicans have to keep this in mind: If they meet the president halfway, they're giving his re-election effort a big boost," said Reischauer, now at the Brookings Institute, a Washington think tank.

Professor claims tobacco education is not getting its fair share of funds

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Whenever a tobacco product is purchased, a portion of the money goes towards programs aimed at preventing and ending the use of the narcotic. However, some say not all of this money is being used for its intended purpose.

"Question One" is a state ballot initiative which raised the state tobacco tax by 25 cents per pack of cigarettes and on smokeless tobacco by 25 percent of its wholesale price.

The goal of the agenda is to provide funds for tobacco education and prevention programs, as described in a report co–written by University of Massachusetts professor Michael Begay.

The money raised by Question One is deposited into the Health Protection Fund (HPF), said Kathy Cary, Chief of Staff for State Senator Seal Hicks (R–Wayland), a proponent of Question One.

Diversion of funds

In their report, published this August, Begay and fellow professor Stanton Glantz of the University of California said many organizations designated to receive Question One funds are receiving less money than they should.

One reason these organizations received inadequate funding is that the first budget was based on 18 months, or one and a half fiscal years, worth of Question One raised HPF funds, said State Senator Stan Rosenberg (D – Amherst.)

Last year's budget was based on only a single fiscal year's worth of funds, resulting in a lesser amount of money being available, Rosenberg said.

He added that another factor for programs receiving decreased funding is the smoking cessation is working, resulting in fewer cigarettes bought and less money being given to Question One.

However, according to Cary, the HPF receives in between $9 and $10 million dollars a month.

For the 18 month period Hicks and other advocates got $96 million approved for the HPF, yet last year only $77 million was appropriated for HPF use, Cary said.

If the state is receiving $100–$120 million a year through Question One, they could still afford to give the HPF $96 million, Cary said.

Some programs funded by the Question One tax are being criticized for not really being eligible to receive HPF funding. These are programs that would have received money from the state general fund.

"This year $5 million is going towards a fire safety program," Rosenberg said. "Part of the program will supposedly teach against smoking at home or in bed."

"The connection [of the fire safety program] to Question 1 is so tenuous, I voted against it," Rosenberg continued. "But the proponents voted for it."

Yet, Cary disputed Rosenberg, saying Hicks was indeed opposed to the "diversion."

The first time the proposal to fund the fire safety class, a $2.5 million request, was introduced it was defeated, Cary said.

She added that the second time it was put to a vote, this time request ing $1.25 million, State Senator John O'Brien (D–Andover) announced on the Senate floor a request by the Coalition for a Healthy Future, which supports Question One.

According to Cary, he told the proponents to vote in favor of the fire safety course, saying that the Coalition was allowing it to "take the heat off their backs." Subsequently, the proposal passed.

Competing programs

"Maybe we gave more money than we should to the other programs," Rosenberg said of other programs that were not strictly smoking cessation and prevention programs. "But we felt that they were in tough shape and they could not have survived long enough to receive state funds."

Begay's report shows these "other" programs are receiving both state and HPF funds, resulting in a 9.5 percent or 14.5 million dollar rise in their funding.

Programs relating to the cessation and stopping of smoking, however, only receive HPF money, the report said.

The report also showed, as indicated by Rosenberg, the amount of HPF money available is becoming significantly less due to actual smoking cessation, a misappropriation of funds on non–tobacco programs and a failure of the coalition which passed Question One to mobilize support to keep an eye on where the money is going.

The result of this, as shown by Begay's findings, is a 19 percent decline in tobacco education funding.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The Rainbow Connection

Jamie Bishop, 11, of Hadley, looks through her tube balloons during Staff Appreciation Day held on Sept. 1. The celebration was for UMass staff and their families.

Your Ad Could Be Here
Collegian Advertising
545-3500

Shop The University Store For . . .

School, Art And Dorm Supplies

Large Selection ★ Reasonable Prices

Binders
Notebooks
Paper
Pens
Brushes
Paints
Folders
Printer Ribbons
Tape

Lamps
Extension Cords
TV Cables
Audio Supplies
Shower Totes
Bedspreads
Mirrors
Hooks
Posters
And More!

Everything For Back To Campus

EXTENDED HOURS FOR YOUR SHOPPING CONVENIENCE
Wednesday, September 6 & Thursday, September 7
Open 9am to 5pm

Healthcare, Beauty Care, Eye care, Cosmetics, Hair care & Cold and Flu Medicine

Why Leave Campus?

The University Store has a Large Selection of Health & Beauty Care Products

Watch for "In Store Specials" with Extra Low Pricing

4 Convenient Locations To Serve You:

• Worcester Munchy
• Franklin Munchy
• Hampden Munchy

Close By Wherever You Live On Campus

Coffee • Tea • Donuts • Bagels & More
Sandwiches and Salads
For a Quick Snack or Meal
Frozen Foods • Dairy & Grocery Products
School Supplies • Dorm Supplies

Franklin & Hampden Munchy Open Mon - Fri 8:30am - 9pm
Worcester Munchy Open Mon - Fri 8am - 9pm
All Stores Open Sat, Sun & Holidays 12 - 8pm

• The Mini Store

Centrally Located in The Student Union

Newspapers • Candy • Juice • Snacks
School Supplies
Open Mon - Fri 7:30am - 10pm
Sat & Sun 8:30am - 10pm
For Your Shopping Convenience

HAT SALE

Choose From:
Game • Starter
Twins • Top of the World
Proline • Roman
And Many Others. . .

ONE WEEK ONLY
$2.00 Off All Hats in stock
May not be combines with other coupons
Reg. Hat Price $_____
Expires 9/13/95

Check Out Our Large Selection Of NEW UMass Clothing

UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • 545-2619
Mon - Fri 9am-5pm • Sat 11am - 3pm

~ NATIONAL ~

Hoffa Jr. announces candidacy

Namesake wants to lead Teamsters, following father's legacy

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

DETROIT — Every Sunday as a young boy, his father would pile the family into their black Cadillac for an afternoon drive.

Invariably, he'd lead them to the kind of place he launched his career — a picket line.

By the time the boy was a teen, his father was leader of the largest, richest labor union in the world. By the time he was an adult, his father was a criminal behind bars, while the son, a young lawyer, fought to free him.

Now, 20 years after his father disappeared in what is widely assumed a mob-linked murder, James Phillip Hoffa, son and namesake of one of America's most famous and powerful labor bosses, wants to lead the Teamsters.

On Labor Day, he's set to announce his candidacy for union president.

"I'm not going to sit back and watch the union that my father built be destroyed," he says from his office, decorated with a poster of the Jack Nicholson movie "Hoffa."

"Today, I look at a union that has fallen on hard times, that is really in financial trouble ... that needs leadership."

Hoffa, a labor lawyer who has done mostly Teamster work for 26 years, vows to stem the union's dwindling membership and shrinking assets. "I've been preparing for this all my life," he said confidently.

While he is eager to talk of flaws in the Teamsters of present, he's less inclined to analyze the rampant corruption of the past.

"I think the most important thing is what are the Teamsters now — not what they were," he said. "I live in 1995 and I hope you do, too."

He regards Teamster scandals (three presidents, including his father, sent to prison) as history, and rejects as a "media view" a suggestion the elder Hoffa was notorious. In his 54 years, he said, the legacy of his name has served him well.

"Ninety-eight percent has been very positive. I don't dwell on the other 2 percent," said the blond, burly, 5-foot-9 former college linebacker. In fact, he signs autographs and "Hoffa" caps and even inscribes a not always-flattering biography of his father — he said the book is balanced.

His father's influence is so vast, he said, that he met a young man on a Michigan picket line last year with the word "Hoffa" shaved in his scalp. When he asked why, the young man told him:

"Because Hoffa means a strong union."

Hoffa's own strength as a candidate will be tested in the fall of 1996 when he tries to oust Ron Carey as president of the 1.4-million member International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Though the election is more than a year away, the name-calling and finger-pointing already have begun, with accusations that both men have ties to organized crime — charges they both deny.

Hoffa claims Carey has negotiated awful contracts, divided the members and pushed the Teamsters to the edge of bankruptcy. Assets dipped so low the union strike fund was depleted for 16 months — $55-a-week benefits were reinstated Sept. 1.

Stagnant wages fuel '90s profits

By James H. Rubin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Business profits have soared in the '90s largely because the wages of American workers have been kept stagnant, according to a report released Saturday by a think tank affiliated with labor groups.

"Increased profitability in the 1990s is not the result of greater investment or an acceleration of productivity," said the Economic Policy Institute. "Business profits have been fueled by stagnant or falling wages."

The institute study said after-tax profits last year were the highest in 25 years, greater than at the end of earlier postwar recoveries.

Hourly compensation would have been 4 percent higher for all workers last year had profit rates in the 1990s averaged what they did in the period from 1952 to 1979, the report said.

The study said in the last six years, hourly pay, when adjusted for inflation, has remained the same or declined for all but the top 20 percent of male wage-earners and the top 30 percent of women in the work force.

Private economists did not dispute the findings but offered different interpretations of the significance of the data.

"I better get my handkerchief out," said Michael Evans, who runs his own economic forecasting service in Boca Raton, Fla.

"Maybe people are being paid what they're worth. That could be called economic Darwinism. Some people think that's unfair."

Sung Won Sohn, chief economist with Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis, a bank holding company, said it is misleading to view corporate profits and wage trends as opposing forces.

"We're all capitalists," he said. "We own pensions that are invested in corporations. Very few workers do not have a stake in capital."

Sohn also said the revolution in computer and information technology has contributed to rising profits and productivity, eliminating blue-collar jobs in the United States and sending them overseas.

But the Economic Policy Institute said its study shows other factors at work, including a trend begun in the early 1980s that allows corporations to keep more of their profits after taxes.

The percentage of corporate income paid in taxes has fallen from an average of 44.3 percent in the 25-year period that ended in 1978 to 32.4 percent in the 1980s and 31 percent now, the study said.

The report also said that pre-tax profits for businesses have risen as firms cut costs by holding down wage increases and eliminating jobs.

The hourly wage of the median male worker declined 1 percent per year from 1989 through 1994, the study said.

"Business profits are up, but the vast majority of Americans continue to work harder for less," said Lawrence Mishel, a co-author of the study and research director for the institute.

THE BAYBANK STUDENT VALUE PACKAGE®

IT'S ALL YOU NEED -

checking, savings, credit, the BayBank Card and more - at a low package price with no minimum balance requirement![1] The Student Value Package℠ comes with:

- BayBank Student Value Checking® plus a companion Savings Account
- The BayBank Card for unlimited BayBank X-Press 24® transactions[2]
- BayBank X-Press Check® to pay for purchases anywhere MasterCard® is accepted
- A BayBank Visa® or MasterCard with a credit line of $300 or more
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection with no annual fee
- CheckView® with no monthly fee

Open your Student Value Package today! Visit our Amherst office at 78 East Pleasant Street, or call 1-800-BAY-FAST® anytime.

CHECK US OUT ON THE WEB AT http://www.BayBank.com LIVE in September

BayBank®

[1] To get the BayBank Student Value Package, you must provide proof of current student status. Credit products are for qualified applicants who are 18 or older.
[2] Other fees, such as transactions at X-Press 24 CASH® machines, non-BayBank ATMs, and designated point-of-sale terminals, are additional.
Member FDIC Equal Opportunity Lender

The
Student Legal Services Office

Providing free legal services to fee-paying UMass Amherst students

Helping you in many areas of law!

Including:

- Family
- Housing
- Criminal
- Immigration
- Civil Rights
- Consumer

Call Today! 545-1995

922 Campus Center

Most UMass students are free. Program-fee graduate students, continuing education students and certain other students may be eligible for a nominal fee.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES

The collegian is looking for ambitious self-starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"

GREAT PAY

EXPERIENCE

Applications are available at:

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center

Deadline for applications:

September 15, 1995

YOU CAN FIND EVERYTHING AT

A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer

45 South Pleasant St., Amherst, MA
413-253-2840 FAX 413-256-6378

Across Form The Amherst Common

- Gifts from New England
- Newspapers - Periodicals
- Maps & Guides
- College Clothing
- Stationary & Greeting Cards
- Office Supplies
- Puzzles & Games
- Faxing Services
- Notary Public
- Friendly Staff
- Best local knowledge in the area!
- Three Generations Since 1914

20% OFF This Coupon is worth 20% OFF ANY ONE ITEM at A·J·Hastings, Inc. Expires 9/15/95 20% OFF
45 South Pleasant Street, Amherst, MA • 413-253-2840 FAX 413-256-6378

~ INTERNATIONAL ~

Lawmakers gather for protest

Foreign politicians protest planned French nuclear testing

By Christophe Marquand
Associated Press

PAPEETE, Tahiti — Foreign lawmakers and thousands of Tahitians paraded through the capital's streets Saturday, denouncing French President Jacques Chirac and demanding he cancel planned nuclear test blasts in the South Pacific.

Up to 3,000 protesters filled Papeete's main street at midday. As they passed a "peace village" built to commemorate the rally, some sang hymns and others denounced Chirac.

Flags from Japan, Australia, New Zealand and European nations, carried by contingents from their parliaments, waved beside the banner of the Tahitian independence movement and placards criticizing France.

About 100 foreign legislators joined the march, including Japan's Finance Minister Masayoshi Takemura, who arrived early Saturday with 23 other Japanese lawmakers.

"It is not too late for President [Jacques] Chirac to turn back from the nuclear testing," Takemura said. "Nuclear weapons are a relic from a previous era."

French officials complained to Australia and New Zealand, saying the presence of their legislators amounts to meddling in France's internal affairs by providing allies for Tahiti's independence movement.

France was widely expected to set off an underground nuclear blast soon, ending a 3-year-old moratorium. French authorities have said only that the eight or nine explosions will occur between September and May.

The tests are to be held on Mururoa and Fangataufa atolls, 750 miles southeast of Papeete, the capital of French Polynesia, which has become the focal point of the anti-nuclear movement since France announced the tests.

Polls show more than 60 percent of the French public oppose the tests. Chirac contends they are needed to develop technology to simulate future tests by computer. He said he will sign a global test-ban treaty after the tests, a promise that has done little to stop the outcry.

Up to 15,000 demonstrators were expected to protest Saturday, as were about 100 legislators from Japan, Europe, Australia and New Zealand. It was to be held in a soccer stadium.

Harry Wood, an Australian lawmaker, said the lawmakers hoped to highlight "the amount of opposition right throughout the Pacific and other countries."

Hundreds of Tahitian independence activists blocked two highways leading into Papeete Friday evening. A motorcyclist was injured when he tried to run the roadblock. One of the roadblocks remained in place Saturday, snarling traffic in Papeete.

The protesters were angered by the detention of independence leader Oscar Temaru, who was aboard a Greenpeace ship when French commandos stormed it Friday just inside the territorial waters of Mururoa. The commandos also seized another ship, the MV Greenpeace, just outside the 12-mile limit.

Temaru and 22 others were flown in handcuffs to Papeete, where they were released. Greenpeace spokesman Tom Clements in Washington said "the entire flight of 23 was in handcuffs, and not treated too well."

Temaru led Saturday's parade. French military officials said some of those detained would be prosecuted for entering Mururoa's territorial waters.

Greenpeace claimed the commandos used sledgehammers to smash radio and satellite equipment on board the Rainbow Warrior II and severed the ship's radio cables. Greenpeace released a videotape of the raid showing the commandos breaking into the control room with blowtorches.

A French military spokesman in Paris declined Saturday to comment on the Greenpeace charges.

Penelope Komites, a Greenpeace spokeswoman in Paris, said the environmental organization might sue the French government for piracy because it seized the MV Greenpeace in international waters.

The French said the ship carried a helicopter that flew over the test site to film military installations.

"International law was manifestly broken," Francois Baroin, a government spokesman, told France-Info radio in Paris.

The French navy also intercepted nine Greenpeace inflatable rafts, some of which made it into a lagoon of Mururoa.

A Greenpeace statement from Washington said five Americans — including American Samoa's non-voting delegate to Congress, Eni Faleomavaega — were on the Rainbow Warrior II.

A U.S. State Department spokeswoman, Phyllis Young, said the French government confirmed Faleomavaega was taken to Tahiti and freed. She said she was unaware of any other Americans on board.

Reforms offered by Mexico's PRI party

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Between upbeat statements about Mexico's recovering economy, President Ernesto Zedillo made an unusual promise last week: to loosen the once-imperial presidency's exclusive grip on power.

Political commentators welcomed the announcement as a step toward full multiparty democracy for Mexico, where the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) has held power since 1929.

"It is an important factor in breaking the vicious cycle that still exists between the government and the official party," said an editorial Saturday in the newspaper Reforma.

Zedillo promised in his first state-of-the-nation address Friday to create a Federal Auditor's Office that would make the legislature — instead of the president — responsible for public spending.

The PRI has stayed in power through a mix of patronage, electoral fraud and intimidation. Since taking office Dec. 1, Zedillo has pushed through reforms to strengthen the judiciary and appointed the first attorney general from an opposition party.

Giving a legislative body oversight of the executive branch is a fundamental part of balancing branches of government, Zedillo said.

"The creation of a high-level Federal Auditor's Office within the Congress would correct the current erroneous practice by which the body inspected is also the inspecting body," Zedillo said. "It would encourage impartial, transparent, credible and reliable rendering of accounts to the nation."

Zedillo's promise to cede some of his office's power went unnoticed in some newspapers, which focused on his upbeat message about the Mexican economy, that he declared is recovering.

But it could ultimately prove more important to building a true democracy in Mexico.

The move also would help to separate the government from the long-ruling PRI and ensure that state money isn't funneled to the party for election campaigns and patronage projects, commentators said.

"The executive cannot continue being his own judge and must create the Federal Auditor's Office to oversee public expenditures and diminish the high grade of corruption," said political scientist Lorenzo Meyer, in comments published by Reforma.

The federal Attorney General's Office is investigating charges the ruling party exceeded spending limits in the southern state of Tabasco, in which PRI candidate Roberto Madrazo Pintado was declared the winner.

Madrazo Pintado's opponent, Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador of the leftist Democratic Revolutionary Party, maintains that Madrazo's campaign spent the equivalent of $39.5 million, and said he believed at least some of that came from the government. The legal limit was $633,000.

Brunei's ruler keeps things simple

By Vijay Joshi
Associated Press

BANDAR SERI BEGAWAN, Brunei — Except for the sultan's 1,778-room palace, lit up at night like a giant pearl, tiny Brunei is modest about its vast oil wealth.

Schools and hospitals are free, but no fleets of Rolls-Royces cruise the tree-lined streets of this sleepy Southeast Asian capital. There are no skyscrapers, only squat British colonial-era buildings.

Instead of yachts on the Brunei River, there are traditional houses on stilts. Women wear sarongs and Muslim head scarves, not fashions from Paris or Milan.

And Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah, absolute ruler of Brunei's 276,000 people, wants his isolated nation on the northwest coast of Borneo to stay that way.

"We wish to be left alone, and free from foreign intervention," he said in 1984, shortly after independence from Britain.

That sentiment is understandable. Five hundred years ago, Brunei dominated an area stretching from modern-day Malaysia to the Philippines. But after centuries of encroachment by its neighbors whittled away most of its territory, Brunei's rulers were forced to ask for British protection in the late 19th century.

Today, Brunei is the size of Delaware, surrounded on three sides by the equatorial rainforest of the Malaysian state of Sarawak. Jungle still covers more than 90 percent of its territory.

But beneath this tiny land and the seas off its shores lies a giant consolation prize — rich reserves of oil and natural gas that make Brunei the Kuwait of Southeast Asia.

Pumping out 150,000 barrels of crude a day, the oil wells support an economy that provides Bruneians with an average income of nearly $17,000 a year, among the highest in the world.

In addition to paying for clinics and schools, the sultan also heavily subsidizes food, fuel and housing costs. There is no national debt, no trade deficit and no government budget deficit.

Imports supply 80 percent of the country's food, although the Kedayan and Dusun tribes in the hinterlands still raise vegetables and fruit and breed chickens.

The 49-year-old sultan, whose Istana Nurul Iman palace is the world's largest residence, presides over $37 billion in foreign assets, including the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Some say that makes him the richest man in the world. With the modesty of a modern Muslim ruler, the sultan responds that most of the money isn't his — he's just managing it on behalf of Brunei.

The sultan's legendary generosity drew him into controversy when it was revealed that he gave $10 million to Oliver North in 1986 for his clandestine scheme to arm the Contras in Nicaragua. Brunei asked for its money back.

Brunei's fountain of oil wealth isn't expected to run dry for decades, but the government realizes it can't rely on just one export.

"The economic future of [Brunei] depends considerably on the country's oil and gas reserves," the sultan said recently. "At the same time, of course, we have to diversify the economy.

His government has allocated $321 million over the next five years to develop industry, agriculture, forestry, fishery and trade.

Area Government

Elections

will be held on
Wednesday September 20, 1995
Pick up your nomination form in the SGA Office
424 Student Union Building
Nominations close at 5:00 p.m. on Monday, September 18, 1995

For more information, please call 5-0341 or stop by 424 Student Union Building

http://www.BayBank.com

(MORE FUN THAN LAUNDRY. PROMISE.)

BayBank

ARE YOU AN ARTS & SCIENCES MAJOR OR PRE-MAJOR?

Come to the new Arts & Sciences
Undergraduate Deans and Records Office!

We have reorganized to provide you with one-stop services for your special needs.

If you have questions about
• meeting graduation requirements …
• academic policies or procedures …
• completing your foreign language requirement …
• moving from pre-major to major status …

… PLEASE SEE US!
Location: E20 Machmer
Phone: 545-2192
Hours: 8:30am-4:30pm weekdays

ARE YOU UNDECLARED?

Come to the new University Advising Center!

This new Center provides one-stop advising services for students who are undeclared or seeking to change academic programs.

• If you have questions about add/drop, course registration, or entering a major …
• If you need assistance with an academic policy or procedure …
• If you have trouble in your classes and do not know where to get help …

… PLEASE SEE US!
Location: E20 Machmer
Phone: 545-2191
Hours: 8:30am-5:00pm weekdays
Email: advising@casiac.umass.edu

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

There goes my clean record

A University of Massachusetts police officer takes Alyson Richards' fingerprints for Kid Care awareness. Her prints will then go into a national file of records.

Noho hospital offers interpretive services

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Cooley Dickinson Hospital is now offering access to approximately 30 trained interpreters speaking Spanish, Khmer, Polish, Russian and Vietnamese, in recognition of "an increase in non-English speaking patients from the Pioneer Valley," according to a press release.

"For a hospital of this size in a community of this size, I think this is very progressive," said Peter Schoenberger, Director of Public Relations at the hospital.

Hospital staff from any of the facilities in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton can contact interpreters through Casa Latina through use of pagers 24 hours a day, according to Schoenberger.

Cooley Dickinson is able to offer this service through a collaboration with Casa Latina, a Northampton community agency which Schoenberger described as "a gathering place for Hispanics in the community" where "help with language and cultural issues" may be found.

"We've seen the need for interpreters in our community, especially in the Spanish community," said Janet Gonzales, who works for Casa Latina and is coordinating the program. The interpreters have been called several times a week since the program started in June, said Gonzales.

Interpreters can be requested to interpret oral or written communications during emergency care or appointments. These situations include "direct patient care, signing forms, understanding discharge instructions, medical decision- making, pre-assesement visits or examinations and family or interagency meetings," according to the press release.

"Casa Latina recruited bilingual community residents with at least two years of college experience and guided them through 45 hours of instruction in medical terminology, patient confidentiality, safety and emotional preparedness," said the press release.

Interpreters are paid by the hospital on an hourly basis.

Other languages may be added to the program depending upon patient need and interpreter availability, according to the press release.

If no interpreter is available, Cooley Dickinson will rely on the AT&T Language Line service that accesses interpreters in over 140 languages over telephone lines.

Arnold Chaban, one of the Russian interpreters, became interested in the program when Casa Latina publicized its new interpreter course last spring.

Chaban, a bilingual resident of Northampton, already used interpretation skills at the Western Massachusetts settlement agency for refugees where he works, since many of the refugees in this area are Russian.

"Some of [the course] was very challenging even though I am quite fluent," Chaban said.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Hey Ingoglia, catch this!

Local kids try to throw a football through a tire at the Staff Appreciation Day. Approximately 300 people were in attendance to celebrate University employees.

Orientation program aids minority students

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

At the New Students Orientation, incoming minority students are introduced to a service designed to cater to their often more sensitive needs.

Founded in 1969, the Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS) uses a portion of the orientation schedule to give students new to the University of Massachusetts an overview of typical situations they may experience.

However, unlike the general orientation, the CCEBMS staff covers ground not included in the regular New Students agenda.

"We touch on different cultural issues," CCEBMS peer counselor Shannen Magee said. "And we feed them stuff they'll remember."

In order to make the material more accessible to students, Magee and her fellow peer counselors perform simple skits which address various campus issues such as sexual promiscuity, alcohol and drugs, time management and the aforementioned cultural adjustments.

The skits are followed by both large and small group discussions for the purpose of personalizing the topics, according to Magee.

In addition to the skits, which primarily focus on the social aspects of university life, the universal obstacles many students may face are also covered. Among the most important are financial aid and academic success.

Magee said that financial aid is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain in the needed quantities for many CCEBMS students.

"There's not as much financial aid available," she said. "We lost many students to lack of financial aid last year. From orientation, everyone is not guaranteed to be here the first day."

Yet, while monetary support may be limited, CCEBMS' peer counseling and tutoring programs almost ensure that academic support is not.

Sidonio Ferreira, an academic advisor at CCEBMS, said both means of assisting students in their education process are invaluable, especially the peer relationships.

"It's very positive for first-year students to interact with older students," he said.

Ferreira also said he believes by polling last year's first- year students about their CCEBMS orientation, this year's effort was made more effective.

"Most of the evaluations we got back were very positive," Ferreira said of this year's results.

According to Ferreira, much of the success can be attributed to the unorthodox manner in which the potentially dull information is presented to the University newcomers.

"We didn't just throw information at [new students]," he said.

Magee agreed the frank manner in which the counselors deals with the many dilemmas students may face makes the CCEBMS presentation valuable to the orientation process on the whole.

"We had a lot of one–on–one with [new students]," she said. "I think we got our point across very well."

Playground a reality because of local bank

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Amherst and Hadley children will have a Northampton based bank to thank for helping them buy new playground equipment.

Up to $7,500 in funds raised by both the Hadley PTO Playground Committee and the Leisure Services for the Town of Amherst, to go towards purchasing the equipment for both towns, will be matched by the Florence Savings Bank.

The fund raiser began on August 14, the opening day of the banks newest branch in Hadley and is scheduled to end on September 16, the day of the new branches grand opening celebration.

"They wanted to help the community in which they just opened the bank in," said Paul Benjamin, president of the banks advertising and public relations firm the Benjamin Company.

"We're doing very well, there's a lot of contributions," said Barbara Kellogg, Co-Chairperson of the Hadley PTO Playground Committee, about the progress which her group has made in raising funds.

Linda Chalfant, the Director of Leisure Services for the Town of Amherst, also said that her group is receiving a generous amount of donations.

Ways in which the groups receive donations have taken on many forms, said Chalfant, from raffles and car washes, to simply having people send them checks. Each group has raised approximately $2,200 each.

The final fund raising event is a bike-a-thon which will take place on the day of the grand opening celebration, donations will be made by the distance the participants go, Benjamin said.

He also said there will be two levels of participation, one for adults and one for children. People can also rollerblade, jog and walk the bike course.

While this fund raiser will put a lot of money towards creating playgrounds, there is still a lot of money to be raised to achieve the goal of $40,000 to build the playgrounds, Benjamin said.

"We'd be very open and receptive to students who want to help in a community program such as this," said Chalfant. "Any group that wanted to help out can call leisure services."

There are no future fund raisers planned by the Florence Bank as of now, but, said the banks Director of Marketing, Douglas Burr, "We're always looking for community events in an area we could tie into, to communicate our philosophy of being concerned for the community."

drugs

continued from page A1

"Someone with a bad habit might do 10 packets a day, where as someone who is a beginner might only do a half a packet," said Ciarametaro, who allegedly sold three packets to Klate on the night of his death.

According to an affidavit, Klate snorted the heroin with a friend that evening.

"The ingestion of heroin in whatever form is addictive," Cavanaugh said. "Hard core users inject it because that's going to satisfy their craving in a much more expedient manner."

"There are just options in life," said Reid, "and they all have some consequences."

Your Ad Could Be Here
Collegian Advertising

Bike thefts reduced through UM registration program

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Over 700 bicycles were reported stolen last year from campus, according to University of Massachusetts Officer Lawrence Holmes.

As a measure to combat the high number of thefts, the University of Massachusetts Police Department recommends that students register their bike with the McGruff Licensed Bicycle Registration Program, use Public Safety's free engraving service and a Kryptonite U-lock.

"People don't steal things they can't sell," Holmes said.

Once a bicycle is registered with the McGruff Program, a tamper resistant label is placed on the bike to indicate it is registered. The owner needs to notify the registry before selling the bike.

The McGruff Program is administered on behalf of the National Crime Prevention Council by the American Center for Bicycle Registration. Once a bike owner fills out the application, which is available at Public Safety and pays the $5 fee, the bike is registered nationally.

In addition, a Certificate of Bicycle Ownership and a personalized registration card are provided in the package.

Student bicycle owners may also take advantage of Public Safety's free engraving, a service that is used by many campus departments, as well as students, to mark computers and other expensive equipment.

Last spring a UMass student was able to prove ownership of his lost bicycle that was for sale by matching his birth date with the date engraved on the bike, according to Holmes.

Officer Neil Lunney of Public Safety has noticed a trend over the years toward more expensive bicycles, such as mountain bikes.

A chain lock can be fairly easily broken at the weakest link, as Lunney was able to demonstrate in just seconds.

Lunney recommends a Kryptonite U-lock, which is advertised to be "the strongest U-lock in the world." It comes with a key engraved with a record number so that a replacement key may be ordered if the original is lost.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
is looking for responsible individuals interested in graphic design and desktop publishing to work night shifts during the week or on Sundays. Anyone interested should contact Jim or Marni in the Graphics office, room 102 Campus Center or call 545-1865

Hairworks PLUS
HAIR, NAILS, TANNING AND SO MUCH MORE!
Campus Plaza
454 Russell St.
Hadley, MA 01035
413-253-3334

Area Government
Elections
will be held on
Wednesday September 20, 1995
pick up your nomination form in the SGA office
422 Student Union Buiding
Nominations close at 5:00 p.m. on Monday September 18, 1995
for more information please call 5-0341 or stop by 424 Student Union Building

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Blkomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Fleming Sports Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Position Vacant Staff Artist
Syed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

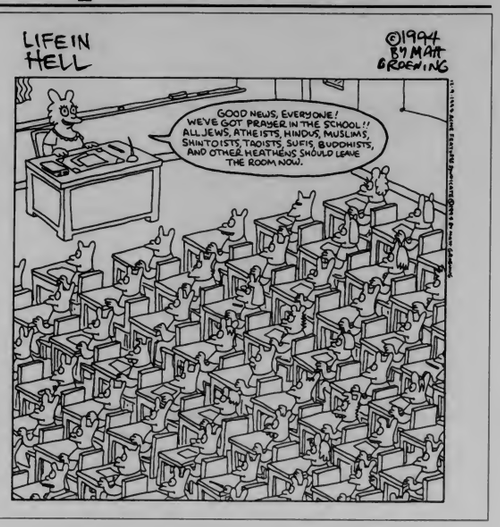
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial



LIFE IN HELL
©1994 By MATT GROENING
GOOD NEWS, EVERYONE! WE'VE GOT PRAYER IN THE SCHOOL!! ALL JEWS, ATHEISTS, HINDUS, MUSLIMS, SHINTOISTS, TAOISTS, SUFIS, BUDDHISTS, AND OTHER HEATHENS SHOULD LEAVE THE ROOM NOW.

Kids Will Be Kids

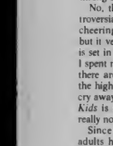
Two young teenage boys who look barely old enough to drive are sitting on a couch in a crowded, smoky room, both staring down at the marijuana that they are breaking up and rolling on the table. Their conversation ranges from how messed up they are going to get tonight, to how hard they are going to have to scam in order to get some unsuspecting female into bed with them. They finish, light up and head off into the throng of bodies to begin their hormonal conquests.



Matt Audette

No, this isn't a scene out of Kids, the controversial movie by Larry Clark that has critics cheering and parents screaming blasphemy, but it very well could be. Rather this scenario is set in the small, extremely hick town where I spent my summer vacation. How hick? Well, there are only approximately 500 students in the high school and it's grades 7–12 — a far cry away from the New York City streets that Kids is set in, but upon closer examination really not that much different at all.

Since Kids has been released nationally, adults have protested that the film unfairly portrays the way America's youth behaves because it focuses on such a small sub-culture of adolescents (lower-class, New York skateboarders). They claim all kids are not really that bad. And yes, they are right. Most teenagers are indeed probably not as bad as the characters in Kids presents its viewers with. But the film is definitely trying to make a point by being completely in your face — even at the risk of being offensive.

Kids is offending, but it is making a bold statement that we as a culture are seemingly refusing to accept; with AIDS, drugs, the media and general lack of parental supervision, being a teenager today is a whole different story than it was 10 years ago.

Sure "kids will be kids," drugs have and probably always will be around, and casual sex has now become the norm. But watch Kids for even just five minutes and you will see an apathy, even borderline hollowness, in the characters that is downright frightening.

What is even more frightening is when you take a close look at the teenagers around you in your own life, guaranteed it won't take long and you see some of that aforementioned apathy staring right back at you.

The self-destruction that we see on the movie screen in Kids is going on everywhere, though in different degrees than what the film presents. In my hometown it is easier for a teenager to buy marijuana, acid, or even cocaine, than it is to get a case of beer. In the neighboring town, at any time of day, one can walk downtown and purchase their drug of choice directly in front of the police station.

Ask any kid in town where to "score" and he'll immediately point you in the right direction. The question that remains is: if a bunch of confused, pimply adolescents know all this, how can all the adults not? Last year alone in my town two kids were paralyzed from the neck down in two separate drunk driving related accidents, and at least a handful of teenage girls became pregnant. Have we really come so far that it is easier to turn our heads away than to address the problem head on?

It is hard not to notice in Kids that there is an obvious lack of any kind of authority figure around. The young characters in the film just come and go and do whatever they please, and unfortunately this is not too far away from the truth. More and more teenagers seem to be left to do whatever they want and to decide amongst themselves what is morally right and wrong.

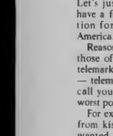
When I saw Kids in the movie theater a week ago I couldn't help but notice an interesting pattern. Throughout the course of the movie, disgusted adults kept standing up one by one and leaving the theater. By the end, all that was left was a small group of young people, some who looked a bit too young to adhere to the theater's "no one under 18 admitted" policy. As I walked out, many of them were whooping, laughing and giving each other high fives. (I even heard one person remark that "it was the funniest movie he ever saw.")

Maybe we should start seeing Kids for what it really is — not an exact blueprint of what it's like to be a teenager today, but rather a wake up call.

Matt Audette is a Collegian staff member.

World of Lunacy

As I clear away the cobwebs that have formed over three months of summer in a vain attempt to prepare my brain for the abuse of random memorization that the fall has inevitably brought every year for the last 15, I reflect on the idiocy of mankind this summer has taught me to appreciate.



Evan Young

Well ... let's rewind that statement a little. Let's just say I now have a finer appreciation for the general stupidity of America. Here are some reasons why:

Reason No. 1: Telemarketers. For those of you who don't know what telemarketing involves, here's a hint — telemarketers are the people who call you almost every night at the worst possible moments.

For example, you are an inch away from kissing someone who you've wanted to kiss for your entire life when the phone rings. You answer, and someone who can't even pronounce your name tries to sell you a Bear Mountain Express Mastercard.

I worked for a telemarketing company this summer for about seven hours, and in that time I talked to about 300 people. I eventually sold a credit card to some lady who spoke almost no English.

Reason No. 2: The O.J. Simpson trial. The good citizens of America have let this idiotic farce go on for much too long. But, we should all take comfort in the fact that there is a direct ratio between the amount of money you are willing to spend on your defense and the chances of your not being convicted of a crime.

Maybe if Susan Smith had a few million dollars to spend on a superstar defense team she would have been found innocent, and the Motor Vehicle guy who inspected her brakes would be on death row. Money just doesn't talk anymore, it picks up a cellular, calls some people, pulls a few strings and allows the guilty to go free.

Reason No. 3: Well, if you haven't heard of it already, visual harassment will be coming soon to a city near you. This summer in Minneapolis, enough women were bothered about being stared at (technically "ogled") by construction workers that they got the courts to hand down what is now a penalty for visual harassment. (For those of you who think this sounds like a joke, it is not. This is life in Minnesota.)

If you stare at a woman walking by you for 10 seconds or more, you can be fined. They can take away your hard–earned money if you are caught performing what is basically one of the last sacred forms of male entertainment that still exists — checking out chicks.

This whole visual harassment thing brings a number of questions to my mind. Will there now be (in addition to meter maids) vision maids running around the streets with stop watches, handing out tickets? If you look at a girl for 9.99 seconds, can you look away really fast, reset the visual shot clock, and earn an additional 9.99 seconds of unhindered ogling? So what comes next — Olfactorial harassment? If a few men forget to wear their deodorant and walk by a group of women with sensitive noses, can they be hauled away?

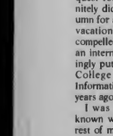
Will posters of Big Brother start going up next to TV's and video cameras everywhere in the city?

Well, these are just a few reasons why life in Australia seems much more stimulating than life in our country. The really scary thing that I learned this summer, though, is that either no one in this country seems to notice the ridiculous things that we get wrapped up in (i.e. O.J. Simpson), or they just don't give a damn. Shouldn't these things set off a little set of bells in our heads? Does anyone see the lunacy that is going on not just around us, but right in our laps?

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

A Nicer Media

Three years worth of college and I was not prepared for the summer internship in my major. In the classes I've taken I learned to criticize and berate my desire to be involved with the news, and I was prepared to be disappointed with the "media" and its tainted viewpoints. I never expected to care or actually love what I did.



Tara Ruelle

I, in my traditional, cynical ways, expected to gain college credits for this job and maybe a little more than that. What I have come away with, though, is far greater than the $300 dollars I dropped on this quest for resume potential. I definitely did not intend to use this column for a "what I did on my summer vacation" essay; but I find myself compelled to gush about the value of an internship in the field I begrudgingly put down next to my name in College of Arts and Sciences Information and Advising Center two years ago.

I was fortunate enough to have known what I wanted to do for the rest of my adult life when I entered this school four years ago. However, after taking on the major I discovered all the ills of journalism and questioned my intentions of jumping into this realm. I basically found myself discovering numerous faults within the media, the current trend of exploitation, and the basic lack of morality in news coverage.

When I walked into the illustrious doors of WHDH Channel 7 Boston in early June I held on to these pre– conceived notions. I was more than surprised to find that the two people I worked for actually cared about the subjects of their stories and wanted me to adapt to this behavior. These were the people that have made me able to defend and respect the news.

One of my most important tasks this summer was to call people back that had left messages about consumer problems they were having. I was adamantly told to call everyone back whether they didn't get all of their nine pieces in their Kentucky Fried Chicken bucket or they were cheated out of money by some well known swindler. The value of story potential was considered less important than trying to help these people.

I did not know this concept, and I imagine a lot of people who choose to judge our media don't either. Although plenty of exploitation exists, there are aspects of the media that work for the general public. There is still a part of the media that's truly concerned with exposing the wrongs of the world and working for the public good. People can still depend on some reporters to put the bad guy on the spot and help them avoid scams and misfortune.

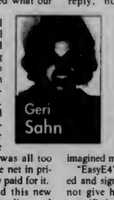
There will always be Geraldos and "Hard Copy"–esque tabloid journalism, but we should not lump the "media" in with this label. The media seems to have become synonymous with these hour long scandal fests. As with anything else, we must judge something by the sum of its parts.

With much appreciation, I can now defend as well as criticize this field of journalism with an open mind. I realize if I hadn't worked for this particular portion of television news I may have come away with a different view, but I do feel fortunate to have seen another side to mass media — which was a more humen one.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

A Surfing Cyber Slut

The character Cher from the movie Clueless would call me a "Cyber Slut." I would call me a loser for spending hours online surfing the net conversing with people across the country about anything and everything. But a loser that experienced what our future will be about.



Geri Sahn

It all started last fall when I got an e–mail account on campus and found myself skipping classes in order to check my messages in the library tower, hoping to receive one. Then, where I worked this summer I discovered a small computer room that had online services available. It was all too perfect; I could surf the net in privacy while the company paid for it.

I have always heard this new technological age being discussed around me, especially because editors in the magazine field are constantly discussing the future of magazines and online. But I did not think I would hop on the bandwagon and indulge myself with these new services. But because of its addictive powers, I did.

Every day for at least two hours I surfed the net. I went into different rooms where people from all over the country were discussing a particular topic. Online has hundreds of rooms for different subjects. Some are about music, entertainment, politics and sex.

After spending some time in every room, I came to the conclusion that wherever you were, whether it be in the music, or romance room, the discussion always leads to sex. You could ask, "has anyone gone to Lollapalooza this summer?" And someone may reply, "no, but I would love to go to Lollapalooza you."

I'll admit, several times I would flirt with a particular person. There was this one man, "EasyE4," that I talked with for over an hour. After a while he asked me if he could have my phone number so he could call me. At that point I got extremely nervous and imagined myself on Oprah.

"EasyE4" eventually got frustrated and signed off because I would not give him my number. I was mortified. I could not believe he dumped me. After that incident, I realized how pathetic I was becoming and stayed off–line for several weeks.

Besides playing in the "Romance Connection," I used the Internet to get the daily news and updates on particular events (at that time it was the Susan Smith trial). The Internet also has a library where information about anything can be found within seconds. It was incredible.

Since I was very involved with online this summer, I began reading articles and watching special reports on the news discussing it. Although there were many updates about the recent magazines put online, or other new programs added to the Internet, the topics experts argued about the most were pornography and censorship.

There is a great fear the Internet will be taken advantage of and will be used as an outlet for pornography. There are no current censorship laws for the Internet, therefore it is an open arena for anything to be shown, said, written, etc. Time magazine wrote a huge article about how access to the Internet is very easy — too easy for children to get a hold of.

Although I enjoyed my time online this summer, I don't think I would want my child to have access to the service without supervision. Granted, the Internet is an incredible way to obtain inconceivable amounts of information quickly, but children should not be able to have access to these outlets.

Online can be scary. Stalkings have occurred from people talking online, getting to know someone and offering information about themselves. Laws were made for both radio and television in order to curb violence and pornography, and they will have to be made for the Internet. But there is no reason to be scared, or to get rid of these services. Whether it is approved of or not, the Internet is our future and everyone should take advantage of this new technology.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian columnist.

A Fine Place To Be

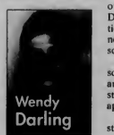
The editor of a certain Boston–based weekly newspaper is unapologetic when it comes to the make–up of his staff.

"Why are there so few black faces?" he asked, when questioned at a meeting of student interns this summer. "Simple matter of competition," he answered.

He continued to say that Boston's two daily papers, the Boston Globe and the Boston Herald, hire the best and the brightest black reporters before his paper even has a chance.

He explained that they start recruiting while the reporters are still in college, and as soon as the diplomas are handed out, they offer jobs with irresistible salaries. Sometimes even more irresistible than the salaries they offer to white reporters.

"We just can't afford it," he told the interns, pointing out that the annual operating budget of his paper is only a fraction of either daily's budget.



Wendy Darling

As a result, the editorial department has the composition of an old photograph — bright and interesting, but completely colorless. No blacks, no Asians and no language but Standard American English, or a local version thereof.

The situation is the same throughout the office. With advertising, graphic design and traffic sharing the same colorless composition, white bodies fill almost every cubicle and work station.

People get along pretty well overall. With no racial or ethnic conflict to speak of, people deal with each other on a case–by–case basis.

One writer dislikes an editor because he smokes cigars, while another has a problem with the way he assigns deadlines. No one is worrying about race or affirmative action or any of those other topics of contention. Everything is just fine.

Or so it seems.

At a meeting last July, someone asked one of the arts and entertainment editors about covering some of the black clubs in Roxbury and Dorchester.

"We've been working on that," he said, "but they're just so hard to find." Clubs like those are hard to reach on the phone, he said, especially since a lot of them are operating without licenses in little places down back alleys.

He also said there's also the problem of who could cover those clubs. Some of those areas are dangerous for white people, especially at night. And since arts and entertainment doesn't have any black writers, getting the story done would be kind of risky.

Besides, he added, those clubs aren't exactly screaming out for coverage anyway, (Roxbury and Dorchester don't fit in to the paper's distribution plan). There had been some talk in business about expanding to "minority areas," but so far nothing had come of it.

Another editor suggested they could try some kind of special marketing scheme and go around leaving piles of free papers at local stores and businesses to see how fast they disappear.

"That would have been great for the slavery story," someone said.

"Yeah, maybe they could give out free copies on the days when there were stories of special interest. Like when Nelson Mandela or another black person makes the cover," someone else said.

Editorial meetings have a tendency to get a little off–track, but this one was onto something. Pointing to an item on the list of upcoming stories, the arts and entertainment editor groaned.

"Will they really want to read us when we print stories like this — 'The Crack Baby Myth'?"

The discussion went on as the editors debated the merits of the story and moved on to other issues. After the meeting, the editors got up and went about their business. Everything was fine.

Or so it seemed.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

MEETING FOR COLUMNISTS

There will be a meeting for all Columnists and contributing writers on Sept. 10, at 2 p.m. Please meet at the Editorial/Opinion desk in the Collegian. If you have any questions or problems concerning the meeting, call Geri Sahn at 545–1491.

Revise Affirmative Action

Affirmative action was instrumental during its early times. It provided a spark in an era that was pushing for equal rights by providing opportunities for minorities that were never available before. With the massive jump of minorities immersed in higher education and employment position, affirmative action looked to be pushing hard toward dissolving walls of separation. But like the way clothing styles change, so does our society. Affirmative action has been over–excersized and in addition to that, it is perhaps outdated.

Polls have shown that a majority of Americans, including many from minority groups, are opposed to action policies that force quotas and similar set–asides. But they still commit themselves to civil rights legislation that eliminates discrimination against minorities in education and employment.

Trying to level the cases of unequal opportunities by administering anti–discrimination policies is not the appropriate approach to take in our present society. What distinguishes adults is the quality of their upbringing, particularly during their developing childhood years.

Some children, and many of them may not be from minority groups, suffer from growing up in harsh neighborhoods and poor, unstable families. An education of better quality should be made available and feasible to these children of disadvantaged backgrounds.

This is where affirmative action should focus in on. Every young child should have the chance to gain the skills needed to compete, whether it is for school or a high skilled job.

Affirmative action has allowed unprepared and under–qualified minorities into higher education institutions and employment position. It has not brought minorities up to the level of the students and workers who gained their acceptances and positions through individual ability and achievement.

One clear example is the students at the University of California at Berkeley. Berkeley is perhaps the most prestigious branch of the California education system. According to the June 4 issue of The New York Times, on average, because of affirmative action policies, black and Hispanic students had much lower high school grade–point average and Scholastic Assessment Test scores than whites and Asians. Black and Hispanic students accepted through quotas did much worse. The six–year graduation rate is only 59 percent for blacks and 64 percent for Hispanics, a big difference compared to 84 percent for whites and 88 percent for Asians.

Don't think that the failing performance of minorities in affirmative action programs could be due to theories such as the Bell Curve or the inferior mental capacities of minorities. Any individual can perform poorly when they are situated in a university or a job in which they are unprepared or unqualified.

Cases such as Berkeley are not uncommon, and these situations only cause harm. It feeds into bad stereotypes about minorities and fosters resentment felt by whites and Asians who were perhaps reused admittance because of certain quota proportions.

Affirmative action has to change with the times, and it has to shift its focus. Quotas and set–asides have been taken too far and are not helping the true cause of affirmative action by providing minorities the opportunity for achievement.

David K. Chan

This also applies to the work force. There is resentment among successful members of minority groups who have achieved their status through personal merit, not with their background.

In the August 21 issue of Business Week, Gary S. Becker, a Nobel laureate and teacher at the University of Chicago, said, "perhaps this is why a black businessman, Ward Connerly, proposed that California abolish affirmative action programs for minority admissions at public universities. In the '30s and '40s, black, female, Jewish or other minority doctors, lawyers and business executives were presumed to be better than average. Now, affirmative action programs have reversed such judgments. The average minority professional or businesswoman is often presumed to be of lower quality than the average white male in a comparable position."

Affirmative action has to change with the times, and it has to shift its focus. Quotas and set–asides have been taken too far and are not helping the true cause of affirmative action by providing minorities the opportunity for achievement. Instead, it has undermined the confidence of those who have performed poorly while stirring resentment among true achievers.

As the Presidential race begins to roll, affirmative action has emerged as a hot issue. Pete Wilson, Republican governor of California, has strongly voiced his opinion that he is opposed to affirmative action. The other major Republican candidates have as well. But hopefully, politicians will be able to see that affirmative action does not need to be abolished, but changed.

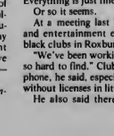
Quality programs that teach the skills needed to compete in today's society should be made available and accessible to disadvantaged children of all backgrounds so they can be admitted to prestigious universities and hired by top employers because of their ability, not their race or gender.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

One Step Toward Equality

As you will soon find out over the next few weeks, I spent the past summer in a small town in Northwestern Wyoming. Sure you might think that Powell, Wyo., is someplace in the Twilight Zone and Wyoming is a completely different country all together, but hey, you haven't lived there — so don't talk.

One of the more interesting things I found out about Wyoming was it is the first state to give women the right to vote.



Marni E. Helfner

According to the locals, the reason why Wyoming gave women the right to vote was that at the time, the majority of Wyomingites were men. Men came to Wyoming to work in the mines and oil fields, logging trees and planting grains. Apparently, there weren't a whole lot of women who were willing to hang out in Wyoming at the end of the earth, and giving them the right to vote was to create an incentive. Hopefully, women would move to Wyoming, meet a man, and get married.

I'm not sure if it worked, because Wyoming still has less than a half million people.

But this month marks the 75th anniversary of the Seneca Falls Convention and women gaining the right to vote. There are parades and rallies being held all over the country to celebrate the simple right given to all women.

What perhaps most people don't know is the reasons why women got the right to vote was not because men wanted to give women equality. The ideology at the time was that women were more sensitive creatures than men and were inherently good. Most men who were in favor of the amendment believed that because of this goodness, women would be candidates that were devoid of evil.

Good men would be elected to positions, good things would happen, and in turn, all the problems of the country would be solved. That inherent goodness would lead to the right decision and there would be no more crime, alcoholism, atheism, poverty or any of the other social ills that ailed the society.

Well, women got the right to vote, and as is obvious, the societal problems of that age are still present.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not trying to say that women shouldn't have the right to vote — what I am saying is that don't expect all your problems to go away just because women got a basic right.

For the women involved in the movement, it also meant they could elect candidates to positions for their own political reasons. In the time since the convention, we have gained ground in reproductive rights, equal pay for equal work, sexual harassment is not acceptable and women have the right to love who they want to love.

But there is more work still to be done. Sure, we can march and rally and hold celebrations, but this is a tiny step in the bigger process. Women are still treated like second class citizens. Don't believe me? You don't have to go to Wyoming to figure it out, just look at UMass.

In the first–year women will have problems around how they look and how they feel about their bodies. Someone will get raped on campus this year. Women of color are still not treated with equality.

We can be content with the morsel we have been given, but instead of holding a celebration, this year let's focus on what we haven't gained yet.

Women of color need to gain respect and equality among all women. Women of color also need to register to vote — they are the least likely group to register and vote.

The basic reproductive rights we have now, like the pill, abortion, birth control, family planning, nutritious food for children and child care, are all being threatened.

To quote one of my favorite t–shirts, "Men can walk on the moon, but we still can't get a safe, adequate contraceptive."

So this year, hold a celebration in honor of the Seneca Falls Women so long ago — go out and vote.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Blame It On Entertainers

At the beginning of the summer Bob Dole spoke out vehemently against the entertainment industry. And my, isn't it convenient that the issue should pop up right before an election year? Using Time Magazine as his vehicle for destruction, Dole blamed most of societies' problems on song lyrics, television shows and everything else that had a violent or slightly eschew content.

Tara MK Connelly

Thrown into one category and heavily dosed with sweeping generalizations and out of date philosophies, Dole had all of America on it's feet. Musicians, writers, angry parents, religious groups and belligerent teens all had an opinion. Soon everything became questionable. Time Warner even contemplated pulling stock out of Interscope records because of their "association" with rap (which equals bad, of course) musicians like Snoop Doggy Dog and Dr. Dre.

People began to look at incidents that supported Dole's theory. Didn't a young girl get beaten to death in Sweden because of the "Power Rangers?" Wasn't an elderly man murdered because two boys thought they were "natural born killers?" And how many children were shot and killed by gun toting gang members hoping to emulate Onyx?

To combat this backlash of negativity, people in the industry also rallied for the cause. Krist Novaselic, former bassist for Nirvana even started his own organization, JAM–PAC, with other musicians to get people to lobby Congress against government censorship.

But what does it all amount to? Where do you draw the line between art and obscenity, creativity and violence? And the big question: should the government have the right to censor various aspects of the entertainment industry? And most of all, where does the responsibility of parents fit into it all?

The aforementioned questions will probably remain unanswered. There are so many convoluted sides and ulterior motivations, for example money and power, to the issue, than just a country's fall from moral grace. One can only hope that the lines do not become too blurred.

And speaking of blurred issues, isn't that what an election year amounts to? The whole inhaled, exhaled, "I am not a crook" deal that politicians hook onto when they realize how great it would be to have family snap shots in the Oval Office?

Platforms are shameless beacons of light seemingly appearing to steer voters away from the rocky shores of their opponents' warped views, only to leave them smashed on their own jagged boulders of empty promises.

And how many promises and dreams are broken when someone with such grand expectations blames his pitfalls and failures on Congress, the House or Mickey Mouse?

However, in this whole hoopla to purge the industry of its many evils, it has also become clear that there are a lot of things in the entertainment industry that don't support violence and hatred.

There are shows, songs and movies that are conveniently brushed aside in favor of the more flashy and "newsworthy" negative things that sell stories and gain talk show spots These become the easier targets for Dole and Co. to point fingers at.

What about TLC's "Waterfall" video? What about MTV's voting and safe sex info–mercials? And haven't a number of celebrities stepped up to endorse milk — the most wholesome drink on earth?

When talking about interpretation and content of anything creative it's not black and white, but many, many shades of gray. To use a phrase that most people abuse, "it's all relative." In fact anything creative is relative and subject to an individual's own opinion; opinions that in and of themselves are complex in their own nature.

The government is no more serious about censorship than it is about balancing the budget. Every year a hot topic comes up, and every year people jump on the bandwagon taking sides exhausting the subject until such a feeling of loathing and apathy is conjured up that everything becomes mote. The subject is then shuffled back into the filing cabinet until the next crusade, and the next election year.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian staff member.

Enforcement Agency Under Fire

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (B.A.T.F.) has come under heavy attack on several subjects within the past year, from political to ethical, but it's most recent problems conceal an underlying, ideological conflict.

Mark Mitchell

The controversy that erupted after the destruction of the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas, has recently been immeasurably worsened by accusations of gross and overt racism at annual picnics and events. Vaulted into the spotlight by a series of botched confrontations over weapons possession, the B.A.T.F. had been struggling to keep its head above water when the newest charges arose over the summer.

Certainly, one of the B.A.T.F.'s most onerous functions from a popular perspective is the control of traffic in illegal firearms (most especially automatic and assault–style weapons). Because these agents work in an area very close to the line of what is legal exchange and what is not, quite often they are mistaken as curtailing "the right to bear arms."

Because it carries out one of the less popular law–enforcement functions and is not contained within a more venerated and universally accepted institution, under the auspices of which their department could remain relatively inconspicuous, the B.A.T.F. is doubly marked. As a result, especially in the eyes of radio demagogues, ever vigilant for such opportunities, the B.A.T.F. has become a sort of pariah.

As an illustration, take G. Gordon Liddy, known to history as a common criminal for his role in the Watergate scandal. He recently won an award for daring to say on the radio what he certainly wouldn't say face–to–face with any member of the B.A.T.F., namely "where to shoot a B.A.T.F. agent most effectively."

Though Mr. Liddy's radio exploits are by no means restricted to this comment, he won the "Free Speech Award" (or some related nonsense) for a number of such asinine and flagrantly incendiary remarks.

G. Gordon Liddy's example is one of a rapidly growing number; the National Rifle Association's (N.R.A.) now infamous newsletter is another. The reference to B.A.T.F. agents as "jack–booted thugs," a clear allusion to Nazi storm troopers of World War II, was later rescinded, but not before being mailed to their millions of members. (Soon thereafter, their ranks were reduced by one when ex– President George Bush publicly resigned in response to the letter.)

To deny the collective proselytizing effect of these comments would be absurd. And in conjunction with several incidents of questionable procedure on the part of the agents themselves, all now under investigation, the B.A.T.F. has become ever more controversial.

As criticism increases and joins more mainstream rhetoric, ordinary citizens can easily lose sight of the very specific mission of the Bureau. When politicians add their voices to the attack, our concern ought to turn to skepticism of the rhetoric rather than condemnation of law enforcement. By targeting those who enforce rather than the laws themselves, where they have apparently already lost, the instigators of this confrontation between "concerned" citizens and law– enforcement agents have a formula for civil unrest. They find themselves in the minority, having tried to exert political influence through very powerful lobbies such as the N.R.A., and now resort to demagoguery to subvert the system.

I did not mean to reiterate the debate on the power of talk radio, but it constitutes a major facet in the power to convert (eternally achieved through emotive speech; ask Aristotle).

The B.A.T.F. has no business being on the receiving end of the debate over firearms. When its agents break the law, they must be investigated and punished if found guilty, like any other citizen. Individual misconduct is not a basis for criticizing the organization's integrity of purpose. No one in Philadelphia or New York recommends disbanding their police departments because of rampant corruption and criminal conduct.

As the Waco compound has already become a sort of pilgrimage site for extremists of all persuasions, and the now–demolished Oklahoma City Federal Building has become a national icon, so the battle lines are gradually drawn. Though hardly a war, we can certainly expect more showdowns between political/religious extremists and the pariah B.A.T.F.

Perhaps if the B.A.T.F. were a division of a more recognized institution (such as the U.S. Marshal's Office), and thereby separated from its stigmatized name, at least its agents and offices might not be so terrorism–prone. As part of an organization encompassing many fields, terrorists could not simply target a single function and might shy away from attacking such a potent agency. Would that really be such a concession?

Mark Mitchell is a Collegian columnist.

Fans Still Dare To Dream

Pennant fever can be a painful disease in New England.

Harry Vinchesi wasn't quite 16 the last time the Boston Red Sox captured the World Series in 1918. He didn't think much about it at the time because those same Sox had been champs in 1903, 1912, 1915 and 1916, and there was little reason to think there weren't more on the way.

But as the drought of championships defines the Red Sox as an organization began, so did Harry's affection for the team.

Living in Boston's North End, Harry held a variety of jobs, ranging from resetting the pins at the local bowling alley, to eventually owning a night club. But the job that made him the proudest was working on the crew that repaired Fenway Park's legendary Green Monster. The job was finished he spoke of the wall as if he had designed and built the famous structure himself.

Like many other fans of the Olde Towne Team, Harry's heart was broken when the Sox fell to the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games during the 1946 World Series, a year before his youngest of two daughters was born.

Summer in the Vinchesi family revolved around Harry's team. On family car trips, Harry commanded complete silence as he listened religiously to the Sox on the radio.

His two daughters never did develop the love for baseball that their father possessed, but their appreciation and interest in the Red Sox grew as they grew older.

In fact, his oldest daughter holds the memory of being with her father at Fenway when Ted Williams (Harry's favorite player of that era) hit a home run in his first game after returning from the Korean War.

Williams eventually retired and Harry's favor fell upon a new left–fielder with a hard–to–spell last name. Harry cheered for Carl Yastrzemski and dreamed the impossible dream, along with Yaz and the Red Sox in 1967, only to have his heart broken by the Cardinals again in the seventh game of the World Series.

When lung cancer threatened his life in the early '70's, Harry was still a fan. He asked to have a radio at the side of his hospital bed so he could keep up with his team.

Matt Vautour

Harry beat the cancer. Remission allowed him to celebrate as Carlton Fisk rounded the bases in his famous home run trot in game 6 of the 1975 World Series. But it also allowed his heart to be broken once again, just one game later, when the Cincinnati Reds kept Boston's World Series drought alive.

Beating the disease also allowed Harry to teach his love of the Red Sox to a grandson. That grandchild's earliest memories are sitting on "Grampy's" lap and hearing stories of Yaz, Jim Rice and George Scott.

Harry's second battle with an illness would not be as successful. Alzheimer's disease stripped a great deal of his memory, but even then he'd still be content when his Red Sox were on TV.

Harry died in 1983, three years before the Red Sox came within one strike of a title as the New York Mets broke the hearts of baseball fans throughout New England once again.

Harry stuck with his team despite being let down so many times. And while in his lifetime he never saw another championship in Boston, there are countless other aging Sox fans praying to see their team on top just once more.

Like so many others who dare to dream as Boston cruises to a division title and post–season play, Harry is sitting in some corner of Heaven, begging the baseball gods and wondering:

"Could this be the year?"

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

Cadet Falls Short

Shannon Faulkner was the gleam in every girl's eye when she arrived on the Citadel's campus for her first day of classes and training. She was tearing down the walls of the old establishment and treading the way for many new and promising young women who would undoubtedly march in her boot prints.

We wanted to march behind her with our heads held high, saying, "Yes, we belong here just as much as the next guy."

Allison Connolly

But by putting Faulkner on such a high pedestal, it was inevitable that she could, and would, fall off. It wasn't fair for of us to look at her that way, and it's almost our own faults that she quit when the tough were just about to get going.

We wanted to march behind her with our heads held high, saying, "Yes, we belong here just as much as the next guy." Saying, "You need us just as much as we need you." But Faulkner quit, just when we were ready to send in reinforcements.

Although she spent more time in the infirmary than on the battlefields of "Hell Week," no one should see Faulkner's departure as a step backwards for the women's movement. She was still successful in getting her court–ordered admission into an all–male school.

If we took a 20–year–old girl who wanted to enroll in a military academy, to train hard and become a well–disciplined young leader ready to take on rougher storms than what 1,952 young male cadets could stir for her, then we would embrace her as an ambitious role model and person.

But instead, the country and media have spotlighted Shannon Faulkner, the unfit girl, trying to prove a political point by litigating her way into the limelight and beyond the Citadel's gates where no woman has gone before. A woman entering the Citadel is possible, but Faulkner was not the woman to do it.

Faulkner deserves credit for being the first to battle a 152– year–old fraternity and raising the issue that the government should not fund any institution which discriminates on the basis of race or sex. But when fighting an overwhelming opposition, you must have all of the cards in your corner and ready to place them on the table. Faulkner was missing some of the most important cards.

Faulkner was not physically or mentally fit enough to win. Before we even saw her, we expected her to be the female equivalent of Robo–cop. But reality saw her as too average. 20 pounds overweight and unfit for corps training. Any military candidate, male or female, must train everyday to be in the best possible shape to endure the physical and mental drilling expected.

After such a long and bitter struggle to attend the school, she should have trained harder and longer than she was expected, just to prove them all wrong. Apparently, she did not.

She also could not take the ostracism by the administration and her fellow cadets. She refused to shave her head like every other incoming cadet was made to do. The mental games, such as those played out in any war, placed too much stress on her, and incapacitated her from playing on their level.

If she wanted different rules accommodating the fact that she was a woman, then how could she be respected as an equal?

Those women opposed to Faulkner's crusade should not be dismissed as unsympathetic to the women's movement. I don't think there is any woman who wasn't disappointed when Faulkner dropped out. I'm sure none of them cheered like the oh–so–mature male cadets, seen dancing in the quad and doing push–ups, but it's hard not to take her departure personally.

It's as if Shannon somehow let us down. She wasn't ready for a nation's hopes to be placed on her shoulders. We naturally wanted the underdog to win, and she didn't. It's a shame she had to give up.

Allison Connolly is a Collegian staff member.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Developing Nations

Back To School, 1995

The Ivory Tower

Zaw Min Oo

[illegible] groups of people [illegible] between [illegible] most evident of [illegible] Tower.

[illegible] Tower is [illegible] sides is the [illegible] ground level. [illegible] the laborers [illegible] constantly [illegible] with their necessities. On [illegible] [illegible] situated on the [illegible] and affluent [illegible] the world [illegible].

[illegible] Tower [illegible] that soci- [illegible] the base elements [illegible] The concept of [illegible] Tower does not exist with [illegible] interaction [illegible] or need the poor. What [illegible] is not only people need the [illegible] poor [illegible] the jobs [illegible] factories, [illegible] Earth. The [illegible] to exploit [illegible] and [illegible] foundation of [illegible] on the other hand, [illegible] and them [illegible] low wages [illegible] more extensive [illegible] benefits one [illegible] society it seems [illegible] manifestation [illegible] The fact that soci- [illegible] more materi- [illegible] Also, the middle class functions as [illegible] group in dom- [illegible] The ideal [illegible] part of the [illegible] undeniably [illegible] two main functions. [illegible] that division to [illegible] interests are [illegible] The ideal [illegible] Tower is [illegible] ideal- [illegible] and [illegible] between [illegible] The ability of [illegible] ambitious [illegible] the ivory tower. In a [illegible] society [illegible] does not draw as much attention [illegible] because in today's world, the gap between the rich and the poor has widened tremendously giving the attention to the classic extremes of rich and poor.

The Ivory Tower, though being an icon of economic theory continues to represents the reality of the life outside the air-conditioned rooms and the comforting designer clothing. It is the malignant human world that sets the Earth into a chaotic roar of exclusions.

Zaw Min Oo is a Collegian staff member.

Whose Promised Land?

Syed Ali Raza

[illegible] the land of [illegible] around the River [illegible] which Moses led [illegible] most [illegible] religions of [illegible] Christianity and [illegible] nation lays a [illegible] and the Israeli [illegible] the land [illegible] "Eretz Israel" lived [illegible] for centuries, [illegible] and built a [illegible] changed, the [illegible] itself no longer [illegible] They were ruled by [illegible] Empire, the Muslims [illegible] The methods of [illegible] and [illegible] differed from [illegible] Byzantine Empire [illegible] taxes on the [illegible] Whereas, when [illegible] not only low [illegible] gave the mass- [illegible] their land.

[illegible] the Crusaders, [illegible] another. There are [illegible] history which [illegible] the Crusaders [illegible] the streets [illegible] knee deep blood. All [illegible] small strip of land has [illegible] complex issue.

[illegible] for the Zionist [illegible] momentum [illegible] the Holocaust, in which the [illegible] unbearable [illegible] it faced. [illegible] World War II [illegible] eager to com- [illegible] the horrors of the Holocaust, [illegible] a European colonial [illegible] Arabs.

[illegible] creation of Israel, a [illegible] European [illegible] two golden land of [illegible] results occur. The first is the development of human society — technologically speaking. The second, being more drastic, is the formation of groups to divide those individuals that compete with each other. From the later result, some of these groups prosper and in their own locality, create feudal systems — a place where they are in charge and the other group exists as less powerful, becoming at knees with their competition.

History assumably played the role of preserving and expanding this division. The division formed societies that are based on wealth.

The Ivory Tower conducts ignorance as being the root of understanding in order to curtail the height of prosperity. If those on the Ivory Tower are to acknowledge their dependency on the people who are not on the same level, society will reach a near equilibrium point of social equivalence. Yet economically speaking, there would be no strides of future progress because competition is lessened. The solution here is the need for a burgeoning middle class which has attracted nations and nation-states around the globe.

The middle class stems as the new level of competitiveness that shrinks in the tower scenario. The middle class serves as an organization that binds the world. With them, relations between rich and poor are contracted and accords of understanding brought to new light.

Also, the middle class functions as a stepping stone for the poor, as the middle class was formed by the individuals who escaped the lower class by means of prosperity. Being middle class also cushions the fall of the rich from falling down the economic ladder and giving them a chance to climb back up.

With the concept of competitiveness as a human nature trait, the middle class brings rivalry because it is the compromise that forces others to compete. The poor have to rise in order to catch the economic advancement and the rich have to do so as well by constantly raising higher and higher ceilings for the middle class to reach. Indeed the middle class sparks life to the economic division between rich and poor, yet is a concept that does not draw as much attention because in today's world, the gap between the rich and the poor has widened tremendously giving the attention to the classic extremes of rich and poor.

The Ivory Tower, though being an icon of economic theory continues to represents the reality of the life outside the air-conditioned rooms and the comforting designer clothing. It is the malignant human world that sets the Earth into a chaotic roar of exclusions.

Zaw Min Oo is a Collegian staff member.

Whose Promised Land?

Syed Ali Raza

[illegible] the land of [illegible] around the River [illegible] which Moses led [illegible] most [illegible] religions of [illegible] Christianity and [illegible] nation lays a [illegible] and the Israeli [illegible] the land [illegible] "Eretz Israel" lived [illegible] for centuries, [illegible] and built a [illegible] changed, the [illegible] itself no longer [illegible] They were ruled by [illegible] Empire, the Muslims [illegible] The methods of [illegible] and [illegible] differed from [illegible] Byzantine Empire [illegible] taxes on the [illegible] Whereas, when [illegible] not only low [illegible] gave the mass- [illegible] their land.

[illegible] the Crusaders, [illegible] another. There are [illegible] history which [illegible] the Crusaders [illegible] the streets [illegible] knee deep blood. All [illegible] small strip of land has [illegible] complex issue.

[illegible] for the Zionist [illegible] momentum [illegible] the Holocaust, in which the [illegible] unbearable [illegible] it faced. [illegible] World War II [illegible] eager to com- [illegible] the horrors of the Holocaust, [illegible] a European colonial [illegible] Arabs.

[illegible] creation of Israel, a [illegible] European [illegible] two golden land of Palestine. They drove the local population out of their own land, oppressed them and practiced what was once practiced against themselves, victimization due to religious beliefs. When the local population resisted this victimization, its freedom struggle was dismissed as "terrorism."

To witness such a campaign of naked oppression, especially from a nation which had truly suffered unthinkable hardships only on the basis of religious beliefs, is indeed a bizarre and ugly black spot on its history.

According to countless books, the land was promised to the Jewish tribe of "Bani-Israel," originally of Arab descent. It is on this basis that some Zionists have claimed a divine right to that land.

The coverage of the western media regarding the Middle East totally discredits the stand of the Zionist forces, regarding the "Promised Land." We find that the Israelis do not identify themselves as an Arab nation, they call themselves the Israeli nation. In fact, news coverage regularly reveals a general sentiment of hatred towards the Arabs on the part of the Israelis. In the media, the issue is referred to as the Arab-Israeli conflict, obviously implying that Israelis are not Arabs.

In a way, the Israelis not only consider themselves non- Arabs, but also detest the very idea of being an Arab or too closely associated with the Middle East. For example, Israeli soccer teams play in European tournaments and their singers take part in the annual continent-wide "Eurovision Song Contest," to name just two examples. The Israelis in fact cherish their European origins and insist that they are a western culture and society, reflecting the social and moral values of Germany, Russia, Poland, Britain, France and the United States.

If the Israelis do not consider themselves Arabs, then why do they claim the right of inheritance, the land and the heritage of an Arab tribe? Why do they want to stand amidst the ashes of the golden nation of Palestine, do they have a score to settle?

Why do they trace their roots to "Bani-Israel" only when the question of owning the holy land arises? Do they intend to be part-time Arabs, or are they just hypocrites, who see their own benefit and change identities accordingly?

The Israelis should seriously decide who they are, either they are the Arab descendants of "Bani-Israel" or they are a Western-based nation, trying to impose colonial rule in the state of Palestine. One grievance with the Israelis is that they dishonor the Arab "Bani-Israel" by claiming to be their descendants and inheriting the land of Arabs, but at the same time refuse to identify themselves as Arabs.

After all, if they are not Arabs what on earth are they doing in the Arab land of Palestine?

The Arab stays in Arab land, the rest pack up and go.

Syed Mohammed Ali Raza is a Collegian staff member.

Commentary

PAWSS: Rogue Professors and Academic Outlaws

■ Pentagon Embraces Klare's Worldview

Of all the dirty little secrets hidden away in the rustic folds of the Pioneer Valley, the Orwellian activities surrounding the Five College "Peace and World Security Studies Program" (PAWSS), must rank among the most troubling.

This article begins our examination of PAWSS activities, thinking and gurus.

Appropriately housed by the "alternative" Hampshire College, a fantastically expensive institution that nonetheless encourages its well-healed students to affect a façade of poverty and renunciation, PAWSS serves as the Valley's bellwether and guide on international relations.

The sophisticated hypocrisy fostered by much of PAWSS' work undoubtedly accounts for a good deal of the self- serving double talk of supposed "liberalism" that pervades local discourse on international issues.

But the influence of PAWSS and its duplicitous director, Michael T. Klare, who also serves as the "Defense Editor" for the influential liberal weekly The Nation, extends far beyond the bucolic confines of the Happy Valley.

In his most recent book, Rogue States and Nuclear Outlaws (Hill and Wang, 1995), Klare demonstrates his extraordinary capacity for double-speak and distortion, as he seeks to improve and strengthen United States imperialism.

The thesis of the book, roughly, is that given the end of the cold war, the United States "military-industrial complex" faced the prospect of dramatic reductions in defense spending. In an effort to preserve the cold war defense establishment largely intact, the Pentagon and its political and corporate supporters painted a series of third world nations as "rogues" and "outlaws." This creates, they say, the need to fight two Gulf War level conflicts at the same time and thus preserve the cold war level spending.

In particular, Klare cites periodic alarms about missile and nuclear proliferation, as the chief argument used to maintain the full cold war U.S. military.

Though, Michael Klare and PAWSS spent most of the '80s preaching this very line of the dangers of third world weapons proliferation. Countless seminars, articles and conferences by Klare and PAWSS helped to lay the intellectual and academic background for the very anti- proliferation ideology that he now claims to critique. In effect, the Pentagon has simply adopted Michael Klare's worldview, although he seems dissatisfied.

Presumably Klare is miffed he was overlooked for one of the government jobs, such as upper or mid-level arms- control negotiator positions, for which he appears to have been angling for years. It is extraordinary how much of the "alarmist" rhetoric he condemns in chapters such as "In Pursuit of Enemies" could have been lifted from his own writings. Indeed, the influence of Klare and PAWSS in articulating the third world "proliferation peril" that is now the touchstone of U.S. imperialism cannot be overestimated.

Klare acknowledges the fact that he and his fellow non- proliferationites have supplied the Pentagon with its new ideological justification for armed aggression. Klare claims that the Pentagon showed limited interest in the insidious alarmism that he and his chicken little friends such as the Arms Control Institute spewed throughout the eighties about third world "threats" and "weapons proliferation." Now, Klare bitterly asserts, the Pentagon is "appropriating the proliferation peril."

"Once largely indifferent to the problem of WMD [weapons of mass destruction] equipped third world powers, [the Pentagon] now picked up the proliferation issue and made it the centerpiece of their new strategic outlook," Klare writes. But, the non-proliferationites like Klare can hardly claim now that they failed to see the that non- proliferation driven imperialism, as practiced under Clinton and Bush, was the logical conclusion of their worldview.

It was Klare, for instance, who brought to the Valley the Pentagon's nuclear non-proliferation imperialism chief ideologist Leonard Spector, proclaiming him to be the leading theorist of the field. As Klare fawned over him, Spector shamelessly asserted that it was proper for the United States to attack other states for building the same weapons this country hoards because "we are a force for good in the world." Meanwhile, for years Klare would preach a "guns or butter" line to the third world, suggesting that defense spending is immoral no matter the clear threat to so many third world societies his own nation poses.

COURTESY HILL AND WANG

Michael Klare, Professor of Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) at Hampshire College.

One can still recall the horror on Klare's face when the excellent Richard Falk refused to condemn third world deterrence programs as long as this country continues to maintain its enormous nuclear stockpiles. Clearly Falk's brand of honest self-assessment is beyond him, as Klare has always paid far more attention to condemning other, usually third world, weapons programs largely ignoring his own nation's stockpiles. PAWSS has always had an affinity for moral asymmetry and double-standards.

Of course, Klare never challenges the basic assumptions underlying American imperialism. It is typical of PAWSS thinking his disagreement is not with the goals or outlook of the U.S. government, but rather a question of tactics and scale.

For example, Klare never indulges in the use of the "I" word (imperialism, or its equivalents) or challenges the way in which United States interests are constructed in all corners of the globe.

Klare agrees that the Pentagon's "rogues" are that and deserve to be treated as such. His argument is not the truth, which is that these so-called "rogues" are legitimate nations with normal interests and good, decent people living in them. It is rather that they simply do not pose as great a threat to the United States as the Pentagon implies and that they can be adequately dealt with without the current high levels of military spending. Implicit in Klare's book is an understanding that if they did pose such a "threat" (i.e. — that Arabs could control their own oil, for example), then he would agree to those steps needed to "meet the threat."

For example, his criticisms of the Gulf War never touch on the question of the suffering of Iraqis, or question the basis for the U.S. presence in the Middle East in the first place. Indeed, Klare has always been in favor of the cruel and inhuman sanctions that caused so much death and devastation in Iraq. Instead, he sees the Gulf War purely in terms of the U.S. domestic budget debate and a way for the Pentagon to test weapons and justify expenditures.

Contrary to the impression carefully fostered through PAWSS, Klare is not a moral critic of U.S. policy but rather a man who suggests there could be more effective means to world domination at this time, as he puts it "coping with the threat of global chaos."

Klare calls for more "peacekeeping," (as seen in Somalia), and non-proliferation (what a surprise), justifies the need for population control with tired Malthusian arguments and calls vaguely for development. Most importantly, he calls for a leaner, meaner, slimmed-down version of the U.S. military, the better to deal with third world threats.

It seems almost superfluous to point out that none of this, although classic PAWSS thinking, qualifies in any way as "peace and/or world security." On the contrary, it is an agenda that embraces the dominant United States role in the world, evinces no concern for justice, and is not opposed to the use of whatever force is necessary "in the national interest."

The cherubic, bespectacled professor wears a dove peace sign lapel pin on the dust jacket of his latest book. It is about as convincing as a smiley-face painted on the tip of a Tomahawk Missile.

Hussein Ibish is a graduate student.

AP PHOTO

MEXICO CITY — Members of Mexican opposition political parties are asked to put away their anti-government banners during Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo's State of the Nation address, Friday Sept. 1 at the San Lázaro Legislative Palace. The banner reads "Unemployment, Shortages, Hunger, Violence."

Why not?

Write for Developing Nations

[illegible] Ali Raza at 545-1851 [illegible] Campus Center

Massachusetts Daily Collegian | New England's Largest College Daily | Back to School 1995 / B1

LOCAL NEWS

UM football player killed in car crash

By Tim White and Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

HADLEY — Two players from the University of Massachusetts football team were involved in a car accident last month that claimed the life of one and injured the other.

Jason Leonard, 21, of New Orleans, La., driver of the car, was killed in the crash.

Passenger John E. Orsak, 21, of Dublin Ohio, who had injuries to the head, lungs and spleen, was transferred to Baystate Medical Center and released on Aug. 16, said a hospital spokesperson.

According to Chief Dennis Hukowicz of the Hadley police department, Leonard and Orsak were travelling east on Mill Valley road early morning on July 27, when Leonard allegedly lost control of his car, skidded sideways and overturned several times into a cornfield. Both occupants were thrown from the car.

Leonard was pronounced dead at Cooley Dickinson Hospital, police said.

Hukowicz said the state police are doing a reconstruction of the accident, which is not complete. He would not comment if alcohol was involved.

Leonard, who transferred from Los Angeles Valley Community College as a freshman, had just made the team as a wide receiver.

According to head coach Mike Hodges, Orsak, who was a defensive back for the team, has extensive injuries as a result of the accident that may prevent him from returning to football this semester.

"His primary injury is his collapsed lungs, so he went without oxygen for a while," Hodges said. "He is really defying the odds so I wouldn't count against [Orsak returning to football]."

Hodges said, however, that Orsak is currently in rehabilitation and is going to return in January for the Spring semester. Orsak will be a junior sports management major.

Senior running back and team captain Rene Ingoglia said many of the players were close to the two teammates.

"That is just a terrible thing, anyone who loses their life that early, it just isn't fair," Ingoglia said. "It's just something that you have to pick-up and move on."

"[Leonard] joined us in January and he was a fine young man," said Hodges, who attended the funeral in New Orleans. "We really never had a chance to coach him much — we have a family atmosphere and when a member of your family passes away, it is a hard thing to deal with."

Leonard joined the football team because he was close friends with defensive back Tony Gugliuzza, "that is the only reason he came here," Hodges said.

According to Hodges, the team has made no decisions on whether to wear patches on their uniforms in memory of Leonard.

Conference empowers leaders

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Select University of Massachusetts students were given the opportunity to attend intensive workshops and meet with campus luminaries over the course of a five-day conference.

The 1995 Campus Activities Leadership Conference, now in its seventh year, expanded from its former length of one or two days under the guidance of head planner M. Ricardo Townes, vice-chancellor for Campus Activities.

By stretching out the duration of the event, students were provided with the chance to engage in more dialogue and "creative downtime," according to one of Townes' aides, Sharon Lang.

"[The conference was] too short in the past," Lang said. "It was too jammed with information."

Townes concurred with Lang, describing earlier conferences as having been "congested."

It was in June, Townes began developing the leadership activities for this year. A vital part of the process from the start was to involve as many students as possible in the organization of the event, from planning to presentation.

"It was important to have students involved in all levels of the conference," he said.

Cambodian Student Association member Try Sek was one of the students who was integral in the planning stages.

"This was a collective effort," he said. "There's a sense of working together that we lack on this campus."

Blurring the lines

According to Townes, he and the students on the planning committee wanted to create an atmosphere where a large group of students, ranging from RSO members to area government representatives, could effectively communicate their ideas.

Additionally, the committee sought to comfortably assimilate faculty, administrators and staff into the ongoings of the conference, a virtually unheard of task, Townes said.

"Some people said it couldn't be done," he said. "Obviously we proved we could."

From the outset, however, Townes' had also set a personal challenge which delved into the core of University doctrine.

"I tried to implement [Chancellor David K. Scott's] guiding principle," he said. "Blur the lines."

Townes said he understood the phrase was wholly open to interpretation, a factor that intrigued him and also seemed appropriate for the intentions of the conference.

"I thought they could coalesce around a common goal," he said. "It was great to have to have the idea centered around student leadership. It's an important metaphor for the campus community."

Creating bonds

Student Government Association (SGA) Secretary of Public Relations Derick Cheeseboro-Weaver, who served on the planning committee, described the finished product as a "round table" of sorts.

"People could just throw out ideas amongst themselves," he said.

As a high-ranking SGA official, Cheeseboro-Weaver said he tried to be especially attentive and open-minded.

"[The conference] was about finding out what other organizations concerns and needs are," he said.

One such organization cited by Cheeseboro-Weaver was the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, which has had a "tense" relationship with the SGA recently.

"We need to utilize the Collegian more," he said. "We need to inform them of what we and the senate are doing."

Sek supported Cheeseboro-Weaver's take on campus relations.

"There are a lot of things you don't know that other student leaders do," he said. "We're trying to learn new things to give to other people."

Many of the workshops were created with the intention not only to foster diverse viewpoints, but to inspire students to "spread their wings and get to know people," Collegian night supervisor and columnist Mark Mitchell said.

The foci of the workshops ranged from skill and team building to issues of diversity, with speakers such as Student Trustee Dan Rivera, men's basketball coach John Calipari and Merrill-Lynch founder Charles Merrill offering their views on leadership.

Mitchell said that ironically, a heated Monday evening administration panel discussion was the starting point for many of the bonds formed between conferees.

"[The administrators] hedged, lied, faked and forged their way through the discussion," Mitchell said of the discussion which included topics from the long-projected renovation of the Student Union Building to Housing Services budget surpluses.

According to Mitchell, several in the audience openly voiced their disapproval of the perceived dishonesty of some administrators' responses.

"You knew who the enemy was," Mitchell said.

The conference in review

Many of the administrators and faculty who visited and participated in the conference seemed genuinely impressed with the event.

"Certain students have exerted a great deal of leadership," Chancellor

Turn to CONFERENCE, page B3

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Assistant coach of the Minutewomen Basketball team Chantel Tremitiere, gives words of wisdom to UMass students at the opening of last week's Leadership Conference.

Program offers students help in dealing with grief

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts offers a program for students who are faced with someone close to them dying or battling a serious illness, and trying to stay in school at the same time.

Jethro Lance Heiko is the founder of REFLECT, (formerly the Grief Survival Group), a group dedicated to helping students deal with grief.

According to Heiko, REFLECT was created after Heiko's father died of cancer, and he found that he felt lost and alone at the University.

Heiko's goal was to create a support mechanism that would help students cope with their sorrow and also keep them in school.

The group met once a week, and was run on a drop-in basis. Heiko turned the meetings over to a facilitator, Brynda Holton, a graduate student in clinical psychology, who will continue to work for the group this year.

The group was not given any financial backing and as a result could not provide all of the services Jethro said he wanted to implement.

Students in grief

Then, a survey conducted last year by Project Pulse showed one quarter of 608 students surveyed said that they, or a friend or relative of theirs, had suffered an accident or illness which was life threatening.

One-third of the students surveyed said a friend or relative of theirs had died since they began attending UMass, according to the report.

These students who were affected by an illness or grief were asked where they went to find help in coping with it. Eighty-four percent responded that they went to friends.

The surveyed students who were not affected were asked if they would utilize any of a list of University resources to deal with grief or an illness.

Of the respondents, 96 percent said they would be somewhat or very likely to go to friends, while only 50 percent said they would be likely to go to the University Health Services.

When the non-affected students were asked if they thought any of a list of possible University services would be helpful, 75 percent said an on-going student support group, 84 percent thought an on-going support group run by a professional and 86 percent thought that professional counselling would be very or somewhat helpful.

Once the data from this survey was taken into account, the school decided to support REFLECT and committed $5,000 to the group, Heiko said.

The groups financial goal for the future is to get $1,250 from each of the other schools in the Five College System, and set up chapters of REFLECT on each of their campuses as well, Heiko said.

He also said the overall financial goal of the group is to receive $18,500 in funding, which would include a stipend for administrative and personnel expenses.

Turn to REFLECT, page B3

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Ricardo M. Townes

Campus Center hits quarter-century mark

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Twenty-five years after the opening of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, the University of Massachusetts will celebrate the occasion with a symbolic rededication, as well as a disco, casino night, several on-going live musical and dance programs and other events.

"In the 1960s, as the University expanded and enrollment increased, the Student Union no longer provided adequate space for student functions, and so its expansion became a necessity," said junior Melissa Schraga, who was hired to coordinate the anniversary.

"The 25th Anniversary of the Campus Center celebrates two-and-a-half decades of students gathering in protest and celebration for educational, political and social events," Schraga said.

A retro 70s disco will kick off the Anniversary celebration on Sept. 14, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 a.m. The dance will be produced by Art Steel of the Art Steel Blues Band, as well as disc jockey Billy Arnold III and Robert Dwelley.

In 1970, the Campus Center began opening in pieces, starting with the Coffee Shop and Barber Shop, according to Bernard Wilkes, Associate Director of the Campus Center.

Since the Campus Center and the Student Union are so often considered to be one entity, part of the Anniversary celebration will take place in the Student Union — a series of international music and dance, beginning with Khmer Music Awakened, a traditional Cambodian group. The series will take place every Tuesday starting Sept. 9 at 12:30 p.m.

Non-soliciting street musicians will perform on the concourse every Wednesday, beginning Sept. 20.

Blues and Jazz in the Bluewall, a program sponsored by University Productions and Concerts in the 1980s, will resume on alternating Mondays, starting Sept. 18, from 9 p.m. to midnight.

A casino night held on Oct. 19, from 7:30 to 1 a.m., will benefit Jessie's House, a Northampton shelter for battered women and children.

The UMass Greek community has volunteered to work that night, and the date has been set for the night before Homecoming Weekend to make it convenient for both students and alumni.

A symbolic rededication ceremony attended by Chancellor Scott is also planned for Homecoming Weekend, on Oct. 21. The ceremony will recognize Campus Center staff and administrators who have retired in the last year.

Other events being planned for the Anniversary include a movie night featuring retro movies and a retrospective historical display about the Campus Center and the man it was named after, Murray D. Lincoln.

"It's a lot of hard work," said Schraga, as she outlined plans for the Anniversary.

Schraga has experience working other large events in the area, including Queer Fest, First Night in Northampton and Southwest Week.

She is working with a small core of students — Matt Auger, chair of the Campus Center / Student Union Commission, Amy Landry, who works in personnel and is a member of the Campus Center / Student Union Commission and William Davilia, assistant student coordinator for SCERA and treasurer of Boricuas Unidos (United Puerto Ricans.) The group is looking for more volunteers.

Student organizations will be asked to get involved in one of three ways — to become a part of a subcommittee for a sub-project, to give a financial contribution to one sub-project or to the project as a whole, or to place the 25th Anniversary of the Campus Center logo on all posters.

Participating groups will be recognized a co-sponsor in all 25th Anniversary of the Campus Center advertising.

Prof emeritus loses benefits

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

As a result of an anti-Semitic incident last semester, a professor emeritus of the math department has received a letter from the school's provost, and lost some benefits on campus.

The action occurred at the end of last semester, when Professor Emerita Helen Cullen attempted to purchase advertising space in The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Cullen wanted to print a letter which concluded "traditional Judaism and the Jewish identity are offensive to most human beings and will always cause trouble between the Jews and the rest of the human race."

The ad was rejected by then-advertising manager, Lisa Tannenbaum, due to a policy against printing advertisements targeting a single person or group of people. When Tannenbaum, who is Jewish, refused to print the ad, Cullen demanded to speak with someone who was not Jewish. The ad was later printed as a letter to the editor.

Provost Pat Crosson wrote a letter to Cullen expressing her "dismay at, and disapproval of, the incident which occurred in the Collegian office this past spring."

Cullen also lost certain benefits available to her, though the University declined to specify what the benefits were.

According to Karin Sherbin, spokesperson at the University News Office, retired faculty generally receive privileges allowing them to continue study in their field of expertise.

In addition, Crosson wrote to the faculty senate asking them to review the campus policy on awarding emeritus status. Since 1990, the status was given to all "honorably retired faculty members" upon their retirement.

However, John Bracey, the secretary of the faculty senate, said the criteria was not the business of the senate. He said departments recommend faculty members to become emeritus when they retire.

Jaime Resnick, the University of Massachusetts Hillel president, said he was satisfied with the administration's response.

"It definitely gives me some confidence in the administration that they are serious about anti-Semitism and that they are willing to take action when anti-Semitic incidents occur," said Resnick.

I'm late for classes!

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Bob Clancy skydives with the UMass Parachute Club last week. Three other "daredevils" landed next to the campus pond for Staff Appreciation Day.

How to make the world a cooler place.

Choose the powerful stick that fights off odor and wetness all day. Six fragrances, one goal: maximum protection. Or get powerful Right Guard protection in a crystal clear gel. Leaves no messy residue or flaky white stuff. So clear, it protects invisibly.

Right Guard®
Right there when you need it.

©1995 The Gillette Company

■ Annual leadership conference expands its agenda

CONFERENCE, continued from page B1

David K. Scott said. "And made a tremendous impact."

Calipari said he only agreed to take on the speaking engagement because of his belief that it was vital to the campus.

"I think it's a great step towards getting people all on one page," he said.

Yet despite all the praise the event received, the planners admit there were some flaws they would like to eradicate by next summer.

Townes said one workshop in particular "flopped miserably," due to a Campus Activities concept that did not translate well in its presentation.

"What we wanted didn't get there," he said of "The System" workshop, co-planned with the SGA. "The SGA part was fine. I take full responsibility."

Cheeseboro-Weaver found only one major problem in the execution of the conference — its inconvenient timing.

"I wish had been able to have more student leaders there," he said.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Charles Merrill, educator and philanthropist, was the keynote speaker at the formal dinner of the Leadership Conference last Wednesday.

Speaker targets chancellor, republican party at conference

By Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcoatl
Collegian Staff

What appeared to be a conventional Formal Dinner atmosphere at last week's student Leadership Conference was suddenly shattered by the frank and incisive remarks of keynote speaker Charles Merrill.

The dinner was scheduled to bring together administrators, faculty and student leaders as the closing of the conference neared. However, the sensation that appeared to bring them together the most was the widespread laughter as Merrill denounced Scott for denying that UMass is training the "obedient" mid-level executives of U.S. corporations.

"When it comes to leadership do not look to Chancellor Scott as a role model. He is as obsolete as a Polish Cavalry men or a panda," Merrill said as he pointed his finger to Scott who was seated at the main table a couple feet from the stand. He did not relinquish his attack later adding that "after all [Chancellor Scott] comes from an insignificant island in the Northern Orkneys which is the most unimportant piece of geography in the world and he grew up in a country rotted by socialism."

Ricardo M. Townes, Vice-Chancellor for Student Activities, said he was impressed that Merrill was a member of the Board of Trustees at predominately black Morehouse College in Atlanta.

According to Townes, the speech itself was brilliant, pointing out "the Chancellor Scotts of the world represent a system that is fatally flawed and needs to change," although he did not interpret Merrill's speech as an attack on Scott. "Don't accept the way things are today because that's not the way things have to be," Townes said.

The speech entitled "The Paradox of Democracy" focused on the evils of the ideology of the state by criticizing the Nazi regime in Germany, the former Polish communist state and today's capitalist system. He then highlighted the internal problems the United States faced in relation to equity, race, gender and the environment though he blamed most of them on republicans.

"I hate Gingrich. He is a monster. I hate him. If I could get my hands on him I would break his body into little pieces with iron rats," Merrill said. "My wife says come on, after all he's still a human being. No he is not, he is a monster."

According to Merrill, the Speaker of the House of Representatives will die if he achieves greater power.

"He will be driving along the Beltway in his new Mercedes Benz at 80 miles an hour when suddenly for no reason the wheel will come flying off and he will be killed. Then stupid liberals like me will dance in the streets singing ... and meanwhile the real Republicans will quietly institute an 18 percent flat sales tax and eliminate welfare," Merrill said as the crowd, including Chancellor Scott, offered him a standing ovation.

■ REFLECT

Continued from page B1

What Heiko said he hopes to achieve through this group is "to ensure support services for the students, even after I've left the University."

This year, REFLECT's different aspects are "becoming more defined," Heiko said.

The new REFLECT

According to Heiko, the group has a new schedule set up, with new programs designed to meet a broader range of needs, expanded in part to reflect the survey results.

There will be short term groups lasting for five weeks each. A limited number of spaces are available and attendance is mandatory.

Continuing from last semester will be the drop-in groups, but there will be two this semester instead of one. One is designed for bereaved students, while the other is for students with a seriously ill friend or family member.

These groups will meet for ten weeks and there will be no mandatory attendance.

"Dealing with things that go along with illnesses is very hard," said Alex Exley, whose mother died of cancer last semester. "It really helped to see others like me who were going through the same thing."

The group was one of the reasons that led to her decision to stay in school, mainly because it dealt with the stresses that would have caused many to drop out, Exley said.

"The facilitator was incredible," Exley said. "We could talk or listen when we wanted to and feel comfortable doing either."

Heiko hopes to organize a more aggressive outreach program on campus this year. One group he especially would like to concentrate on are the Residential Assistants (R.A.).

In the Project Pulse Survey, only 12 percent of those affected by grief said they turned to their R.A. and only 33 percent of those not affected said they would go to an R.A. if they were experiencing grief.

"We want people to recognize the signs of grief and be able to react to it in a more organized way," Heiko said. "We're trying to make the community into a more supportive environment."

Amherst Insurance Agency Amherst Financial Services

Over a Quarter of a Century of Service to the Community

Voted Best in the Valley 7 Years in a Row

"Complete Insurance & Financial Planning"

253-5555

Auto • Motorcycle • Home • Tenant • Life Health • Disability

20 Gatehouse Road • Amherst, Massachusetts

Welcome Back!

Hey, it's not the '70s anymore, but the Collegian is looking forward to giving you all the news in the Pioneer Valley, and we can't do it without your help.

We're always looking for new writers, photographers, graphic designers and business professionals.

Feel free to come check us out in the deepest, darkest corner of the Campus Center Basement.

We would love to ROCK YOUR WORLD!

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

The Collegian Graphics Deptartment is anticipating openings for the Fall Semester. If you have trouble sleeping, some knowledge of Macintosh computers and QuarkXPress, then this might be the job for you.

Come down to 113 Campus Center, complete and application and ask to speak to Marni or Jim.

Collegian Graphics:

We're up all night putting together New England's Largest College Daily Newspaper

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS

Basketball/ Volleyball Court
FREE TO MEMBERS

Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes

Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmils • Life Cycle • Nordic Track

Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!

Group Discounts Get Your Friends Together And Save $$$

JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES
317 RUSSELL ST. • ROUTE 9
HADLEY
586-0633

Economical, Student Shelving & Desks! SALE August 31st September 10th

Knape & Vogt Anochrome
REGULAR STYLE STANDARDS & BRACKETS
Standards: 36" $1.89; 48" $2.69; 72" $3.39
Brackets: 8" $.99; 10" $1.09; 12" $1.29
Great for Kid's Room, Garage or Laundry Room!

Knape & Vogt
PREFINISHED SHELVING
Oak, Walnut, White & Almond
Shelf Widths 8", 10" & 12"
Shelf Lengths 24", 36" & 48"
25% OFF
5/8" Particle Board Shelves Overlaid with Melamine Laminate for a Stain Resistant Finish.

CONCRETE BLOCK
8" X 8" X 16" 95¢
Use as Shelf or Desk Supports *8816CB

ECONOMICAL DESK TOPS
Luan Doors
28" x 66" or 30" x 66"
*2466HCL or *2666HCL $27.50
Great for Use as Desk Tops

PINE SHELF BOARDS
Top & Sides Smooth, Ends & Bottom Rough
*1129SP
1" x 12" 79¢ Lin. Ft
Combine with concrete blocks or shelf brackets for great economical shelves!

White
EXTRA HEAVY DUTY "L" BRACKET
12" $3.99 K300
16" $4.99 K400
20" $5.99 K500

Since 1842
RUGG LUMBER COMPANY
CHARGE IT
GREENFIELD 66 Newton St. 773-3661 Mon-Fri 7:30A.M.-5:30P.M./Sat 7:30A.M.-4P.M. & Sun 9A.M.-1 P.M.
NORTHAMPTON 33 Hawley St. 584-2054 Mon-Fri 7:30A.M.-6:30P.M./Sat 7:30A.M.-3:30P.M. & Sun 9AM-1 P.M.

~ FACULTY & ADMINISTRATION ~

Prof's award boosts chemistry department

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

One of the newest members of the University of Massachusetts' chemistry department recently received a competitive research award that no faculty member has yet received at UMass.

Out of over 50 nominees, Ricardo Metz was one of only 11 recipients of the 1995 Camille and Henry Dreyfus New Faculty Awards. The $25,000 Dreyfus Awards are given to new faculty to help them start their research and teaching activities in the field of chemistry.

Professor Metz is the first member of the University faculty to receive the award.

"[The awards] are a highly selective program," said Dr. Robert Lichter, Executive Director of the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation. "They are given on the basis of what promise the nominees show as scholars and teachers."

One of the criteria for the awards is the environment in which the nominee will be working. The growth and promise of the Universities' chemistry department played an important role in his selection, Lichter said.

"[Metz] is the kind of person we're building the future of the chemistry department on," said Lila Gierasch, Head of the Chemistry Department.

Out of 400 applicants this past year, only Metz and Scott Auerbach were chosen to fill positions in the chemistry department, Gierasch said.

Half of the award money he receives will go towards funding research assistance, while the other half will go towards purchasing diagnostic equipment, Metz said.

Professor Metz's research will center around the spectroscopy of positive ions in the gas phase, which he said should give him new insights into how catalysts work.

Lichter said the research area that Metz is working on is considered to be very important, Lichter said.

According to Metz, possible applications of this research include designing better catalysts and helping to understand bonding in unsaturated transition metal compounds.

Industries that could benefit from this research include the pharmaceutical and chemical industries. The latter, such as those converting petroleum to plastics, may specifically be aided, Metz said.

He also said nothing as of yet is very definite, and will not be until his research is complete.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Henry Dreyfus New Faculty Award winner Professor Ricardo Metz is the first faculty member at UMass to win the honor.

Administrative vacancies leaves campus struggling

By Robert Dunn
Collegian Staff

Much of the administration's time this summer has been spent moving into vacant office space. The first and most publicized event is the vacancy left open in the office of the University of Massachusetts President.

Three-year UMass President Michael K. Hooker stepped down at the end of last semester to take the position of chancellor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Hooker's interim replacement is Sherry H. Penny, who had been chancellor of UMass-Boston since 1988.

A 20-member search committee comprised of trustees, students, faculty, staff and alumni from all UMass campuses has been assembled to find someone to fill the vacancy left by Hooker.

"The appointment of faculty members from each campus ensures that specific campus concerns will be well represented to the committee and to prospective candidates," said UMass Board Chairman Daniel Taylor. Final appointments to the committee were made by Taylor.

The final six members of the committee were announced on June 29.

"The committee is now whole," said Peter K. Lewenberg, Chair of the search committee. "And we can begin the important work of searching for the next leader of the university [system]."

One name rumored to be under consideration is that of Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger.

Bulger has not confirmed if he was being considered.

Associate Vice Chancellor for University Advancement, John Fuedo, acknowledged the rumors about Bulger have been circulating since early summer, but there has been no confirmation either way.

"Our office has received several phone calls about the senate president, and they've been mixed," Fuedo said.

According to Fuedo, his office had heard from strong supporters of Bulger as well as strong detractors, but that overall the responses have been more positive.

At the time of Penney's appointment she was not being considered to permanently fill the post. That could change, according to William Wright, Director of Public Information.

Social and Behavioral Sciences

Another major vacancy that has been filled over the summer is the Dean of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Seymour M. Berger, the outgoing dean, retired on June 30. He is being replaced by Glen Gordon, who had held the position once before from 1984-1991. The announcement was made by UMass Provost, Patricia Crosson.

"I am delighted that Dr. Gordon has generously agreed to serve ... his administrative experience will enable him to assume the deanship with ease," Crosson said.

Gordon, who's appointment is for two years, has been a member of the UMass faculty since 1964 when he started as an assistant professor in the political science department.

"I am very pleased to have the opportunity to serve the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences once again," Gordon said. "I look forward to working with my friends and colleagues in social science and elsewhere."

University Advancement

Also this summer, UMass Chancellor David K. Scott announced the appointment of Royster C. Hedgepeth as the University's vice chancellor for University Advancement.

In the post, Hedgepeth will act as a liaison between UMass and the surrounding community, donors, alumni, the media and the public in general.

Hedgepeth succeeds Ron Story, who served as interim vice-chancellor and who will be returning to the history faculty.

Hedgepeth had previously served at Marquette University as vice president for University Advancement and as special consultant to the president for institutional planning. In these positions, Hedgepeth was responsible for instituting a comprehensive fund-raising campaign that eventually earned Marquette a spot in Money magazine's listing of the top 100 universities in the nation.

Hedgepeth said he hopes to similarly increase the money flow into UMass.

"We need to take the University's story to the people, to work together with everyone," Hedgepath said. "People don't give money because the University needs money. They give money because they see the benefits of the institution."

When asked about the number of administrative slots filled over the summer, Barbara Pitoniak, a spokesperson at the UMass news office, dismissed the notion of an annual pattern.

According to Pitoniak, it's merely a coincidence the positions became open at approximately the same time.

"It's just the way it happened," she said.

New department heads, faculty invade University

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Students of the University of Massachusetts will be encountering many new department heads and faculty when they return to class this September.

There are over 20 department head changes occurring this fall, and in addition there have been 18 new faculty hirings throughout the University.

"We're a small department," said Shmuel Bolozky, the new Chair of the Judaic and Near Eastern studies department. "We're hoping to recuperate our losses at faculty and enlarge our student base."

Other recently appointed department heads cited that they had similar goals.

"It's very important for us in these days of declining funds and resources to become more of a visible presence on campus," said Virginia Scott, the new Chair of the Department of Theater.

There are also department heads who feel that the department which they are assuming control of are doing fine.

"We have no changes planned," said the newly appointed head of Polymer Science and Engineering, Richard Farris, "We are very fortunate to have plenty of faculty and great students."

Recently appointed head of the graduate program of nursing, Sally Hardin, also said there were no changes currently in the works.

Glen Gordon, newly appointed dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, does foresee some changes.

For graduate students of his college, a public policy track is being planned, possibly leading to the creation of a separate public policy masters program, Gordon said.

The undergraduate students were cited by potential employers as not having enough experience and not being able to work well with a team, Gordon said.

He continued that he hopes to focus on an undergraduate curriculum which will give students more experience.

Many of the department heads noted that their tenure as a department head will last around three years, although some said they would be around for a considerably longer time, except for those named to interim department head positions.

"We're doing well, we're on track," said Todd Fuller, an acting department of the head of Forestry and Wildlife Management. "We're going in no new directions at this time."

Said Mark Mount, appointed interim associate director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, "I hope to do an excellent job."

New York conference reexamines campus cable system

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

A conference held this past June further emphasized the point made by a University of Massachusetts administrator that cable television is becoming a more integral part of life on college campuses today.

The third annual Conference on Campus Cable Television, organized by University Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN) manager Laurel Hellerstein, took place at New York University from June 23-26. The conference brought together representatives from over 55 universities nationwide.

In addition to the university representatives, vendors from many facets of the television industry were also in attendance. Among these vendors were MTV, Comedy Central, the Turner networks and Broad Band, a company which produces television and cable hardware.

Another finding of the conference, Hellerstein said, is that the University of Massachusetts is quite advanced in the area "special interest type programming aimed especially at undergraduates."

Rich Cronin, senior vice president and general manager of the Nick at Nite cable network, was the keynote speaker.

His speech centered around the idea that "content is king," according to Hellerstein.

That content, or the quality of entertainment, will be the driving force behind the future of new media, Hellerstein said.

As of yet, the HSCN has no plans to actively change or rearrange its programming as a result of ideas exchanged at this conference.

The reason for this is that the HSCN, along with many other departments at the University, has been hit by budget cuts.

Due to these cuts, it was impossible for the HSCN to afford the equipment necessary to broadcast cable channels, Hellerstein said.

However, the HSCN is headed toward improvement, Hellerstein said and is currently investigating ways to increase the channel lineup.

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

Wanted: Graphic Artist Assistant
Contact: Lynne Thompson For A Portfolio Review
With Graphic Design Skills And MAC Experience
University Health Services
Graphics Dept. 549-2671 x181
(QUARK, PHOTOSHOP & FREEHAND)

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

TAU DISTRIBUTION
You will be able to:
- Pick up a Terminal Adaptor Unit (free)
- Set up an e-mail account (billed to your Bursar's account)
- Purchase software (cash)
- Purchase a cable (cash or check)
Where: Campus Center, room 162
When: September 7th & 8th, 9am - 5pm
Please bring your student I.D.
Brought to you by Housing Telecommunications, the Office of Information and Technology, PC Support Services, and the University Store.

ART works
UMASS ARTS COUNCIL...Over 25 years of providing grant support, financial resource networking, and arts information to student organizations & academic departments; addressing contemporary issues, aspects of identity, and the values of cultural awareness.
Arts Information... the Arts Council publishes ❖ ARTSITINGS, a bi-weekly arts calendar of events at the five colleges ❖ ART NOTICE: NOTICE ART, a monthly gallery banner promoting all six UMass galleries ❖ ART WORKS ON CAMPUS, a brochure guide to galleries and public art sites ❖ VISUAL ARTS BILLBOARD MAPS in key locations across campus. ❖ NEW FUNDING BROCHURE: Sources of funds on campus
ART eVENTives...
Interventions of Dance, Music, Poetry, & Theatrical Performance in Public Art Sites and Courtyards.
Public Art... maintenance and campus beautification. ACAPAS, Arts Council Adopt A Public Art Site Council Scholarships... at (AES) Arts Extension Service for arts management and at (PAD) Performing Arts Division for dance, music, voice or other disciplines.
UMass Arts Council... is funded primarily by a portion of the student arts fee. Council members include undergraduate and graduate students, alumni, faculty, and professional staff appointed by representative Senates. If you would like to become a Council member, contact your Senate or the Arts Council.
Grant Deadlines... for the Fall are 9/22, 10/20, and 11/17.
Applications are available at the Arts Council and Student Activities Office. Call for advice or help with application.
❖ UMASS ARTS COUNCIL, 101 HASBROUCK, 545-0202 ❖

Jewish holidays kick-off semester

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

It has been said that Jewish holidays always come early or late—but never on time.

This year, the holidays of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year, and Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, are at the end of September and start of October.

The holidays come at different times on the common calendar year because the Jewish calendar is based on a lunar cycle.

Both holidays will be celebrated on campus by Hillel and Chabad House.

In the meantime, there are many events available for interested students.

Hillel joins Alpha Epsilon Phi and Alpha Epsilon Pi in kicking off the fall semester with volleyball and a barbecue at Hillel House this Sunday.

On Sept. 14, Hillel is holding their first Israeli Movie Night of the new semester in the Hillel House lounge. The movie wasn't chosen yet as of press time.

Three days later students can "Dance through the Decades" to the music of the '60s, '70s and '80s at Hillel's annual dance.

"I think that this year Hillel has incredible diversity when it comes to its programming," Hillel President Jaime Resnick said. "We have everything from social programming to cultural to political and religious programming and our programming represents the diversity of our membership. Hillel will continue in the future to try and reach out to as many different students within the Jewish community and outside of the Jewish community as we can."

Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter also said he is excited about the upcoming semester. "I hope it'll go terrific. I know the focus that I'm excited about is to really focus on the positive, look ahead, and to find ways to help Jewish students celebrate the beauty and the joy in being Jewish, and to help build a university community based on respect and understanding."

Group serves as waste watchdog

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

A group from the University of Massachusetts is working to ensure that hazardous waste dumping is not growing out of the industries' control.

A national study completed by the Social and Demographic Research Institute (SADRI) indicates that most of the commercial hazardous waste dumping in the nation occurs in predominantly white working class neighborhoods.

Information gathered by SADRI also disputed an earlier study by the United Church of Christ which had indicated that most of the hazardous waste dumping occurred within disadvantaged minority areas.

The research which led to this conclusion concentrated on commercial hazardous waste disposal companies. Funding came from WMX Technologies, one of several companies under pressure from industry advocacy groups to finance such studies.

The General Accounting Office in Washington, D.C. named the study one of the ten most important environmental studies in the country.

SADRI is currently at work on a more comprehensive study of commercial hazardous waste disposal, said research spokesperson and Director of SADRI Douglas Anderton.

The new study will focus more on industries governed by the Resource, Conservation and Recovery Act (ReCRA), Anderton said. ReCRA industries are those which handle one or more of a list of chemicals.

They outnumber the hazardous waste facilities by a ratio of 10 to 1, Anderton said.

Anderton also noted that the ReCRA industries utilize various means of waste disposal, among them being storing, incinerating, recycling, and/or injecting the waste deep into the crust of the earth.

This continuation of the initial study will last two years, and is funded by a $260,000 grant from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

When asked if industries offered SADRI any resistance while they conducted their research, Anderton said, "There's always a little, but they realize they must accept it, and most are accommodating."

Scholarship fund established

Stonewall Center creates aid for GLBT students & studies

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Though not yet available, a new University of Massachusetts scholarship fund may bring relief to gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students as well as GLBT studies scholars.

The Stonewall Scholarship Fund was established by the UMass Stonewall Center over the summer to provide money for two purposes.

First, some of the money will go to support GLBT studies at the University. Initially the money will come in the form of monetary prizes, which will be granted to one undergraduate and one graduate student.

Competition for the awards will come through the submission of scholarly papers in the area of GLBT studies. Papers will be judged by an interdisciplinary committee of faculty members.

A second function of the fund will be to serve as a source of emergency funding for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students who have been "cut off" by their parents for being honest about their sexual orientation.

"Right now we're not putting out any information on applying because we don't have enough money to start giving it out yet," Pease said. "Hopefully if we get enough response ... we'll start to be able to put out materials and application forms."

The Stonewall Center hopes to raise money through a fund raising campaign called "10 for 10."

"We're calling it the 10 for 10 Campaign because we're hoping people will give $10 because we've been around for 10 years," said Pease, adding that "any amount is going to be useful."

Letters will be going out to all University faculty and staff asking for contributions and there will be a fund raising banquet in late October. Other interested donors are asked to contact the Stonewall Center in Crampton House, Southwest.

Collegian Comics
What a blast!

CANTONE'S PIZZA CO.
Large 16" one topping PIZZA
7 days 4pm-2am
FREE DELIVERY TO UMASS
Only $7.50 Includes Tax
Or Two For $14.00 Includes Tax
Expires 9/30/95
256-6100

EVERYWOMAN'S CENTER OPEN HOUSE
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1995 9AM - 4PM
Staff will be available to provide information about paid student position, internships and volunteer opportunities
From 4pm - 7pm: Reception and refreshments
All campus members welcome
For more information call 545-0883

Collegian Classifieds
They Really Work!

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Q:
A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541
For all of your auto insurance needs

Amherst Athletic @x@ from Arts Section C

WILDWATER OUTFITTERS
BOOKBAG SALE!
15% to 25% OFF!
ROUTE 9, Hadley - Across from Stop & Shop

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week
Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

Lasts longer than most diets.

Longer than some relationships.

Longer than any check from home.

Soft & Dri® Solid anti-perspirant is powerful protection against odor and wetness in a time-release formula that lasts and lasts and lasts.

The most important thing you put on.

~ LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ~

Leaders of tomorrow

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Student leaders at last week's Leadership Conference pose for a group photo at the closing ceremony of the five-day event.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Student Trustee Daniel Rivera delivers an emotional speech at the formal dinner of the Leadership Conference. The gathering was a chance for faculty and staff to meet student leaders.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Former SGA President David Nuñez and Boricuas Unidos representative Anthony Davila give merengue lessons in the basement of Mary Lyons after the formal dinner.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Channel 19's William Sanchez taped the events during the Leadership Conference.

Trading Post
Antiques · Used Furniture Appliances
256-6786
460 West Street
South Amherst, MA 01002

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS • BEST MACHINES
StairMasters, Treadmills, LifeSteps, NordicTrack, LifeCycles, Cybex UBE, LifeRower, Recumbents, VersaClimber
$139 4 MONTHS
Free weights, Treadwall, Gravitron, Nautilus, Keiser, Step, Hi-Lo Yoga, Lo Impact
NEW! VIRTUAL REALITY RECUMBENT BIKE NEW!
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST 256-

EVERY FRIDAY, 7 PM
Campus Center
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP
Kickin · Worship · Prayer · Teaching · Encouragement · Much Fun
Alliance Christian Fellowship

Taipei & Tokyo
Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1995
★1995★ Best Chinese & Japanese Restaurant Business West
Dine in or Take Out • We Deliver
Gift Certificates Available
(413) 582-1888 • OPEN 7 DAYS
18 Main Street, Northampton, MA 01060

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assesment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator.
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Get the Morning Paper delivered to Dorms, Offices, and Limited Off-Campus Locations*

50% OFF
The Boston Globe

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $33.00	❒ $62.00
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $16.75	❒ $33.25
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $16.25	❒ $28.75

Award Winning
Financial & International News!
The New York Times

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $59.30	❒ $110.70
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $26.80	❒ $53.20
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $32.50	❒ $57.50

Subscribe at the Campus Center
call DADS NEWS at 259-1071
or mail to : DADS NEWS, P.O. Box 633, Amherst, MA 01004-0633
$10.00 Charge for Off Campus delivery

Fall Bike Sale

Hahanna	$349.95
Fire Mountain	$399.95
Lava Dome	$499.95
CinderCone	$625.00
Sex One	$975.00
Kilauea	$800.00
Explosif	$1249.95

Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St., (rear) • Greenfield 774-3701

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.
All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

HEWLETT PACKARD Authorized Sales and Service
COMPAQ
NOVELL

SERVICE • SUPPORT • SOLUTIONS

•HP Vectra PC's • Compaq PC's
•DTK Desktop & Laptop PC's
•HP and Compaq File Servers
•HP LaserJet & InkJet Printers
•Hewlett-Packard and Compaq Authorized Service Center
•Genuine HP Supplies & Accessories

"Microsoft Education Program" offers HUGE discounts on select MS products to faculty, staff &students... Call today for pricing!

Deerfield Data Systems Inc
"New England's HP Specialists Since 1981"
(800) 444-5049
7 Mi North of UMASS Stadium in Sunderland, MA
Open 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday - Friday
VISA, MC, AMEX, & Discover accepted

DO YOU NEED MONEY FOR COLLEGE???
YOU MAY QUALIFY FOR A PRIVATELY FUNDED PAID GRANT OR SCHOLARSHIP
Send for our Free Brochure
WRITE TO:
EDU-DATA TUITION SERVICES
398 Columbus Avenue Box 186
Boston, MA. 02116-6008

UMass International Programs
The Offices of International Programs and Foreign Students & Scholars have moved to HILLS SOUTH, 4TH FLOOR
For information on EDUCATION ABROAD come to the IPO Advising Center
Hills South, Room 455
10 a.m.-Noon & 1-4 p.m.
Monday through Friday
545-2710

Students returning from study abroad are invited to a Welcome Back Reception on Tuesday, September 12, 3:30-5 p.m. Come to the lobby of Hills South

DiGeronimo Brothers VICTORY Super Markets
Prices Effective Thru Friday, September 8
10 University Drive Amherst, MA
Store Hours:
•Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm
•Saturday 7am-9pm
•Sunday 8am-8pm
We're Victory Super Markets, your neighbor just down the street at 10 University Drive... and we want to be your Super Market! The students at UMASS are an important part of our business... We have the departments and products that we know today's active student is looking for in a Super Market.
Welcome Back!
Our Sale Starts Every Saturday. Look For Our 6 Page Flier Each Week.
✔LOW PRICES ✔DOUBLE COUPONS
✔THE BEST QUALITY PRODUCE
✔FRESH MADE SANDWICHES (In Our Deli)
✔SCRUMPTIOUS BAGELS & MUFFINS (From Our Own Bake Place)
PLUS MUCH, MUCH MORE.
Make Victory Your Store For Health & Beauty Care Items.
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON
Any Health & Beauty Care Item $1.00 off
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item. Beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru September 8, 1995. THIS COUPON MAY NOT BE DOUBLED
Great Savings On Back-To-School Items.
✔MEAD 3 SUBJECT NOTEBOOK 120 Sheets ...✔Wide Rule ✔College Rule 99¢
✔10 PACK PENCILS Great Value 2 For $1
✔MEAD WHITE ENVELOPES ✔Regular 6 Inch...100 Count ✔Legal 10 Inch...50 Count 2 For $1
✔BIC CLASSIC STIC PENS 10 Pack...✔Blue ✔Black Mail-In Rebate In Store 99¢
Victory Soda Assorted Varieties 12 Oz. Cans 8 For $1 Plus Deposit
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON PLU #304
Victory Spring Water In Our Dairy Dept. Gallon 4 For $1 Save $1.00 on 4
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item. Beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru September 8, 1995. THIS COUPON MAY NOT BE DOUBLED
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON PLU #305
Chicken of the Sea Solid White Tuna ✔In Water 6 Oz. Can 79¢ Save 40¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item. Beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru September 8, 1995. THIS COUPON MAY NOT BE DOUBLED
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON PLU #303 #555-47
Kraft Miracle Whip ✔Regular ✔Light 32 Oz. Jar $1.79 Save 80¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item. Beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru September 8, 1995. THIS COUPON MAY NOT BE DOUBLED
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON PLU #302
Pepsi Cola Soda - 2 Liter Bottle Assorted Varieties Plus Deposit 69¢ Save 30¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item. Beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru September 8, 1995. THIS COUPON MAY NOT BE DOUBLED
We Make It Easier To Shop...
YANKEE 24 Quick Pay* BayBank X-1-555-24 NYCE
Or Charge It... VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Butterling By John Ottinger

NAT NOWHERE TO BE FOUND. THERE'S NO WEIGHT CLAUSE IN MY CONTRACT. WHY DIDN'T I THINK OF IT BEFORE? READERS LIKE THEIR CARTOON CHARACTERS SLIM AND ACTIVE. THE ROAD TO PERSONAL IS MY TICKET OUT OF HERE!
CONTRACT
CHOMP! CHOMP! CHOMP! CHOMP!
AHHH! CHINS-A-PLENTY. ALL RIGHT, A DEAL IS A DEAL. DRAW ME A NICE FAT PANEL, SO I CAN PUSH MY PUDGE THROUGH TO FREEDOM.
TWOO FIN!
DWAW DEH MADAM
YEVEE FUNNY, MY WIFE AH STUCK!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WHY DO YOU WANT TO TRANSFER TO MY DEPARTMENT, WALLY?
I'M IN A DYSFUNCTIONAL ORGANIZATION. I'M NOT GETTING THE LOVE AND SUPPORT I NEED. THAT'S WHY I'VE BEEN MAKING LONG-DISTANCE PERSONAL CALLS FROM THE FAX ROOM.
YOUR RÉSUMÉ SAYS EVERY BOSS YOU'VE HAD WAS A COMPLETE JERK
SO, WHEN DO I START?

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

DO YOU ACTUALLY KNOW OF ANY VAMPIRES, PROFESSOR?
THERE'S ONE I'VE SUSPECTED FOR YEARS...
HM!
LUGO BELOSI
FANGS IN THE NIGHT
HE'D BE OLD BY NOW, BUT AGE IS MEANINGLESS — TO VAMPIRES!

Loeld By Roger & Salem Salloom

Do you want to know what's more important to me than poverty racism mendacity hypocrisy abortion corruption purity truth and beauty?
I'll tell you.
It's issues issues . . .

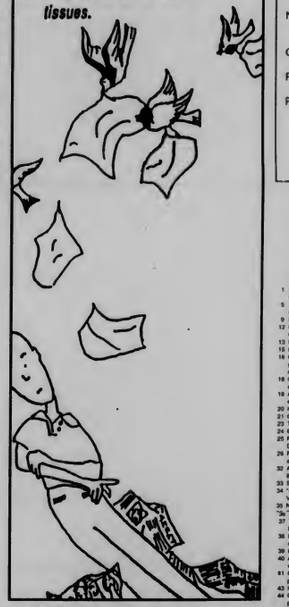
No, no, I mean tissues. Tissues are very important to me . . .
tissues.



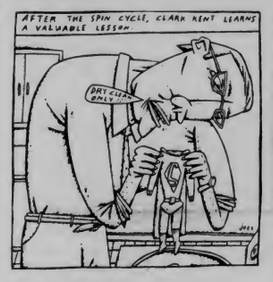
Close to Home By John McPherson

Unfortunately, Arnie's trick with the bubble gum did little to impress his interviewer.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

IT'S AMAZING! A RESPECTED SCIENTIST LIKE PROFESSOR WARREN SEEMS TO BELIEVE IN VAMPIRES!
AND WHAT'S WORSE — HE SUSPECTS THAT LUGO BELOSI MAY BE ONE!
WHICH MEANS IT'S TIME FOR BELOSI AND SPIDER-MAN TO MEET!

Joey By Joey



Joey By Joey

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

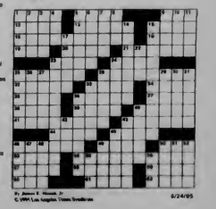
Back to School Staff

Night Editors	Matt Audette, Jacob Michaels, Tim White
Copy Editors	Tara MK Connelly, Matt Audette
Photo Technicians	Daymion Smith, Thang Vo
Production	Marni Hellner, James Ganley, Tashi Kahn, Tony Morse, Mark Mitchell

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Prepare flour for baking
5 Sound of merriment
9 Bean or sauce
12 Kuwait or Oman
13 Not odds voice
15 Lady Chaplin
16 Country game for a nobleman?
18 Ottoman imperial standard
19 Albuquerque educ. inst.
20 Hessian river
21 Comes in
23 Tartan wearers
24 Beowulf, for one
25 Part of 55 Down
26 Field amusement?
32 Actress Blackman
33 See 26 Across
34 "—Camera," Van Druten
35 Nastagy funds
36 "Spanish" Hahy
37 Town in NE Baluchistan
38 Letters from old Athens
39 Levee
40 Assessed, with "up"
41 Grizzly dental problem?
42 Hopeless ones
44 Gorky playwright?
45 Godfrey's cousin
46 Layers
49 Bread pan: Gallic style
50 Sichuan
53 Number of Arabian nights
54 Shor's grain, right away?
57 Bank transaction
58 Ant
59 Grain beards
60 — Vic
61 Gram spikes
62 Italian pronoun

DOWN
1 Elephant boy of films
2 Ayatollah's land
3 Grain source
4 Shipper's abbr.
5 Harvest time?
6 Priscilla's author
7 Time period
8 Cold water diver
9 Food fish
10 Rent evils
11 Sweet potatoes
14 Go off the —
15 Fancy feedbag?
17 Anguilla angler
22 D.C. health facility
23 Mix matter and whisk
carpentry style?
24 Eagle's nest
Var.
25 Green carriers
26 Sculptor's subject
27 Walk — be happy
28 Ice
29 Crop for Mervs?
30 Old card game
31 Forays
33 Atmosphere: to the poet
36 Teach
40 "— so much owed by so many to —"
42 Success
43 Miller's grains
45 Horse opera
46 Granary feature
47 Fries or harrows
48 "Tobacco —"
49 NYC art museum
50 Buckles
51 Wheat at 52 — boy!
55 Coolney cottage
56 "Scrubs who —"



6/24/95

Quote of the Day

"Stop the production, Juan wants the monkey!!

–Overheard

Your Horoscope

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Clean up your act before a superior ratchets on – your slacking off is becoming noticeable. Take the advice of someone wiser than yourself when it comes to matters of the heart.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Your ability to thrive under adverse conditions will be put to the test this week, persevere and everything will work out for the best. Control your temper to stop a situation from worsening.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Avoid lengthy conversations that do not focus on the issue at hand. Your time is valuable and there is much to do. If you ask for advice, make sure that the person you ask is aware of all sides of the situation.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Try to keep an open mind during a debate. You could learn something that will be useful in the near future. Covering all your bases means more time for relaxation this weekend.

LEO
July 23–August 23
It's important to organize this week so that you don't inadvertently forget something important. Make lists, consult with other members of a committee or group, and then schedule your time wisely to avoid last-minute stress.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
Your experience could guide you through a sticky situation. Trust your inner voice, rather than outside advice, if the two are in conflict. It's not necessary to convince another in order to be right.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
A favorable financial development may tempt you to shed your moderate ways. Stay thrifty – a better opportunity to spend is just ahead, and you'll be glad you waited.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Effortless success has been the way for you in the past, but you may be due for a change. Take heart. The work you put into a project will come back to you doubled. Your kind words cheer someone who's down.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A new business scheme may seem far fetched, but with a little refinement, it could be a real gem. Take a little risk after thinking twice, if you're feeling especially daring – the payoffs could be greater than you imagined.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
A romantic mindset means your relationship with a sweetheart could thrive this week. Extra TLC and attention would help all of your friendships since your busy schedule may have some people feeling neglected.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Making up after an argument could prove interesting if your relationship is on solid ground. If you're feeling shaky, however, don't hurry to kiss and make up – you may need to work on the fundamentals instead.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A difficult time with a mate or friend may be due to stress in another area – money, perhaps? An open, frank discussion of all your mutual obligations may be just the ticket. An old friend has some sage advice.

Wally By Michael Hogan

EARL—ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE BACHELOR REFRIGERATOR MASSACRE.

Your comic could be here! Contact Juan at 545-3500.

Look in this space daily for dining commons menus or call 526-2626 for an updated menu.

WELCOME BACK!

Be sure to come visit us soon!

Prices effective Monday, September 6 through Sunday, September 10, 1995

Big Y®

Where People Come First™

175 University Drive
Amherst
256-1191
Mon-Sat
7am-10pm
Sun
8am - 9pm

North King St.
Northampton
584-6137
Mon-Sat
7am-12midnight
Sun
8am - 9pm

Sliced to Order
Norwestern Turkey Breast
1.98 lb
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

2 Liter, Plus Deposit
Pepsi, Diet Pepsi or Mountain Dew
.77
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

8 oz
Dannon Light Yogurt
.28
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

6 oz
Lay's Potato Chips
.77
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

10 oz Regular or Low Fat
Quaker Granola Bars
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

Buy 2 14 oz Bag
World Classics Tortilla Chips
Get one 11 oz Jar
World Classics Salsa
FREE
On up to 1 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

Half Gallon
All Liquid Laundry Detergent
1.88
On up to 5 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

3.5 oz
Mentadent Toothpaste
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE
On up to 5 with EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

We Offer
WESTERN UNION MONEY TRANSFER UPS

We Accept
NYCE VISA MasterCard YANKEE 24

Free Check Cashing Sign Up Today!

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

The Largest College Daily in New England • Volume CV Issue 1

BACK TO SCHOOL FALL 1995

Spending summer with the Tikki god

MTV
By Mike McLean

Picture this: days spent lounging around a pool, beautiful women and chiseled men milling about taking part in every sort of childish antic under the hot summer sun, and of course, tons of cool music to listen to.

Unless you happen to be at the MTV Beach House this summer, your vacation was undoubtedly not filled with any of these things. In fact, if you were anything like the rest of us you went home from your mundane summer job, turned the fans on high, flipped on the tube and let the Mighty Beach House Tiki God tell you what you were going to see for the next few hours.

MTV's summer started off promising enough, there was the potential of the "Real World: London," the mystery of "Road Rules," a new season of "The State" and cutting edge cartoons with MTV's "Oddities," "Aeon Flux" and as always, "Beavis and Butthead."

Let's backtrack and start with "The Real World," which relocated to jolly old England for its fourth installment. This season's recipe mixes three Americans, two Brits, a German DJ, and a New Zealand model into a flat for (hopefully) months of conflict and romance.

If you ever sat through the first three "Real Worlds" and said to yourself, "If they ever got real people on this show it might be more realistic," then this series no doubt proved you right. The problem with this sad bunch of Gen X'ers was that they were all too Gen X for their own good. And we all know that apathy doesn't make for juicy confrontations, but rather low ratings.

This cast of characters was enough to make even the dullest viewer feel like their life was action packed. Mike was the American race car driver who failed to get a sponsor so he ended up sitting around doing nothing most of the time. His American counterparts were Kat and Jay, of whom the latter fell right into the "where is he?" role that seems a prerequisite every year (remember Mohammed?), and the former went

Turn to MTV, page C7

'Pocahontas went around the river bend, Michael whined to the world, Jerry traveled to the great beyond and the sun shone through it all'

SUMMER REVIEW

Take a hot peek into the world of musical events

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

The summer is usually a time for things to slow down, but in the music industry, it was business as usual.

The road was not a pleasant place this summer for America's biggest bands, Pearl Jam and R.E.M. as both bands were continuously plagued by a series of soap opera- like problems. R.E.M. suffered more medical problems than you would see on an episode of "E.R." as the band had to cancel tours at least twice.

All is well now and they plan to return to the area with a show in Hartford in early October. Keep your fingers crossed that their health will be alright. Meanwhile Pearl Jam suffered continuous problems with ticket agencies and sickness forcing the band to cancel most of their American tour.

Comeback of the Summer: Shane MacGowan. Once leader of the mighty Irish band the Pogues, MacGowan was kicked out of the band four years ago. Since then many have considered MacGowan to be a lost and wasted drunk, but he has proved his critics wrong. Backed by his new band the Popes, MacGowan released an impressive album entitled The Snake and toured the U.S. to enthusiastic crowds.

Rock 'n' Roll's grand chameleon, David Bowie, has spent his summer working overtime. First he had a lead part in the acclaimed film Basquiat, where he played the role of Andy Warhol — a far stretch from Ziggy Stardust. Don't worry though, Bowie hasn't forgotten about his musical talents. Hopefully that will be evident as he releases a new album entitled Outside, set for release in September. To promote the album Bowie will be co-headlining a tour with Nine Inch Nails. Should make for an interesting bill.

Oh Sweet Jane! As the fall season arrives expect an avalanche of releases of box sets and greatest hits for the holiday season. The best of the bunch will surely be the Velvet Underground's five CD box set to be released on September 26. The collection will include 26 previously unreleased tracks!

After years of waiting, George Michael is free to record again. Due to legal debates with his record label Sony, Michael vowed never to record another song for them again. To bail him out, the Dreamworks SKG label bought out his contract at the dear price of $16 million. His new label is co-owned by the all star cast of Steven Spielberg, Jefferey Katzenberg and David Geffen.

U2 is back in the studio again and not surprisingly they are altering the sound yet another time. The super-ego's proved that even though they have been absent from the airwaves for what seems like an eternity their popularity is still going strong considering that there mediocre single "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me, Kill Me" ruled the summer. Currently they are recording two new albums. The first, set for release later this year will be an all instrumental album produced by Brian Eno. Following that will be a more traditional album due out next year.

Do you want authentic and accurate predictions on love, happiness and success? If so call LaToya Jackson's new 1- 900 number — Psychic Network. Costs only $3.99 per minute. Maybe Michael Jackson is not the most messed up Jackson after all.

Shine On You Crazy Dollar. Those greedy British folks, who call themselves Pink Floyd are back again to take your money. Their most recent release Pulse is a two CD collection of live material from their last album including a live rendition of the entire Dark Side of the Moon album. Their last live album also contained many of the same songs. Who possibly needs to hear what the band sounds like after it lost Syd Barrett and Roger Waters, the two ex- members with an ounce of creativity.

It may have not have been on the level of the breakup of the Beatles, but indie rock fans everywhere were saddened by the break-up of Small Factory this summer.

Turn to MUSIC, page C11

Movies battle it out for theater goer's attention

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Compared to the scanty hits of the summer of '94, this summer's relentless deluge of films was enough to drown even the most avid of moviegoers. With an average of three new releases per week, how did people decide where to blow their seven bucks? The local multiplex soon became an arena in which films would compete.

To sum up the past three months, here are some obvious comparisons as well as some match-ups almost as unlikely as the Mike Tyson vs. Peter McNeely fight, and how well each fared in the Ring of Doom known as the box office.

BRAVEHEART vs. FIRST KNIGHT

Mel Gibson directed and starred in the three-hour historical epic Braveheart — quite possibly the best movie of the summer. Gibson played the 13th century Scottish warrior William Wallace, who on both a personal and a patriotic mission, led his people in rebellion against the King of England.

The film was romantic in the purest essence of the word. Wallace was a selfless devoted hero to the core, who fought for the three things that mattered in life: his family, his country and his true love. Gibson connected with the audience, and actually made it become devoted to his cause.

The scenery and costumes were so authentically 13th century Scottish you were pulled in from the start. Most convincing were the intense battle scenes making you cringe with each brandish of a sword.

Chivalrous to the end, Wallace treated his women with respect, and Sophie Marceau dazzled as his royal love interest.

Braveheart was not only thoroughly entertaining, but the most satisfying and emotional cinematic ride of the summer. It had carefully orchestrated suspense, injections of humor (where appropriate) and an underly ing love story of the fairy tale type.

The surefire way to judge a movie is by how it ends. The beginning is crucial, because that is what gets you in the theater, the middle makes you stay; but the ending formulates your permanent opinion and is what people buzz about when they leave. Braveheart's ending isn't the least bit disappointing and a perfect completion to the powerful film.

First Knight fell into the same medieval, chivalric genre, however in terms of quality and believability landed at the opposite end of the spectrum from Braveheart.

This latest version of what has almost been officially declared the most retold story in filmdom is definitely the worst.

If the attraction of the legendary Sir Lancelot and Guinevere affair didn't draw audiences, Sean Connery

Turn to MOVIES, page C12

Book reviews feature courtroom drama and the vampire Lestat

THE RAINMAKER
John Grisham
Doubleday

John Grisham made himself famous by writing suspense novels like The Pelican Brief. It seemed for a while that the lawyer turned author was trying his best to create perfect characters like Mark Sway (The Client) — a street tough 11- year-old that was smarter than the FBI, the Mob and even his own lawyer. However, The Rainmaker's main character Rudy Baylor is stricken with chronic misfortunes which surprisingly enough make him more three dimensional and realistic than Mark Sway or any other Grisham hero.

Rudy Baylor is on his way out of law school filling up remaining credit hours with easy classes such as Legal Problems of the Elderly more commonly known at the school as "Geezer Law." Part of his assignment is to go to a senior center and give free advice to it's patrons. At the center he encounters Miss Birdie Birdsong who wants Rudy to draft her a new will; he is tempted after seeing the old will that shows her fortune to be in the excess of $20 million dollars.

Along with Birdsong, Rudy also meets the Blacks whose son, Danny Ray is dying of leukemia because an insurance company won't pay for a bone marrow transplant. The ambitious graduate researches the Blacks' case and decides that the family has a legitimate argument against the company. So, barely out of school, Rudy decides to take on the company. And if that isn't enough, a side plot

Turn to BOOKS, page C11

~ Music ~

Grohl debuts while Fugazi takes their medicine

HIStory in the making, Letters to Cleo buys wholesale, Primus serves wacky punch

FOO FIGHTERS
Foo Fighters
Rosewell Records

Nirvana is certainly a tough act to follow. And the most unlikely success to have come out of the remains of the band's bitter end would have been from ex-drummer Dave Grohl. Fortunately, Grohl's beats the odds with his new band, the Foo Fighters, named after this countries outdated label for UFOs.

Although the band has already evolved to include Germ/Nirvana guitarist Pat Smear and the rhythm section from Sunny Day Real Estate, their self-titled debut is entirely Dave Grohl. Handling all the musical duties through 12 songs of pure punk rock, Grohl proves more than competent as a multi-instrumentalist, displaying his songwriting savvy.

"This is a Call," Foo Fighter's introduction to the world, is quite a first statement; a statement that reeks of undeniable power, pop hooks and musical mysticism. The rest of the album seems to follow along the same lines. Grohl has obviously taken as much from his time in Nirvana as from his hardcore days in the Washington D.C. band, Scream, to produce a sound all his own.

"Watershed" and "Weenie Beenie" rush with locomotive quickness, while songs like "Floaty" and "X-tatic" paint moody pictures to sit and ponder over.

While people still use Nirvana and Kurt Cobain in the same sentence with the Foo Fighters, Foo Fighters will undoubtably secure Grohl in the halls of punk rock, not only for drumming in perhaps the most important band of the '90s, but also for his own songwriting, musicianship and attitude. A stunning debut. B+ (Wayken Shaw)

PRIMUS
Tales from the Punchbowl
Interscope Records

If anyone is guilty of making eccentricity fashionable, it's Primus. From their early thrash-funk days to their evolution to into weird experimentalists, the Bay Area trio has always known the cool way to be the odd man out. Somehow, though, Primus reached people even when the public wasn't exactly sure what to do with such foreign sounds.

Whereas their last album Pork Soda was somewhat of a difficult swallow, their fourth and latest Tales from the Punchbowl takes their King Crimson vs. Residents fusion into a more groove orientated and cohesive package.

However, cohesion in Primus' case has nothing to do with conventionalism. From the manic mosh-a-thon "Professor Nutbutter's House of Treats" to the tripped out jam of "On the Tweek Again" to the retarded hoedown, "Wynona's Big Brown Beaver," the band's musical irresistibility actually finds some middle ground in making their wacked out songs slightly tolerable.

Lyrically little has changed. Les Claypool's twisted Mother Goose rhymes of hometown El Sobrante, CA and other irrelevant fictional characters are still intact. While "Year of the Parrot" gets serious by using the parrot as a metaphor for musical plagiarism, such noble efforts are quickly forgotten with silly ambiguities like, "Is there heaven, is there hell? Is that tuna melt I smell?"

The only consistency in Primus' attack is the inconsistencies they continue to produce and their unflagging dedication for adept musicianship and adventure is just the vehicle for them to take things further. For now, Tales from the Punchbowl gives a taste of the future (without alienating too many people) from a once in a lifetime band. A- (W.S)

FUGAZI
Red Medicine
Discord

Before punk became a part of mainstream American culture along side of Beverly Hills 90210, Fugazi was the biggest punk band around. While Green Day was struggling to fill clubs the size of your dorm room, Fugazi were selling out theaters with thousands of seats.

Easily Fugazi could have altered their sound and became the next buzz band on MTV, but this is Fugazi we are talking about — not Bad Religion.

Red Medicine may not be the groundbreaking album on the par of their 1990 release Repeater, but it is one of the freshest sounding albums of the year. As Rancid and Offspring are reliving the late 1970's, Fugazi is looking straight ahead. From the free jazz sound of "Version" to the incredibly catchy opener "Do You Like Me," Red Medicine is filled with some of the best songs of 1995 that won't be played on your modern rock station. B+ (Mike Burke)

Michael Jackson
HIStory
Epic Records

The King of Pop tries to reclaim his vacant throne, usurped by scandal and speculation with his latest release double disc album HIStory. Featuring both new and old songs, it is somewhat of a masturbatory compilation of past Jackson favorites. The album is a musical monument to a man who dedicated his life to music, children and plastic surgery.

Oldies but goodies like "Beat It," "Billie Jean" and "Thriller" bring back the early flavor of Michael's ascent to rock n' roll nirvana. While listening, one calls to mind the '80s in all it's hideous glory replete in white gloves and glittering rhinestone covered leather jackets that moonwalked in pre-teen's heads. Hearing the "Beginning" tracks you realize that before the hype and the oxygen tanks there was (and still is) a real musician striving for perfection.

The "Continues" tracks are good, but overly polished and message laden. "Scream" has that dancey cutting edge feeling that makes you wonder if the soul purpose for the song was to lash out at his lack of privacy (it was). In fact the whole set of "Continues" songs like "Childhood" and "You Are Not Alone" seem to be Jackson's only way to convince people that he has been wronged by the world.

Turn to TRAX, page C5

Fugazi pleases with their newest release Red Medicine.
COURTESY JOHN FALLS

Primus' latest is a collection of inconsistency and same old lyrical antics.
COURTESY MICHAEL HALSBAND

Bad Brains, X revive punk for new generation

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

While the last two years have brought a sort of redefined punk rock into the average American household, this summer saw the return of several pioneering punk stalwarts back into the music scene.

L.A.'s Circle Jerks broke out of retirement to seemingly cash in on this wave of popularity. On their newest album, Oddities, Abnormalities and Curiosities (Mercury), original members Keith Morris and Greg Heston, once again hook up with Zander Schloss and Keith Clark (the same line-up from the band's Wonderful and Vi records) to produce some old fashioned power punk.

Not only have the Circle Jerks influenced much of southern California punk today, but each member's resumé reads like a Who's Who in punk rock.

Oddities is filled with strong songs (thanks in part to Schloss) that, like their previous efforts, are thoughtful and powerful — the way punk was meant to be. With hard hitting originals like "Teenage Electric" and "Fable," along with a pretty decent cover of the Soft Boys' "I Want to Destroy You," the Circle Jerks seem ready to see the limelight like many of the bands they influenced.

Bad Brains seem to have successfully rebounded from a disappointing comeback in 1993 with a new album, God of Love (Maverick). These rasta-core punkers from Washington D.C. reclaim much of their spirit and credibility with the return of drummer Earl Hudson and his brother/vocalist H.R., completing the band's original lineup. Also reunited with the band is producer and ex-Cars frontman Ric Ocasek, who produced their 1983 classic Rock For Light.

"Cool Mountaineer" flirts with radical time changes to reach hardcore heaven, while "Tounge Tee Tie" is all riff to absorb. Moving with the times has also given their reggae a more Caribbean dancehall feel ("Long Time"). Bad Brains' return to form may just be the dawning of a new period in the band's already significant life.

X's major affinity with punk rock today is with the "do-it-yourself" ideology. Released on their own new label, Infidelity Records, Unclogged revitalizes old X songs (in mostly acoustic form) recorded live in San Francisco late '94.

Going through their extensive recorded works from 1980's seminal Los Angeles to 1993's Hey Zeus, X strips their songs bare to showcase their highly overlooked songwriting savvy. "Because I Do" is slowed way down to transform itself from punk to indigenous rock n' roll, while "Burning House of Love" shows its underlying country stylings.

While the world has seen a country, acoustic X in the form of the Knitter, (X with Blaster Dave Alvin, minus Billy Zoom) Unclogged clearly shows the magic of X.

Call it carreerism. Call it what you want. But these bands are the real deal and may wake up the younger generations as to what punk was, and still is all about.

Punk legends the Circle Jerks
COURTESY WILLIE GARCIA

September 7

UMass Arts Council Present performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards

artEventives

ACAPAS

A \BagPiPing!
Dedicated Celebration
...for the ADOPTion of six campus PUBLIC ART SITES (ACAPAS-Arts Council Adopt a Public Art Site)

They're Adopted!
Certification of Adoption Ceremonies will take place at each of the ACAPAS sites as BagPiPers from the Springfield Kilted Band sound celebratory notes simultaneously at

1:00
William Smith Clark Memorial
(adopted by the Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning)
Hampden Sculpture Quilt (adopted by the Stockbridge School of Agriculture)
MAZE ReClaimed Site (adopted by the Department of Plant & Soil Sciences)

1:30
Participants from the above sites create a procession to
Helen Curtis Cole Commemorative Garden (adopted by the School of Nursing)
Wedding Sculpture by Pondside (adopted by by the Art Department)
Civility Mural Courtyard (adopted by the Campus Activities Office)

2:00
All celebrants join together proceeding to the Fine Arts Center where they ReSound with best Wishes for a Happy 20th Anniversary to complete the inauguration of the Anniversary Year and the campus wide ACAPAS project.

Be sure to be there by walking, driving or PVTA campus shuttle (runs southbound to MAZE every 15 minutes) Call the UMass Arts Council, 103 Hasbrouck for more information at 545-0202.

CELEBRATING 20 YEARS

THE PVTA ARTFUL SHUTTER

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS • BEST MACHINES

StairMasters
Treadmills
LifeSteps
NordicTrack
LifeCycles
Cybex UBE
LifeRower
Recumbents
VersaClimber

$139
4 MONTHS

Free weights
Treadwall
Gravitron
Nautilus
Keiser
Step
Hi-Lo
Yoga
Lo Impact

NEW! VIRTUAL REALITY RECUMBENT BIKE NEW!

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

Now you can buy clothes and still have money left to buy books or whatever.
The hottest styles for him or her. Plus great towels, bed linens and accessories for your room. Get what you want. Save big bucks. Class dismissed.
T.J.maxx

Monday–Saturday, 9:30 AM–9:30 PM, Sunday, 10 AM–6 PM
Hadley: Campus Plaza, Route 116 and Route 9 (Northampton Road)

~ People ~

Service, music upgraded at Iron Horse

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The rumors had been confirmed: The Iron Horse Music Hall, one of Northampton's oldest and respected music venues, would be shutting its doors forever on June 4 due to financial difficulties.

The Iron Horse was established in 1979 as a 60-seat coffee house. There, local musicians subsidized their show by passing the hat after each performance. Word of the venue's talent grew and even traveled all the way to Europe where the London Times called it one of the ten best clubs in America.

Now it seemed as if the hallowed hall would house talent no longer. Fortunately, Holyoke businessman Eric Suher took up the cause and was able to accumulate enough funds to re-open Northampton's musical Mecca. Suher runs a small printing and apparel company in Holyoke and was the 1994 recipient of the Massachusetts Young Entrepreneur Award. The 30-year-old graduate from Deerfield Academy decided to pursue a career in the business world after graduation.

"Things have been going pretty smooth," said Suher. "It's just been a lot of work and not a lot of time to get things together with the place opening up next week."

Suher found out about the Iron Horse's financial situation when rumors arose in January.

"The club was going to be closed and turned into either a restaurant/sports bar or a retail store," he said. "I thought it was too important an establishment to be turned into just another restaurant."

The new owner want to "bring things back to the way they were" with quality world class entertainment and a great club atmosphere.

"Things have been a little rushed," he said. "We had to wait two weeks for the liquor license to be changed in the State Department and until it did there wasn't anything we could really do."

Luther "Guitar Junior" Johnson will play the newly reopened Iron Horse Sept. 8.
COURTESY OF DAVID HERSHKOFF

No major changes will be done to the interior or exterior of the club, although a new kitchen and bar will be added, according to Suher.

"I want to keep the audience in touch with the performers," said Suher. "I am going to add some more standing room at the bar, but almost all of the 1,700 are really close to the stage. In some places you can even touch the performer."

In addition to renovating the kitchen, Suher hired Martin Cartrera, a chef from La Veracruzana, to run things. The menu will be limited at first but will expand once things have gotten underway according to Suher.

"It will be a terrific menu," he said. "It will be mostly club food though — fast, easy finger food. We want to concentrate on the music, but we will have a good beer selection on tap and some good microbrews."

Turn to IRON HORSE, page C5

Celebrities heat up summer months

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Ah, the sweet replete of Fall's chilly winds to chase away the sluggish days of sun and fun! And yes, celebrities have certainly been having fun.

Let's begin with America's favorite blond Barbie Pamela Lee (formally Pamela Anderson). She made quite the splash at the Cannes Film Festival to promote her action film "Barbedwire." One can hardly wait.

Janet Jackson
COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Another blonde we all know and "love" is Anna Nicole Smith (27, remember this number) who was recently lost her 90-year-old husband, E. Pierce Marshall (are we all doing some math). Yes, once again that was 90-years-old and yes, it so happens that he was a millionaire! Smith decided to send "the love of her life" off with a tackier than tacky funeral service which involved plunging necklines, wedding veils and a shaky solo. Be prepared to hear more from Smith as she takes her "stepson" to court for the money.

Alicia Silverstone is nobody's fool. After becoming the Aerosmith poster girl for delinquent adolescent male fantasies, Silverstone hits it big with the film Clueless and has accumulated enough monies to buy her own production company all at the tender age of 18.

Krissy Taylor, the little sister of supermodel Niki Taylor was found dead in her parents' living room after supposedly taking an over the counter antihistamine. The young model did not have asthma, but took the drug because she often became short of breath. You can catch Krissy's image on a L'Oreal Exuberance box.

A fourth Batman movie is slated for production with Joel Schumacher directing. Currently working on the set of the next John Grisham novel turned movie (A Time To Kill), he wanted both Val Kilmer and Chris O'Donnell to star as the dynamic duo. Battling the Dark Knight and Boy Wonder will be Mr. Freeze and Poison Ivy. And speaking of Val, it's rumored that he has mutually split from British actress Joanne Whalley (Trial By Jury).

How is Elizabeth Hurley doing without Hugh Grant? Just fine thank you. Her image now graces countless Estee Lauder ads including their newest fragrance Pleasures. Grant on the other hand just got fined £120 in Devon, England for pleading guilty to speeding and is on the verge of losing his license because of an earlier convictions for speeding and drunk driving.

Janet Jackson's contract with Virgin records has just about run out and Michael's little sister is shopping around for a new label. Janet is following in her older brother's footsteps by creating her own greatest hits album.

Business deal of the century: Capitol Cities/ABC just merged with Walt Disney Co. Watch out Dreamworks SKG! Also making a deal is the "Jenny Jones Show," which is being sued for negligence in relation to the murder of guest Scott Amedure. The family is suing for $25 million.

Stupid beauty product of the summer: Kevis "sperm based" shampoo. At $25 for 4 ounces women can fertilize their hair ... or create lots of volume. Personally for that price it should sing and tap dance.

Sometimes musician, often times actor and always grubby looking, Ethan Hawke has just sold his first book The Hottest State to Little Brown Publishers for a cool $300,000. The book is about first love and the intense emotions it can produce. See it on shelves in about a year.

What is it with R.E.M. band members and health problems? Singer Michael Stipe just got out of the hospital after a hernia operation. He was flown from Prague to Atlanta, GA for the procedure.

In July, Christy Turlington became the fourth partner in the chic Manhattan Fashion Café. The supermodel who retired from doing runway shows at age 25 will join partners Claudia Schiffer, Elle Macpherson and Naomi Campbell. Another supermodel that has been seen just about everywhere is Cindy Crawford who has split with husband Richard Gere.

And to beat to death this whole model thing, Christie Brinkley who divorced the Piano Man to marry a real estate dealer is once again single. Brinkley separated from Richard Taubman in early August and is now living with their 2-month-old son Jack. The reason? She didn't like the way he was handling their money.

Elizabeth Taylor has a new fragrance out called Black Pearls to complement her Emeralds, Sapphire and White Diamonds line. The 63-year-old actress also had her hip replaced in June and is doing just fine.

Christopher Reeve, shocked the world when he broke his spine in a freak riding accident. Reeves has recovered mobility of his upper torso and arms and vows to walk again. Never underestimate "the man of steel."

Alicia Silverstone
COURTESY FBI-STAR PICTURES

Peter ORPHANOS Guitar

Enjoy your semester finishing your degree with a 1-2 credit course with a patient & supportive teacher

Write for the Collegian

Underlings Lingerie

Village Commons • 15 College St. • South Hadley, MA
(413) 533-8002
Foundations • Sleepwear • Bridal Underpinnings • Post Mastectomy Products

COMPARE!

MORE MACHINES	BETTER AEROBICS
Starmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles Nordic Track • Keiser • Nautilus Cybex • Olympic Free Weights	Funk • Hi/Low • Yoga • Reebok Bench Step • Area's Largest Aerobics Space Suspended Wood Floor

"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

Get Lucky* Rose Sale

- 12 red roses for $14.95
- Offer good thru Sept 30th
- Available at Amherst location only

Montgomery's Florist
233 N. Pleasant St. • 549-8040
• after you leave us, it's up to you!

Kai Chi

Chinese-American Restaurant
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall Rt. 9 Hadley

Dinner Special soup, appetizer, entree, and dessert
30% savings

1/2 Price All Appetizers
Example: Pu Pu (2) Reg. $11.95 Now $5.98
9 pm to close/7 days a week
No other promos apply - Eat in Only 586-2774

WE DELIVER TO UMASS

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY "LIKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK." WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

~ Fashion ~

COURTESY MARIE CLAIRE

Sexy streamline suits in checkered fabrics keep the Fall winds at bay with style and timeless class.

Sweaters, slim suits keep Fall chills at bay

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

There is nothing like the feeling of Fall.

This year the fashion industry is drawing from one of the most basic of fabrics to create a barrage of new styles with old world flavor for the upcoming days of foliage — wool.

In various weights and weaves, wool seems to be the weapon of choice as designers battle to keep the chilly air at bay. Vests, jackets and skirts have been created to look warm and stylish. Pleats, tucks and folds accentuate the drape and line of the skirt which are a-line in shape or wrapped around the hips in kilt-like style.

Nothing is overly new and everything reeks of class. Retro is out and the suit is a perfect example of simplicity at it's best. Jackets are more fitted and hip length, but both styles focus on the shape of the body. Fitted or cropped these office staples can be combined with a skirt of varying length or slim pants a la Hepburn. Ralph Lauren and Versace both use a black and white checkered fabric to pull off a look of refinement and sophistication.

Another staple that seems to have emerged from the closet is the sleeveless dress. Sandra Bullock was seen sporting this style at the MTV Movie Awards and Meg Ryan was captured in a similar sheath of white silk. This versatile garment can be cut and sewed to please the most modest to the most daring depending upon length and fabric. Case in point: Anne Klein, known for her minimalist style, created a wool and cashmere number by Patrick Robertson that is both demure and knowing.

The shoe of the moment is a low heeled pump or sling back that calls to mind lady like grace — more serviceable than an stilette and defiantly more practical. Shiny patent leather and faux alligator and crocodile are used to create modern versions of an ageless style. Also following in the lines of classic luxury are handbags, belts and backpacks.

Nothing keeps you cozier than a good sweater and hot apple cider. Sweaters range from short and cropped in wool and cotton to heavy and bulky. Almost all of them look as if they were created in Switzerland or Norway and call to mind a certain alpine flavor. Pair it with a wool shirt and you look like a Von Trapp family singer crossing the Austrian boarder.

As mentioned before slim pants are in vogue and often matched with short vests, cropped sweaters and short boots. Legs are also kept warm with thigh high cable knit and opaque tights in a myriad of colors. Of course those who want to go the extra mile (and have the legs for it) can pull on a pair of go-go boots.

The camel haired coat in trapeze style, long and short versions have been added to collection by TSE and DKNY. Belted or cinched, the camel haired coat can also be paired with a shawl-like collar or double breasted with side pockets and a silk scarf. With proper exposure and the right celebrity they could replace the trench coat rage that Sharon Stone ignited.

However, not all designers are bent on making everyone look like a New England preppies, so some have stuck to the retro thing and feature shimmering suits in iridescent satin like Bill Blass or blinding floor length sheaths in gold checked lame like Todd Oldham.

Much to the dismay of many, leopard print is also a way to express yourself and has been incorporated into boots, jackets, skirts and suits. Leather and (gulp) western wear also reared their heads at Nicole Miller and Donna Karan (although the odds of either look going to the mass market is highly improbable.) Thank God for small miracles and the fact that it will soon be too cold for people to wear designer jellies.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

Do you like movies, television, music, concerts, artwork, photographs, magazines, books and just about anything in the world?

Well, it's all part of Arts & Living, something that you could be part of too. The Arts & Living desk is always looking for interested people (and interesting people for that matter) so come on down and write. Don't be shy. Arts & Living isn't just a desk, it's a way of life.

COURTESY VOGUE

Everyone wants to stand out in a crowd and what better a way to do it than in an eye catching satin suit.

The Collegian staff handpicks the winners and losers of summer songs

For many people summer calls to mind cramming into a car filled with your friends and driving about aimlessly listening to the radio and creating memories. Here is a sample of summertime tunes Collegian staff reluctantly liked and thoroughly disliked.

COURTESY KWAKU ALSTON

The Queen of Nasty, Adina Howard, makes the hot summer hit list.

Tara MK Connelly
Arts & Living Editor

Guilty Pleasure: The Real McCoy/ "Another Night" and Diana King/ "Shy Guy." — They're the perfect dance– around–your–room–when no one's looking songs.

Purely Annoying: The Rembrandts/ "I'll Be There For You" because they are — literally, 24/7 every time you turn on the damn radio or MTV. Get a new song, no better yet, retire.

Mike MacLean
Arts & Living Slacker

G.P.: Skee–Lo/ "I Wish" — This one gets my vote mainly because of the video, but also due to its appeal to vertically challenged people everywhere.

P.A.: Silverchair/ "Tomorrow" — I think these guys used to be called StonePearlAliceJam, but I'm not positive.

Matt Audette
Arts & Living Indie Boy

G.P.: The Toadies/ "Possum Kingdom" — Stupid song, great riff. Sort of an unholy mutation of Ronnie James Dio and Nirvana — and we all know what a great thing that is.

P.A.: Soul Asylum/ "Misery" — I know that Dave Pirner is sitting somewhere thinking that this junior high tearjerker is really deep. Sorry, try really dumb.

Chris Conner
News Editor

G.P.: Blessed Union of Souls/ "I Believe" — There is no psychotherapist in the world who can possibly explain this pick. Maybe love is the answer.

P.A.: Soul Asylum/ "Misery" — Once again, Dave and crew have proved that they are indeed the asylum for soul, and they are not letting any out in the near future. (I can't believe I just agreed with Indie Boy on music.)

Matt Vautour
Sports clown/Hootie Fan despite what everyone below me thinks

G.P.: Annie Lennox/ "No More I Love Yous" — I would usually prefer dental surgery to listening to Annie Lennox, but I even bought the single to this one.

COURTESY MARIO CASTELLANOS

Collective Soul doesn't please with it's glam rock sounding "December."

P.A.: Collective Soul/ "December" — This song belongs back with the cheesy rock of the late '80s and early '90s. File this one right up with Winger and White Lion.

Marni E. Helfner
Editorial Production Manager .. again

G.P.: Annie Lennox's cover of Procol Harum's "Whiter Shade of Pale" — Almost as good as the original, it's a great tune to drink to when you're stuck in a town with fewer people than Southwest.

P.A.: Vanessa Williams/ "Colors of the Wind" — Besides the fact that I banned Pocahontas this summer for political reasons, every woman underage of 30 thinks that it's the most romantic song to hit the airwaves since "Everything I Do" by Brian Adams. Every time I hear it, it sends me into violent spasms, causing me to have a car accident.

Candice Flemming
Sports Editor

G.P.: I'm not ashamed of anything I listen to. I can freely admit to singing along with my Beauty and the Beast soundtrack and dancing to ABBA's box set. I have no shame.

P.A.: Michael Jackson/ "You are Not Alone." — This song is absolutely horrible and the video makes it even worse. Why in the world Jackson thinks he has the right to show off his body is beyond me, and what are Michael and Lisa Marie trying to prove anyway?

Geri Sahn
Editorial/Opinion Editor

G.P.: Adina Howard/ "Freak Like Me." — The woman rocks. Although I'm not into R&B, I'm a closet Adina fan.

P.A.: Hootie and The Blowfish/ "I Only Want to be with You." (Actually, every Hootie song.) — I just do not understand why a dolphin makes him cry. Whatever. Hootie — blow it out your ass.

Mike Burke
Arts & Living Music Editor

G.P.: Alanis Morrissette/ "You Oughtta Know" — One hit wonder? Probably — but the girl knows how to scream.

P.A.: Everything by Hootie and the Blowfish. 6,000,000 fans can be wrong and quite stupid for buying this CD.

Justin C. Smith
Sports Associate

G.P.: Hum/ "Stars" — I'm really not sure what

Turn to SUMMER SONGS, page C7

■ Trax

continued from page C2

It is one thing to use music as a means of communications, but at times Jackson confused means with manipulation. Do we really need the 52 page guide book of his numerous awards, meetings with famous people and facial transformations over the years? Sometimes it just makes you want to scream. B (Tara MK Connelly)

Wholesale Meats and Fish
Letters To Cleo
Giant Records

Will the real Letters to Cleo please step forward? No, not the one that sounds like Sonic Youth, and not the one that sounds like Soul Asylum or even '80s rock. How about the one that churned out some sugary sweet college pop music on their debut album a few years back?

Yet it becomes disappointingly clear on the Boston quintet's second effort, Wholesale Meats and Fish, that there is an identity crisis going on here.

The gems on this album are not hard to find; for the most part they are all grouped on the first side. "Demon Rock," "Fast Way" and "Jennifer," although a little on the guitar– god side, are bearable, bouncy songs. The first single, "Awake," is certainly one of the best pop songs to come down the pipe in a while.

Kay Hanley's vocals blend well, but why they bothered printing up such deep statements as "Ten thousand years have passed/and it don't matter much to him/that ten thousand years have passed before" ("He's Got An Answer") is a mystery.

Continuity can be a good thing, unfortunately it becomes unclear after the first four tracks just where this album is heading. Were the opening tracks outtakes from earlier days or did the band discover the concept of musical influences halfway through the recording session?

The answer is not forthcoming, and Hanley and Co. delve into realms that conjure up images of such bands as Sonic Youth on "Do What You Want, Yeah," The Beautiful South with "Little Rosa" and an abundance of songs that teeter on the edge between pop and anthem rock that make one feel like they are trying to catch a leaf in the wind.

If "Awake" can manage to achieve the success that "Here and Now" earned last year, the real Letters to Cleo may still get a chance to arise on a third effort. C (Mike MacLean)

Various Artists
Kids Soundtrack
London

What has happened to the indie rock world? Just a year ago the only place you could hear the music of bands like Slint or Daniel Johnston was on obscure college radio stations — now you can stroll down to your local mall and here their music at the movies. Times have certainly changed.

Kids was one of the most controversial movies of the summer and the soundtrack has gained much attention for its radical lineup featuring underground heroes Slint, Daniel Johnston and the Folk Implosion. Starring Lou Barlow, Westfield native and leader of Sebadoh, the Folk Implosion is the showcase band on the soundtrack with eight songs and their song "Nothing Gonna Stop" is a standout track. The tune is a step in a new direction for Barlow who is known for his low–fi, introspective songs. Largely due to the hip– hop drum beats the song's funky edge sounds nothing like Barlow's previous work with Sebadoh.

The other highlights of the album are all older songs that have been released before. Taken from their groundbreaking album Spiderland, Slint's contribution "Good Morning Captain" is a haunting and chilling tune reminiscent of EVOL era Sonic Youth. Slint are one of the most influential bands of the decade and this song still surely prove why.

Low–fi legend Daniel Johnston sings the two catchiest songs on the album, "Casper" and "Casper the Friendly Ghost." Both recorded on a four track they display the crafty songwriting skills that has earned him a cult following over the past decade.

For dedicated indie rock fans the album may be a bit of a disappointment due to the fact that several of the songs are old. But on the other hand this album could open musical doors for many who had never heard any of these amazing bands before. B (Mike Burke)

■ Iron Horse

continued from page C3

and some good microbrews."

Suher hopes to connect with college scene in the Valley. According to him many students know about the Iron Horse but don't "cross the bridge" that often.

"One of my goals is to get the student populous back. People know about this place but don't come out. I want to tap into that populous by having "college nights" where there will be discounts on beer — because who wants to pay $4 a beer?"

Some of the musical acts that have been scheduled to draw in the crowd is J. Mascis, Scud Mountain Boys, Soup and Cake. Suher also intends to have nights where college bands can come and play.

Suher attributes the Iron Horse's previous financial duress to "poor service and bad booking."

"They didn't understand the business," he said. "The service killed them, I mean you sat down and it was a half hour before you got served. It really was a combination of poor service and booking. Hopefully I will rectify that, it might take a while, but I'm willing to try."

Suher has hired Lisa Danforth from the University of Massachusetts' Theater Department to run publicity and Jordi Heroldson, the club's original owner, has been hired to book bands.

"I expect the first week to be sold out," said Suher. "We have Arlo Guthrie for the first two nights and Debbie Harry from Blondie is touring with her lounge act. Plus, there is going to be a great jazz series as well."

"I'm going to try hard to keep the place going and I think it is going to do well. It really depends upon the community and I think it's just too much of an important place to close," he said.

The Iron Horse Music Hall is located on Center Street in Northampton. It will reopen Sept. 5 with Arlo and Abe Guthrie.

GO... Music Acting Dance at PAD!
REGISTER FOR GROUP & PRIVATE INSTRUCTION, SEPTEMBER 6 - 22
PERFORMING ARTS DIVISION/UMASS
73 BARTLETT HALL, 413 545 - 0519
Financial Assistance Available

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS* OPEN YEAR ROUND
*pre-cooked weight
Great Burgers Long Dogs Fries Shakes
Onion Rings Chicken Fingers Dragon Fries
Philly Cheese Steaks Grinders Soft Serve
★VOTED BEST BURGER STAND IN THE VALLEY 1995★ ★VOTED BEST BURGERS IN THE VALLEY 1995★
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

Kmart
Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA 01035
586-5020
WELCOME BACK
Halogen Lamp $24.97 for $19.97 w/coupon Collegian
Entire Color Classic Bed & Bath Collection on Sale
3.99 Twin Size Flat or fitted sheets. Polyester/cotton percale. Reg. 4.99. Full Size. Reg. 7.99. Sale 6.99. Queen Size. Reg. 12.99. Sale 11.99. King Size. Reg. 15.99. Sale 14.99. 2-pack Pillowcases. Standard Size. Everyday 5.99. Queen Size. Everyday 7.99. King Size. Everyday 8.99.
10.99 Twin Size Reversible comforters. Polyester/cotton; polyester fill Reg. 25.99. Full Size. Reg. 33.99. Sale 23.99. Queen/King. Reg. 42.99. Sale 30.99. Std.-size Sham. Reg. 13.99. Sale 9.99. Twin Bedskirt. Reg. 15.99. Sale 11.99. Full Bedskirt. Reg. 17.99. Sale 14.99. Queen Bedskirt. Reg. 19.99. Sale 16.99. King Bedskirt. Reg. 20.99. Sale 18.99.
Room Size Rugs 20% Off The regular price w/coupon Collegian
ClipLight $7.97 for $5.97 w/coupon Collegian
Flip Chairs $39.97 for $34.88 w/coupon Collegian
Bean Bag Chairs $19.97 for $16.88 w/coupon
Egg Crate Mattress Pads20 % Off the regular price w/coupon Collegian
Bed-In-A-Bag $39 w/ coupon Complete bedding set includes sheet set, comforter, sham and bedskirt. Collegian
Little Caesars 88¢ LARGE CRAZY BREAD W/COUPON Medium -2- Topping Pizza for $4.99 w/coupon
Little Caesars 88¢ LARGE CRAZY BREAD W/COUPON 1 Slice of Pizza & 3 Chicken Wings for $2.19 w/coupon dairy mart

CORNER OF PLEASANT & TRIANGLE ST., AMHERST, MA (413) 549-5606
Welcome Back Students!
WE FEATURE AN EXTENSIVE TACO BELL MENU!
TACO BELL Express
• Taco 69¢
• Soft Taco 69¢
• Bean Burrito 79¢
• Chicken Soft Taco $1.09
• Burrito Supreme® $1.69
• Beef Burrito $1.69
• Nachos 89¢
• Nachos Bellgrande® $1.99
• Taco Supreme™ 89¢
• Soft Taco Supreme® 89¢
• Chicken Burrito $1.29
• Combo Burrito $1.29
• 6 Pack Tacos $4.14
• 10 Pack Tacos $6.90
TACO BELL® At Dairy Mart Opens At 10 AM - Seven Days A Week!
See In Store For Daily Closing Times
TACO BELL logo, SOFT TACO SUPREME, NACHOS BELLGRANDE & BURRITO SUPREME are registered trademarks of Taco Bell Corp.
Coupon Savings!
BUY 10 PACK TACOS & GET A MEDIUM (32 OZ.) FOUNTAIN DRINK FREE! WITH THIS COUPON
Coupon good thru Sept. 30, 1995. Cannot be combined with any other promotional offer. Limit one per customer. Valid at Dairy Mart, Corner of Pleasant & Triangle St., Amherst, MA only. No cash value.

It's Back To School Time!
10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.
Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/16/95
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS
MIDAS
Mufflers • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

strut DESIGNER SHOES FOR LESS
197 Main Street, Northampton, MA
The Bottom Line on Shoe Design

~ Movies ~

FALL '95 PREVIEW

By Laura Stock and Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

As if Hollywood didn't pump out enough films this summer, we have an upcoming fall lineup filled with more movies that you'll just have to see. Here's a sneak peek into the dressing rooms of drag queens and a first look at the new man with a license to kill.

TO WONG FOO, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING, JULIE NEWMAR

Apparently dozens of actors came out of the casting closet to audition for this Priscilla Queen of the Desert meets Thelma and Louise. Robin Williams, who already donned the drag in Mrs. Doubtfire, has a small cameo, but was told he didn't have a pretty enough face. Among the other reported tryouts were James Spader, John Cusack and Stephen Dorff.

Directed by Beeban Kidron, our lovely ladies who cruise around in their convertible blasting disco music will be Wesley Snipes, John Leguizamo, and Patrick Swayze. Previews of Wong Foo have been well received, and the trailers have already made us explode with laughter. With the serious lack of comedy movies the past few months, Swayze and Snipes in pumps are bound to make us laugh. (L.S.)

NIXON

Oliver Stone thought Jim Morrison saw naked Indians everywhere. Then, he created his own conspiracy theory for the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Now he thinks Richard Nixon was schizophrenic.

At least that's what it looked like in the trailers. To show how Nixon was a "tragic hero," Stone will depict both the evil and the good (?) side to our former president, played by Sir Anthony Hopkins.

So word on how incriminating this film will be to Nixon, but it's sure to be as controversial as his presidency. Wonder if there is any reason why it was made after he died? (L.S.)

COURTESY ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

Wesley Snipes, John Leguizamo and Patrick Swayze don heels and dresses in this much anticipated Fall flick.

THE SCARLET LETTER

Demi Moore hardly seems the Puritanical type, but Hester Prynne was branded with the scarlet "A" on her chest for having an affair with the minister Arthur Dimmesdale (played by Gary Oldman) in Hawthorne's classic novel, The Scarlet Letter.

It is a back-to-high-school, autumn kind of novel, but it's doubtful that the movie (directed by Roland Joffé) will have the same serious side to it. Word is this adaptation has a happy ending that would make Hawthorne roll in his grave. (L.S.)

GOLDENEYE

It has been a while since Timothy Dalton's rather less than impressive job as Agent 007. Unlike Connery or Rogers, Dalton lacked that certain je ne sais quoi that kept the theaters packed and the Bond tradition alive.

Well, Pierce Brosnon (of the television show "Remmington Steele") hopes to change all that this November with the same old panache and some new tricks. Oh, there will still be the bevy of beautiful women (one in particular played by Minnie Driver, Circle of Friends), expensive cars, exotic Bond-like locations, but there will be changes too.

First of all, Bond's boss, M, will be played by a woman (Dame Judi Dench). Second, the cinematography will be geared for the fast paced action scene that this decade made a movie trademark. Plus, there will be plenty of cool Bond gadgetry and weapons to keep the technologically interested at the edge of their seats. (T.M.K.C.)

SEVEN

The plot sounds intriguing if not a bit over done. Two detectives (one seasoned, one not) try to track down a deadly (as if there were any other kind) serial killer who slays his victims in accordance to the seven deadly sins (greed, lust, etc.).

The film stars screen veteran Morgan Freeman (Shawshank Redemption) and Brad Pitt (Legends of the Fall) who has been climbing the ladder of success and is seemingly unstoppable. Pitt did think long and hard before excepting this role and almost lost his hand during the filming. Nevertheless the film promises lots of suspense, action, terror and a down to earth good view. (T.M.K.C.)

SHOWGIRLS

What can the director of Basic Instinct possibly do to top Sharon Stone's ah, performance? How about launching good girl Elizabeth Berkley from the wholesome TV show "Saved By The Bell" into a world of bad lighting, lecherous men and pulsating music?

That's right, Jesse has gone from feminist to stripper in this film about topless dancers and the complex life they often lead. Originally Madonna wanted Berkeley's role, but Paul Verhoeven wanted someone more un, free with herself (and that wasn't Madonna?).

The director is getting a NC-17 rating but hopes that it doesn't deter people from going to the theater and seeing beyond it's rating. Somehow it doesn't seem like he'll have to worry about packing them in. (T.M.K.C.)

FOUR ROOMS

What do you get when you mix four upbeat and quirky directors together in one movie with overlapping story lines all connected by Tim Roth?

How about Four Rooms? That's right, four of the industry's hottest young directors have teamed up to direct four entirely different story lines set in a hotel. Each of the stories will be interconnected by one character — a bell boy. The idea was inspired much in the same way that Shelley's Frankenstein and Stoker's Dracula was — just a bunch of directors/writers in a hotel room hanging out.

Originally, Richard Linklater was slated to be a fifth room but he stepped out. The star studded cast includes Bruce Willis, Antonio Banderas, Jennifer Beals and Madonna. It only took $5 million to make it, but the word is it's worth every penny and more. (T.M.K.C.)

NOW AND THEN

Already labeled a "woman's film," director Linka Glatter brings together a group of eight female actresses to share the screen in a tale about young women's coming of age.

The movie features Demi Moore, Rita Wilson, Melanie Griffith and Rosie O'Donnell and their "then" counterparts Gaby Hoffmann, Christian Ricci, Thora Birch and Asleigh Aston Moore. The plot will focus mostly on the "now" aspect of the four woman's life with the younger versions shown as flashbacks and ways of understanding life. (T.M.K.C.)

MIGHTY APHRODITE

Woody Allen hopes to hit another homerun with his latest starring him, Helena Bonham Carter, Mira Sorvino and Michael Rappaport.

Like Husbands and Wives, this film also centers around the complex problems of married life however Allen's PR people assure the media that there are no correlations between the two films.

COURTESY KEITH HAMPSHIRE

Pierce Brosnan takes the challenge of becoming the next 007.

In this film, Allen and Carter play the married role with Sorvino as a dizzy blonde friends and Rappaport as a boxer. How does this quirky cast fit together? See the film and find out if Allen can top last year's seven Oscar nominations. (T.M.K.C.)

CUTTHROAT ISLAND

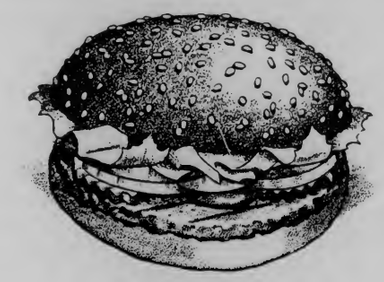
Directed by Renny Harlin and starring his wife Geena Davis, this is a "woman doing it for herself and loving it" movie. It has Davis as a swash buckling pirate of the days of old, ripping off ships, looting, rioting and swilling tankards of grog.

In fact, Davis is such the center of the film that several male actors refused to play the vibrant actress' love interest. Among the men who couldn't accept second stage were Michael Douglas, Ralph Finnes and Keanu Reeves. Matthew Modine finally took up the task and the rigors of a 100 day shoot in Southeast Asia. Let's if this film will deliver the goods. (T.M.K.C.)

Yearning to write for the Collegian but just don't know where to start? How about Arts & Living?

Plunge yourself into the world of music, movies, fashion, television, and a whole lot more. Just come to the Campus Center 113 and ask for Tara MK Connelly.
545-1361

It doesn't get any better than this.



99¢ WHOPPER®

Rt. 9 Hadley
Rt. 5 Northampton
Rt. 10 Easthampton

YOUR WAY RIGHT AWAY

BURGER KING®

Modern Rock for UMass

TODAY'S 99.3 ALL HIT MUSIC

WHMP-FM

■ MTV

continued from page C1

ber Mohammed?), and the former went to the Jr. Olympics for fencing, lost, came home and did ... well, nothing.

Among those from Europe were Sharon, the British gal with the affinity — no, the obsession for cleanliness (toilet shields anyone?), Lars, the German (who was about as personable as Lurch from "The Addams Family") who came and went and didn't speak up much until his bike was stolen and Neil, the British pseudo punker whose personality was completely opposite his hairstyle. The odd person out seemed to be Jacinda, the model from New Zealand who bought the catalyst behind most of the conflict — the dog.

Yes, the dog, whose refusal to relieve himself anywhere but inside the house turned out to be the most interesting event of the whole summer, besides the phone bill incident. You see, MTV, in its infinite wisdom failed to inform the British phone company that seven non-descript yet subtly annoying kids, five of whom were from out of the country, were moving in and just might want to call home. So of course, the phone officials freaked at the sight of a £500 phone bill and pulled the plug, thereby putting most of the housemates' apathy in full gear (save Mike, who did a lot of complaining about responsibility and Jay who chipped in for the wallet-impaired women).

The "Real World IV" opened our eyes to a disturbing fact: people who are too real are just too boring for TV. Bring back Puck or better yet watch "Melrose Place."

The real "Real World" turned out to be on "Road Rules," the show that answered the not-so-age-old question: "What would happen if you put five non-descript yet annoying kids in a camper, gave them money and told them where to go and what to do once they got there?"

The answer seemed to be that the events would be semi- hip and interesting, but that the real action would take place in the camper. "Road Rules" had everything, it had conflict, it had tension and it h d ... well, driving.

Hopefully the MTV programmers are taking notes, and next year we'll have the best concept ever — twice as many kids (including the return of Puck) in the same size camper. Maybe we'll even get to see a few indictments.

On the more refreshing side were the cartoons. The second part in the "MTV's Oddities" series was "The Maxx," an escape into the mind of "superhero"/homeless guy Maxx ... or was it Julie? Well, whatever the case, "The Maxx" was never afraid to let you get comfortable with a point of view and then yank it away the moment you got too acclimated.

"Aeon Flux," reborn from the "Liquid Television" series that aired a few years ago is still in its first weeks but looks promising — if the idea of a leather-clad woman single handedly causing chaos and the inevitable addition of dialogue can be overcome.

Saving the best for last (best to make fun of anyway), no MTV review would be complete without giving "Singled Out" a few remarks.

A '90s version of "The Dating Game," "Singled Out" provided ample motivation for anyone needing to go to bed early. This show groups even more non-descript and greatly annoying kids into materialistic categories and are then eliminated to under ten. Then comes the tough part.

We then get to meet all the finalists and watch them use all ten of their brain cells to come up with tricky metaphors for "sexing you up." Then it's on to some sort of gross or embarrassing request so that they might be deemed worthy enough to date someone who choose them on the basis of their chest hair.

Did you miss any of this fantastic action on MTV this summer? Well fret not. The replays will keep the winter warm until you can start counting the days until Spring Break '96.

UM gallery to reopen with diverse exhibits

The University Gallery is once again open for your viewing pleasure. Closed last semester due to renovations, the gallery opens up the season with a number of fascinating exhibitions.

• From Sept. 9 – Oct. 20, the gallery will house four artists works in "In Vivo." Rebecca Horn, Jon Kessler, Dennis Oppenheim and Alan Rath explore the connection between humans and machines through animated sculpture.

• "Nature Studies I and II" is a two part series that highlights nature/landscapes in various paintings and photographs. The first part of the series will feature seven paintings by individual artists who hope to enlighten their viewers on the many facets and styles of the landscape tradition.

The second part of the exhibit will feature eight photographers who will display nature/landscapes in various works and talk about the usage of nature/landscapes in the art world. Both exhibits will run throughout the semester.

• Ursual von Rydingsvard will present her sculptures in "New Work" which will run from Nov. 4 – Dec. 15. She is known for creating her abstract sculptures with ceder and can be associated with hand-made tools and objects connected with landscape imagery.

Don't miss out on a great opportunity to visit the gallery and view some stunning and diverse art work.

The University Gallery located in the lower level of the Fine Arts Center and is open Tues. – Fri. 11 a.m. – 4:30 p.m., Sat. & Sun. 2 p.m. – 5 p.m.

— Tara MK Connelly

■ summer songs

continued from page C4

the lyrics mean, but the rhythm of the song is great. Makes me want to go out and count stars with someone.

P.A.: White Zombie/ "More Human Than Human". — The opening of this song is reminiscent of someone's nails down a blackboard, and it only gets worse.

Juan Chacon Quiros
Managing Editor

G.P.: Jodeci /"Freak" — Sudden streaks of power by the guitar induce the feelings of an epileptic attack and with it the ups and downs of life.

P.A.: All the other songs I hate because I can't remember them.

Laura Stock
Arts & Living Film Junkie

G.P.: Chris Isaak/ "Somebody's Cryin'" — A sweet, sentimental song, and sadly, the definitive one of my summer.

P.A.: Bryan Adams/ "Have You Ever Really, Really Loved A Woman?" — Have you ever really, really detested a song?!

Wendy Darling
Queer Editor

G.P.: I was an intern for the same company that runs WFNX in Boston, but I never listened to it enough to hear anything I really liked, and anyway I'm too shattered by the experience to think straight.

P.A.: Tripping Daisy/ "I Gotta Girl" — is the kind of song that makes pimple-faced, hormone-riddled 14-year-old boys chuckle. "Uggghhh, Butthead, did he say he uses a magazine?" Not to mention the ending, with that guy's sneering, idiotic voice making me want to shove his face in a bucket of my own puke.

You have a dream to write about art, music, movies, concerts and it is a dream that won't die. So you read the Collegian, you see the ad, you scream for joy. You write for arts.

Arts & Living

Because dreams do come true.

Are you an insomniac?

Well, the Collegian Night Graphics Department is anticpating a few openings!

Experience with layout, paste-up, newspaper design, Macintosh computers and QuarkXPress is helpful but not necessary.

Come down to the Collegian Graphics Department at 113 Campus Center, complete an application and ask to speak to Jim or Marni.

First-year students and sophmores are encouraged to apply.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-1864

Get a Life

Offering a Distinct Line Of Products, Books, Audiotapes, CD's And Other Resources For...

HealtH HomE
WorK RelationshipS
RecreatioN
SpiritualitY

"Create A Life Worth Living To The Fullest"
Get a Life
Thorne Marketplace 150 Main Street, Northampton
Tel 413-587-1060 Fax 413 587 1061

Amherst Chiropractic Family Health Center

Dr. Virginia D. Harper

"Dedicated to treating the cause, not the symptom."

256 N. Pleasant Street • Suite 3 • Amherst
256-6700

BACK TO SCHOOL POSTER SALE

Most Images Only $6, $7 and $8

• 3-D • COMPUTER FRACTALS • OpArt • MOVIE POSTERS • FINE ART • ROCK POSTERS • MODERN & ABSTRACT • MATISSE • HUMOR • TRAVEL • GALLERY PRINTS • ANIMAL POSTERS • FAMOUS MODELS • ROMANCE • FANTASY •

• CONTEMPORARY BLACK & WHITE PHOTOGRAPHY • TALBOT • MONET • VAN GOGH •

Sponsor:
WMUA 91.1 FM

Date:
Mon. Sept. 4 thru Fri. Sept. 8

Time:
9 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.

Place:
Student Union Ballroom

Interested in radio? Come to the WMUA New Person's Meeting Thursday, Sept. 7 in Campus Center #163 at 7pm.

Biggest & Best Selection

• WARHOL • DALI • ANSEL ADAMS • ROCKWELL • PICASSO • MC ESCHER • NATURE • MUSIC • FLORALS • MARILYN MONROE • EINSTEIN • SKIING •

Kids tells life like it is

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

KIDS
Directed by Larry Clark
with Leo Fitzpatrick, Chloe Sevigny
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

New York City. Skateboarders. Boys. Girls. Beer. Pot. Virgins. Condoms. Sex. Violence. Rape. H.I.V. Kids.

It's all been done before; but not all together and not so powerfully. So what makes first time director Larry Clark think he can change the way we look at these problems that may destroy today's ignorant youth?

Maybe he's a pervert. Maybe he's a misogynist. Perhaps, he's a genius. The answer lies in figuring out for whom Kids was made.

Was it created for parents to watch and grasp the reality of how teenagers are corrupting themselves? Or for the 14–year–olds who are having sex without condoms (with H.I.V. positive partners) spending their days pounding 40's, toking up and beating up innocent people in the park?

Clark claims it's for kids and parents, but this documentary–style film (mind you, this was not a documentary) was such a harsh portrayal that it sails over most parents' shaking heads. They deny that the behavior of Telly, a boy with a taste for virgins, Casper, his dope smoking friend and Jennie, the girl Telly infected with H.I.V., could possibly exist these days.

Parents in denial may have a valid point — Clark does go overboard in the visual department. The sex scenes are so long and difficult to watch (yet, equally difficult to look away from) that they borderline pornography, or rather pedophilia. The point in all of the close shots — the beads of sweat, the kisses dripping with saliva, is to make us squirm in our seats, have our jaws drop and not blink our eyes.

However, shock value doesn't necessarily make for reality. Does Clark really think girls are so stupid as to fall prey to boys like Telly (Leo Fitzpatrick) who is on a quest to deflower every virgin he meets because they are "so young and innocent and clean," with his pathetic pick up lines and empty promises. Granted, these girls are 14 and 15 years– old, but what self–respecting girl would want to lose her virginity to an ugly, wiry skateboarder who needs braces and talks like he already has a mouthful of them? He vows, "it will be great, you'll love it. Trust me."

After cringing listening to Telly's routine, we want to scream when they all ask, "do you care about me?" to get proof positive of his love for them.

One girl changes our opinion of Clark. It is her character alone that provides the movie plotline's existence. Jennie, played expertly by Chloey Sviginy, had her virginity stolen by Telly a year ago. He was the only person she slept with and only got tested in an act of moral support for her promiscuous friend. It is tough to accept, but it is the fear (hopefully) that resides in most teenagers' minds: "What if, in just this one time, I could get H.I.V.?" when we hear the result of Jennie's test.

Jennie spends the entire 24–hour span of the movie searching for Telly to tell him of her test results. It accumulates into a slow, dramatic climax rather than a series of surprising events. It is unfortunate, that Clark neglects this brave and tragic character's story. Instead we must see long, drawn out Telly and Casper episodes that amount to nothing more than drinking and boasting.

Kids is a film with a very strong message: drastic changes must occur in the what we teach kids and the way kids act or society will self destruct. It is an explosive topic in homes and the media today, and Clark is holding the detonator. A–

Legendary musician proves young at heart

70's rock god teams up with Gen Xer's

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

MIRROR BALL
Neil Young
Reprise Records

Neil Young is pretty shrewd. While his other '60s partners in crime are sentenced to a hellish existence of reunion tours, boring drug habits and embarrassing attempts at comebacks, Young is hanging with the youngsters, embracing grunge and acting as father figure to flannel–clad posers everywhere.

So what's the deal?

Why is this 50–year old hippie still thriving after all these years? The answer is actually quite simple — Young just simply refuses to age gracefully. Don't be fooled, the man is not breaking any new musical barriers. His three–chord rave– ups and sappy child–of–the–'60s ballads would still sound absolutely right at home on one of those dopey "Sounds Of The Seventies" collections. Young's secret is just that he refuses to dwell on the past, opting instead to roll with the changing times rather than be crushed by them.

By dedicating his last effort Sleeps With Angels to the late Kurt Cobain and taking such avant–gardists as Sonic Youth on tour with him, Young is proving that he's no old fart. That is why having grunge mega–stars Pearl Jam back him up on his latest effort, Mirror Ball is such a brilliant career move.

Think about it — Pearl Jam's stadium rock disguised as thoughtful and artistic punk shtick is a pretty close kin to what Young has been doing for years. The pair are a perfect match of young and old and neither really have to alter their sound a whole lot in order to sound cohesive together.

So, is Mirror Ball the ground breaking achievement that everyone expected when rumors that these two great talents were going to collaborate? Not at all. Is it pretty good? You bet. Young still knows how to pull a ton of mileage out of three chords, toss in a lot of feedback and some self– conscious sloppiness and — voila — instant geezer grunge for the '90s.

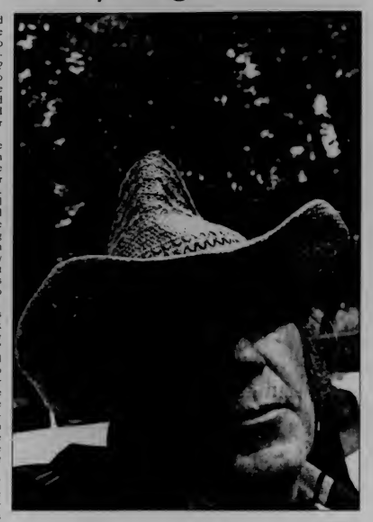
Yes, there are some missteps like the dopey flower power anthem "Peace And Love," which is also the only song in which Eddie Vedder makes any vocal appearance on. "Downtown" finds Young getting all worked up over a simple riff and some pipe dreams that deal with the ultimate hippie party ("Jimi's playing in the back room/Led Zeppelin on stage" — blah, blah, blah). Still every once in awhile Young can find that certain groove which makes all his nostalgic references a little easier to swallow.

On "I'm The Ocean" Young gives himself a knowing pat on the back when he proclaims "People my age/They don't do the things I do" and mid–way through his fiery and passionate delivery it is not to hard to believe him. On the albums opener "Song X" (I'm going to give him the benefit of the doubt and hope the title doesn't refer to some dumb generational thing) Young tosses off a nearly perfect Crazy Horse–esque romp that would sound just fine somewhere in the middle of Rust Never Sleeps.

Where does this leave Pearl Jam? Due to contractual problems the band's name doesn't even appear anywhere on the album and it's probably a good thing since some disgruntled Jam–head would probably sue for false advertising if it did. The lads in Pearl Jam clearly know that Mirror Ball is Young's show and discreetly hide in the background, content to fulfill a life long dream and do their best Crazy Horse imitation while Young cashes in on their hip appeal.



COURTESY SPIN

Neil Young refuses to grow old gracefully teaming up with Pearl Jam on his latest album.

And in the end that is what makes Mirror Ball tolerable. Young is clearly feeding off a whole new generation to add new life to his somewhat stale musical ideas — but like some kind of old vintage automobile that refuses to die, he keeps sputtering along with enough enthusiasm and energy to keep from being junked. B

PANDA EAST
Best Chinese Restaurant
In the Valley
Since 1987
& Fine Japanese Cuisine
Lunch specials Everyday!
Starting at $3.95!
Banquet Room Available
"We bring China Town to You"

Pearl Street Nightclub
Wednesday, September 13
LETTERS TO CLEO
18+, 7:00 pm
(followed by Gay Dance Night)
Thursday, September 14
Early Show Upstairs with
JULIANA HATFIELD
18+, 7:00 pm
(followed by 18+ Dance Party)
Friday, September 15
CHUCKLEHEAD
with Johnny Socko
18+, 8:30 pm
Upstairs—Retro Dance Night
Saturday, September 16
MODERN ROCK
Featuring the sounds of Bush, NIN, Björk, White Zombie, U2, Belly, R.E.M., Dee-Lite...& more
Coming: 9/19 God Street Wine, 9/20 Morphine, 10/1 Maceo Parker, 10/2 Filter
2-For-1 Admission to the Dance Club on Thursday, or Free Admission to the Dance Club on Friday or Saturday with this Ad!

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

What to wear.
Back to school
loafing around at school

Caldor Shopping Center
Northhampton
(413) 586-2180
Riverdale Shops
W. Springfield
(413) 733-7470
Haymarket Square
Springfield
(413) 543-4471
Leather Shoes
$19.98-$24.98
values of $30-$60
Boots priced separately.
PARADE OF SHOES

COURTESY UNIVERSITY GALLERY

Art Work

Alan Rath's "Super Wallflower" is a collage of aluminum, cable, electronics and speakers. It is just one of the many works in In Vivo at the University Gallery– a collection based on artists' connection with nature and landscapes.

Grateful Dead frontman dies at 53

By Michael Burke
Collegian Staff

The long strange trip has finally ended for Deadheads across the nation this summer as their leader Jerry Garcia passed away on August 9. For over 30 years Garcia was a member of the Grateful Dead, one of the most popular American bands of all time.

The band was never a Top 40 ensemble, they had less Top 40 hits in 30 years than Hootie and the Blowfish had this summer, but Deadheads never wasted time counting record sales, because many of them were too busy following the band around the country. Besides all those Elvis fanatics who run around looking for the King in 7–11's, not many people dedicate their lives to one artist or band — but that is the following the Grateful Dead and Jerry Garcia had.

Musically the Dead's sound was a mixture of folk, jazz, rock, blues and lots more. There is no signature Dead tune or Dead sound — they had no "Stairway To Heaven." Improvisation was also a key to the their music and they seldom played the same version of the same song twice. In concert they were notorious for playing completely different sets every night — and with 28 albums the band had quite a few songs to choose from.

But there was much to the Grateful Dead and Jerry Garcia than just the music. Their popularity spanned all economic and racial barriers. Everyone, from well known politicians such as Governor Weld to high school drop–outs, cried themselves to sleep on August 9 as they mourned the death of their beloved leader. Weld even wrote an article for the The Boston Globe discussing Garcia's significance.

Although he had just turned 53, Garcia's notorious lifestyle filled with drugs and fast food had taken the final toll. In 1986 he suffered a diabetic coma so severe that doctors didn't expect him to live. After he recovered he had to relearn how to play guitar all over again. Ironically since then the band's popularity has soared.

The next day Deadheads across the world mourned his death. On the sidewalk outside Tower Records in Boston, fans created a shrine filled with candles, flowers and messages in honor of Garcia.

Six years later in 1992, Garcia collapsed due to exhaustion and at the same time was suffering badly due to his weight problem. But like a warrior he returned to form and toured again including several sold out shows at the Boston Garden last Fall. Sadly the band was scheduled to reappear at the Garden once more before its closure, but those dates have been cancelled.

Garcia's last days were spent in the Betty Ford Clinic in a rehabilitation program. He passed away early in the morning of August 9 due to natural causes.

The next day Deadheads across the world mourned his death. On the sidewalk outside Tower Records in Boston, fans created a shrine filled with candles, flowers and messages in honor of Garcia. It was just a reminder of the love that so many people felt for the grey bearded guitarist. He will be forever missed not only by his fans but by the entire music world.

CANTONE'S PIZZA CO.
Any Large 16" PIZZA
w/Up to 4 toppings
Only $9.95
Save $4.00
Includes Tax
Three varieties of crust available on our Pizza's & Calzones White, Whole Wheat, or Cornbread
Expires 9/30/95
7 days, 4pm- 2am
FREE DELIVERY TO UMASS
256-6100

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

Herrell's Ice Cream
Herrell's Ice Cream
Thornes Marketplace
Old South St. Entrance
Northampton 586-9700
Made fresh on the Premises!

Northampton's Original Mexican Restaurant
The Biggest & Best Burritos In The Valley!
VERACRUZANA MEXICAN RESTAURANT
Sun.-Wed. 11-10 • Thurs.-Sat 11-2
Open Until 2:00 am Thurs., Fri., Sat.
586-7181

Phone: 1-(413) 584-9948
Carol's
HEAD QUARTERS
ALSO TANNING
115 Russell Street, Rt. 9
Hadley, MA 01035
Specializing In Just You

FALL INTO COMFORT at MODRIAN
197 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst • 256-3121
SALE!
Tux Rentals
Dr. Martens
Mon Sat 10 6
Sun 1 5

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Sept. 22
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Campus Activities Office
Student Union or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

FROM THE INVENTOR OF THE DORM BED. NOT.

The Outrageous College Deal that's Great for Sleep and Play.
Futon & Frame starting at $139 (Twin Trifold & 6" cotton futon.)
Platform Beds, Lamps, Desks, Mattresses & Box Springs, Chairs, Rugs, and much more.
HAMELIN Furniture & Futon OF NORTHAMPTON
Masonic street (off Main Street, Downtown Northampton) • Across from Academy of Music • 586-7970 • We Deliver!

Writing for Arts & Living is Wicked Cool.

Be a part of the only Collegian desk to offer our writers a wide range of topics, personalities and possibilities. We're looking for a few good women and men to lend their writing expertise and to continue the level of wicked coolness.

Whether you're interested in penning a few reviews just for fun or beginning a writing career, we're the ones to check out. From interviews to essays on pop culture, from concert previews to film reviews — that's Arts & Living. . . and that's wicked cool. (*sarcasm optional)

New and returning writers are invited to a meeting on Thursday, Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. Any questions? Call 545-1361.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

Your entryway into the University and the future

- Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
- Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
- Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
- Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register now for Fall classes.

Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

ATTITUDE IS EVERYTHING.

Welcome Back!

McDonald's Express®

Take a break now...

Bring a friend to lunch!

Treat a friend to lunch at the new McDonald's Express®. Stop in today and enjoy the great taste of McDonald's®, convenient fast service, and the company of friends!

25 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst
253-2653

Owned and operated by Dan and Dolores Rossignol.

FREE QUARTER POUNDER® with CHEESE

Buy one get one free!

Treat yourself and a friend to the terrific taste of a 100% pure beef Quarter Pounder® with Cheese , on a toasted bun. Just present this coupon when you buy a Quarter Pounder® with Cheese and get another one free!

This coupon may not be used in conjunction with any other offer; good only at McDonalds Express, Amherst, MA. Expires 5/30/96
Owned and operated by Dan and Dolores Rossignol.

Books

continued from page C1

involving a battered housewife named Kelly is thrown in for good measure.

The Rainmaker signals Grisham's return to courtroom drama, a venue he has not touched since his first novel A Time To Kill. The dialogue is surprisingly sharp and often cynical. Unlike his previous novels, this one is witty and at many times clever. However, while the battered housewife story is touching, the book could have been done without it's extraneous plot line. These are the moments where the writing sags and the structure is clumsy, but overall Grisham proves himself an effective storyteller and has spun a complex tale that takes us to the heart of all motivation — money. A (Seema Gangatirkar)

BORDER MUSIC
Robert James Walker
Warner Books

Robert James Walker's first novel, The Bridges of Madison County, is a sticky sweet prose laden novel that somehow grabbed a hold of America's heart strings via Meryl Streep and Clint Eastwood. While Bridges tastes like melting cotton candy — sweet and airy, Walker's latest novel, Border Music, is cool and bittersweet like lemonade.

Like Bridges, the novel contains the same sort of mind- numbing spontaneity that is most bewildering. This novel is about the reconciliation of the dreams of the heart and the fears of the soil and the grim realization that the two can be irreconcilable.

The plot revolves around Texan Jack Carmine and Linda Lobo, two drifters trying to make the most of what life has tossed at them. The pair meet at a bar where Linda works as a dancer. After Jack assaults a man for getting fresh with Linda, she turns in her tassels, runs out the back door and hops into Jack's truck. Along the way to nowhere Jack offers Linda a place to stay at his ranch in Texas. She agrees because life seems to have no other options.

The story veers off for a while when Walker tackles a seemingly random story concerning Jack's uncle, Vaughn Rhomer and then returns back to hapless couple. But –life isn't all wonderful and blissful on the Texas ranch. There are wild pigs that scream at night and destroy crops.

Most of all, Jack suffers from post–Vietnam trauma and disappears for days at a time leaving Linda alone. Basically the whole story evolves around this feeling of drifting and trying to find self–worth and peace. Straight forward, honest and stark, Border Music is a delicate book that will leave an imprint upon the reader's memory in a way Bridges never will. B– (S.G.)

MEMNOCH THE DEVIL
Anne Rice
Alfred A. Knopf

Lestat is clever. Lestat is cool. Lestat is a vampire.

In Anne Rice's fifth installment of the Vampire Chronicals Lestat once again takes center stage (a place where he likes best to be) as cunning and clever as ever.

Like in Tales of a Body Thief, Rice takes this dynamic character and gives him his greatest challenge yet. It is one thing to become human again but it is another thing to be offered the powers of the Devil. As always, her favorite character refuses to back down and takes up the challenge to view and be tempted by the powers of the universe.

It is then that he must chose to become the devil's advocate or find some kind of redemption as a servant of God, casting aside the belief that vampires are cursed creatures of the night spited by the Almighty.

Rice's command of the English language is excellent. Like a spider she weaves an intricate web of words and thoughts, sticky sweet and irresistible. No matter how lengthy or complex her tales are, they always become utterly engrossing and thought provoking. In Memnoch, Rice draws her readers in and like the vampires she seems to favor, sucks at the very essence of life, leaving fans drained but always thirsting for more. A (Tara MK Connelly)

THE COLLEGE WOMAN'S HANDBOOK
Rachel Dobkin & Shana Sippy Workman

There are a lot of self–help guides for college students — everything from landing a summer job to finding the best beer games. Never before, however, has there been a self– help guide for college women, and more than that, a guide that covers it all. Until The College Woman's Handbook.

Want to know how to apply for a college transfer? Need a checklist for scoping out that lovely new apartment you're about to move into? Scared about your next PAP smear?

Authors Rachel Dobkin and Shana Sippy answer these questions and hundreds more in a book that's a virtual sea of information. Don't worry about getting lost, however, because this book is well–organized, with a consistent format that makes it easy for you to find what you're looking for with very little trouble.

Besides the regular text, each chapter of The College Woman's Handbook includes boxes with additional information or quotes from college–age women across the country. In "Money Matters," there are special sections on emergency money, keeping out of credit card debt, investing your money, check writing, balancing your checkbook and more.

Each chapter closes with a large resource list of organizations to get in touch with for more information and books you might want to read for an in–depth perspective.

Finally, the bottom half–inch of every page contains an amazing factoid or statistic you've never heard of before. For instance, did you know:

- Even when they make up less than 1/4 of a seminar, men do 1/3 to 1/2 the talking.
- 68% of men like the way they look naked, but only 22% of women do.
- In one survey, 63% of those women who felt there was a need for a strong women's movement did not consider themselves feminists.

With all this information at your fingertips, you can't help but wonder how the authors came up with this stuff so quickly. After all, they just graduated two years ago! Their youth works to their advantage throughout the book, since it's obvious that they really know what they're talking about and aren't just a couple of baby–boomers trying to rip you off.

If The College Woman's Handbook has one major flaw, it's that it tries to give you too much information, including a noticeable amount of the obvious. For instance, under "Handy Tips on Moving," the authors say, "Don't put too many heavy things ... in one box, especially if you will have to carry it yourself." Isn't that a lesson everybody has learned already?

Of course, whether you think a particular section is useful depends on what your needs are, so one person's godsend might be your "Who doesn't know that?" In any case, since you have the power to turn the page, this flaw is virtually eliminated.

The same is true when dealing with the book's extensive coverage on violence against women and personal safety. At times the authors' advice can sound a tad on the hysterical side, as when they recommend all women wear backpacks so they can keep their hands free while fleeing attackers.

All in all, The College Woman's Handbook has the potential to be a valuable resource to just about any college– age woman — or any man who wants to understand one.

B+ (Wendy Darling)

Music

continued from page C1

Perhaps the happiest and most joyous band ever, the end came as a surprise. In their time together, they released two album and a slew of singles, all of which are highly recommended.

What do you mean the best concert of the semester already happened? Well it did. In late August the Jon Spencer Blues Explosion roared into Pearl Street with an absolutely amazing live set that will surely not be equalled soon. Imagine Elvis Presley leading a highly talented blues band that is more influenced by the likes of Sonic Youth than Robert Johnson. Do not miss this band next time they come to town.

Hollywood Records is going to release an all–star tribute to the late great John Lennon. The album entitled Peace will include the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Scott Weiland and the Magnificant Bastards, Screaming Trees, George Clinton and many many more.

Can we ever get enough of Hole's lead singer/guitarist Courtney Love? During the Lollapalooza tour she ended up punching Kathleen Hanna of Bikini Kill. She then taunted Cypress Hill by calling them "pot–headed pussies" during her set. Cypress Hill retaliated by walking through the crowd during Hole's set in Denver.

Sinead O'Conner who dropped out of the same tour due to her pregnancy, is currently being sued by two Israeli photographers who claim O'Conner broke their cameras near a Jerusalem Church.

Don't Dive Headlong into a New Hair Cut!

Spend a few minutes with a professional at

Styles by Deborah

the spa for hair, nail & skin care.

65 University Drive
Amherst, 549-5610

Knitting Classes & Workshops For All Levels.

Knitting has been shown to reduce stress!

Mon. - Sat. 10-5 pm
Thurs. till 9

Patterns • Yarns

11 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-4331

la boutique Pantheas

Fine Shoes Direct From Italy

10% Off All Fall Shoes with school I.D.

229 Main St.
Northampton, MA 01060
586-8511
OPEN 7 DAYS

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS

ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99

ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99

7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.

LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs & Fri. 6 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425

SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99

COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons

Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

Super GUITAR SUMMIT
WITH Jorma Kaukonen, Steve Morse
Manuel Barrueco & Kenny Burrell
October 17, Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
$5

The new Jazz Diva
CASSANDRA WILSON
November 2, Bowker Auditorium
$5

URBAN BUSH WOMEN in Bones and Ash
November 18
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
$5

ALISON BROWN- banjo
DAR WILLIAMS- guitar
February 15, Bowker Auditorium
$5

Amazing acrobats of China in
THE PARADE OF DYNASTIES, March 28
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
$5

The Godson of Soul
CHRISTIAN McBRIDE & his QUARTET
April 4, Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
$5

The ever popular
MUMMENSCHANZ
April 19, Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
$5

Tickets are on sale now at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or call 545-2511. Tickets are $5 for Five College Students. Get them before they're gone!

WESLEY SNIPES
PATRICK SWAYZE
JOHN LEGUIZAMO
To Wong Foo, Thanks For Everything! Julie Newmar
UNIVERSAL PICTURES PRESENTS AN AMBLIN ENTERTAINMENT PRODUCTION A BENJAMIN KOMBLUTH FILM WESLEY SNIPES PATRICK SWAYZE JOHN LEGUIZAMO
"TO WONG FOO, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING, JULIE NEWMAR" STOCKARD CHANNING BLYTHE DANNER ARLISS HOWARD CHRIS PENN RACHEL PORTMAN
HAPPY WALTERS PEAR McCORRY MITCHELL KOHN BRUCE COHEN DOUGLAS CARTER BEANE D. MAC BROWN
PG-13 BENJAMIN KOMBLUTH A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

PREVIEW "TO WONG FOO, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING, JULIE NEWMAR" ON THE INTERNET (http://www.mca.com)!

STARTS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8TH AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

Movies

continued from page C1

as King Arthur did. The screenplay was so limp however that even Connery couldn't rescue this movie.

Julia Ormond shed some convincing tears as Guinevere, but chivalry was dead in Richard Gere's Lancelot. Never was there a ruder Knight of the Round Table.

Camelot was a very obvious sound stage production, and the tunics looked like torn sweatshirts. First Knight lacked creativity in every aspect of the film, and the snoring bodies slumped down in the theater's seats on opening night was an indication to stay away from Camelot.

CLUELESS vs. DANGEROUS MINDS

Alright class, which of these two high school flicks was supposed to be a farce, and which was meant to seriously portray problems in the school system? Hard to tell? Maybe that is because the comedy Clueless was more realistic than Dangerous Minds tried to be.

Here's the "4-1-1" on Clueless: written and directed by Amy Heckerling. Clueless is being dubbed the '90s version of Fast Times At Ridgemont High. Sure, these Beverly Hills brats are slaves to fashion, have beepers attached to their belts and cell phones attached to their ears — but they do have a clue.

Alicia Silverstone (The Crush) proves she has more talent than being the pouty blonde in a trio of Aerosmith videos in her starring role as Cher — a teenage girl who deals with problems in friendship, love, family and the ever-serious task of getting her driver's license. While the film was intended to be a spoof on the pop phenomenon that makes shows like "Beverly Hills 90210" stay afloat, the Clueless kids do have hearts and care about more than their platform jellies and faux fur.

The most delightful and unanticipated aspect of Clueless is the funny and fresh dialogue, including the lingo which Heckerling partially fabricated, and partially picked up by attending classes at Beverly Hills High School. Hilarious and trendy slang words come fast and furious throughout the film and entertained despite the liberal dosage of, "as if!"

Clueless reinforces the notion that whether it is at Beverly Hills or your own hometown's high school, teenage troubles are all basically the same, and not that depressing to reflect upon.

Dangerous Minds squeezes itself into that already crowded genre (which includes To Sir With Love, Stand and Deliver, and Dead Poets Society) of young, determined teachers who sweep into a classroom of undisciplined students, change the curriculum, demand respect and inspire learning.

Directed by John N. Smith, Dangerous Minds is a watered-down, white-washed adaptation of Louanne Johnson's book, My Posse Don't Do Homework (a title too strong to use — in Hollywood's opinion).

While the film perpetuates every stereotype possible about inner-city youth, it neglects every situation when it becomes intense, thereby robbing the young actors of a chance to finish what began as compelling performances.

Michelle Pfeiffer as the teacher, Ms. Johnson, acts more like a fairy godmother than a leader or a role model. She throws herself headlong into her students' problems, which range from teenage pregnancy to gang violence. Pfeiffer teaches them poetry with Bob Dylan lyrics. Excuse me, but the film doesn't even stick to its own stereotypes here. The real Louanne Johnson used rap music to achieve her goals in the classroom — a more practical technique I'm sure.

Pfeiffer's sincerity is difficult to believe, as she calls her unruly students "little bastards" in one scene and is hugging them in the next. She also seems to be on a personal crusade, challenging that proverbial "System" and losing focus on the issue of getting her students to care about their lives. Adversities in Dangerous Minds work themselves out so conveniently, it is hard to buy any of it.

APOLLO 13 vs. THE NET

We knew the ending, but we were on the edge of our seats in Apollo 13 anyways. Why? To give credit where credit is due, Ron Howard is the man who made the magic in outer space.

Howard took a giant leap for director-kind by using absolutely no stock footage to recreate the shuttle scenes or shots from outer space. Ironically, it made the movie feel more authentic than Oliver Stone's historical drama JFK.

Even though our astronaut actors: Tom Hanks, Bill Paxton and Kevin Bacon braved stomach-wrenching airsickness as they filmed in zero gravity, they didn't deliver memorable performances. Nothing personal was disclosed about Paxton's character, and even Mr. "Oscar" Hanks as Jim Lovell didn't say anything meaningful except, "Houston, we have a problem."

The shining star in this space movie was the man on the ground, Gary Sinese — a man I think we can expect great things from in the future.

Apollo 13 will no doubt be remembered as the movie of the summer because it was an all-American, mainstream movie that made baby boomers remember where they were on the day the tragedy occurred, and educated their children in something before their time.

While Apollo 13 dealt with three men stranded in space and how they conquered technology to get home, The Net was a story about Sandra Bullock's isolation in the real world and how technology conquered her.

Two things irk me about Sandra Bullock. First, she is always cast as a woman alone in the world, struggling to find someone and to save her own life. Second, if I hear the word, "like-ability" with her name once more I will scream.

Bullock is the favorite actress of the summer though, and she does save The Net from becoming a complete bomb. Were there any other actors in the film? Oh yeah, a grisly-faced Dennis Miller who, fortunately for us, dies in the beginning.

The suspense scenes (including the overused Ferris Wheel sequence) were boring and all of the other performances were anything but noteworthy.

What did frighten me was the concept of how one's identity can be stripped away due to our incredible reliance upon computers. With everybody going online these days, it is a very timely plot, but they could have done more with it in The Net. There should have been more scenes with Bullock surfing the net than running down dark alleys. It's a shame to see a good plot idea fall into the hands of a bad director and unskilled actors.

THE BRIDGES OF MADISON COUNTY vs. A WALK IN THE CLOUDS

Although The Bridges of Madison County played to a select audience, it was a film embraced far and wide as the definitive summer romance and garnered many of the cult followers of Robert James Waller's book.

You certainly didn't have to read the novel to fall in love with Bridges, in fact, it was probably a better experience if you did not read it because of the changes made from book to screenplay.

Picture this: flies buzzing around lamps, screen doors and sweating glasses of iced tea. On a sticky summer day in Madison County, Iowa, a stranger happens by Francesca Johnson (Meryl Streep) and lights the fuse of passion in a middle-aged housewife who's fantasies have been suppressed by years of boring farm life.

Streep is utterly amazing as Francesca. She had to be to succeed at making Clint Eastwood seem romantic and sexy. Though his direction was superb, Eastwood picking wildflowers and taking a bubble bath with Streep was the only hard thing to swallow in this movie.

The shots of the actual bridges in Madison County are perfectly balanced with the telling of the story. An example of Eastwood's careful direction was the fabulous finale in the rain, with Streep reaching for the door handle of the truck, as she watches Eastwood's blinker at the stoplight.

Bridges was the stunning romance of the summer, and so captured your heart you could feel the steamy Iowa heat form beads of perspiration on your forehead — or perhaps it was the tears rolling down your cheeks.

There were also two other strangers who met on a dusty road and fell in love this summer. But the problem was Keanu Reeves just didn't cut it in Alfonso Arau's A Walk in the Clouds, in fact, Reeves made it feel more like a trudge through a vineyard.

Arau (Like Water For Chocolate) makes magic in the wine vineyard in California, but Reeves and the pregnant woman (Aitana Sanchez-Gijon) he pretends to be joined in marital bliss with to prevent disgracing her family's name, do not do anything mystical. Sanchez-Gijon is full of passion, but Reeve's constantly open-mouthed, deer-caught-in-headlights stupid look steals from her performance.

In short, anyone else would have been better cast than Reeves, who can't seem to break the Bill & Ted mold, and it is very difficult and somewhat unfair to compare A Walk in the Clouds to Bridges in the same story.

In a League of its Own...

BATMAN FOREVER

It was three times the charm for the movie about the black bat, as director Joel Shumacher pulled the third Batman movie from the murky Tim Burton-esque depths that confused and bored us in Batman Returns.

"Better than the second one, but not as good as the first" tends to be the sentimentality behind Batman Forever. Of course. We had to part with Michael Keaton in favor of Val Kilmer as the winged rodent, and as an audience, we fear change in our superheros. Who wouldn't prefer Jack Nicholson to Tommy Lee Jones as the arch enemy any day?

Kilmer does a decent job taking over the reigns, however, there are so many other characters that Batman fades to black amongst the colorful scenery. First, there is his faithful sidekick, Robin, performed by the up and coming Chris O'Donnell. Batman's mate of choice is Dr. Chase Meridian, played by a seductive Nicole Kidman, and there's that scarred guy, Harvey Two Face.

The biggest surprise in the film has to be Jim Carey's (dare I say it) wonderful performance as the Riddler. Finally, Carey has landed a role where he didn't annoy or repulse us to tears. As someone who detested Carey in all of his earlier releases (Ace Ventura: Pet Detective, Dumb & Dumber, and The Mask), his portrayal of the Riddler actually gave me some respect for the actor. The man flourished in a role where he was restrained and some of his creative license revoked.

Batman Forever was the sequel that was going to make or break the potential for a fourth, fifth and sixth one. It had sex-appeal (most women left the theater wishing she could be in a superhero sandwich), vibrantly colored sets and costumes and a lack of bloodshed despite all of the violence. Batman Forever was a facelift for a film that we will definitely see more sequels to.

Area Government

Elections

will be held on
Wednesday September 20, 1995
pick up your nomination form in the SGA office
422 Student Union Building

Nominations close at 5:00 p.m. on
Monday September 18, 1995
for more information please call 5-0341 or stop by 424 Student Union Building

GRAND OPENING

WELCOME BACK!
"The Best Malaysian Food in the City"

Rasa Sayang Restaurant
Malaysian Cuisine
13 N. Pleasant
(on the corner of main)

Lunch Specialities
Monday to Saturday 11 — 3 pm
Served with choice of Hot & Sour Soup or Corn Soup and with choice of White Rice or Marinated Rice

253-7888 • 253-0287

Collegian Sports

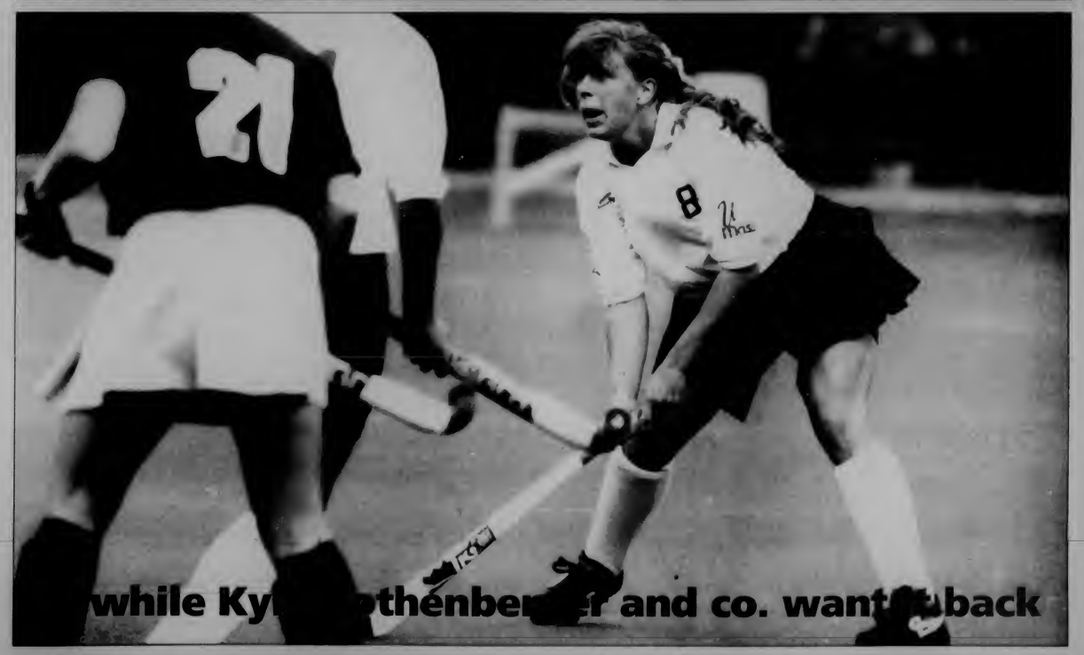
Collegian Sports •Section D •Back to School, Fall 1995

Inside this issue:

•Rene Ingoglia (right) will try and lead the UMass football team to its first Yan-Con Title since 1990 (See story, page D6).

Women's Soccer .....Page D2
Men's Soccer .....Page D4
Waterpolo.....Page D5
Football .....Page D6
Men's Basketball .....Page D8
Women's Basketball .....Page D9
Baseball Notes .....Page D10
Tennis .....Page D11
Hockey .....Page D12
Summer Recap .....Page D14
Field Hockey .....Page D16
Volleyball .....Page D18
Cross Country .....Page D20

Junior stars guide UM in pursuit of A-10 Titles



while Ky[illegible]thenber[illegible]r and co. want[illegible]back

Women's Soccer

Minutewomen counting on defense, depth in '95

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

With the addition of nine newcomers to the squad, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team can boast about something other than new faces.

Talent up and down their roster.

"At this point we have more overall depth then we have had in a long time," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "There is not a fall off in talent which is very impressive."

The main focus of Rudy's squad right now is the defense in front of sophomore goaltender Danielle Dion. Dion burst upon the scene last year, replacing Briana Scurry, now a member of the U.S. National team, and posted impressive numbers. Her goals-against-average was a solid 0.71 and she did not surrender a goal in conference play.

Last year's backup keeper, Nancy Keiser, is no longer with the team, having left in order to better herself academically. Her absence leaves a hole on the team, something not lost on her former coach.

"We love and respect Nancy," Rudy said. "And we would love to have her back."

The defense, which hopes to keep Dion's workload to a minimum, will be without the services of All-American Heidi Kocher, but will still provide a strong wall of protection for the goalie.

The defensive corps will be anchored by junior captain and All-American candidate Erin Lynch. Not only will Lynch, the 1994 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, provide the needed defense, she may contribute to the offensive side of the ball coming up from her defensive back position.

Senior captain Nikki Ahrenholz and sophomore Erica Iverson also return to the backfield for UMass. Both are solid, dependable markers to stop opposing rushes down field.

The vacant backfield position appears to be filled by freshman Amanda Thompson. She played for the Klein Challenge Club team out of Houston and is expected to be a smart and steady addition to the lineup.

"She has played in such programs that are similar to our system that she is comfortable playing our style," Rudy said. "She is going to be very solid for us."

Other newcomers to the defense are a transfer from the Australian University of Wollongong, Vicki Linton, and freshman Meghan Brennan, who participated in the United States Youth Soccer Association Final Four for the Yorktown Jaguars.

There is a logjam of strong candidates for the starting spots at midfield, juniors Julie Magid, Amy Powell and Sandy Shimogaki will all be key contributors at the position. Sophomore Elizabeth Rutherford and freshman Sara Hill will also have roles off of the bench to start the season.

With all of the interchangeable talent at that position there will be one constant for the Minutewomen in the middle of the field. It will be controlled by the presence of junior captain Rebecca Myers.

Myers will look to distribute the ball to the wings in order to spread the scoring around, as well as continue to add to her numbers of a year ago. She is the leading returning scorer from a year ago with 11 goals and six assists for 28 points. Her offensive output will be needed to compensate for the loss of the three women who totaled 50 points a year ago.

Melissa Mitchell has graduated along with Kocher but the loss that will hurt the offense the most will be the absence of the leading goal scorer from the 1994 campaign, Nicole Roberts.

"We will miss her scoring potential," Rudy said of Roberts. "Almost any through ball there was that chance for the goal, but we will adjust our attack. Often when you lose something, you gain something else."

Roberts will not return for her senior year, and Rudy feels that her scoring will be spread out across the forward line.

"Rachel LeDuc is a quality goal scorer," Rudy says of his senior co-captain, "a key player in big games and has trained real hard this summer. She looks very sharp so far. With Roberts gone there is more opportunity for Rachel to show her talents and others will also pick up the slack."

LeDuc plays the game in such a manner that she will gain control of any ball in her vicinity. Her experience and leadership will play a large part in developing the attack on their opponents. Returning along side LeDuc is fifth-year senior Polly Hackathorn and sophomore Tina Lightning. Both have worked hard over the summer and have shown major improvements to Rudy.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Rachel LeDuc will be looking to increase her offensive numbers this season.

LeDuc's supporting cast up front will have a new flavor to it as well, with the addition of as many as three freshmen to the forward position. Karin Johnson and Michele Ferzan will bring more speed and aggressiveness to the front line and have the potential to make the twine ripple with both feet. Samantha Frank, if deemed eligible to play this year, will be looked at to contribute to the offensive punch along with the other newcomers.

When the season starts Sept. 2 at Saint Bonaventure, Rudy will be one win shy of his 100th career win at UMass. Some games to look forward to during the season are the UMass Classic, the match-up with UConn and the much anticipated rematch with Hartford, which swept two games from UMass last season, including the season ending 2-0 loss in the NCAA Tournament.

The Minutewomen will contend with another loss, because former UMass assistant coach April Kater will not return to assist Rudy along the sidelines. Rather, she opted to head up the brand new women's soccer program at Syracuse. Chris Chamides will be the replacement (see related story on page 9).

With all of those challenges ahead, the Minutewomen will attempt to hold to the 'one game at a time' cliche.

"We are just going to take it game by game and see how it goes," Myers said. "We have a lot of new faces that will help and we are still returning some real solid players."

Jim Rudy

Rebecca Myers

Sept.	2	at St. Bonaventure *	1 p.m.
	8	GEORGE WASHINGTON *	5 p.m.
	16	at William & Mary	12 p.m.
	17	at George Mason	12 p.m.
		Umass Classic
	22	Texas A&M vs. UMASS	2 p.m.
		Wright St. vs. New Hampshire	4:15 p.m.
	24	Texas A&M vs. New Hampshire	12 p.m.
		Wright St. vs. UMASS	2:15 p.m.
	30	vs. Colorado College at Orlando, Fla.	11 a.m.
Oct.	1	at Central Florida	1 p.m.
	4	YALE	3:30 p.m.
	7	RHODE ISLAND * at West Springfield	7 p.m.
	11	at Hartford	6:30 p.m.
	17	at Dartmouth	3:30 p.m.
	21	CONNECTICUT	2:30 p.m.
	22	FORDHAM *	2 p.m.
	27	at Temple *	3 p.m.
	29	CORNELL	2 p.m.
Nov.	3-5	Atlantic 10 Tournament
		At UMass	TBA
	11-12	NCAA Tournament (First Round)	TBA
	18-19	NCAA Tournament (Second Round)	TBA
	25-26	NCAA Tournament (Quarterfinals)	TBA
Dec.	1	NCAA Tournament (National Semifinals)	TBA
		at Chapel Hill, N.C.
	3	NCAA Tournament (Championship Game)	TBA
		at Chapel Hill, N.C.

* A-10 GAME • ALL HOME GAMES PLAYED AT RICHARD F. GARBER FIELD

Open Everyday Until 2:00 a.m.

Downtown Amherst

Welcome Back Students

50 Flavors to choose from !

Welcome Back...

THE BOULDERS

- Large 2 Bedroom Apartments
  - New Appliances
  - New Counters / Cabinets
  - New Carpets / Tile
- State of the Art Exercise Facility
  - Stairmaster • Lifecycle • Nautilus
- Free Heat & Hot Water
- 24 Hour Maintenance
- Central Mailbox Facility
- Limited Access Entry System
- 5 College Bus Stop on Property

• From Amherst center take Rt. 116 south to East Hadley Rd. The Boulders is located 1/4 of mile down on the left.

256-8534

$300 OFF 1st. Month's Rent!

CLIFF SIDE APARTMENTS

- RENTS STARTING AT $470
- 1,2 & 3 Bedroom Garden Style Apts. - 2 Bedroom Townhouse also available
- Convenient to Amherst & Points North
- Hiking Trails on 28 Wooded Acres
- Large Pool and Sunning Area
- Tennis, Volleyball and Basketball
- Free Public Transportation
- Free Heat, Hot Water & Electricity

248 Amherst Rd, Route 116, Sunderland, MA
665-3958

Women's Soccer

Newcomers hope to boost Minutewomen chances

Thompson, Johnson and Hill have potential to fill big holes

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The holes to be filled are huge.

All-American defender Heidi Kocher and forward Melissa Mitchell have both graduated and are now playing overseas in Finland, and the Minutewomen's leading scorer for the past two seasons, forward Nicole Roberts, is not returning for her senior year because of undisclosed reasons.

Amanda Thompson

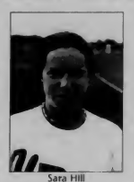
Although the 1995 recruiting class for UMass women's soccer team is not expected to put up the kind of numbers that Kocher, Mitchell and Roberts did, they all have the potential to make an immediate impact.

Altogether there are nine newcomers, with only six guaranteed to play in 1995.

Jen Olsen, from Simi Valley, Calif., has been redshirted, and transfer Samantha Frank, might not be eligible to play this season. The NCAA denied her eligibility for this upcoming season but UMass is appealing the decision. In intriguing prospect to the UMass squad could be Camilla Therpe, from Denmark, who is rumored to have played with the National Youth Team.

Karin Johnson

The other six newcomers include five freshmen and one transfer from Australia. Amanda Thompson, a defender out of Houston, Texas, is the leading candidate to try and make up for Kocher's loss. Thompson brings an impressive résumé with her to UMass. She played for the prestigious Klein Challenge Soccer Club and she was an All-State Olympic Development player at the Under-14, Under-16 and Under-19 levels. She was also a member of the U.S. Soccer Association and the South Regional Olympic Development Program team in 1993 and 1994, and was a Top 30 player for the U.S. National Youth Team.



Sara Hill

Thompson has shown flashes of the future in the Minutewomen's preseason scrimmages against Boston College and Vermont with her confident and steady play.

"She looks very good. She's a very mature freshman," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "We expect very steady play out of her. She plays great defense and is good in the air.

"She's a very smart player for a freshman."

Karin Johnson, a forward out of Sutton, Mass., is another freshman who will try to fill some big shoes With the loss of Roberts, Johnson could see more playing time than she might have expected.

As a senior at Sutton, Johnson scored 25 goals and notched 16 assists while being named a 1994 All-New England, All-Central Massachusetts and All-Dual Valley League selection, in addition to being named Player of the Year in the league. She led Sutton to three State Championships from 1991-93. Johnson was also a member of the Sutton Fuller Hamlets Soccer Club and a graduate of the UMass Advanced Girls Soccer camp.

"She's got some serious potential. She's looking pretty good for a freshman. She's got great speed, she can hit the ball with both feet," Rudy said. "Karin had some flashes of some good stuff [during the scrimmages]. I think she's gonna get some goals this year."

Another new frontrunner is Michele Ferzan out of Basking Ridge, NJ. Ferzan has been hampered by a knee injury and didn't see action in either of the two scrimmages against BC and Vermont. "She's a very quick, high work- rate, aggressive frontrunner," Rudy said.

During her senior year of high school, Ferzan displayed her outstanding offensive capabilities scoring 31 goals and notching nine assists for 71 points. She was named to the New Jersey All-State team as well as receiving All-Somerset County and All-Mountain Valley Conference distinction.

Sara Hill, from Castleton, N.Y., could see time at the forward and midfield positions. In high school, Hill was named first team All-State and captured Section II Class C Player of the Year honors. She was the MVP of her high school team in 1993 and 1994.

"Sara's looking very competent, which we knew she would," Rudy said. "She gives us a very strong, attacking and athletic personality off the left side."

Meghan Brennan, out of Yorktown, NY, who is listed as both a midfielder and defender, has been slowed by an eye injury, but has some talent. She was the team captain for her high school team that was ranked No. 20 in the nation last year and she was named to the Hudson Valley Empire State Team as well as receiving All-Hudson Valley honors.

"She is a very tenacious defender who's really good at one-verses-one," Rudy said.

Junior Vicki Linton is a defender who comes to UMass from the University of Wollongong (Belrose, Australia). Linton played with the UMass squad during the spring.

"She's a very solid player, simple solutions, reads the game well, gets it done," Rudy said.

The newcomers will be able to show their stuff to the UMass fans on Friday when the Minutewomen host their first game at Richard F. Garber field against George Washington at 5 p.m.

The Minutewomen opened their season at St. Bonaventure on Sept. 2 but results were not available as of press time.

"I think they're doing quite well. I was very pleased with all of our new kids. I think they all did a very solid job. Sometimes more than solid," Rudy said. "I think they're still figuring out what it's all about. How do I play here, how can I be effective, what's going to work and what doesn't.

"And when they do figure it out, they'll either be pretty good or they'll be sophomores."

Chamides named as new coach

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

On April 25, a woman revered by the Massachusetts women's soccer team, assistant coach April Kater, decided she would leave UMass to start the Syracuse women's soccer program.

"There will never be another April Kater," junior halfback Rebecca Myers said. "She is impossible to replace."

Chris Chamides, a graduate of Lafayette, and now studying Sports Management at the Graduate level, will be assisting UMass head coach Jim Rudy on the sidelines this year.

"I think there are some differences from the men's game to the women's game, and maybe I can bring along some tidbits that I've picked up along the way," Chamides said. "The women's game is very team oriented, more so than the men's is, and sometimes at certain points of the game it's better to be a bit selfish and go one-on-one."

In college, Chamides was a fullback and in practice his focus is on the defense, and strengthening what is already a highly talented group.

"I played as a defender and I get to work with the defenders a lot, who are very solid here in the first place," Chamides added. "So I can get into some of the nitty-gritty things and work with them. When we do functionals, I guess that's my forte."

With such little time to find a replacement for Kater, Rudy did not get a chance to get to know Chamides style and vice-versa. No styles of play were compared, so little was known of the other when they began to work together.

"Chris has been a little quiet so far," Rudy said of his new assistant. "But he has done a good job working with the girls so far, he just needs to work on his crosses to the front of the net. My legs aren't what they once were."

"The styles of play and the way we approach the game are similar, yet different," Chamides said. "There is a lot of the same meaning behind the training but the terms are different. My experience has mainly been with man-to-man as a defender and high pressure throughout. Where this is a little different, as a more zonal (defense), but he also leaves a lot of room for them to apply high pressure. Other than that, our approach to training is very similar."

"His general approach to the game and coaching style, and mine, are basically the same. Of course he's a lot more knowledgeable than myself, I think we agree on a lot of different issues," said Chamides.

Chamides has coached at various levels and feels he has become part of a program that could help him continue to working towards a higher level of talent.

"I was teaching and coaching at the high school level and I wanted to take it a step further, a more competitive environment," he explained, "a larger program, the college world. I wanted more of a challenge."

UMass was a place that Chamides felt was a perfect fit for himself to grow as a coach as well as a student.

Not only for the experience of assisting a national soccer program, but the furthering of his education at the same time.

"I applied to graduate school here for Sports Management. In fact, UMass was the only school that I applied to and I was fortunate enough to get in. Just as important as continuing Sports Management here, I knew I had to keep working within the game of soccer. So when I was awarded this assistantship, I was doubly thrilled.

"This was just a great situation where I could continue coaching and get an advanced education at a great reputable program here at UMass."

Chamides résumé includes two years coaching at the high school which he attended and played for, Xaverian, back in his hometown of Brooklyn, New York.

He coached GOAL, a club team of Under-16 boys, for a year as well as spending his summers working at the University of Virginia soccer camp for two years.

He has received his diploma from the National Soccer Coaches Association of America and most recently was a soccer field manager for the Special Olympics this past summer.

"I've learned a lot so far," Chamides said. "I'm sure I'll learn a lot more before the year is over. It's been great so far.

CANDICE FLEMMING / COLLEGIAN

Chris Chamides has emerged from high school ranks to be a grad assistant for Massachusetts.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Junior halfback Rebecca Myers attempts a slide tackle against Atlantic 10 rival George Washington.

Collegian Classifieds They Work! 113 Campus Center

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

ONE COURSE THAT COULD CHANGE THE COURSE OF YOUR LIFE.

Look forward to the future with confidence. Enroll in Army ROTC, an elective that's different from any other college course. ROTC offers hands-on leadership training. Training that gives you experience and helps build self-confidence, character and management skills. All the credentials employers look for. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about 4 hours per week. It will put your life on a whole new

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

No Obligation!!
Scholarship $$$ Available
Try a Class This Fall
Call Captain Paul Guelle
545-2321

PELOTON SPORTS

Yo! Students!! Yo! Students!!

3 Big Reasons To Shop At Peloton

#1 FREE Micro Shell Helmet
#2 FREE 6 ft. Self Coil Lock
#3 MONGO Low Prices

BUY A NEW/USED BIKE (OVER $200) FOR #3 & GET #1 AND #2 FREE!!!

Students Only Please!!
(Must present a valid College ID at time of Sale)

Great Bikes! Low Prices! Free Stuff!

Worth a Trip to Noho
PELOTON SPORTS
15 State St. • 584-1016

Men's Soccer

Minutemen hoping to repeat as A-10 Champions

By Allison Connolly & Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

This fall the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will be returning to Richard F. Garber Field with a lot of promise, and as the defending Atlantic 10 champions.

Last year was the Minutemen's first ever A-10 regular season championship as they finished with a 13-6-1 record, 6-1 in the A-10. The postseason title eluded UMass as they lost the Championship game to Rutgers, 4-3.

UMass coach Sam Koch, the A-10's Coach of the Year, is both confident and optimistic about the upcoming season.

"If we stay healthy, we can play up to our potential and definitely repeat," Koch said. "We have to stay healthy, focused and keep the intensity that we've had for the preseason, which has been solid."

The team roster will see 11 returning players but, "we have an awful lot of new players," according to Koch. Five freshmen were in the lineup for a scrimmage against the University of Quebec last week.

The first games are crucial for how the team will progress for the rest of the season. UMass opens with five consecutive games at Garber Field, three of which are against A-10 opponents. Koch will be looking to his new recruits to adjust to the UMass style of play from the start.

"I have no fear whatsoever that in the second half of the season, we're going to be a very competitive team," Koch said. "The first half will be for removing the freshman mistakes and if they do that then I feel very confident that we'll be in the tournament and play as well as we did last year."

Koch is confident that his new players will not have much trouble assimilating, even with the challenge of replacing the shoes of midfielder Mike Doyle, forward Hossein Gishi, midfielder Joe Marsaca, midfielder Joel Pitman and goaltender Mark Wolf.

"In the beginning depth might be an issue, but once [the freshmen] get their feet wet they'll fit il very well," Koch said. "Scott Regina has played for a very good club team at a top level and playing in big games isn't new to him. Mark Saad has played at that high level as well so there'll be very little difference for him. Brad Kurowski played at a high level with Cleveland United. A good number of the freshmen have played with good clubs at high levels so the transition won't be too hard for them."

Koch will be fine tuning the line-up, trying to coordinate the strengths of the returning players with the talents of the new recruits.

"We're young now and that's the main difference [from last year]," Koch said. "We've got a solid core of starters returning. It will be interesting to see how we do putting these new players into that solid core."

That solid core will feature a solid midfield led by A-10 Rookie of the Year Karsten Bremke. Bremke, from Germany, made an immediate impact after moving to midfield from his spot as a defender. Bremke ended the season tied for the team lead in goals (eight) and finished with 20 points.

"Karsten Bremke will show more of the same," Koch said. "I don't think he's going to change. He's playing well [in preseason] and he'll also help make Mike Butler more effective. He also works well with Dave Siljanovski and they'll get the job done offensively." Depth at midfield will benefit UMass, and Butler is expected to play an instrumental role as well.

Joe Jacobson will shift back to midfield after trying his hand at sweeper in 1994 and will contribute, along with Brad Miller, who played in 19 of UMass' 20 games last year.

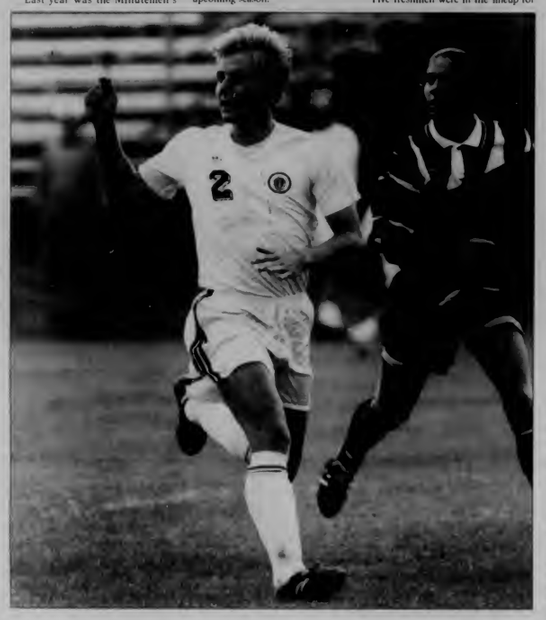
Freshmen Kurowski, Saad and Regina will also add to the Minuteman midfield, which is expected to be the team's dominant unit.

Colin Johnson will be a co-captain for the second year in a row and is expected to pack a scoring punch after tying for the team lead with eight goals last year (19 points). Siljanovski (eight goals, seven assists) will power the UMass attack.

Senior Benny Sheally will anchor the Minuteman defense from his sweeper position. Koch will call upon freshmen to step up at defense where only Sheally and Mike Cosman return. Tobias Bremke, younger brother of Karsten, John Hanna and Jarret Duncan will have an opportunity to make an impact in their freshman seasons. Eric Gruber will be in goal to start the season. He proved to be a dependable backup to Mark Wolf last year, registering shutouts against Providence and Maine.

"Eric Gruber is in goal and looking great," Koch said. Redshirt freshman Jeff Jablonski will compete for the backup role along with true freshmen Tim Pearson and Todd Fowler.

The Minutemen started their quest for the A-10 title on Saturday against LaSalle, and Virginia Tech Sunday, though results were not available at press time. They will meet Maine this afternoon at Garber Field at 4 p.m.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Karsten Bremke is one of several reasons that the UMass men's soccer team is optimistic for the upcoming season.

Tough schedule waiting for UMass

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

If UMass men's soccer intends to defend its regular season Atlantic-10 Conference title, and capture its first ever playoff title, the team must navigate through a treacherous schedule.

A long and rocky road lies between the Minutemen and the A-10 Championships to be held Nov. 3-5 in Kingston, R.I.

Standing in UMass' way is a 20 game schedule spanning 58 grueling days. Eleven conference games and a fierce non- conference schedule will make things exciting for the Minutemen, who check in ranked fifth in New England. UMass will face three of the four teams ahead of them, in what promises to be a thrilling campaign.

After opening with five games at Richard F. Garber Field, two tough roadtrips lie ahead of the Minutemen. Next weekend UMass will travel to Ohio for tilts with new conference foes Xavier and Dayton. Xavier should provide UMass with a challenge as the Musketeers are perennially a strong club, and feature two of the nation's top ten scorers.

It will be a homecoming of sorts for Koch, as he returns to his former school, Stanford, for a pair of games Sept. 29 and Oct. 1, in Palo Alto, California. Koch came to UMass in 1990 after a successful career coaching the Cardinals. While Stanford will put a tough team on the field, it is the opportunity to face San Francisco that has Koch excited.

The Dons are always a national power and have claimed four NCAA titles. The legendary Stephen Negoesco is the winningest coach in collegiate history, amassing 493 victories in his 33 years at the helm at USF. The possibility exists that UMass could stand between Negoesco and his milestone 500th victory, when they face off in the Stanford Classic.

"Having the first five games at home certainly can't hurt us," Koch said. "What's tough is playing so many games in two months. Especially the travel will have an effect on us. Going to Ohio and California will take its toll on us physically, but I think we're ready for it.

"[The Stanford trip] will be fun. The competition will be outstanding. USF's a top 20 team and have

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page D19

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA

$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza	$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza

one coupon per order • coupon cannot be combined with other offers

17 Montague Rd. Amherst 549-0626 — Free Delivery 7 days 11:30am - 2am

NEW ITEMS Now Featuring
Real Italian Food at its BEST!
Cannoli & Italian Pastries and Cheesburg
Wednesday Special
Calzones $3.25
• Tortellini Dinners
• Chocolate Pizza
• Chicken Pizza
• Sicilian Pizza

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Sat. 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Triple Load Washers

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Charlie's tavern since 1978
AMHERST, MASS.
The Place Where Friends Meet
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
Enjoy cheap munchies from 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
• Sunday - 10¢ Potato Skins
• Monday - 10¢ Mozzerella Sticks
• Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
• Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices
OR 1/4 lb. Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
• Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
*no take out on food specials
Drink Specials
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.99
Jumbo Drinks & Drafts
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews
T-Shirts for sale • Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week • Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA • 549-5403
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 48" Big Screen T.V. • MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

Water Polo

Men's water polo trying for EWPA three-peat

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts' water polo team will attempt to accomplish an elusive feat this season, a goal that the Dallas Cowboys, Pittsburgh Penguins and Toronto Blue Jays all could not reach.

UMass' elusive goal? A three-peat, as the Minutemen aim for a third consecutive Eastern Water Polo Association championship, and a third consecutive trip to the NCAA Championships, to be held December 2-3 at Stanford.

Despite losing prolific scorer Javier Gonzalez and his school record 187 points last season to graduation, UMass returns with a talented nucleus and expects to claim a third straight EWPA title and NCAA birth this season. However, UMass coach Russ Yarworth has his sights set at an even loftier plateau.

"We've set our goal of winning Easterns and going to the NCAAs, but my goal for the program is to be national champions. It's a tough goal but as coach Cal says, 'if you don't reach for the stars you won't approach them,' and that's what we're trying to do."

Alex Mujica will be the team's focal point, as he embarks on his fourth and final season in goal for the Minutemen. Despite being undersized at 5-9, Mujica already holds school career records in saves (531), save percentage (.551) and goals against average (7.80) and has been selected to the past two All-Eastern first teams.

Mujica represents the team's backbone and will have to continue his stellar play of the past three years for the Minutemen to make waves in the EWPA.

"The team starts and finishes with Alex," Yarworth said. "He's in great shape with a great attitude. He's the best goalie in the Eastern region."

Should Mujica ever falter, UMass is still in sure hands, as Paul Engin proved to be an exceptional back-up in 1994. Engin set a school record by making 21 saves against Brown and finished the year with a .525 save percentage and a 8.07 GAA.

Luis Limardo is back to lead the UMass offense this season. In 1994, Limardo set single season records in goals (127), fouls drawn (71), penalty shots drawn (8), a career record for shooting percentage (.567), and single game records in goals (10) and points (11). Losing half of their often lethal 1-2 scoring punch in Gonzalez and Limbardo will sting, but Yarworth is confident that his offense will not suffer overall.

"Losing Javier leaves a lot of goals to replace. We'll do it by diversifying our offense. It won't be like last year with Javier and Luis doing all the scoring. [John] Luviano, [Greg] Menton, [Marc] Staudenbaur, [Ron] Gonen and Juan Carlos Limardo will make us a more balanced team which will be better for us in the long run."

Limardo is coming off of an exceptional rookie campaign, which saw him chip in 29 goals and 62 points.

Gonen was second to Gonzalez in assists last season with 54 and ranks fourth all-time in that category. Staudenbaur chipped in 22 goals and 44 points as a freshman last year, and with his imposing 6-3 frame, should improve on those numbers in 1995.

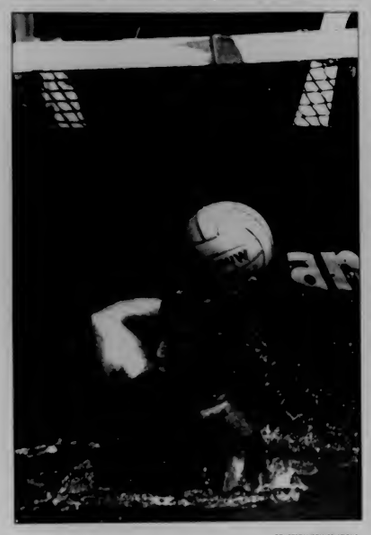
This year's freshman crop shows some incredible promise as well, with top recruits in Brian Stahl and Gabriel Marrero leading the pack.

Marrero is expected to make an immediate impact for the Minuteman, having played for his native Puerto Rico in the Pan Am Games this past summer at the age of 18.

Stahl, a Wyomissing, Pa. native is one of the prized recruits both in the East and on a national level this year. Stahl was a high school All- American with excellent size and has experience with the national youth team.

"I've got a great crop of freshmen, but they are freshmen in name only," Yarworth said. "Their experience and their ability is well beyond that. We have a good core of freshmen, all of whom can play the game."

The Minutemen opened their season this past weekend by competing in the Labor Day Invitational at Navy. The Midshipmen are the perennial EWPA South Division Champion and once again are expected to be UMass' primary rival as the Minutemen shoot for a three-peat as Champions.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Goalie Alex Mujica has been a stalwart in net for the Massachusetts men's waterpolo team.

Russ Yarworth

We've set our goal of winning Easterns and going to the NCAAs, but my goal for the program is to be national champions.
Russ Yarworth

Greg Menton

Sept.	2-3	at Labor Day Invitational
	9	at Cambridge Invitational
	16	at EWPA North Division Tournament, Kings Point, N.Y.
	16	Queens	1 p.m.
	16	at U.S. Merchant Marine Academy	4 p.m.
	16	Iona	7 p.m.
	23-24	at Brown Invitational
	28	BOSTON COLLEGE	6:30 p.m.
	30	at EWPA North Division Tournament, Bronx, N.Y.
	30	Saint Francis	10:30 a.m.
	30	Harvard	3:30 p.m.
	30	at Fordham	8:30 p.m.
Oct.	7-8	Minuteman Invitational
	11	at Harvard	7:30 p.m.
	14	EWPA North Division Tournament
	14	M.I.T.	9:30 a.m.
	14	BOSTON COLLEGE	4 p.m.
	14	BROWN	8:30 p.m.
	20	Chapman College (at Claremont, Calif.	10 a.m.
	20	Air Force (at Claremont, Calif.)	5 p.m.
	21-22	at Baldy View Tournament (at Claremont, Calif.)
	28-29	at EWPA North Division Playoffs, Cambridge, Mass.
Nov.	4-5	at Eastern Championship, Annapolis, Md.
Dec.	2-3	at NCAA Championships, Palo Alto, Calif.

COMPARE!
MORE MACHINES: Stairmasters • Treadmills • Lifecycles Nordic Track • Kenser • Nautilus Cybex • Olympic Free Weights
BETTER AEROBICS: Funk • Hi/Low • Yoga • Reebok Bench Step • Area's Largest Aerobics Space Suspended Wood Floor
"Big enough to own the best equipment, but small enough to know your name"
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST. SO. AMHERST 256-0080

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts, Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirt
Cigarettes, Magazines, Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

Kaplan prepares more students...one student at a time.
NUMBER OF PRE-GRADUATE STUDENTS PER YEAR*
21,000 — Princeton Review
25,000 — Other Companies (combined)
30,000 — Quickie University Courses
70,000 — KAPLAN
here's why.
1. Kaplan's teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. They're why our classes will make you a test expert.
2. Kaplan's customized prep system is truly unique. By evaluating your individual strengths and weaknesses, we're able to create an individualized study plan that ensures your success on test day.
3. Kaplan's network of over 150 interactive study centers gives you day-in, day-out personalized attention. We're here when you need us — not just at class time.
4. Kaplan's research brings you the most up-to-date prep available. By spending over $3 million every year researching the tests and supporting our courses, we make your prep the best there is.
Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
*1993 estimate

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
549-2671
An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of the UHS Eye Care Program, Fall, 1995
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Program
My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 80,000 individuals over that last 20 years.
I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and recently co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the massachusetts Board of Optometry.
Eye care services include:
• Complete optometry examinations
• Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
• Emergency eye care
• Comprehensive contact lens service
Our staff takes great pride in being about to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"
uhs EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient Hours and Campus Location
CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

Football

Minutemen hoping to regain winning ways of old

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The annual University of Massachusetts' football media day was held a couple of weeks back on the grass of Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium, and Mike Hodges strolled onto the field with his team.

A bunch of reporters huddled around the fourth-year Minuteman head coach, and all had one particular curiosity to settle. Hodges fielded the first seven questions asked in seven different ways as to who his starting quarterback will be come Sept. 9 against Richmond. The answers were all of the same nature: Who knows?

"We're going to make that decision just like last year," Hodges said, referring to last year's naming of Andrew McNeilly as QB after Vito Campanile went down with a knee injury prior to the 1994 season. "This year, it's a three- way race."

Hodges and staff will choose from the incumbent McNeilly, the returning Campanile, and the inexperienced sophomore Anthony Catterton. Regardless of who is tabbed as the field general, it is definitely imperative for the Minutemen to have a passing attack. Massachusetts still plans on many a handoff, with a backfield led by All-American Rene Ingoglia. But the lack of throwing (actually, completing) was considered the main reason why the Minutemen finished a disappointing 5-6 last season, resulting in Hodges first sub .500 season.

Here's a look at the Minutemen:

Offense

A guess from this writer says it's McNeilly's job to lose, with Campanile taking over after some game action. McNeilly's a tough kid, but has trouble putting together a passing attack. A healthy Campanile could be the answer.

As uncertain as the QB situation is at this point, it is certain that the running game of the Minutemen will be among the best in the country, let alone the Yankee Conference. The main reason is the senior Ingoglia, who led the YanCon in rushing for the second straight year, gaining 1,505 yards. Throw in tailback Frank Alessio (691 yards in 1994) and Ron Brockington (225 yards, including just one stop or a loss of yardage in 51 attempts), and the powerful backfield is back intact.

The offensive line returns three of last year's five starters. Third-year starter Dan Markowski returns at tackle, with Mark Shalala becoming the tackle on the opposite side. The guards will be Mark Zych and Lou Brandt, and it looks that Matt Alegi will take over Shalala's old spot at center. Bryan Healy will take over in the place of graduated Matt Stefanski at tight end, and Kevin Bourgoin and Darryl Thomas are the starting wideouts.

Hodges notes that the problems of the passing attack cannot be placed solely on the quarterback's shoulders. The receivers have to step it up a notch from last season.

"I don't think we have to throw the ball a whole lot more, we've gotta' catch it, we've gotta complete it," Hodges said. "We're working very hard to keep those things up."

Defense

When you have an experienced defensive line loaded with senior talents, like the Minutemen did last season, the follow-up year creates a few holes. Those left in the Massachusetts lineup include All-American and YanCon Defensive Player of the Year Brian Corcoran, Ben Albert and Silas Burke. Co-Captain Vernard Fennell, who missed over half of last season due to injuries, will be looked to anchor the defensive front. Ken Bello, who started in place of the injured Fennell at defensive end, will now play alongside Fennell, who will move to tackle. Mike Batelli had a good spring and looks for the starting nod at the other tackle. Trejo Rust will move to the line from linebacker, fighting for an end spot with Jeron Alston. Look for 290- pound sophomore Shaun Williams, barring academic difficulties, to compete for a spot on the defensive line.

As for the linebacker crew, the key word is young. Junior Mike Valentino will be bouncing back from an ACL injury and a non-contact spring, and junior Justin Riemer will probably be a starter, challenged by senior Brett Hammond. As for the other side, sophomore Mike Dawson and redshirt freshman Khari Samuel are the leading candidates on the opposite end. Valentino will be backed up by redshirt frosh Elvis Abellard.

This year, the experience for the Massachusetts' defense lies in the secondary. Tony Williams has moved on to the Canadian Football League, but All-American Breon Parker and friends have returned. Junior Kory Blackwell will replace Williams. According to Parker, "Kory is just as good as the both of us, if not better," referring to himself and Williams.

The Minutemen have four capable safeties: Jason Mumford, Jason Tudryn, Bryan Mooney and Legista Beckford. Mumford and Tudryn are the returning starters, and Mooney and Beckford played in all 11 games off the bench last season. While the secondary will be looking at some inexperienced spots at the defensive line and linebacker in front of them, the experience is there in the defensive backfield to pick up the slack.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Breon Parker will be among the Yankee Conference's top defenders.

Coach looks in the mirror

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Mike Hodges looked at himself upon the conclusion of the 1994 season.

He had already seen himself coach the University of Massachusetts' football team to a sub .500 record, going 5-6 during the 1994 season. He looked back on guiding a team with three All-Americans, register big wins at William & Mary and Delaware, yet lose close ones to Richmond and Connecticut.

Hodges remembered the goals he set for the team prior to the season. He remembered the piece of paper that was posted on the bulletin board in the Minuteman locker room, with the lofty goals listed for the team to see each day. He recalls telling the media that his team was taking each game at a time, and not looking forward to the others.

Hodges then took that look at himself.

"I [looked] at myself," Hodges said, "and I asked all of our players and coaches to do the same thing. We weren't as successful as we wanted to be, and I want everybody to figure out what they did to contribute to that, and make sure we don't do it again. And that starts with me, that's what I've done. There are some things that I did or did not do last year, and I'm not going to do those things again."

The fourth-year Minutenan head coach, in his 18th season at Massachusetts, still admits that the goals do not change. As lofty as they have been in the three years that he's compiled a 20-12 record, they will remain the same this year. It does not stop with a winning record, or a Yankee Conference title, or NCAA tournament bid. They are limitless, just like the previous years. So what's the difference?

"I want us to have high goals. I expect that, the program expects that, and these kids expect that," Hodges said. "But my job is to make sure we stay focused on how we reach these goals.

"You can have great goals, but it ain't gonna' just happen. You're not goin to play great defense just because you play at UMass. You have to remember how you get to do that."

Hodges stuck by his game by game approach when talking about each game last season. But he admits that he did not constantly practice what he preached. He also notes he could have done a better job in correcting the "little things."

"We have little things to do every play — you're stance if you're a lineman, and your assignment. These things aren't very hard to do. Yet, if you concentrate on the detail... I mean the very small detail.. the big thing takes care of itself. And that's what I let us get away with last year. I let us think more about the big things, the big picture, rather than the small parts."

For Hodges and his crew, it's a new season. It may appear to be the same, as Hodges says the Minutemen will take it "one day at a time, one practice at a time, one drill at a time, one repetition at a time." It's no different than what he said last year or the year before.

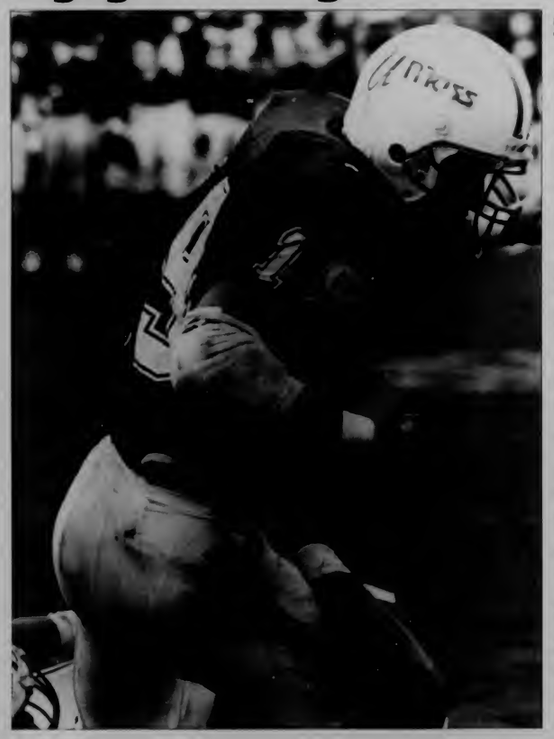
But after looking at himself, and the job he has done, Mike Hodges is making the adjustments. He is gaining more experience, just like his players. And he knows what he has to do.

"My job is to coach these guys to play to the best of their ability. And if we do that, I think it should be good enough to win a lot of football games."

COLLEGIAN FILE

Mike Hodges has learned from his past mistakes.

Ingoglia has sights on championship



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Without question, for UMass football Rene Ingoglia is the man.

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts possess the most feared running back in the Yankee Conference. Senior Rene Ingoglia returns to the Minutemen running attack with his sights set on a Yankee Conference championship.

In an offense, vital aspects include a ground game and the passing game to gain yardage and put points on the scoreboard. While the leader of the Minuteman aerial assault remains to be seen, the ground game led by Ingoglia looks to leave nothing but tracks to the end zone.

Entering his final season in the maroon and white, Ingoglia's career at UMass has resulted in impressive numbers and shattered records in every category, with more likely to be broken along the way.

Ingoglia has led the Yankee Conference in rushing the past two seasons, putting up 1,505 yards last season and is currently 414 yards shy of passing Garry Pearson (3,860 yards) to become UMass' all-time career leading rusher. He now stands second with 3,446 career yards.

Last year, Ingoglia tallied 313 yards in a single game against Rhode Island, setting a Yankee Conference record, and he is on pace to become the all-time leading rusher in Yankee Conference history.

"As far as the records go, those were never goals. Those were things that just happened along the way," Ingoglia said. "If it happens to happen this year along the way, so be it."

Qualities that make Ingoglia such a reluctant star are his work ethic, ability and focus towards football. He doesn't worry about being the superstar or putting up huge numbers. He goes full throttle and gives 100 percent. Ingoglia's main concern in his mind, is winning games and the conference. Everything else is filed into the UMass history books.

"Personally, I just want to be consistent and if I get a hundred yards, then I am helping the team," Ingoglia said. "I want to win the Yankee Conference and be consistent."

Ingoglia meshes all the aspects of a great running back into his game. He can do many things to create yardage, possessing speed, power and the ability to make people miss.

"[Ingoglia] does it all. If you stuff him on the inside, he has speed and moves to get it outside. If you overplay the outside and think you're going to arm tackle him, he'll run right through it," UMass coach Mike Hodges said. "He has great balance, power and strength."

"I don't think there is anyone in the country who doesn't know about him and how good he is at running the ball," said senior quarterback Andrew McNeilly.

Ingoglia attributes his success to his conditioning outside of the football season. He has worked extremely hard in the off season in order to maximize his speed and strength. Ingoglia's speed and weight are right where he wants them. The fullback is striving for the durability needed to log an aching 11-game schedule.

"Rene Ingoglia is as hard a worker as I've ever been around. He prepares himself that way in the weight room," Hodges said. "In practice he has one speed. He goes full speed and gives his best effort all of the time."

"This year I feel more intense. I always go hard durability- wise," Ingoglia said. "We went at it pretty hard to get in shape. It makes a big difference when you get into the eighth and ninth week of the season."

With the status of senior and co-captain, Ingoglia is the team leader and influence. He has been around the Minuteman program and helps the younger players hold on to a positive work ethic and attitude.

"You got to know when players are down and try to lift them up and lead by example," Ingoglia said. "Take the bull by the horns and lead the way."

Despite playing a Division 1-AA schedule, the Ingoglia's accomplishments have and will continue to gain national attention, and arouse the interest of professional scouts. Is there a professional career at the end of the UMass tunnel?

"If it is in God's plans then it will happen. All I can say is it's every kid's dream when they are 8-years-old to play in the NFL," Ingoglia said. "I think as people get older that dream falls off the table. I think it is in reach for me, whether I reach or climb into it is another story."

Ingoglia and his teammates prepare for the first battle against Richmond at the friendly confines of Warren G. McGuirk Alumni stadium Saturday, as anticipation builds for the best season in recent memory. On Sept. 9, at 1 p.m., once the game and the season is underway, all eyes will be on No. 19.

Football

Starting quarterback for opener still unknown

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

The heat is on at this summer's football training camp, as three viable candidates for the quarterback position sweat it out, fighting for the starting role.

The University of Massachusetts' football team carries three experienced and capable quarterbacks into this season, however the starter is indefinite.

Much of the attention from opponents are geared around the always potent back senior Rene Ingoglia and coach Mike Hodges looks to take advantage of Ingoglia's presence on the field.

Ingoglia, touted as the best running back in the Yankee Conference, would pose as a natural distraction for opposing defenses, opening up the Minuteman passing game more this year. Passing is an aspect in which UMass lacked in the prior season, and improvement is expected.

"We are going to get more production out of the quarterback position — but that doesn't mean we are going to change quarterbacks," Hodges said.

"How it's going to turn out with the competition is going to be very interesting. We've got talent there and preseason will take care of that."

The competition is between senior Andrew McNeilly, sophomore Vito Campanile and Anthony Catterton.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Senior Andrew McNeilly is in the midst of a dogfight, as he tries to keep his starting quarterback job...

Anthony Catterton

Considering there is no definite starter, each quarterback is pressured to perform their best each practice, leaving minimal margin for error.

"I think the best thing for any player at any position is to be pushed," Ingoglia said. "It will make you better and the team better."

The edge for the starting job goes to McNeilly.

The Melrose, Mass. native is a three-year starter and the incumbent at the quarterback position. McNeilly has the most experience, starting 28 career games for the Minutemen.

He could become only the fourth Massachusetts' quarterback in history to pass for over 3,000 yards this season.

Currently, McNeilly stands with 2,451 passing yards.

But even with the numbers in his corner, the senior knows the starting role will not be handed to him because he held it last year.

"You have got to keep earning [starting quarterback], you can't rest on your laurels and expect it," McNeilly said.

"By this time my senior year, I figured I wouldn't have to worry about it, but that's not how it works out."

The pressure to succeed, exerted by the other quarterbacks does not phase McNeilly. He has worked just as hard to prepare for the season as always and the heat for the starting quarterback job is the same every year.

"I always feel heat, I've started for three years and I have always had competition," McNeilly said. "I was a freshman behind a fifth-year senior. Then as a sophomore, Vito [Campanile] came in, so it's the same every year. I had to start all over again."

Campanile came to Massachusetts as the all time leading passer in the history of New Jersey high school football.

He already possesses the strongest arm of the Minuteman quarterbacks, and stepped into the starting role in 1993, when McNeilly went down with an injury.

Campanile took advantage of his opportunity, leading Massachusetts to wins in three of four games he started.

He tallied 371 yards passing and threw four touchdown passes in that span.

During a preseason intrasquad scrimmage in 1994, Campanile tore his anterior cruciate ligament and was forced to accept a medical redshirt for the season.

Now Campanile is back and in the hunt for the starting job.

He feels no pain in his throwing motion and the former injury does not hold back his play on the field.

"You can't play your game in fear, if you do it's going to affect your performance more than anything," Campanile said.

"It's a pretty common injury, Rene [Ingoglia] had it in high school, and it hasn't affected him much."

Campanile has the desire to lead the Minutemen, as do the other quarterbacks.

However, he thrives on the challenge and excitement of the competition. Campanile understands what it means to earn the top spot.

"The only people that are given things in this world are little babies. If you want something, you got to go out there and take it," Campanile said. "I wouldn't want somebody to just give me something, just be 'here, take it.'

"I'd rather earn something."

Catterton, last season's back-up to McNeilly, is also contending for the starting job.

He is the least experienced of the three quarterbacks, and also the youngest.

Last season, the Orlando, Fla. resident, appeared in three games and performed exceptionally well. He completed 50 percent of his 22 passes, for 125 yards. That experience has enabled Catterton to throw himself into the quarterback mix, as a confident and legitimate candidate.

"I think playing last year helped me a great deal. Just being on the field with college players and getting a feel for how fast it is," Catterton said. "I feel more along, physically and mentally.

"Last year, being far away from home was tough, but I've gotten to know a lot of the players and I'm comfortable with them."

Catterton may be learning about college football on the field, but he is learning a lesson or two off the field as well.

He is the roommate of fellow quarterback McNeilly and the senior experience can only help the rising player.

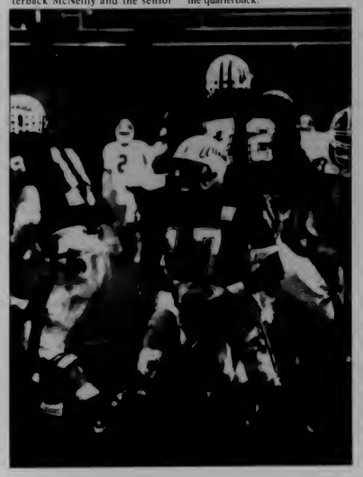
"I've learned a lot from Andrew [McNeilly] by rooming with him," Catterton said. "I've learned a lot about football.

"There's no animosity between us."

Meanwhile, each quarterback is taking equal snaps in practice and receiving the same work and attention from the coaching staff.

A starter will emerge from the training camp, and will be looked upon to lead the Minutemen into the field of battle.

A Yankee Conference Championship could be waiting for Massachusetts at the end of the tunnel, and whether they reach it or not, will depend on the leader of the pack — the quarterback.



COLLEGIAN FILE

... while Vito Campanile hopes that his strong pre-season puts him over the top.

No clear favorite to win Yankee Conference Title

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

This season the Yankee Conference will not feature a "team to beat," making it potentially the most evenly matched conference in recent memory.

"Every year, teams you don't expect play better than you do," University of Massachusetts' football coach Mike Hodges said. "We will be challenged every Saturday. There isn't one team on that schedule who can't beat us and there isn't any team we can't beat."

"There are a lot of great teams in this conference," senior Rene Ingoglia said. "There is not a weak link in this conference. Anyone can beat anyone on any given day. That's what makes it so great."

Massachusetts will square off against New England Conference rivals New Hampshire, Boston University, Northeastern, Connecticut, Maine, and Rhode Island. Other Yankee Conference foes on the schedule will include Richmond and William & Mary.

• Starting with New England rivals, New Hampshire is the Yankee Conference defending champs, and the team UMass wants to usurp as king.

After cleanly sweeping the conference last season, the Wildcats would like to continue the winning ways they are accustomed to.

New Hampshire, who has not lost a conference match-up since the Minutemen poked them off their high horse in 1993, may find it a little more difficult to keep their pace due to the loss of some key players.

The Wildcats will take the field this season without the services of former quarterback Jim Stayer, who passed for 1,998 yards last season, and their top two running backs Avrom Smith (827 yards) and Lee McClinton (672 yards), all of whom have graduated.

• In-state competitor Boston University, is coming off a successful season, boasting a 9-3 YanCon record last season. The Terriers have won the last two meetings between the teams, but the loss of a great quarterback thins the BU chances of three-peating the Minutemen.

Robert Dougherty was the Terrier's ticket to success throughout the past four seasons, and BU needs a new field general, to replace the two-time Yankee Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

The leading candidate to run BU's run and shoot offense, implemented under Dougherty, is University of Maryland transfer student Kevin Foley. Foley is the younger brother of former Boston College Eagle Glenn Foley, who had much success on the Beantown football scene.

The Terriers also possess a good ground game with fullback Julien Dale who was last season's conference Rookie of the Year.

On the defense side, BU takes another dent losing the all-time Yankee Conference interception leader, in cornerback Chris Hekon.

• Staying within the city limits, Massachusetts has another Boston team to reckon with. The Northeastern Huskies are trying to forget about a dismal 2-9 season and are looking for vast improvement.

Northeastern returns ten starters from last year's squad and will depend on sophomore Jim Murphy, who assumed the starting quarterback role late last season, to command the offense. Murphy led the Huskies to wins in their last two games of last season.

Defensive back Mark Hopkins returns to the Husky defense, after a strong season last year picking off seven passes, and knocking away ten more.

• The other Huskies, from Connecticut, are also coming off a sub .500 season and are fighting to turn it around. Coach Skip Holtz, son of legendary Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz, may have fumbled through Dad's Fighting Irish bag of tricks, looking to compile a Yankee Conference winner.

The Huskies return 18 starters including tailback Wilbur Gilliard and quarterback Zeke Rodgers, who rung up 968 passing yards last season. UConn needs Gilliard to step up into the running role, for the Huskies lost their all-time school leading rusher Ed Long to graduation.

Connecticut will also need to fill a huge defensive gap, left by former linebacker Paul Zenkert who last season, finished second in the conference with 138 tackles.

• Changing latitudes, the Maine Black Bears take the field this season, hopfing to bring the first Yankee Conference crown north since 1965. They did not fare well last season finishing 3-8, but will depend on younger players to fill holes this year.

Maine graduated both their top quarterback in Emilio Colon and running back Steve Knight who ran for 798 yards last season. Despite the loss of key starters, the Black Bears should maintain a solid offense due to an offensive line returning intact.

On defense for Maine, losing starting linebacker Ako Stafford and defensive tackle Mike Adamets could prove to hurt the Black Bears.

• Right there with Maine, dwelling in the cellar of the New England Division of the conference, were the Rams of Rhode Island, who posted a 2-9 record last year.

A positive note for the future of the Rams is the team's youth, carrying only six seniors on the roster this season. Rhode Island has a great passing game with junior Chris Hisson coming off a 2,123 passing yardage season and the top two receivers in the conference returning. Cy Butler (73 receptions, 828 yards) and Bobby Apgar (67 receptions, 1,042 yards) will haul in the Hisson strikes this season, creating most of the Ram offense.

• The Minutemen open their season at home this Saturday against Richmond. Massachusetts faces the Spiders, after dropping a close game 14-13 last season, as visitors in Virginia.

Former Massachusetts coach Jim Reid has taken the helm at Richmond after spending last season as the defensive coordinator of the Boston College Eagles. Reid coached the Minutemen from 1986 to 1991, leading Massachusetts to three Yankee Conference Championships during that span.

The Spiders do return their top two quarterbacks, but have a big void to fill for this season at running back Richmond lost All-YanCon third team running back Uly Scott who, last season, rushed for 707 yards.

Richmond's defense will replace eight key starters this year including most notably defensive back Maurice Glenn (122 tackles, 3 interceptions) and linebacker Ray Geoffrey (131 tackles).

• In other conference action, the Minutemen will host the William & Mary Tribe. The Tribe had a solid season last year, posting an 8-3 record, and enters this season having lost only three starters. Unfortunately for the Tribe, one of the starters was two-time All-Yankee Conference quarterback Shawn Knight, who passed for 1,503 yards last season.

William & Mary will place more emphasis on the run this season. Returning are both Derek Fitzgerald and All-Yankee Conference pick Troy Keen, who each rushed for over 1,000 yards. To complement the run, the Tribe offensive line returns in full.

On defense, the team loses only All-Yankee Conference middle linebacker Greg Applewhite.

Massachusetts will not face the remainder of the Yankee Conference, which consists of James Madison, Delaware, and Villanova. These squads are perennially solid and without them on the Minuteman schedule, the chances improve for a conference championship in Amherst once again.

Mike Hodges

Rene Ingoglia

last year's record 5-6

"We will be challenged every Saturday. There isn't one team on that schedule who can't beat us and there isn't any team we can't beat"
–Mike Hodges

Sept.	9	RICHMOND*	1 p.m.
	16	HOLY CROSS	1 p.m.
	23	at Northeastern *	1 p.m.
	30	at Rhode Island *	1 p.m.
Oct.	7	NEW HAMPSHIRE *	1 p.m.
	14	at Buffalo	1:30 p.m.
	21	WILLIAM & MARY *	1 p.m.
	28	LEHIGH	1 p.m.
Nov.	4	at Maine *	12:30 p.m.
	11	at Boston University	1 p.m.
	18	at Connecticut *	1 p.m.

* Yankee Conference game

ALL HOME GAMES AT WARREN McGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM

Men's Basketball

Nov.	7	EXHIBITION GAME	TBA
	28	Great Eight, Palace of Auburn Hills (Mich.)
		Kentucky	9 p.m. ESPN
Dec.	2-3	Franklin National Bank Classic, USAir Arena, Landover, Md.
	2	Maryland	12 p.m. Raycom
	3	Florida or George Washington	TBA
	6	WAKE FOREST	9:30 p.m. ESPN
	9	Boston College	1 p.m. CBS
		at FleetCenter, Boston, Mass.
	12	NORTH CAROLINA-WILMINGTON	8:30 p.m. ESPN2
	22	Georgia Tech (at Meadowlands)	9 p.m. ESPN
	27-30	Rainbow Classic, Honolulu, Hawaii
	27	Syracuse vs. Illinois	11 p.m.
		Rhode Island vs. Hawaii	1:30 a.m.
	28	Southern California vs. Missouri	11 p.m.
		UMass vs. North Carolina St.	1:30 a.m.
	29	Second Round
	30	Final Round
Jan.	4	Memphis (at Worcester Centrum)	9 p.m. ESPN
	6	DAYTON *	2 p.m. A-10
	9	at St. Joseph's *	7 p.m. A-10
	14	at St. Bonaventure *	2 p.m. A-10
	17	RHODE ISLAND *	TBA A-10
	20	at Duquesne *	2 p.m. A-10
	23	at Pittsburgh	9 p.m. ESPN2
	27	ST. BONAVENTURE *	2 p.m. A-10
	30	FORDHAM *	TBA
Feb.	1	at Temple *	9:30 p.m. ESPN
	4	at Xavier *	1:30 p.m. ABC
	6	Fordham * (at Madison Square Garden)	TBA
	11	TEMPLE *	1:30 p.m. ABC
	15	LA SALLE *	7:30 p.m. Prime
	17	at Virginia Tech *	12 p.m. ESPN
	20	Rhode Island *	9:30 p.m. ESPN2
		at Providence Civic Center
	24	GEORGE WASHINGTON *	12 p.m. ESPN
	28	ST. JOSEPH'S *	TBA A-10
Mar.	2	at Louisville	2 p.m. ABC
	6-9	Atlantic 10 Tournament, at Philadelphia, Pa.

HOME GAMES IN BOLD CAPS
* Atlantic 10 Conference Games

Minutemen need to be road warriors

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Once again Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari has put together a non-conference schedule that once again is as tough as there is in the country. They not only play against top flight competition but do it mostly away from the friendly confines of home.

This year UMass will spend considerably more time away from the William D. Mullins' Center. Only 10 of the Minutemen's 29 regular season games will be played on campus, down from 14 a year ago.

For the second straight year UMass could be starting off the season against the No. 1 ranked team in the country. Kentucky, who returns a solid nucleus from last year's Final Eight squad, is a likely candidate to be ranked No. 1 in the preseason polls. The Minutemen will take on the Wildcats Nov. 28, in the Great Eight Tournament, which takes place at the Palace at Auburn Hills, Mich.

The road doesn't get any easier for UMass, as next they head to Landover, Md. to partake in the Franklin National Bank Classic. Its building rivalry with the Maryland Terrapins will be featured in their first round game, and then they will face either Florida or George Washington in the second game of the tournament.

Ending an eight day stretch where they will face four teams who competed in post season tournaments, junior center Tim Duncan and Wake Forest will invade Amherst.

This game will be built up with the prospect of matching two of the top players in the collegiate ranks for the coming season, one-on-one. Duncan will battle UMass' 6-foot-11 junior center Marcus Camby. Both Camby and Duncan are at the top of the list of National Player of the Year candidates.

The Minutemen will face their third Atlantic Coast Conference opponent of the season when they head back to the Meadowlands where they will be opposed by the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets. The Minutemen will get to see Stephon Marbury up close and see if Dick Vitale can truly call him a "diaper dandy." Marberry will go head to head with Boston Shootout teammate Charlton Clarke, UMass' prized guard recruit.

If you check the team's travel plans around Christmas time, you see a week's stay in Hawaii, but coach Cal isn't taking his players on vacation. The Minutemen will compete in the Rainbow Classic, which has gotten less competitive over the years but still boasts talented schools such as Syracuse out of the Big East and Missouri out of the Big Eight.

As the calendar turns to 1996, UMass rings in the New Year by making their obligatory stop in Worcester by taking on the up-and-coming Memphis Tigers, lead by Lorenzen Wright.

The Minutemen finish the season the way they started it, against an opponent from the Blue Grass state as they invade Freedom Hall to take on the Cardinals of Louisville. Camby once again will be tested against another talented big man, this time in the form of 6-foot-9 Samaki Walker.

The Atlantic 10 conference schedule won't suffer too much with the losses of Rutgers and West Virginia to the Big East. It has added Xavier (NCAA participant in 1995) and Virginia Tech (NIT Finalist in 1995), and both games are away.

The downside will be that they play Dayton, Fordham (twice) and LaSalle. Those teams combined for a 31-51 record.

The Minutemen will be part of history this year as well. They will take part in the first ever collegiate basketball game in the newly finished FleetCenter in Boston against the Boston College Eagles.

COLLEGIAN FILE
Junior center Marcus Camby and the Massachusetts men's basketball team won't be wearing their home jerseys as often next year.

Clarke is in, Ketner out

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts lost a lot from last year's Elite Eight team.

Most casual observers point to Lou Roe graduating and moving onto the NBA, however they may be missing the bigger picture. Perhaps the biggest loss came in the backcourt as Derek Kellogg, Mike Williams and Andre Burks all are not coming back this season leaving just Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travesio as the only guards with playing experience.

Kellogg graduated, Williams was suspended and Burks transferred to McNeese St. But UMass coach John Calipari hopes he found someone to fill part of the void in Charlton Clarke.

Clarke, a 6-foot-3 guard from the Bronx, attended the same high school (St. Raymond's) as current Minuteman forward Dana Dingle. As a senior, Clarke averaged 24.6 points and 3.3 assists while leading the Ravens to the city championship game. In his career, Clarke scored 1,082 points.

Clarke was a member of the New York squad at this year's Boston Shootout, where he was a teammate of Stephon Marbury, the outstanding guard who is headed to Georgia Tech. With the spotlight on Marbury, Clarke got a chance to quietly show his stuff, and he didn't disappoint.

He scored 23 points in New York's only win, against New Jersey and followed that up with a 26-point performance the next night against Atlanta. According to some observers, Clarke was more consistent than the high-profiled Marbury. At the tourney, Clarke saw all of his time at the off-guard, so whether he can fill in at point is still a question mark. For the third time in the past four years, a UMass men's basketball recruit will have to sit out his first year because of academic difficulties.

Three years ago, then-freshman Donta Bright had to sit out a year because of Proposition 48 and the following year, Tyrone Weeks had to do the same thing. This year it's 6-foot-11 forward Lari Ketner.

Ketner, who attended Roman Catholic High School in Philadelphia, averaged 24 points and 15 boards on his way to being named the Philadelphia Player of the Year. Ketner led his team to the championship game of the Philadephia Catholic League, as well as the National Catholic Tournament.

SUBWAY
Make any sandwhich a MEAL DEAL
just add $1 to the price of any sandwhich and get a medium soda & chips. No coupon required!
Subway sandwhich shops may be all over the country but we're certainly at home in Amherst. We buy our vegetables locally from Atkin's farm as well as our salami & pepperoni from Carando. And of course our bread is baked fresh daily, in our own ovens.
4 Main Street, Amherst, MA • 256-1919
Hours: Sunday-Thursday 10am-12pm • Friday & Saturday 10am-2am

THE GYM
FREE WEIGHTS • NAUTILUS • CARDIOVASCULAR • TANNING SEMESTER SPECIAL
ONLY $120
SEPTEMBER • OCTOBER • NOVEMBER • DECEMBER
MT. FARMS MALL • HADLEY
CALL FOR INFO TODAY
584-2175

The Spoke
Welcomes You Back
The Spoke
Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16oz Bud & Bud Light Wide Mouths– $2.00
Beer of the Month
Gin Tonic– $2.00
1994 Advocate ★ Readers Poll ★
Best Place to get a cheap drink
Join us for our 12th year in Amherst!!!
PROPER ID REQUIRED
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Women's basketball

Minutewomen have Atlantic 10 Title on mind

Tough schedule for UM

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

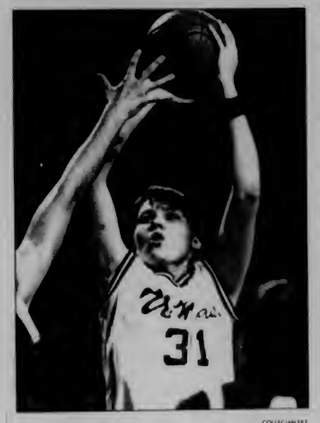
The 1994-95 season was the best ever for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team.

But as great as its season was, the Minutewomen don't want to duplicate it again this year. They want to do even better.

The Minutewomen finished with a school record 19 wins against 11 losses while gaining a bid to the National Women's Invitational Tournament (NWIT), but they left the Atlantic 10 Tournament with a quarterfinal loss (to West Virginia) and a bad taste in their mouths.

That bad taste will probably still be there until they get another crack at the A-10 Tournament and an A-10 Championship.

UMass will head into its quest for the A-10 title with a lot of experience and outstanding depth. After losing only one player from last year's team (Cass Anderson) the Minutewomen added four newcomers. Yanira Liceaga (a transfer who sat out last season), Jaywana Bradley, Lucia Madajova and Yolanda Rayside (see related story) to go along with the nine returning players from last year. The return of guard/forward Kim Gregory, who sat out all of last year after tearing her anterior cruciate ligament, also helps the Minutewomen bench.



COLLEGIAN FILE
Senior Melissa Gurile and the women's basketball team will be tested early in the preseason NIT.

Seniors Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter, along with Gregory (with junior eligibility), have been the cornerstones in the rebuilding process. They were coach Joanie O'Brien's first recruiting class and now they hope to lead UMass, and coach O'Brien, to its first-ever A-10 Championship this year. These seniors have led the Minutewomen to the national spotlight already though. Last year, UMass' home game against Rhode Island was televised live, marking the first time a Minutewomen game was carried live in Amherst. This year, UMass is moving up to the duece, when the Minutewomen's game at URI is televised live on ESPN2. This is just another example of how far this program has come.

The Minutewomen are not shying away from good competition and are following the saying "to be the best, you have to play the best." The Minutewomen don't waste anyiime playing the best as they open up their season in the Preseason NIT. UMass plays at Maine, a 1995 NCAA participant, in the first round on Nov. 15. If UMass defeats the Black Bears they would advance to the second round to play either Pittsburgh or Ohio State.

After the NIT the Minutewomen play host to 1995 Final Four participant Stanford, in a game that brings a former Amherst Regional High School star back home. Jamilia Wideman, led Amherst to a Division 3 State Championship in the 1992-93 season and one of her main rivals was current Minutewomen Beth Kuzmeski, who is from Northampton. Next year, UMass travels to Stanford to complete a home-and-home series.

On Nov. 26, UMass will host Detroit, a team it lost to last year in the first meeting ever between the two schools. From there, the Minutewomen head to the Louisiana Tech Tournament, where they could have a chance to play Louisiana Tech, another NCAA tournament participant a year ago. UMass opens up with Mississippi Valley State while Louisiana Tech faces St. John's.

After playing Brown and St. Peters, the Minutewomen will head to the Nationwide Insurance/Lady Gator Classic in Gainesville, Fla. UMass plays Florida in the first round while Boston College meets George Washington.

On Jan. 9, the Minutewomen travel to their last non- conference game of the regular season when they head to Dartmouth.

The rest of the Minutewomen's schedule (as of Aug. 31), all of their A-10 games, has yet to be announced. The Minutewomen will be in the East Division along with Fordham, Rhode Island, St. Bonaventure, St. Joseph's and Temple. The West Division will consist of Dayton, Duquesne, George Washington, LaSalle, Virginia Tech and Xavier.

UMass will play the East Division teams home and away, but will meet the West Division teams only once, either home or away.

With the new format, the Minutewomen's newly found rivalry with George Washington has suffered as the two teams will only meet once every season unless they meet in the A-10 tourney.

COLLEGIAN FILE
Senior Octavia Thomas is part of a strong nucleus that has women's hoop enthusiasts expecting a trip to the NCAA tournament for UMass this year.

Women's Basketball Schedule

Nov.	15	at Maine (Preseason NIT)	7:30 p.m.
	17-21	Preseason NIT (if UMass advances)	TBA
	24	STANFORD	1:30 p.m.
	26	DETROIT	2 p.m.
Dec.	2-3	Louisiana Tech Tournament
	2	UMASS vs. Miss. Valley State	5:30 p.m.
		St. John's vs. Louisiana Tech	7:30 p.m.
	3	3rd Place / Champ. Games	5:30 / 7:30 p.m.
Dec.	7	BROWN	7 p.m.
	13	at St. Peter's	7 p.m.
Dec.	29-30	Nationwide Insurance / Lady Gator Classic
	29	Boston College vs. George Washington	TBA
		UMASS vs. Florida	TBA
	30	Third Place / Championship Games	TBA
Jan.	9	at Dartmouth	6:30 p.m.
Jan.	13	at Rhode Island	TBA

Atlantic 10 Conference Schedule: TBA

Newcomers show talent

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

With four newcomers added to its already deep squad, the Massachusetts women's basketball team seems primed to take another shot at winning the Atlantic 10 Conference Regular season and Tournament titles.

The Minutewomen came close last season, finishing second to George Washington during the regular season and heading into the Atlantic 10 Tournament as the No. 2 seed and as one of the favorites to win the title, but were upset by No. 7 seed West Virginia in the first round.

The team learned a lot from that defeat and hope that the experience gained last year leads them to the championship this season.

The four newcomers to this year's Minutewomen squad are a talented group who hopes to help give UMass the A- 10 championship. They are sophomore Yanira Liceaga (a transfer last year who could not play but practiced with the team), jaywana Bradley, Lucia Madajova and Yolanda Rayside.

Bradley and Liceaga will both see time in the backcourt while Madajova and Rayside will fight for time in the frontcourt.

The 5-foot-9 Bradley comes to UMass from Manhattan Center High School in New York where, as a senior, she averaged 24 points, four assists and 12 rebounds all while earning All-City honors. While Bradley will most likely see more time at the guard position, she has the ability to play forward, giving UMass coach Joanie O'Brien even more depth underneath.

Liceaga will fight with Tricia Hopson, Beth Kuzmeski and Sabriya Mitchell, as well as Bradley, for playing time in the backcourt. Liceaga does have a slight advantage over Bradley because she was able to practice with the team all last year.

Madajova (6-foot-2) and Rayside (6-foot-3) join Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Crystal Carroll, Tez Kraft and Kara Tudman to give UMass outstanding depth. Madajova could see time at both the forward and center positions while Rayside will likely be at center.

Madajova, originally from Slovakia, averaged 17.7 points, 15.1 rebounds and 3.6 blocks as a senior at David Prouty High School in Worcester, Ma.

Rayside played her high school ball at the High School of Fashion in New York, NY, where she finished as the school's all-time leading scorer (1,108 points) and rebounder (1,007) while averaging 19.4 points, 15.0 rebounds, 6.0 blocks and 3.4 assists as a senior. She was also named to the All-Manhattan team and the All-New York City second team along with playing in the New York Exceptional Seniors Game where she led her team in rebounding.

Get the Morning Paper delivered to Dorms, Offices, and Limited Off-Campus Locations*
50% OFF
Award Winning Sports Section!
The Boston Globe

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $33.00	❒ $62.00
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $16.75	❒ $33.25
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $16.25	❒ $28.75

The New York Times

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $59.30	❒ $110.70
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $26.80	❒ $53.20
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $32.50	❒ $57.50

Subscribe at the Campus Center
call DADS NEWS at 259-1071
or mail to: DADS NEWS, P.O. Box 633, Amherst, MA 01004-0633
$10.00 Charge for Off Campus delivery

DELANO'S
87 North Pleasant Street
253-5141 Proper Identification A Must Welcome Back Specials
Vodka & Tonic - $1.75
Bud Light Pounders - $2.00
Shot Of The Month
Kamakazi - $1.75
Watch For Pitcher Of The Month
Taco Tuesday - FREE Taco Bar
(after 9:00)
Wing Wednesday

TODAY ONLY
Wednesday, Sept. 6
UNLIMITED* TRIPLE COUPONS
* See store for details with your
Big Y
175 University Drive
Amherst • 256-1191

Playoffs exciting with wild card

As the Fall Classic nears, we will finally taste post-season baseball again, this time with the addition of a wild card team.

You have the purists who say wild card teams dilute the meaning of championship baseball, but compare baseball to other sports. Hockey and Basketball are four rounds of series before a winner is determined. The wild card will create more excitement to the baseball playoffs, and will give a deserving team a chance to drive home the crown.

Mike Brown on the NL

While two of the three National League divisions look to be decided, the NL West and wild card race is in full force.

• The Atlanta Braves apparently have ironed out their preseason escapades with manager Bobby Cox and his spouse assault saga. They have formed back to an NL East powerhouse, burying their nearest opponent, the drowning Phillies, by a 14-game margin.

The Tomahawk Choppers can attribute much of their success to the magician of the mound, Greg Maddux. He is bidding for his fourth Cy Young award in as many years and is holding an earned run average under two. Maddux has been victorious in 16 straight road games dating back to pre-strike days.

The Braves also have Tom Glavine and John Smoltz on the top ten list of the NL win column, and rookie Chipper Jones, who will hit 20+ home runs and could earn Rookie of the Year honors.

• The Cincinnati Reds have run away with the NL Central, but the reason is more along the lines of default. Since last year's MVP winner and Houston Astros clean-up hitter Jeff Bagwell went down with his third annual broken hand, the Astros have slid to over 14 games behind the Big Red Machine, including losing 11 in a row up to last week.

Brighter days could be on the way for Houston because they still have a shot at the wild card, and Mr. Bagwell is coming back from the disabled list. He is now sporting a specially designed batting glove with an air bubble on the back to protect his fragile bone.

• The NL West has come down to a race between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Colorado Rockies. What's up with the Rockies bats? Four out of the top six NL homerun leaders come from the Colorado lineup. Is it something in the water, or just the thinness of the air in the Rocky Mountains? Sources say the altitude at which Coors field is located has baseballs travelling further off bats than normal. More like missiles. Dante Bichette, Vinny Castilla, Larry Walker, and "the cat" Andres Galarraga have all made habit of depositing the baseball into the cheap seats.

If it were not for perennial NL batting champ Tony Gwynn and Dodger Mike Piazza, the Rockies slugger Bichette would have a legitimate shot at the triple crown. He leads the league in homeruns and RBI's, but is 30 points behind the surging Piazza in the batting race.

The Dodgers, thanks to the big bat of Piazza, have kept in contension in the NL West. Piazza's astronomical batting average has him being compared to all-time great catchers, and the success of his favorite battery mate Hideo Nomo

Turn to NATIONAL LEAGUE, page D13

UM baseball notebook

Pileski released, Pelis signs on and Jette shines

An ailment to former UMass shortstop Mark Pileski has put his professional career on hold for the time being. Pileski was selected in the 11th round of the 1995 entry draft by the New York Mets. He went on to sign with them, therefore foregoing his last year of college eligibility, and was assigned to their Single A affiliate, Pittsfield.

Within the first couple of days of training, Pileski overextended his arm and strained his shoulder. He tried to play through the injury, but finally was examined by the team physician. The team physician said that it was a recurring injury suffered during his career at UMass, and Pileski was subsequently released.

In eight games he was hitting 161 (5-for-31) with one double, four runs batted in and was successful in his only attempt at stealing a base.

Pileski underwent corrective surgery Aug. 24 to repair his shoulder and will begin his six-month rehabilitation at that point. He feels he will be able to be part of another organization at some point in the future.

"I am going to concentrate on my classes for the fall and work out as much as I can with the team," Pileski said. "Then I will concentrate solely on my rehab and not take classes in the spring. Hopefully then I can try out for a major league club and catch on somewhere."

Pileski had undergone surgery last October on the same arm but his doctor said this current injury is non-related.

Mark Pileski

* * *

All-time home run and RBI leader Bill Knight, after being selected in the 21st round by the Oakland Athletics, has struggled while playing for the Southern Oregon Athletics. He played his first professional game on June 16 and went 0-for-2 with one run scored. Knight's best day at the plate for the A's was Aug. 30, when he went 3-for-4, with 2 runs scored and a double.

As of August 31, Knight was hitting .217 (28-for-129) with two homeruns, 19 RBI and 21 runs scored.

In his senior year at UMass, Knight shattered the record books on one swing, a three-run blast against Hartford, to break the home run and RBI records, previously 32 and 133, respectively. He ended with 43 homers and 171 RBI.

* * *

Unlike some of his former teammates Ryan Jette had an impressive summer. Playing on the Central Mass. Collegians, Jette led the New England College Baseball League in batting average and stolen bases, and was named the league MVP while helping lead the Collegians to the league title. His UMass teammates Chad Sullivan, Jeff Pulieri and Brad Gorrie were also members of the squad.

Ryan Jette

Minuteman Adrian Soltic, Scott Barnsby and David Dart are also in the league playing for the Waterbury Barons.

* * *

Shortly after Pileski was released by the Pittsfield Mets, his former teammate Andy Pelis signed on as a free agent. The former UMass catcher was playing with the Northampton Teddy Bear Pools team of the Tri-County League before he signed.

Pelis' stats with the Mets were not available as of press time.

At UMass, Pelis was a three-year starter behind the plate and was one of the key players in UMass' march to the A- 10 title. In his career as a Minuteman, Pelis batted .310 with 126 hits, 88 RBI and 14 HRs. His best season was his senior year when he hit .337 with 55 hits, 41 RBI and eight homers.

Candice Flemming, Justin C. Smith & Matt Vautour contributed to this article

Gutridge sets tourney record

Massachusetts' softball player Kim Gutridge, after a stellar freshman season in which she hit .383 in 62 games at first base, and was named the Atlantic 10 Conference Rookie of the Year, continued to shine this summer when she set a Junior Girls World Softball Championship record for batting average.

At the tournament, Gutridge batted at a .588 clip (10-for- 17) to set the new record while playing for Team USA, a team considered to be the best that the United States has ever fielded at the tournament.

Team USA went 15-0 in the tourney while shutting out every opponent it faced. By winning the tournament, Team USA picked up its first gold medal since 1987.

Gutridge was the first player in University of Massachusetts' history to be selected to this team.

— Candice Flemming

Big surprises throughout AL

Each season as September rolls around, fans of Major League Baseball begin to reflect on the season behind them, as they start to look ahead to the post season.

This year is no exception. As New Englanders drool over the fact that there will be baseball in Fenway Park come October, many fans are looking back at the summer. And while a few can say of the '95 season, "I told you so," most simply shake their heads in disbelief.

Brian Perillo on the AL

One of the greatest things about our National Pastime is that every year is filled with surprises. This column will take a look back at those surprises in the American League, as well as a few of my own personal, "I told you so's."

• Barring an incident, today marks the day Cal Ripken will play his 2,131st game in a row, eclipsing the great Lou Gehrig in consecutive games played.

When "Iron Cal" steps out of the dugout tonight, he will step into baseball immortality.

It should come as no shock to anyone that Ripken has accomplished this amazing feat. In this age of, "Coach, sit me, I have a paper cut," Cal's resiliency has made him a legend.

• All right, Sox fans, here it is. The BoSox have been one of the biggest surprises in the junior circuit. Most baseball fans, myself included, would have told you that the biggest question the Red Sox would be answering in September would be whether to bench Mike Greenwell to get a look at rookie Jose Malave. Instead the debate rages over who should start Game One of the playoffs.

What is the reason for the surging Sox? It's hard to put a finger on it. Part of it has to do with the fact that the Orioles have faltered and the Yankees payroll averages out to be costing owner George Steinbrenner something like $500,000 a win.

However, it has as much to do with names like Wakefield, O'Leary, Naehring, Hanson, Cormier, Tinsley and Belinda. Proven losers who suddenly and miraculously figured out how to win.

Don't try to figure it out. You won't be able to. Just sit back and enjoy.

• Speaking of those rivals in pinstripes, just what happened to the Yankees? This one is a bit easier to explain, and I'll gladly put myself on the back for not jumping on their bandwagon in April.

First of all, the loss of last year's ace Jimmy Key to injury proved devastating. People thought Jack McDowell was the answer, but neither he nor mid-season acquisition David Cone has approached Key's success.

In addition, too many Yanks had career years last season, and their infield, minus Pat Kelly, is aging. Also, the "Bronx Bombers" are without a true bomber. It will be a stretch for any pinstriper to hit 25 home runs.

Add into that equation the fact that much heralded closer, John Wetteland, the game's best stopper last season, has faltered with the Yanks, and you have an answer that approaches negative numbers.

• Be afraid. Be very afraid.

Turn to AMERICAN LEAGUE, page D13

1-800-COLLECT®

Intramural-Recreational SPORTS

1-800-COLLECT PROUDLY SPONSORS INTRAMURAL SPORTS AT UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

SPORTS	ENTRIES CLOSE	CAPTAIN'S MEETING	PLAY BEGINS
Flag Football	September 11	September 14 & 15, 6:00pm	September 18
Soccer	September 11	September 14 & 15, 6:00pm	September 18
Softball	September 12	September 18, 6:00pm	September 20
Tennis Singles	September 27	October 11, 6:00pm	October 13-15
Volleyball	October 4	October 18 & 19, 6:00pm	October 23

Officials needed for Flag Football, Softball, and Soccer.
Locations for Captain's Meetings are to be determined. Check with IM Office for late entries. Call 2693 or 5022 for more information.

Sign-up Today! FOR INTRAMURAL SPORTS

1-800-COLLECT®

Save The People You Call Up To 44%.*

*Versus AT&T operator dialed three minute interstate calls

Tennis

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Coach Judy Dixon calls Liesl Sitton "the best doubles player in New England."

Tennis teams look for solid year

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's and women's tennis teams are banking on this fall season to be better than last, with the promise of new recruits and strong returning starters.

"I'm looking forward to a successful year," UMass coach Judy Dixon said. "UMass is going to be a team to reckon with, both the men's and the women's teams. Because of this, I've upgraded both to play much more difficult and stronger teams."

Last year was a turnaround season for the women's team, but this year will prove to be one for the men's team, Dixon said. This year, the men's team will see seven new players, five being freshman, which Dixon deems "really out of the ordinary."

"This year I'm looking for a season above .500. One of our goals is to win New Englands and win 75 percent of our matches," Dixon said.

That's a feasible goal, especially with the arrival of their new No. 1 player, Lex Carrington.

"[Lex] is definitely the best player UMass has ever had," Dixon said. "He will definitely be a contender in the sectionals in September."

Carrington is a local talent from Easthampton, Mass., who was a member of the U.S. Junior National Team and played in the doubles final of the 1992 Jr. Australian Open. Carrington has 2 1/2 years of eligibility. Dixon is depending on Carrington to anchor the team with returning senior co-captain Justin Lynn."That's going to mean a lot to the team to have someone of his caliber," Dixon said.

Justin Lynn played No. 4 singles and won that grouping at the New England Championships last year. Dixon said Lynn "will probably move up and hold the team."

Darren Tau was at No. 5 singles last year and at various doubles positions. Dixon said that Tau will remain around No. 4 or No. 5 for the fall season.

Sophomore Alex Allen of Peru was the No. 6 singles player last year and a perfect record marred by only two losses. "He had a great year as a walk on," Dixon said. She also said that Ankur Bayshu will play anywhere from No. 2 to No. 5 this season. New members include Nathan Klooster, Mike Skeels, Jaon Blind, Leonard Davis, Todd Chaney and Ryan Ginley.

The men's tough matches for the upcoming season will be against

Turn to TENNIS, page D15

		Men's Tennis			Women's Tennis
Sept.	15	BOSTON UNIVERSITY ..... 3:00 p.m.	Sept.	13	At Hartford ..... 3:00 p.m.
	16	At Wesleyan ..... 1:00 p.m.		15	ST. JOHN'S ..... 3:30 p.m.
	18	At Rhode Island ..... 2:30 p.m.		16	VERMONT ..... 2:00 p.m.
	21	FAIRFIELD ..... 3:00 p.m.		17	RHODE ISLAND ..... 10:00 p.m.
	23	WHEATON ..... 1:00 p.m.		19	At Holy Cross ..... 3:00 p.m.
	27	CONNECTICUT ..... 3:00 p.m.		26	At Providence ..... 3:00 p.m.
Oct.	2	At New Hampshire ..... 3:00 p.m.		30	NEW HAMPSHIRE ..... 1:00 p.m.
	7	VERMONT ..... 1:00 p.m.	Oct	3	J RMY ..... 3:00 p.m.
Nov.	2-6	At Rolex Championships ...(at Princeton N.J.)		5	CONNECTICUT ..... 3:00 p.m.
				7	At Rutgers ..... 11:00 a.m.
				8	At Fordham ..... TBA
		HOME GAMES IN BOLD		14-15	N.E. Championship (At Burlington, VT)
		(Home matches played at Upper Boyden courts)	Nov.	2-3	At Rolex Championships (At Philadelphia, Pa.)

EVERY BODY WINS KLEIN'S ALL SPORTS

Back To School SALE

NIKE Air Fly 64.99

CONVERSE One Star 24.99 39.99

50% OFF Socks! With Any Footwear Purchase!

NIKE AIR DVST8 74.99

NIKE Air Street Deke 59.99

RUSSELL ATHLETIC T-Shirts & Shorts $4.99 Ea.

LONG RIO UMBRO SHORTS $12.99

JANSPORT Superbreak Backpack $19.99

HEAD STRONG BUCKS BIKE HELMETS $9.99 Value To $25

Rollerblade. Astroblade $89.99

Huge Selection Of Hats Starting At $9.99

Special Group Jackets YOUR CHOICE $59.99

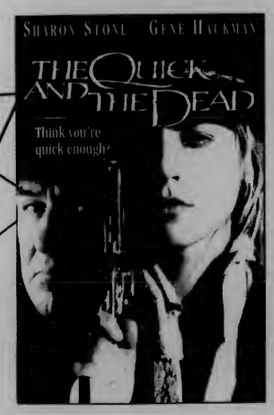
Back To School Savings In Every Department!

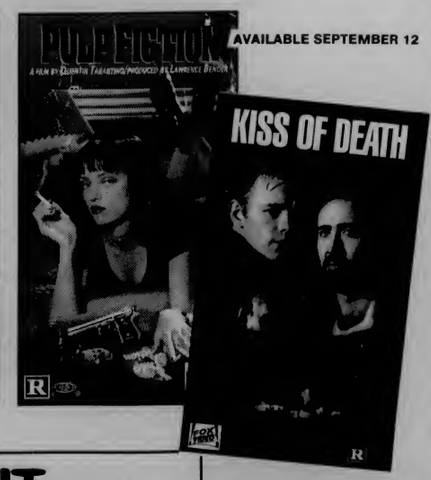
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

STOP&SHOP SUPER VIDEO CENTER

456 RUSSELL STREET HADLEY, MA 01035
HOURS: MONDAY-SATURDAY 8 A.M. TO 11 P.M. SUNDAY 8 AM-9 P.M. TEL: (413) 256-6138

WE HAVE ALL THE HITS





AVAILABLE SEPTEMBER 12

Plus CD ROM FOR RENT

Hockey

Mallen tries to catch up with rest of Hockey East

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

After a 6–28–2 season in its first season of Division I and Hockey East play, the Massachusetts hockey team is looking to take another step forward. The question for coach Joe Mallen and his troops is how big that step will be.

While the record itself is unimpressive, the magnitude of the wins that the team had was. In addition to wins over Army, Notre Dame, and Providence, UMass toppled No. 1 Maine, and beat Boston College twice, including once in the Hockey East playoffs.

They showed flashes of considerable promise in what was otherwise a year of learning. With a year of valuable experience under their belts, the Minutemen have an opportunity to make that step a big one.

Defense

Mallen makes no secrets about his desire for size on the blueline. While his defensemen didn't lack size a year ago, at times they lacked the experience to know how to use it.

"My model is built on having bigger guys, but they have to have good hands and they have to have good feet. They can't just be big," Mallen said. "When I think about freshmen, they've never really been made to play defense the proper way. For me the adjustment is teaching them how to play defense, and how to work together within the team structure to shut the other team down."

After taking their lumps at times last year, Mallen is confident that the unit will be solid this year.

"I think we're really building a super set of defensemen," Mallen said. "I'm not sure how good they're going to be this year but I think that they're going to improve."

Offense

For the third straight season, opposing defenses will focus on shutting down junior forward Rob Bonneau. One year of Hockey East experience could prove valuable for the Springfield native. A full season of Sal Manganaro and Jon Jaques will be crucial for the Minutemen who hope to rise into the middle of the pack.

Goaltender

Sophomore Brian Regan could be the key to how far UMass goes. The New Milford, Conn. native emerged as the No. 1 goalie down the stretch for Massachusetts last year, highlighted by a 51–save performance in the win over Maine. A member of Hockey East's All Rookie Team a year ago, if Regan continues to improve at last year's pace, he has a chance to be among the best in the conference.

Senior Dave Kilduff will see considerable action as well, while Rich Moriarty fights for playing time.

Schedule

As UMass gets stronger, so does the strength of the schedule. In addition to a full Hockey East schedule, the Minutemen will face Cornell twice, Air Force, Army, Rensselaer, Yale, Vermont and Princeton. The Division III teams are gone from the slate, making every night a battle.

"We have improved our schedule again for the third time in three years," Mallen said. "There are no division three teams. Vermont I think is going to be a great rivalry. Yale should be a natural being right down Route 91."

With a better knowledge of what to expect in the conference UMass has set goals for the upcoming season.

"After one year, we certainly have a clearer picture of how tough Hockey East really is. We know what to expect," Mallen said. "My goals are to double the number of wins we had in Hockey East, and double the number of wins over all. Those are realistic goals that everyone in the locker room can shoot for.

"Hopefully we can attain those goals during the season, so we'll have a chance to exceed them."

Notes: Hockey East has modified its playoff system. Each series will have a best of three format, with the semi-finals and finals to be played in the FleetCenter. The No. 8 seed versus the No. 9 seed game has been eliminated, as the No. 9 seed will not make the post season... UMass has already received a commitment for next year from Toronto native Jeff Blanchard. In addition to being a top recruit, Blanchard is also the nephew of former Bruin great Bobby Orr.

Dennis Wright celebrates after a goal against Merrimack last season. UMass will take on the Warriors the first weekend in November.

COLLEGIAN FILE

1995-96 Schedule

Oct.	27	at Army	7 p.m.
Nov.	3	MERRIMACK *	7 p.m.
	4	at Merrimack *	7 p.m.
	10	UMASS-LOWELL *	7 p.m.
	11	at UMass-Lowell *	7 p.m.
	17	at Providence *	7 p.m.
	18	PROVIDENCE *	7 p.m.
	24	AIR FORCE	8 p.m.
	25	AIR FORCE	7 p.m.
Dec.	1	B.U. *	7 p.m.
	2	at Boston University *	7 p.m.
	8	at Yale	7 p.m.
	9	VERMONT	7 p.m.
	12	at Rensselaer	7:30 p.m.
	17	at Princeton	2 p.m.
UMass Holiday International Classic at the Mullins Center
Dec.	22	Finland vs. Slovakia. Cornell vs. UMass
Dec.	23	Consolation game
		Championship game
Jan.	9	MAINE *	7 p.m.
	12	at Northeastern *	7 p.m.
	13	NORTHEASTERN *	7 p.m.
	19	at Boston College *	7 p.m.
	20	B.C. *	7 p.m.
	23	at Cornell	7 p.m.
	26	at Maine *	7 p.m.
	27	at Maine *	7 p.m.
Feb.	2	at Merrimack *	7 p.m.
	3	at New Hampshire *	7 p.m.
	9	at Boston University *	7 p.m.
	10	UMASS-LOWELL *	7 p.m.
	16	NEW HAMPSHIRE *	7 p.m.
	17	at New Hampshire *	7 p.m.
	24	PROVIDENCE *	7 p.m.
Mar.	1	BOSTON COLLEGE *	7 p.m.
	2	NORTHEASTERN	7 p.m.

HOME GAMES IN BOLD
*Hockey east game

Sports Notice

There will be a meeting for all Sports staff members and any other interested writers on September 13 at 7:00 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center (The Basement opposite end from the ATMs). For more information call Candice Flemming, Sports Editor at 545-1749.

BACKYARD BIRDS
A BIRDWATCHERS STORE
Bird Seed • Baths Feeders
Houses • Books • Gifts
586-3155
17 Strong Ave., Northampton, MA 01060

AEROBICS
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

Race St. Pub
968 Race Street., Holyoke • 532-1422
"Open Under New Management"
NO PRESSURE • NO HYPE • NO ATTITUDES
Two Good Two Be True!
$2.00 Cover!
$2.00 Drafts!
$2.00 Well Drinks!
All The Time!
VIP DANCING
The Incredible "Shower of Power" Wet & Wild
Credit & Bank Cards Accepted • Lunch Served Parking Police On Duty Summer Time Hours
CLOSED SUNDAYS

BELL'S Pizza HOUSE
28 YEARS 1967-1995
All Pizzas Are Not Created Equal! Enjoy the Distinct Difference of Bell's!
DINE-IN OR TAKE OUT
PIZZA • LARGE & MEDIUM
GRINDERS • SPAGHETTI
SALADS • (CHEF, TOSSED & GREEK)
549-1311
HOURS DAILY 11AM TO ?
Delivery, Call Delivery Express 549-0077
65 UNIVERSITY DRIVE • AMHERST

■ American League

continued from page D10

The one American League team that has been making a lot of noise lately in their hunt for a Wild Card is... The Seattle Mariners?

Yes, that's right, the Mariners, who have finished over .500 just once in their 18–year existence, are striking fear in the hearts of many AL managers.

The M's have probably the league's best pitcher in firebailer Randy Johnson. And if he's not the best, the 6– foot–10 inch Johnson is easily the most intimidating.

Keeping in mind that a first round playoff series is only best of five, the Red Sox, who are the only team that can play the Mariners in the first round, would have to face Johnson twice. This makes for a very frightening possibility for Sox fans.

Don't stop cringing Fenway faithful, because it gets even worse. The M's lineup has shaped up into one of the best in baseball. Seattle has a legitimate chance to have four players drive in 100 runs, and that does not even include Ken Griffey, Jr., possibly the games most feared hitter.

Jay Buhner, Mike Blowers (both Yankee castoffs) and the Martinezes, Edgar and Tino (no relation), are all among the best hitters at their positions, and each had over 80 ribbies before the end of August.

• As for the Wild Card, who is the genius who thought up this system? Home field advantage was guaranteed to the AL East and West champs before the season started.

This means that the Cleveland Indians, who have run away with everything this season, will be playing either California or Boston without the advantage of home field!

Furthermore, the winner of the first round match–up with the AL West winner, possibly a wild card team, gets the advantage in the next round.

Hypothetically speaking, this could mean the Yankees hosting the Indians in the League Championship Series. Go figure this one!

Since the NL hosts this year's World Series, that means Cleveland, with the best record in baseball, could go through the entire playoffs without enjoying home field advantage once! This is simply absurd, with a capital A.

• One more point. Hats off to Phil Garner and the Milwaukee Brewers. Manager Garner has the Brew crew, baseball's smallest market, in the Wild Card hunt with one of the league's lowest payrolls.

Despite the fact that no starter's ERA is under four, and their only big name, Greg Vaughn, has struggled, players like B.J. Surhoff, John Jaha and Kevin Seitzer have Milwaukee thinking playoffs.

Despite all this, I'll bet Brewers fans would trade owner Bud Selig to get Troy O'Leary back.

Brian Perillo is a Collegian columnist.

■ National League

continued from page D10

have the Dodgers in the hunt. Nomo, the first Japanese player since the 60's, leads the league in strikeouts by a great margin, and has left hitters baffled with his unorthodox delivery and mix of fastballs and sliders.

• Moving away from the race and into the cellar, it is good to see that the New York Mets stink and know it. They have unloaded superstars such as Bret Saberhagen and Bobby Bonilla for some great prospects. For the first time since they won the World Series in 1986, they have placed the brown paper bags over their heads while they wait for the prospects to develop.

Staying with the Mets, Darryl Strawberry was a great Met, a good Dodger, a mediocre Giant, and a washed up Yankee. I realize this is a National League column, but the guy has been through drug rehab after drug rehab. Yankee owner George Steinbrenner will not get the New York Met everyone loved to watch. In fact, Strawberry's last big hit is what got him thrown into rehab.

Mike Brown is a Collegian staff member.

■ Cross Country

continued from page D20

impact on the new look Atlantic 10. The loss of perennial league favorite West Virginia brings a sigh of relief for only a moment upon the realization that Virginia Tech, which finished last season in the Top 20 in the country, will join the A–10 race. Virginia Tech is the pre– season favorite to take home the Conference crown, followed by Massachusetts, St. Joseph's and another newcomer, La Salle.

Overall the team is solid from top to bottom. Seniors Ethan Nedeau and Marc Buffone, along with juniors John Way and Paul Blodorn, provide terrific point scoring potential for the Minutemen.

"We had 10 guys over the course of last year who were in and out of the top seven," O'Brien said. "And out of those we only lost one (Rick Copley) to graduation, so we do have the numbers."

With the strengths that this UMass squad has now built up its program with, their greatest expectation can be reached.

"Our goal each year is to win the A–10 Championships," O'Brien said. "We have a strong schedule and we will prepare ourselves to do so. We will be ready for that meet and go into it with the intentions of winning the Championship."

"We definitely want to win the A–10 Championship," Biel agrees. "That and finishing in the top four at the IC4A's I think are high, but reachable goals for us."

Before that stage of the season, the Minutemen will run against some of the stiffest competition in the country. First the team travels to Boston to face Boston College, Iona Northeastern and Michigan. The Wolverines will be the measuring stick the Minutemen will use to see how good they really are. Michigan finished the year ranked No. 7 nationally.

Three weeks later is the Paul Short Invitational which is regarded as one of the most competitive Invitational races in the country.

Biel is very excited upon the outlook of the season.

"We return our top five runners and if we stay healthy, there is no reason we won't have a great year," he said.

DISCOVER new worlds

$1,618
PC 330 DX2 – 66 MHz
w/ 14" SVGA Color Monitor

5010 S DX4 – 75 MHz
8 MB RAM/360 MB Hard Drive
Dual-Scan Color Monitor
$3,179

Get the Right Start
Call
1-800-4 IBM LOAN
(1-800-442-6562)
For Special Financing

IBM and the University Store have special educational pricing on PCs and ThinkPad® Notebooks. Call 413-545-2619 for more details.

IBM.

Attention UMass Undergraduates

Football Season Ticket Information

Please look for your 1995 Football season ticket booklets arriving in campus mail. Any student living off campus can pick up their season tickets at the Curry Hicks Cage or on the day of each home game at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

1995 UMass Football Home Schedule

Sept. 9	Richmond	1pm
Sept. 16	Holy Cross	1pm
Oct. 7	New Hampshire	1pm
Oct. 21	William & Mary	1pm
Oct. 28	Lehigh	1pm

YOU'LL FLIP! OVER THE ACTION WHEN THE BOSTON BRUINS
BLACK & WHITE INTRASQUAD GAME
RETURNS TO THE MULLINS CENTER
FRIDAY • SEPTEMBER 15 • 7PM
Proceeds to benefit MDA and the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association
Tickets: $15.50 & $10.50
$2.00 DISCOUNT for children 12 & under.
Group discounts available by calling (413) 545-3001.
Tickets On Sale Now!!
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and:

THINGS YOU ALREADY KNOW...
◆ UMass Hoops is Hot!!
◆ Keep your quarters, you'll need them.
◆ Always go where there is free food.
ONE THING YOU DON'T KNOW...
40% of UMass students prefer parties without alcohol.

Cal Ripken to break 'unbreakable' record tonight

Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

What were you doing on May 30, 1982?

If you're not sure, don't be alarmed. When Cal Ripken walked out to the infield that day, it didn't seem like much. But 13 years later, when Ripken steps on the field today, he will become immortal.

Ripken will surpass Lou Gehrig tonight, when he plays in his 2,131st consecutive game.

When Ripken started the streak, Ronald Reagan was President, E.T. hadn't reached the box office and the Milwaukee Brewers were on their way to the World Series.

Current college freshman weren't even in kindergarten yet.

A lot has changed in baseball since then. A lot of it for the bad, but Ripken still plays baseball the way it was meant to be played.

While even baseball fans don't remember what they were doing when the streak started, long after today has passed, fans will remember today.

• With the rise of the Patriots and current success of the Red Sox, interest surrounding the Bruins in New England had been clearly lagging, especially after a first round exit from the playoffs.

The once proud Bruins were dangerously close to falling into the same woeful abyss currently inhabited by the Celtics.

Then Harry intervened ...

As he has done so many times in the past, Bruins GM Harry Sinden made a trade that could re-energize the franchise. Bringing locals Kevin Stevens and Shawn McEachern to Boston will make the FleetCenter a more exciting place to watch hockey, and will make the Bruins Stanley Cup contender once again.

The potential power play of Stevens, Adam Oates, Cam Neely, Ray Bourque and a healthy Al Iafrate would be the league's best.

• Does Jose Canseco not have the fastest bat speed you've ever seen?

• For everything Monica Seles has been through in the past two years, her return to tennis at the Canadian Open was clearly a satisfying event.

After Mats Wilander left tennis during the 1980's, he returned as a shadow of his former talent. There was speculation that Seles might have suffered the same demise. But while her grunts may have been a bit rusty, she was on the top of her game. With the US Open approaching quickly, it appears that the best talent in women's tennis is back.

• What might be the most satisfying thing about the Red Sox flying by the Yankees is knowing that the know-it-all New York media is all eating crow sandwiches. When the Bronx Bummers got within four and a half games, the New York press said that a Red Sox fall was inevitable, and that the Yankees would cruise to the series.

Wrong! While the Sox are battling in playoffs, the Yankees will be fighting to stay under par in October.

• The Celtics are better off with no offense than they were with Dominique Wilkins.

Are there any coaching opportunities for M.L. Carr in Greece? That would be the real answer.

When Milwaukee selected Gary Trent on draft night, the Celtics brass was visibly disappointed about having to settle for Eric Williams, but Carr bellied up to the podium, taped on his fake smile and said:

"Ignore any emotions you saw up there. We got our guy."

I believe the Celtics have only two non-players in their organization with any semblance of a clue. Larry Bird and intern (and former WMUA sports director) Paul Cacciatore.

Speaking of clueless organizations, why did Charlotte draft George Zidek with Travis Best still on the board?

• Potentially the best one-on-one match up in college hoop will take place Dec. 6 in the Mullins Center, when Tim Duncan and Wake Forest take on Marcus Camby and Massachusetts. Big men draw all kinds of attention and these two are the best in the business. If you can't see this one, don't miss Camby and Louisville's Samaki Walker in UMass' final game of the season.

It's never too early to start thinking about hoop at UMass.

• Is there anyone ever, that stretched their 15 minutes of fame further than Peter McNeely. Andrew McNeilly would have lasted longer in the ring. Don King can talk longer without taking a breath than McNeely lasted.

What's next for the Hurricane that was barely a summer sprinkle? McNeely would be a natural in the World Wrestling Federation.

Under the completely irrelevant file. McNeely and UMass hockey's Brad Norton are cousins. You can be sure the radio announcers might have fun with that one.

"... And Brad Norton wraps his opponent into a cocoon of horror..."

There is absolutely no truth to the rumor that Don King is trying to set up a McNeely-Tommy Morrison showdown.

• BC is on television a lot this year, a great opportunity for their program to continue to gain national exposure. One problem.

Without, Pete Mitchell, Mike Mamula, Greg Landry, David Green and others, BC is going to get their backsides handed to them repeatedly on national television. Nice exposure.

Trivia question: Who is more overexposed than Michael Jackson, Newt Gingrich and O.J. Simpson?

Answer: Wannabe tough guy Pete Kendall.

Why is Pete Kendall getting this much press? He's an offensive tackle. So what if he talks trash? Shut up already! Doug Flutie never got this much ink.

• Celebrity sighting: Volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny at Hootie and the Blowfish at Great Woods.

• There will always be questions, about whether or not George Miller's persistence in prodding John Calipari about Mike Williams' suspension had anything to do with Miller's removal. We'll never know, but his firing didn't have anything to do with performance.

Regardless, the UMass fans, and his colleagues in the media will miss George Miller.

• Speaking of departures, the Athletic Media Relations Department will miss Lamar Chance, who has departed for Ole Miss. There is no classier guy in the business. He'll enjoy his return to the South, but it's hard to imagine Lamar without a field hockey team.

• The August 13 passing of Mickey Mantle gave today's younger sports fans a glimpse of what sports, its heroes and especially baseball meant to our parents.

For them the image of Mick was one of life, vitality and youth. Mantle's death made a whole generation feel a little bit older.

WEEI's Craig Mustard made his call-in show a "Memories of Mick" segment, the next day. It brought out memories of when baseball really was the national pastime, an institution that defined America.

I wish I was there to see it.

Marcus Camby hopes to be 'Duncan' over Wake Forest this season when the Demon Deacons come to Mullins.

UMass quarterback Andrew McNeilly could have lasted longer than his namesake against Tyson.

New Atlantic 10 gets mixed reviews

By Justin C. Smith &
Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The dawning of a new era.

As the Atlantic 10 begins the 1995 fall season, the conference will have a decidedly different look to it. Gone are Rutgers and West Virginia, who have defected to the Big East. In their place, the A-10 has added five teams to expand to a 12-team conference.

Joining the league are Xavier, Dayton, LaSalle, Virginia Tech and Fordham.

The addition expands its influence into new parts of the country as well as strengthening itself in its current markets.

"This brings us into some strong new markets," said Massachusetts' athletic director Bob Marcum. "Getting into Cincinnati is good. Virginia Tech will be a strong program, for the league."

The conference will be split into a two-division format. In the East will be Massachusetts, Fordham, Rhode Island, St. Bonaventure, St. Joseph's and Temple, with the West consisting of Dayton, Duquesne, George Washington, LaSalle, Virginia Tech and Xavier.

"This is an exciting time in the Atlantic 10," said commissioner Linda Bruno. "The Atlantic 10 is now the strongest it has ever been and will continue to get stronger everyday."

• The addition of LaSalle's field hockey program to the A- 10 will allow an alum to come home. LaSalle coach Kathy Deangelis spent her playing days at UMass and is excited about the chance to return and face her former team.

"I'm very excited to be coming back to the spot where I was a player and an assistant coach," said Deangelis, who is pleased that the team is still playing at Totman Field. "I'm excited that we're playing on the grass at Totman. It's going to bring back some awesome memories."

More important for Deangelis is what she feels the conference affiliation will do for her program.

"This is an excellent move," she said. "I think it will help popularize LaSalle's field hockey program. We're really hoping that this will help promote LaSalle."

UMass coach Megan Donnelly said that Deangelis' affiliation to Massachusetts will help create another strong conference rivalry.

"Kathy D. is an alum and she's going to have them fired up for this game," Donnelly said. "This is going to be as good a rivalry as all of the other A-10 schools."

• Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy looked at the new additions as a mixed bag.

"I just don't like that we added so many so fast," Rudy said. "The thing I really like is the fact that the Athletic director Elaine Sortino stood up for women's soccer and put us in

Turn to A-10, page D15

Pistons draft Roe

COLLEGIAN FILE

Despite size questions, the Detroit Pistons felt that Lou Roe was too good to pass up at No. 30.

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts basketball program it was a milestone, but that didn't stop Lou Roe from being disappointed.

Roe, who finished his career at Massachusetts last season, was drafted by the Detroit Pistons as the first pick of the second round (30th overall) in the 1995 NBA Draft.

He capped his collegiate career with a stellar senior season in which he led the Minutemen in scoring and rebounding. That performance, in combination with his work ethic and heart, made many experts believe that Roe would be picked some time late in the first round. With a rookie salary cap appearing to be a lock in the future, underclassmen declared the eligibility for the draft in droves, forcing Roe deeper into the draft.

Following the season however, Roe's stock began to fall as he fell into the dreaded "man without a position" trap. At 6-foot-6 1/2-inch, 222 pounds, many scouts believed that Roe was a small forward with a power forward's mentality. The Pistons are expected to try to convert Roe into a small forward, with an expanded perimeter game.

"I think they want me to play behind Grant Hill," Roe said. "They're not really sure, but I'll find a place to play."

Roe has hung his hat on proving the doubters wrong throughout his career and plans on continuing to do that in the NBA.

"I've been a guy people have always doubted," Roe said. "This just makes me hungrier than I already was."

Roe watched the draft from a conference room in the Trump Plaza Hotel in Atlantic City accompanied by his agent Ed Lawson, family, friends and several members of the media.

Both Lawson and Roe felt that Detroit appeared to be a good fit for the 1995 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year.

"I think Detroit is a good situation for him," Lawson said.

"This team supports me a lot and obviously they feel good about their decision," Roe said.

The current NBA lockout has kept Roe from being able to work out with his new team. The work stoppage has terminated the usual rookie camps and barred settlements, and threatens the November start of the regular season. However, Roe has not ruled out possibly playing in Europe.

Former Collegian staff member Arthur C. Stapleton Jr. contributed to this article.

Richard F. Garber still without turf

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

After the last season's final home field hockey game, Megan Donnelly cut herself a piece of sod out of Totman Field.

She's going to have to put it back.

Donnelly took the piece as a souvenir, because the game was supposed to be the last at Totman. Massachusetts' Gov. Bill Weld introduced a bill to the state legislature that would provide money to benefit women's athletics at all three University of Massachusetts' campuses in hopes of meeting and exceeding regulations imposed by the Title IX gender equity laws.

The Amherst Campus was targeted to get improved locker rooms, an astroturf surface and lights at Richard F. Garber Field, a renovated softball facility, and new shells, motors, and launches for the women's crew team.

The bill was expected to pass in time to have the turf ready for the 1995 fall season.

It didn't happen.

The bill passed in the House of Representatives, but has yet to draw a vote in the Senate. The bill is expected to be one of the first that the Senate looks at in the upcoming session.

Massachusetts athletic director Bob Marcum expects good results.

"We're now waiting for the Senate ways and means committee to act on the bill. The House looked at it very positively, so I would expect the Senate to be similar," Marcum said.

"Anytime you're dealing with facilities, it's going to take time. The most important thing is the end result, and I think we're going to have a positive one."

If the Senate passes the bill quickly, it is still possible that the turf could be ready for lacrosse season.

While the turf remains tangled in bureaucracy, the Minutewomen will return to the grass of Totman Field. The Atlantic 10 Field Hockey Tournament, which was also scheduled to be played at UMass has also been moved to Temple, because tournament regulations require a turf site.

Senior defender Andrea Cabral expressed frustration at the lack of turf.

"I would have liked to have turf, because it's a disadvantage not to," Cabral said.

The lack of turf has long been an issue at UMass, specifically in regards to field hockey and lacrosse.

Artificial surfaces are prevalent throughout most of the top programs in Division I field hockey. Some teams have avoided putting UMass on their schedule, because of the lack of turf. Last season, UMass had to play two would-be home games at neutral sites (Westfield State and Boston College), because their opponents refused to face the Minutewomen on grass. In anticipation of the new surface, the coaching staff has begun to recruit players whose skills are more geared toward a turf game as well.

Turf's main advantage for lacrosse

Turn to TURF, page D15

COLLEGIAN FILE

The men's lacrosse team would be able to extend its season and improve preseason practice conditions with the addition of turf.

Fans need action, not disagreements

Justin Smith

Who do you cheer for when no one is playing?

Chances are if you follow a sport closely, that favorite team to root for has had either an abbreviated season or some sort of work stoppage in the past year. Since August 12, 1994, three of the four major professional sports have either been on strike or had a lockout.

After the completion of this past season, the NBA became the latest sport to cease operation. No games have been effected as of yet and if they learn from the mistakes made by other professional leagues, they can avoid the cold shoulder given by the fans, which baseball and hockey teams have had to endure.

Major League Baseball was on a strike for nearly eight months and the National Hockey League players were locked out for nearly five months. Both sports have had to work hard to get their fans back, because of all that was lost over the past year. The 1994 baseball season can be all but washed away. For the first time since 1904 there was no World Series Champion.

San Francisco's Matt Williams was giving serious chase to Roger Maris' record of 61 home runs in a season. He had 43 homers with almost two months left. Giants fans reluctantly had to stop counting.

Don Mattingly and the New York Yankees were running away with the American League East. Finally the man whose sport was his nickname, Donny Baseball, was going to get a taste of the post-season. Then came the strike. Now he may never get the chance. Bronx Bomber fans were bummed.

After the New York Rangers edged the Vancouver Canucks in the seventh game to win their first Stanley Cup in 54 years, the entire post-season was dubbed as one of the most exciting ever. The league was at its most marketable, especially to American fans who often looked on hockey as basketball's little sister. Interest was at its peak and the 1994-95 season was set to improve on the past year.

It came within days of not even happening. After the two sports settled their disputes, the big question was would the fans take them back after all that was lost?

Answer: In moderation.

Baseball has suffered the wrath of its fans the most. It's the national pastime and the strike had tarnished its relationship with the working class fan. Hockey suffered a similar struggle with its fans. The turnstiles in American hockey cities were operating at the same rate, but it was a different story north of the border.

Hockey is to Canadians as baseball is to Americans; and like baseball fans, Canadians showed their displeasure as attendance plummeted almost 50 percent when hockey returned to the country of the Maple leaf.

Promotions have been commonplace in Major League ballparks this year. Kansas City opened its gates to

Turn to FANS, page D15

■ Fans

continued from page D14

the fans for the first series of the season to ease the pain and avoid a boycott of the Royals by its hometown loyalists. The most creative promotion has been from the Mariners organization: "Jay Buhner Night." Admission was free if you shaved your head to emulate the Seattle rightfielder. They filled entire sections of the Kingdome with people that would make Sy Sperling drool. The only way to win back your fans is to be a winner. Attendance is down in all major league ballparks except Boston, Cleveland and Colorado.

• Though they were threatening to depart for the hockey hotbed of Nashville, the New Jersey Devils brought their fans to the Brendan Byrne Arena to watch them skate off with hockey's Holy Grail. In Detroit, they were paying top dollar for octopi, just to toss those slimy, eight-legged delicacies on the ice at Joe Louis Arena, in hopes it would bring the longest current drought without a Red Wing Stanley Cup to an end.

The only way the owners and players can accommodate their extraordinary pay stubs, is to keep the fans coming through the gates, which happens at a swifter pace when teams are winning games. So, to these sports I leave the words of Oakland Raider's owner Al Davis, "Just win, baby."

And they can't win if they don't play.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian staff member.

■ Tennis

continued from page D11

UConn, New Hampshire and Vermont. Dixon has a lot of confidence in her starting line-up.

"We have a lot of depth from our returning players, and we've added a superb No. 1," Dixon said. "With the freshmen it's hard to tell. I have no line-up in mind and only nine days to get ready. But all 12 could be starters at any other schools," Dixon said.

The women's team is a stronger and more mature one this year, as the 1994 squad was mainly freshman.

"Last year, we lost four matches by one point. We lost every close one. I hope that we'll win those this year. That'll show how we've matured."

Five of last year's starters were freshman and now are experienced sophomores. Dixon had high expectations for last year's team and hopes that they will step up a level this coming year. "Last year, we finished higher than any women's team in UMass history," Dixon said. "We [placed] second at New Englands last year. Our goal is to win New Englands this fall."

Dixon's team will be lead by the well-rounded talents of No. 1 singles player Liesl Sitton. "She is the greatest female player UMass has ever seen, for sure," Dixon said.

Sitton has lost only six games so far in her three year UMass career. In addition to her singles success, Dixon has called Sitton the "best doubles player in New England."

Noelle Orsini, who Dixon will be looking to for better concentration and better performance as a sophomore, will also be returning. Caroline Steele will return as the No. 1 doubles playing partner and Dixon looks for her to step up her game.

Co-captain Liz Durant will be the foundation for the No. 2 doubles pair. Dixon said that she had a great fall season last year, winning New England's in her division. Lana Gorodetskaya will hold No. 3 doubles and will be better this year as a result of more match play. Amy Sidran played sporadically at singles and doubles last year and will hold on to that role, according to Dixon. She has added two recruits to the fall roster, Jackie Braunstein from Florida and Marie Christine Caron of Quebec.

"Both were recruited for their athletic ability and doubles expertise," Dixon said. "We've been weak in No. 2 and No. 3 doubles and it's been our downfall. These two will give us much added strength at the No. 2 and 3 doubles and who's going to win will all come down to those spots."

The toughest matches on the women's schedule include Providence, Army, UConn and Rutgers.

Due to a new NCAA rule, these teams are restricted from holding organized pre-season practices, according to Dixon. This year, she was forced to watch tapes of her new players' abilities, rather than see them in person.

But Dixon is still optimistic about the first match against Boston University.

"No preseason is tough," Dixon said. "I've written letters to tell them to be fit, telling them to run three miles and do X amount of push-ups and sit-ups. I've told the freshmen that if they come back ready to play, they will get a chance."

■ A-10

continued from page D14

divisions. If we had to play everybody then our schedule would be so weak we wouldn't have had a much of a chance to make the post-season. The way it is now we get to play four and can play a good non-conference schedule as well."

• In men's cross country, perennial power West Virginia will be missed, but according to UMass coach Ken O'Brien, Virginia Tech will be an adequate replacement.

"We lose the team that is always the one to beat in West Virginia, but they are in effect replaced by Virginia Tech, a team that finished in the top 20 last year," said O'Brien, who added that LaSalle would also be a good addition. "LaSalle is just like us and St. Joe's. Always contending and dangerous if everything comes together."

• With perennial powerhouse Rutgers out of the picture, UMass becomes one of the favorites to capture the men's soccer crown.

With only four playoff spots available, Massachusetts coach Sam Koch expects the conference to become even more competitive.

"You have 12 teams and just four spots in the playoffs. VT, we'll find out how good they are, Xavier is one of the favorite teams, and we play there," Koch said. "We lost a premier team in Rutgers. They've been a Final Four team and they're always a top 20 team. To lose them doesn't help the league at all, but other teams have really stepped it up. URI is going to be a very tough team. GW is a very talented team. Other teams are going to pick it up."

• The Atlantic 10 obviously did not have volleyball in mind. With the exception of Xavier (23-11), the new squads had a combined record of 35-95, for a winning percentage of .269 a year ago.

■ Turf

continued from page D14

is increased preparation and number of games. The often rainy/snowy weather of the early spring in New England makes grass fields unplayable, forcing a considerable portion of lacrosse's preseason practice to take place on parking lots and inside Boyden Gymnasium. An artificial surface would give the lacrosse squads a weather proof surface, that would also allow the teams to schedule home games earlier in the season as well.

Donnelly said that her team can't afford to dwell on the delay.

"We understand that things take time. It's not here and we can't worry about it," she said. "We're disappointed. We were hoping to get the turf, but the turf will be in."

While as a coach, the lack of turf is a negative, but as a former player at UMass, Donnelly is glad to get a chance to create a little more history on Totman Field.

"In a really stupid way, I'm kind of glad we're playing on Totman again," she said. "Because as an alum, I wasn't ready for that field to be gone."

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK 545-3500

24 Years of Servicing the connoisseur
Spirit Haus LIQUOR STORE
MICROBREW PIONEERS
Over 450 Beers
!!!!!! YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT !!!!!!
Beers from around the world!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Microbrewed Beer Kegs & Cold Plates In Stock
Easy Access From I-91 (Approx. 7 miles East on Rt. 9)
338 College Street, Rt. 9 East, Amherst, MA 01004
Since 1971 1-413-253-5384 VISA/MC/DISC
Open 9 am - 11 pm

Come Join . . .
New England Junior Hockey Club!
Try Out Dates:
September 9 & 10
9:00am - 12:00pm
UMass Practice Rink (413) 789-4566

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St./Rt.9
Open 7 Days 6am - 11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl Loaders: $1.50

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
indoor tennis & basketball
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• steps • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
Join now for a 13 week semester special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

Welcome Back To Mike's A Unique Bar With Great Prices Food & Fun
Mike's Westview
Starting Sept. 1st our Mike's Special Cocktail & Beers of The Week in our Mike's own cup at a super low price!
Monday Nite
At 9:00 Free Buffett
Come Watch Football With Us
Wednesday Nite
Raffel Nite
9-12
Mike's Tee Shirts & Caps
$100 worth of Mike's Mad Money
99¢ Nachos
Thursday Nite
Party Nite
Free Hourdoves
9:30-10:30
Entry Nite to our Customer of the Week Contest
Come see how to make it you.

THE BODY SHOP WILL OPEN SEPT. 13!!
In Totman Gym Rm. 8 &
The Brand New Center in Boyden 17!
Your Full Membership Includes . . .
TOTMAN ROOM 8
LifeFITNESS® STAIRCLIMBERS & STATIONARY BIKES
LANDICE® TREADMILLS
CONCEPT II® ROWERS
NORDICTRACK® Club 900 X-COUNTY SKIERS
ALL NEW POWERLINE® WEIGHT MACHINES
BOYDEN ROOM 17
COMPLETE SET OF FREE WEIGHTS &
LifeFITNESS® STAIRCLIMBERS & STATIONARY BIKES
LANDICE® TREADMILLS
CONCEPT II® ROWERS
NORDICTRACK® Club 900 X-COUNTRY SKIERS
THE NEW POWERLINE® APOLLO 4 MULTI-GYM
Use Both Facilities With Just One Membership!!
All Are Supervised By Qualified Staff
Your Cost
$55/Semester - $95/Year
Pay by Check, Money Order or Cash
Full refund policy in effect for 14 days with original receipt & membership sticker
To Avoid the Grand Opening Rush Come to the Boyden or Totman Shops Beginning the Week of September 6 to Preview the Shops and Join Up
For Those Who Have Already Joined During the Summer, Come To The Totman Body Shop Only, September 6 - 12 To Pick Up Your membership Sticker and Receipt
To Get Current Open Hours
Call The Body Shops At 545-6075

Field Hockey

Field hockey must overcome schedule, graduation

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Great teams win games, but great programs find ways to keep winning. Despite the loss of five key contributors from last year's squad (12–3–3), and a schedule that features all of the nation's top four teams in the preseason polls, Massachusetts field hockey is expecting another successful season.

"I think we have the potential for a good balanced team that can take on anybody," said second-year coach Megan Donnelly, who is pleased with her team so far. "They've come in at a good fitness level. They've obviously worked hard in the summer. They've done their part to be ready to go."

Offense

Scoring was the team's most glaring deficiency a year ago, and of the 26 goals that the team scored, 14 were scored by seniors Danielle Borges and Natalie Hart, leaving observers to wonder where the scoring will come from in 1995.

One potential answer is Kyle Rothenberger. The junior All-America candidate has a knack for scoring goals in big games, and with her hard shot, she may replace Hart as the team's primary option on penalty corners.

Powerful shots are an entity that Donnelly feels the team has an abundance of this year, which she expects so be an advantage on the penalty corner.

"We can hit the crap out of the ball this year," Donnelly said. "It's person after person. They're ripping the cover off the ball."

Outside of the penalty corners, Donnelly looks for several players to step up on offense.

"I think you'll see a lot of quick passes, instead of more solo attacks," Donnelly said. "This year the individuals will be a lot more invisible, and you'll see the team going on attack. I think we're going to see the scoring spread out a lot. I think it's going to be really balanced."

Senior co-captain Streya Volla is a probable starter, while sophomore Missy Sweeney's solid freshman season should translate into considerable playing time as well. Sharon Hughes, who redshirted last season due to mononucleosis, could be in the forward mix, but Donnelly said that Hughes' versatility could translate into action in at a variety of positions.

Freshmen Erica Johnston and Greenfield native Kate Putnam have been sharp in the preseason and will also get a chance to contribue and potentially crack the starting lineup.

Midfield

Rothenberger is a lock at the center midfielder, but the rest in uncertain. With the graduation of four-year starter Colleen Duffy and Amy Ott's conversion to sweeper, there will be plenty of playing time available in the midfielder. Senior Kerry Metelski and sophomore Courtney MacLean will probably both see time at forward as well as midfield. Jen Gutzman could figure into the mix here as well as on defense.

Defense

Much of the success that the UMass field hockey program has achieved over the years can be attributed to the tradition of excellence on defense. The 1995 unit expects to live up to the standards set by its predecessors despite losing three starters.

In goal will be junior Stacy Walker, who replaces Atlantic 10 Player-of-the-Year Hilary Rose. (See related story about Walker).

Walker will be backed up by walk-on freshman Theresa Thompson.

Senior Andrea Cabral will start for her third consecutive season, and Donnelly expects her to be a leader.

"Andrea is tough, gritty, and she's the one they look to for an example," Donnelly said.

Cabral will likely be joined by fellow returning starter Melanie Gore in the backfield. Sophomore Tiffany Clark, who stepped in admirably when Gore was injured during the A-10 tournament last year, appears to be the front runner to fill the center back position vacated by Kyri Sparks.

The is no way to replace the multi and diversely talented Hart, but Donnelly is confident that the team will be strong in the sweeper position.

Amy Ott, who split time between forward and midfield a year ago, was converted to sweeper by her summer coach and looks to be the leader at that spot.

After sitting out the 1994 campaign with a medical redshirt (torn anterior cruciate ligament) Gutzman has also returned to action, and will could get playing time at any of the defensive spots, and could play midfield as well.

Donnelly points to the speed of her defense as a major asset.

"We're going to have a faster defense this year," Donnelly said. "What we lack in experience, we're going to make up in speed."

Freshmen

Ask Donnelly about her freshman class, and she will immediately get excited.

Johnston and Putnam come in touted highly, after being heavily sought after as high school seniors. The two competed in the Olympic festival and have been solid in preseason. Donnelly considers both players offensive threats.

Laura Phelan, will attempt to follow not only in the UMass defensive tradition, but in family tradition. Her sister Kathy was a standout defender at UMass as well.

The most intriguing new comer may be Davis, Calif. native Katharine McClellan. Her height and hitting power could give her a tremendous presence on the field. Donnelly describes her as a "quick learner, with a great feel for the game."

Invited walk-ons Kim Lamson and Jana Benscoter will likely see limited playing time in 1995, but Donnelly considers them potential contributors in the future.

"I think the freshmen will step up," Donnelly said. "As a group, they have good experience, and have played during the summer. I think they are going to be part of a real strong nucleus over the next two or three years."

* * *

The Minutewomen will take on Boston College today at 3:30 p.m. at Totman Field. The team played New Hampshire in its season opener, but results were not available as of press time.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Senior captain Streya Volla will be one of several Minutewomen looking to step up on offense.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Kerry Metelski's ability to play forward and midfield will be useful to coach Megan Donnelly.

Sept.	3	NEW HAMPSHIRE	1:00P.M.
	6	BOSTON COLLEGE	3:30P.M.
	8	At Maryland	7:00 p.m.
	10	American at College Park Md.	1:00 p.m.
	15	Old Dominion at Chapel Hill N.C.	1:00 p.m.
	17	At North Caroline	1:00 p.m.
	20	At Yale	3:30 p.m.
	23	TEMPLE*	1:00 P.M.
	27	At Northeastern	3:30 p.m.
Oct.	1	Old Dominion at Storrs, Conn.	1:00 p.m.
	4	At Syracuse	3:30 p.m.
	8	James Madison at Phil., Pa.	1:00 p.m.
	11	At Boston University	7:00 p.m.
	14	PROVIDENCE	1:00 p.m.
	15	RHODE ISLAND*	1:00 p.m.
	21	CONNECTICUT	1:00 p.m.
	22	LA SALLE*	1:00 p.m.
	24	DARTMOUTH	3:30 p.m.
	28	At St. Joseph's*	1:00 p.m.
Nov	4-5	Atlantic 10 Championship at Philadelphia Pa
	8	NCAA First Round
	12	NCAA Quarterfinals
	18-19	NCAA Semifinals and Finals at Winston-Salem, N.C.

HOME GAMES IN BOLD
(Home games at Totman Field)
* denotes Atlantic 10 Conference Games

I think we have the potential for a good balanced team that can take on anybody
– Megan Donnelly

CANTONE'S PIZZA CO. 256-6100
7 days
4pm- 2am
FREE DELIVERY TO UMASS
Two CALZONES
Only $7.95
Or Three For Only $10.95
Prices Include Tax
Expires 9/30/95
256-6100

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
$5/Hr.
Fri., Sat. & Sun.
Unlimited Players!
$4/Hr. Weekdays
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
• All Sporting Events
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

ATTENTION
Anthony's
"Adult Entertainment with a Touch of Class"
Anthony's Welcomes Back Students Old and New . . .
Sept. 16th
Serena Lee
the Marilyn Monroe of the 90's but, 10 times Bigger where it's Better.
88GGG
You have to see Serena to believe. #1 Blonde
Special seating for 18 yr olds with proper ID
Mon Wed 4pm-2am
Thurs Sun 12pm-2am
500 New Ludlow Rd. So Hadley, MA
Rt. 91 No. to Mass. Pike East to Exit 5, Exit on Rt. 33 Right at Jiffy Lube, 1/4 Mile on Left

Field Hockey

Walker learns lessons from Rose, has the confidence to take over

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For Stacy Walker it has always been a mental battle, only this time she's winning.

After three years on the sidelines for the Massachusetts field hockey team, Walker, a redshirt junior, is the No. 1 goalkeeper.

It's a different Stacy Walker however. The goalie, who admits to a lack of confidence earlier in her career, is walking tall this season.

"I was sort of shaky, not very confident, not really sure about getting all the balls," Walker said of her early career. "I feel really strong, and really confident going in to this season. It doesn't even compare. I think I just relaxed."

Walker attributes some of that ability to focus and relax from what she learned from her predecessor.

Walker inherited the job last Spring, when then goalkeeper Hilary Rose found out that she would be leaving UMass to join the Great Britain National Team as it tries to qualify for the 1996 Olympics.

In addition to being a world class player, Rose was also skilled as a coach. In Walker's two years as her understudy, she learned a lot from Rose about her approach to the game.

"If anything, I've learned how to handle the mental battle. Once you win the battle with the mental game, it's amazing," Walker said. "Hilary has been like a big sister to me."

"Hilary is an excellent coach," UMass coach Megan Donnelly said. "The opportunity to see someone of her caliber day in and day out, would help anybody. I think it did a world of good for Stacy. She learned well, and now she's putting all those lessons to good use. She looks very good."

On the field, Rose helped Walker convert from a reactive goalie to one that dictates the play.

"Hilary is very aggressive. She'd challenge someone coming down, where as I used to be really reactive. What Hilary brought to me was she taught me how to be aggressive," Walker said. "She taught me how to use my mind against a forward, instead of just reacting to what they do."

While Walker learned a lot from Rose, the role of a back- up goaltender wasn't always easy.

"It's been a battle trying to keep it in perspective. It's not always easy being a back up goalie," Walker said. "It was a battle with myself thinking, 'Why am I not getting better,' even when I was. It's such a hard comparison to make, from a collegiate level athlete to someone like Hilary, on the international scene."

With Rose gone however, Walker will get the chance to put her new skills into practice. With freshman walk-on Theresa Thompson the only other netminder on the squad, the goaltending job is Walker's, for better or for worse, a fact that she is ignoring so far.

"I try not to keep that pressure in mind. So I haven't even thought about it," Walker said. "When people bring it up, I don't even talk about it."

Her coach, however, is completely comfortable with Walker.

"She's doing great," Donnelly said. "She looks very good. She looks really poised and settled. She looks more confident and strong than I've seen her. I think she's going to do fine."

Senior defender Andrea Cabral echoed her coaches sentiments.

"Stacy looks really good. She looks a lot stronger," Cabral said.

Walker feels her newfound confidence has given her team more faith in her.

"I think the team feels a little more confident with me now, with my mindset," she said.

That confidence is important, as goaltending and leadership go hand-in-hand.

"I think all the upperclassmen are leaders. Being a goalkeeper is different," Walker said. "You have to be stable. When they look to you, you need to be able to tell them what to do."

While Walker feels focused on the on-field task at hand, she says that field hockey has helped her keep the rest of her life in focus.

"Field hockey keeps me focused in everything. It's taught me loyalty and how to interact," said Walker who also admits to fitting into the "weird types play goalie" stereotype. "It's sort of crazy just to sit there when they shoot and hope that they shoot at you. But I love it. I really do."

In limited playing time, Walker has yet to give up a goal in her collegiate career. And she plans on doing what she can to keep that streak alive.

"I'll kill myself to get to a shot," she said.

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Junior goalkeeper Stacy Walker hopes to uphold the tradition of top notch goaltending at UMass.

Last year's snubbing hasn't been forgotten

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts field hockey team, the bitter taste still lingers. Although it isn't as strong as it was last November, when the NCAA snubbed them, it is still there.

After dropping a 1–0 heartbreaker to rival Temple in the finals of the Atlantic 10 tournament, the team prepared for the NCAA tourney. But when the field was announced, the Minutewomen (who had been nationally ranked No. 4 just two weeks before and had wins over both teams that eventually made the finals) were left out.

Massachusetts was a national title contender. The team knew it, but was forced to watch from the sidelines. The bad taste, brought on by the denial, will carry into the 1995 season.

Second year head coach Megan Donnelly said that while the issue is under the surface, it does exist in the back of peoples minds.

"We're mindful of what can happen, but I don't think it's something we need to talk about. It's there. It's inside of everybody, that's pretty obvious," she said. "It's not something that anybody is talking about, which is good. It focused us for the spring."

"We haven't talked about it, but it's all in the back of our minds that we don't want it to happen again," Andrea Cabral, senior defender, said. "It was a fluke. It shouldn't have happened, but we're not going to dwell on it."

The newfound focus is something Donnelly expects her squad to apply to every game.

"Maybe what we were lacking last year was a consistent level of performance," Donnelly said. "People realize that we can't take anything for granted. We learned last year that there isn't a lot we can control."

"I don't think I need to worry about focusing them for one game at a time. I think they are of that mind set.

"They want to give their best and show their best to everybody. We clearly didn't do that last year. Each game has it's own special significance. You could look at every game as something to prove," she continued.

Senior captain Streya Volla agreed with her coach.

"I think it's important that we take each game as it comes," Volla said.

This season's schedule commands that focus, as the list of opponents reads like a who's who of field hockey powers. Defending National Champion and preseason No. 1 James Madison, No. 2 North Carolina, No. 3 Connecticut and No. 4 Old Dominion (twice) will all face UMass.

Donnelly feels that unlike a year ago, she expects the team to be on a more even level throughout the season.

"Given what happened last year, I don't think that this team is going to go on the highs and lows that it did last year," Donnelly said.

Cabral contends that despite last year, UMass' reputation is intact.

"We're UMass, we're good. We know it. Everybody else knows it. That's all there is. We'll show it," she said.

INTERESTED IN MAKING EXTRA MONEY?

• There are jobs available working at the UMass Football Games this Fall. Job opportunities include: Ushers, Parking Attendants, Security, and Ticket Personnel.

• There will be a meeting held at 6:00 PM on Wednesday, September 6 at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

• You can work there events and still have another job on campus.

1995 UMASS FOOTBALL HOME SCHEDULE

Sept. 9	Richmond	1pm
Sept. 16	Holy Cross	1pm
Oct. 7	New Hampshire	1pm
Oct. 21	William & Mary	1pm
Oct. 28	Lehigh	1pm

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be type written with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine selection of new and used cars & trucks.
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check.
PAIGE'S Amherst Chevrolet Geo
DICKINSON ST. · BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST. · 253-3444 · PARTS LINE 253-3928

Get Your Hair Cut ON CAMPUS!
University Barbers
(across from the arcade)
Hours:
Weekdays
8am-4:45pm
Sat. 8am-1:45pm
No Appointment Necessary
549-0123

KRETE Pizza - Restaurant
RESTAURANT • BEER AND WINE
Free Delivery (Limited Area)
586-8255
331 Russell St./ Rte. 9, Hadley
Best in the Valley — One Topping Calzone $3.95
$1.00 Off ANY CALZONE
2 One Topping CALZONES $7.00
Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/95-KRETE 586-8255
One 14" MEDIUM cheese pizza and two cans of soda $4.50
w/ one topping only $6.50 or Two 14" Medium cheese Pizzas $9.99.
1 Topping $10.99/ 2 $11.99
Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/95-KRETE 586-8255
Large Cheese Pizza $5.99
W/ Two Toppings $8.99
or Large 18" Pizza and 3 cans of soda with one topping, only $8.49
Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/95-KRETE 586-8255

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

10% OFF SERVALL COUPON 10% OFF
★Desk Lamps ★Bookcases ★Keys ★Storage Boxes
SERVALL SUPER SPECIALTY STORE
366 King St.
Northampton, Ma.
584-2336
★Tools ★Locks ★Mini Blinds ★Paint
10% OFF Sale items excluded SERVALL COUPON Good thru 9/30/95 10% OFF

Volleyball

Nash, Anderson lead V-ball towards postseason

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

After coming off an impressive 28-7 campaign last year, the University of Massachusetts volleyball team is gearing up for another strong season.

The Minutewomen are basically the same team (they lost only one player from last year's roster) and are a better one because of it. UMass coach Bonnie Kenny feels that her squad's experience will make things a bit easier, as will her two incoming freshmen, Leslie Hartlen from Holden, Mass., and Katie Pearce from Seal Beach, Calif.

"Most of the girls have been together two years now," Kenny said. "Team unity and chemistry are going to be very important. You expect a lot more from juniors and seniors then you do from sophomores and freshmen."

With the maturity will come both higher expectations and a tougher schedule. Kenny realizes what her team's pre- season strengths and weaknesses are, and what it will take to have a successful season in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Dionne Nash, Giza Rivera, Lesley Nolan and Susan Maga comprise the outside hitters, a position Kenny feels is the team's strong point.

"We have four quality outside hitters here," Kenny said. "And they'll make each other better by pushing each other for playing time. Also, the fact that we have a full 12 people is another strength. The competition in practice has been a nice, unfamiliar flavor. It makes our drills as game-like as possible.

"As far as any weaknesses we have, I'd say that blocking is our main one. Also, our middle attack needs some work. But we have some time to work on our problems."

Cass Anderson who, much to UMass' liking, came back for a fifth year, and Pearce are the team's setters.

"We were really lucky to have Cass come back for a fifth year," Kenny said. "And as far as Katie goes, she has tremendous hands and can really deliver the ball well. I do think she has to get used to the intensity and work ethic at this level however. She could be a good setter and help us down the road."

UMass' middle blockers are junior Rachel Sky, sophomore Leigh Readey, sophomore Michelle Paciorek and Hartlen. Collectively, the group is a little inexperienced, but the potential is certainly there.

"Leslie Hartlen is going to be a great player," Kenny said. "She's in great shape, is easy to coach and is extremely versatile. Although she needs to learn the game at this level, she is the team's best athlete and is truly fun to watch."

Senior Beth Cabral and sophomore Maria Dueno will serve as the team's defensive specialists, coming in at key situations to help the team. Dueno is currently out with a back injury, but could return soon.

As for the schedule, Kenny intentionally set up some tough non-league matches to ready her team for league play. It will play Lafayette, Rider and Hofstra in the opening tournament, before flying over to California to play perennial Top 10 Cal-Santa Barbara, among others at the Santa Barbara tournament.

"To be successful, we're really going to need to pass the ball well," Kenny said. "Nolan, Nash, Rivera and Hartlen all hit the ball with some pretty good velocity, so it's important we pass well. We want to have three options every time we attack the ball. If we're not going to be as good of a blocking team as we like, we're going to need good ball control and backcourt defense.

"Our goals are to finish in the top two in the conference and make the A-10 Tournament Finals. We're definitely a better team than last year."

UMass would like nothing more than to be able to take part in the 1995 National Championships. UMass is the host University, as they will take place at the William D. Mullins Center in December.

Minutewomen notes: Cindy Gregory is Kenny's new assistant. Gregory was formerly the mens' and womens' head coach at Massachusetts' Institute of Technology. She has "great coaching and playing experience" according to Kenny. Gregory lead her women's team into the NCAA's championships in 1994 with a record of 26-7, she was named New England Women's Volleyball Association Coach of the Year. UMass' trainer is Joanna Franklin while the manager is Dorrit Schultz, also a roster hopeful.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts volleyball team hopes to continue to improve after an impressive second season last year.

Hofstra Tournament
Sept	1	vs. Lafayette	7:30 p.m.
	2	vs. Rider	12 p.m.
	2	vs. Hofstra	5 p.m.
Santa Barbara Tournament
	8	vs. Toledo	2 p.m.
	8	vs California-Santa Barbara	7 p.m.
	9	vs. TBA
UMass Invitational
	15	Syracuse vs. Brown	4:30 p.m.
	15	MICHIGAN	7 p.m.
	16	Syracuse vs. Michigan	10 a.m.
	16	BROWN	12 p.m.
	16	Michigan vs. Brown	3 p.m.
	16	SYRACUSE	5 p.m.
	20	CONNECTICUT at Mullins Center	7 p.m.
	22	at St. Bonaventure *	7 p.m.
	23	at Duquesne *	7 p.m.
	26	NORTHEASTERN	7 p.m.
	29	TEMPLE 	7 p.m.
	30	FORDHAM 	3 p.m.
	30	LA SALLE 	5 p.m.
Oct.	3	RHODE ISLAND 	7 p.m.
	6	at Virginia Tech *	7:30 p.m.
	7	at George Washington *	7:30 p.m.
	13	DAYTON 	7 p.m.
	14	XAVIER 	7 p.m.
	20	DUQUESNE 	7 p.m.
	21	ST. BONAVENTURE 	4 p.m.
	24	HARVARD	7 p.m.
	27	at Temple *	TBA
	27	at La Salle *	TBA
	28	at Fordham *	TBA
Nov.	1	at Boston College	7 p.m.
	3	GEORGE WASHINGTON 	7 p.m.
	4	VIRGINIA TECH 	7 p.m.
	10	at Xavier *	5 p.m.
	11	at Dayton *	1 p.m.
	16	at Rhode Island *	7 p.m.
	23-26	ATLANTIC 10 CHAMPIONSHIP
	29	NCAA (First Round)
Dec.	1-2	NCAA (Second Round)
	8-9	NCAA (Regionals)
	14-16	NCAA SEMIFINALS AND FINALS at Mullins Center

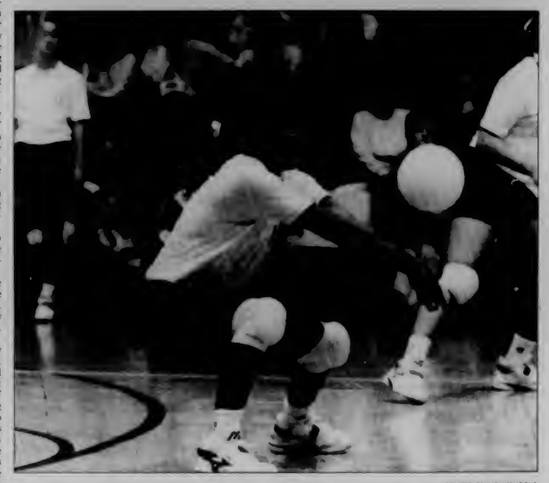
* ATLANTIC 10 CONFERENCE MATCH
HOME MATCHES PLAYED AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE

"Team unity and chemistry are going to be very important. You expect a lot more from juniors and seniors then you do from sophomores and freshmen."
–Bonnie Kenny



COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior outside hitter Dionne Nash will be looked upon to carry the team to the Alantic 10 Tournament Championship.

1995
NCAA Division I
Women's Volleyball Championship

Celebrating
100 Years
Of Volleyball

For ticket information
call (413) 545-0810

December 14 & 16, 1995
The Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts

1995 NCAA Women's Volleyball Championship Ticket Order Form

Name: _____
Address: _____
City: _____ St.: ___ Zip: _____
Day Phone: ( )_____
Evening Phone: ( )_____

Purchase Options
Make Checks Payable to: UMASS ATHLETICS
Credit Card (please check):
Visa ❑ Mastercard ❑ Discover ❑
Number:_____ Exp. Date:_____
Signature:_____

PACKAGE	PRICE	#	TOTAL
Two-Day Reserved Adult	$20.00
Two-Day Reserved Student	$16.00
Required Handling			$2.00
TOTAL AMOUNT DUE

Student tickets are for those 18 and under or anyone with a college ID.

Mail Orders to:
The Athletic Ticket Office
Curry Hichs Cage
Box 31820
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

Please Check if there is a need for Handicap seating ❑

SGA Senate Elections
will be held on
Wednesday, September 20, 1995
Pick up your nomination form in the SGA office
424 Student Union Building
before 5:00 p.m. on
Monday September 18, 1995
For more information please call 5-0341 or stop by 242 Student Union Building

The Magic Lantern
THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

Amateur Night
Wednesday, September 6
8:30 pm
Giveaways & Audience Participation
Come See The Top Amateurs From New England Compete For $500 Cash Prizes. Cash Door Prize $300.
Only 30 Minutes from the UMass Campus: Rte. 9 east, to Rte. 181 south, to Rte. 20 west for 1.5 miles
Open 6 days - Closed Sunday - 13 parts Lane, Belcher Rd., Rte. 20, Palmer, MA

Men's soccer

continued from page D4

a tremendous tradition. The Dons have a tremendous mystique. With Negoesco, you're going against a legend."

Sandwiched in between the two trips, but hardly overlooked, is UMass' Sept. 23 date with the Boston University Terriers at Garber Field. BU was ranked No. 1 for part of last season, and completed the regular season undefeated, but fell to Brown in the waning moments of their second-round NCAA playoff tilt. The Terriers enter 1995 as the consensus No. 1 team in New England. The Minutemen topped the Terriers at Garber two years ago and played a solid game at BU's Nickerson Field last year.

A road trip to New Hampshire, ranked fourth in New England, on Sept. 20 will be a good indication of how the Minutemen shape up in the region, and an excellent tune-up for their match against BU three days later.

Ranked third in New England, Dartmouth will venture to Garber on Oct. 18 in what is sure to be a thriller.

Both Soccer America and the Atlantic-10 coaches picked UMass to capture the title in the revamped conference. Rutgers and West Virginia have departed for the Big East and Virginia Tech, LaSalle, Fordham, Xavier and Dayton are all new faces on the conference schedule, while Duquesne has added a team for this year.

The regular season will be of the utmost importance as only four of the twelve teams will qualify for the A-10 Championships.

A season ago, it was second seeded Rutgers who topped the Minutemen to capture the conference title. Rutgers has a rich soccer history, an exceptional facility, and can claim U.S. International and Padova defender Alexi Lalas amongst its alums. But, while the conference will bid adieu to the Scarlet Knights, Koch expects to see other clubs step up to maintain the same high level of overall competition.

The regular season will be of the utmost importance as only four of the twelve teams will qualify for the A-10 Championships.

"We lost a premier team in Rutgers," Koch said. "They've been a Final Four team and they're always a top 20 team. To lose them doesn't help the league at all, but other teams have really stepped it up. URI is going to be a very tough team. GW is a very talented team. St. Joe's is a very tough team, with most of their players returning. So the A-10's are going to be tough, because other teams are going to pick it up and look for the limelight.

One team expected to make a tremendous improvement is St. Bonaventure. The Bonnies have hired a new athletic director and head coach, with the hopes of competing with the top teams in the A-10, and this will only contribute to a strengthened conference. St. Bonaventure might not compete for the title in 1995, but they will compete solidly in their league matches.

Whereas a premier team on the national level was lost in Rutgers, the A-10 will be tougher top to bottom with no teams to be overlooked.

"St. Bonaventure has a new coach and outlook on the sport as well, and you'll see a change in that team right away," Koch said. "When your last place team becomes a strong opponent, that strengthens the whole league and makes it a lot harder to be successful within the league."

The addition of a nationally respected Xavier side will also help offset the loss of Rutgers, while Virginia Tech could sneek into the playoff race as well.

The Minutemen opened both their season and conference schedule this past weekend against the Houkies and LaSalle, but results were not available as of press time. UMass will return to action this afternoon at 4 p.m. against Maine, ranked seventh in New England.

Sam Koch

Dave Siljanovski

"If we stay healthy, we can play up to our potential and definitely repeat, we have to stay healthy, focused and keep the intensity that we've had for the preseason, which has been solid."
—Sam Koch

Sept.	2	VIRGINIA TECH	1:30 p.m.
	3	LASALLE	1:30 p.m.
	6	MAINE	4:00 p.m.
	9	FORDHAM	1:00 p.m.
	12	SIENA	7:00 p.m.
	15	At Xavier*	6:00 p.m.
	17	At Dayton*	1:00 p.m.
	20	At New Hampshire	3:30 p.m.
	23	BOSTON UNIVERSITY	1:00 p.m.
	26	At Hartford	3:30 p.m.
	29	vs. San Francisco at Palo Alto Ca	1:00 p.m.
Oct.	1	vs. Stanford at Palo Alto Ca	7:00 p.m.
	6	DUQUESNE	3:30 p.m.
	6	GEORGE WASHINGTON	1:00 p.m.
	11	YALE	TBA
	14	At Saint Bonaventure*	1:00 p.m.
	18	DARTMOUTH	3:00 p.m.
	21	RHODE ISLAND	12:00 p.m.
	27	At St. Joseph's*	7:00 p.m.
	29	At Temple*	1:00 p.m.
Nov.	4-6	Atlantic 10 Tournament (site to be announced)	TBA

HOME GAMES IN BOLD
(Home matches played at Richard F. Garber Field)
 denotes Atlantic 10 Conference Games

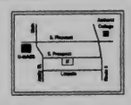
STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms and info 545-2693 545-0022

Flag Football (M/W/C)	9/19
Soccer (M/W)	9/19
Co-ed Softball	9/20
Ice Hockey (M/W)	9/28
Track & Cross Country (M/W)	9/28

LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS • BEST MACHINES
StairMasters, Treadmills, LifeSteps, NordicTrack, LifeCycle, Cybex UBE, LifeRower, Recumbents, VersaClimber
$139 4 MONTHS
Free weights, Treadwall, Grantron, Nautilus, Keiser, Step, Hi-Lo, Yoga, Lo Impact
NEW! VIRTUAL REALITY RECUMBENT BIKE NEW!
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 WEST ST SO. AMHERST 256-0080

Pizza Hut DELIVERY
CARRYOUT & DELIVERY MENU 253-3443
318 College Street, Amherst, MA
STUFFED CRUST PIZZA
Cheese is rolled into the edge of our new crust that's not too thick, and not too thin. Stuffed crust pizza available in large size only.
CHEESE OR ONE TOPPING $9.99
SPECIALTY PIZZA $12.99
SUPER SUPREME $13.99
Stuffed crust pizza available in large size only

STARTERS & BEVERAGES
BUFFALO WINGS Delicious chicken wings coated in mild or hot sauce.
Single (1:2) $4.00
Double (2:4) $7.50
Triple (3:6) $11.00
Party (4:8) $14.00
Party (6:0) $17.00
Served with bleu cheese upon request
BREADSTICKS Oven baked and sprinkled with flavorful seasonings. Served soft and hot with a tangy Italian tomato sauce.
Single Order (5 sticks) $1.99
Double Order (10 sticks) $3.99
SODA 2 Liters and cans available
Pepsi • Diet Pepsi • Mountain Dew
PERSONAL PAN PIZZA
Cheese or One Topping $2.49
Supreme $2.69
Additional Toppings 30¢
Pizza Hut
You'll love the stuff we're made of.™

SUPER DEALS!
BUY ANY SECOND PIZZA & SAVE
BUY ANY SECOND MEDIUM PIZZA JUST $5 MORE
BUY ANY SECOND LARGE PIZZA JUST $6 MORE
2nd pizza pricing applies only when you buy the first pizza at regular price and 2nd pizza is of equal or lesser value. 2nd pizza deal not valid on Personal Pan Pizza® or Bigfoot™ Pizza.
Limited Delivery Area.

DELICIOUS PIZZA
CREATE YOUR OWN
PAN America's favorite, baked golden brown in a special deep dish pan.
MEDIUM $7.99 LARGE $9.99
CHOOSE YOUR TOPPINGS
MEATS Pepperoni, Italian Sausage, Beef Topping, Ham, Bacon, Pork Topping, Meatball
VEGGIES Mushrooms, Onions, Green Peppers, Black Olives, Jalapeños, Pineapple, Extra Cheese
MEDIUM $1.39 LARGE $1.49
SPECIALTY PIZZAS
Our famous recipe pizzas loaded with more of what you love!
MEDIUM $11.49 LARGE $13.49
SUPREME. 6 tasty toppings: pepperoni, beef topping, pork topping, mushrooms, onions and green peppers.
MEAT LOVER'S® 6 delicious meats: pepperoni, beef topping, pork topping, Italian sausage, ham & bacon.
PEPPERONI LOVER'S® Layered with extra pepperoni plus extra cheese for more than one pepperoni in every bite!
VEGGIE LOVER'S® 5 scrumptious veggies: tomatoes, onions, green peppers, mushrooms and black olives; plus our delicious 3-cheese blend.
CHEESE LOVER'S PLUS® Your choice of 2 toppings accompanied by a blend of cheeses: Mozzarella, Monterey Jack, and Cheddar.
SUPER SUPREME
9 toppings feast: pepperoni, ham, Italian sausage, beef topping, pork topping, mushrooms onions, black olives, and green peppers.
MEDIUM $11.99 LARGE $13.99
FREE Delivery With A $7.50 Minimum Order. For guarantee, let us know within 24 Hours. Details at participating units. Refunds for dine-in and carryout given at unit. Prices are subject to change without notice. Taxes not included. ® and ™ designate registered trademarks and trademarks of Pizza Hut, Inc., except Pepsi, Diet Pepsi, and Mountain Dew are registered trademarks of Pepsi Co, Inc. Limited delivery area. ® 1995 Pizza Hut, Inc.

Bring Your Buddies To BIG BOY
AMHERST RD., SUNDERLAND • 548-9630
MON - FRI 4:00 - 10:00pm
SAT 12:00 - 10:00pm
SUN 12:00 - 9:00pm
And PIG OUT IN STYLE!!

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Genuine Draft" bots $8.99 case
Capt. Morgan Spiced $15.99 1.75 Liter
Bacardi Limon $8.99 750 ml
Evil Eye Ale $7.99 12/pk bots.
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"
Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter, Wheat & Octoberfest
Sam Adams - all flavors including Octoberfest
Harpoon- all flavors including Octoberfest
Black Dog Ale, Pale Ale, & Honey Raspberry
Brooklyn - Brown Ale & Lager
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Concha y Toro Wines $4.99 1.5 Liter
Hamm's Premium Beer $7.29 144 Cans
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Cross Country

Women open without Langevin

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

After a successful 1994 season, it appears that the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team will start their 1995 campaign the same way they closed their 1994 campaign — without Melissa Langevin, the 1994 Atlantic-10 Runner of the Year.

After a tumultuous season-ending fall that ended both her and her teammate's pursuit of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Championship, Langevin was forced to redshirt both indoor and outdoor track due to the injuries that she sustained. Langevin is expected to redshirt the upcoming season as well.

Langevin became the first Minutewoman ever to claim the A-10's Individual Championship. A Top 10 finish at the ECACs in Boston's Franklin Park would have likely qualified her for the NCAA Championships, her ultimate career ambition.

Langevin is currently "not ready to race" according to UMass coach Julie LaFreniere. LaFreniere will postpone any official decision concerning Langevin's season status until the end of September to allow Langevin as much time as possible to heal before the important invitationals in October.

Langevin might run in one early season meet to gauge her status, LaFreniere said.

"We'll most likely be without her, but for now she's still a big question mark. Whether she runs or not will make a huge difference for us."

Langevin has placed first in every race that she has completed as a Minutewoman, but should Langevin redshirt, sophomores Rebecca Donaghue and Katie Greenia will have to step forward and assume leadership roles.

Donaghue was an All Atlantic 10 selection last season and was named the conference's Rookie of the Week three times. Donaghue placed eighth overall at the A-10's, eighth at the New Englands and second overall for UMass at most meets.

After concluding a fantastic track season this past spring, that included a 4:29 finish in the 1,500 meters at the ECAC's, she trained hard all summer long. Donaghue has been sharp in several road races this summer and will be one of the Minutewomen's top runners.

Greenia returns to the team after redshirting 1994 with knee troubles. Greenia was second to Langevin in most races her freshman year, and after a year's hiatus, is eager to return to competition.

"She's healthy and ready to race," LaFreniere said. "She wants to race and is very hungry for it. Katie's quite excited to get back out there. Having her will make a big difference."

Susie Hitscherich will also help fill the void left in Langevin's wake. The incoming freshman from Yardley, Penn., is expected to follow Donaghue and Langevin as UMass' latest freshman sensation.

Hitscherich ran the Lehigh course in 18:20 last fall. Donaghue ran that course in 18:25.7, placing her sixteenth at last year's Paul Short Invitational.

Kristen Donaldson might be slower as the season opens as she acclimates herself to the "warmer" Amherst weather after a cool summer at her home in Anchorage inhibited her preseason training. Expect Donaldson to be a steady runner for the Minutewomen and add depth to the roster.

Jen Waeger will likely also join the team's top five and turn a few heads in the process. Christy Martin ran just 20 seconds behind Greenia in a July roadrace and should be a solid competitor. Molly Dunlap also has a legitimate chance of cracking the UMass lineup.

Still, how things will stack up for the season opener Saturday against Brown, New Hampshire and Maine, is dependant on Langevin's condition. Redshirting will not doom the team as Langevin and Greenia have two more years of eligibility remaining, while Donaghue has three and Hitscherich has four.

"It still won't be a horrible season," LaFreniere said. "It can still be alright. It won't be what I planned, but some of our best seasons have been by surprise. You just never know with athletics what can happen.

"We will be fine in the long run, and I anticipate us being even stronger the next couple of years."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior Katie Greenia (left) will be counted on to lead the women's cross country team this year.

Mens XC has high goals set

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Looking at last season, a young Massachusetts men's cross-country team attempts to make the step from the second best in the conference, to the top spot.

As deep as it was, the team needed more experience, which only comes with time, and a front runner, which comes with training, to develop the runner's talent further.

"I think our biggest problem has been the fact that we have had too much back-up strength and not enough up front strength," men's cross-country coach Ken O'Brien said. "There is no doubt we have enough guys to support the ones up front, but I didn't know who might come from that pack and move up to the front."

Towards the end of the '94 season, sophomores Matt Biel and Mike Macieko began to come to the forefront for the Minutemen and looks to become the leaders for the team this season.

"I've been training real hard in the off-season to prepare myself to be someone capable of taking over that role," Matt Biel said. "The races I have run over the summer have been good for me and my training is ahead of schedule from last year. I feel I will be able to step it up."

Mike Macieko shares his teammate's feelings on the need for a leader for their squad.

"We have been together as a team for awhile now, but we need that front runner," Macieko said. "I really can't say for the rest of the team, but I know that I would like to be a leader."

O'Brien is also looking to the pair to fill the only question mark on a formidable squad.

"Hopefully with the progress of Matt and Mike," he said, "we have solved the problem of a leader during our races."

In last year's A-10 Championships, Biel and Macieko finished seventh and ninth, respectively, and look to improve upon that mark. The team as a whole finished second to West Virginia, as they edged out third place St. Joseph's by just one point.

Entering the 1995 season, the squad is looking to make a major

Turn to CROSS COUNTRY, page D13

"We will be fine in the long run, and I anticipate us being even stronger the next couple of years."
–Julie LaFreniere

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Sept.	9	Brown, New Hampshire and Maine (at Thetford, Vt.)
	16	Connecticut and Maine (at Orono, Me.)
	23	Boston University and Vermont
Oct.	7	Paul Short Invitational (at Bethlehem, Pa.)
	21	New England Championship (at Boston, Ma.)
	28	Atlantic 10 Championships (at Pittsburgh, Pa.)
Nov.	11	ECAC Championship (at Boston, Ma.)

"Our goal each year is to win the A-10 Championships. We have a strong schedule and we will prepare ourselves to do so."
–Ken O'Brien

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Sept.	16	Boston College, Michigan, Northeastern and Iona (at Boston, Ma.) ..... 10 a.m.
	23	Vermont and Maine ..... 12 p.m.
Oct.	7	Paul Short Classic (at Lehigh, Pa.) ..... 10 a.m.
	13	New England Championship (at Boston, Ma) ..... 1 p.m.
	28	Atlantic 10 Championship (at Pittsburgh, Pa.) ..... 10 a.m.
Nov.	11	IC4A Championship (at Boston, Ma.) ..... 12 p.m.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m
Tel: 549-2692.

WELCOME TO SCOTT'S
WELCOME BACK TO GREAT SAVINGS!!

Quantity Discounts Available

Captain Morgan Spiced Rum
$16.99
1.75 Liter

Busch & Busch Light
24-12oz. Cans
$8.99 + Dep.

Zhenka Vodka
1.75 Liter
$8.99

Red dog & Ice House 1/2 Kegs
$39.99 + Dep.

Boones Original Wines
Three 750 ML BOTTS. FOR $6.00

Coors Light
30 Pack
$14.49 + Dep.

Red dog & Ice House
Wide Mouths
$13.99 + Dep.
24-16 oz. bott

CHECK OUT OUR OTHER GREAT IN STORE SPECIALS

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check

We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Rafters
Alumni Stadium
University Drive
SCOTTS
Victory Market X
Amity Street
Closest Package Store To Campus

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 2 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, September 7, 1995

Rolling with the times
The world's only roller skating/dance company will help kick off the Fine Arts Center 20th Anniversary celebration today (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Gimme' your dough
Students get a variety of choices where to stow their money. Find out which choice suits your needs. (See Local News, page 3)

Football selects starting quarterback
Sophomore Vito Campanile has been given the starting nod at quarterback for UMass' season opener on Saturday against Richmond (see Sports, page 12).

Forecast
Today, mostly sunny with a chance of thunderstorms late. Morning showers on Friday with much cooler temperatures leading into a mostly cloudy weekend.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 80 LOW: 72	HIGH: 65 LOW: 60	HIGH: 72 LOW: 65

Many students left homeless from housing fumble

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Sophomore Valerie Barkey has been forced to live in a Campus Center Hotel room with two other girls since she returned to the University of Massachusetts on Monday.

"Why am I getting bumped if I paid on time?" she asked when she found her room in Mackimmie Residence Hall occupied.

For the past week, Whitmore Administration Building has been overwhelmed by hundreds of students whose housing was inadvertently withdrawn over the summer.

A large number of students whose bills were paid did not receive housing due to an error. One housing source, who wanted to remain anonymous, attributes directly to former bursar Karen Shelley, who resigned from her position this summer.

Due to the office being closed today, employees in the Bursar's office were unavailable for comment today.

According to the source, a lot of uncashed checks from over 1,000 students remained on Shelley's desk on the due date for the payment of balances.

The source also said the Bursar's Office computer containing the incorrect information interfaced with the Housing Office computer, the students were withdrawn because the bills appeared to be unpaid.

"Even if they didn't pay on time, we are housing them for up to two weeks now," the source said. "We don't care now."

Another source in housing echoed the sentiment, saying the blame has been primarily placed on the wrong office.

"We're the ones who have to tell people they're out of housing, and it's not our fault," the second source said. "We did everything we could."

"A complicated system"

Paul Page, the vice-chancellor for administration and finance, said in actuality, blame should not be placed on any one individual, such as Shelley.

"What we're contending with is a [computer] system by which we operate various offices," he said.

Page referred to the Batch system currently used by Whitmore as "really antiquated and out-of-date."

According to Page, when the information of a student is given to an employee, the present system can take up to two days to process the data.

He also said he felt it was necessary to revise the way in which the various Whitmore offices are run.

"We have a complicated system with complicated interactions," Page said. "They don't function in an organized, coordinated manner."

Yet, despite the faults of these offices, Page said he is sympathetic to the travails of the employees in the past few days.

"It's not easy to stand there for eight hours a day looking out at all those students who don't understand what's going on," he said. "Employees from all offices have gone to extraordinary lengths."

Although he said he considered the Whitmore "1-800" help number devised this summer to help confused students a success, Page said he does not consider it a solution to a problem such as the present one.

However, he said having screened students working for the service about their administrative concerns will be a useful tool in the near future.

"[The 800 number] was kind of a band-aid," Page said. "It was just treating the symptoms."

Returning to dorms

On five separate occasions, Valerie Barkey has ventured to Whitmore in her attempts to rectify her situation, each time ending up back in the hotel.

"No one tells me anything," said Barkey, whose major is undecided. "I don't know what's going on."

If her housing in a dormitory is not secured by this morning, Barkey said she will lose her placement in one of her classes.

Assistant Director of Residential Support Gerald Quarles said Housing is working at an expedient pace to make sure that all displaced students receive a room as quickly as possible.

Quarles gave a figure for students without housing that was significantly less than that of the housing office source — 240 displaced students, which is only a 1.1 percent fluctuation from last year's figures.

Of those students, 78 are staying in the hotel, 136 are in dormitory lounges (or "swing spaces") and 26 are in out-of- service rooms, according to Quarles.

An "out-of-service" room, most of which are in the Southwest Residential Area, was defined by Quarles as a "less desirable, yet functional and usable" living space.

Although there still is no exact time by which the 240 students will all return to dorms, Quarles said the average individual will be housed in two to three weeks.

Also, he said that Housing will be paying close attention to their room "swap" board in order to offer further assistance.

Quarles speculated that a rise in the cost of off-campus housing, which would cause more students to remain on campus could be one of the primary factors in the overspill.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Josh Pearson, a sophomore business major, is one of many students temporarily situated in the Campus Center Hotel awaiting a permanent dorm assignment.

EWC looking for help to stop the violence

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

The Everywoman's Center is now accepting applications for its eight week counselor/advocate training program, which will begin Sept. 16.

Volunteers interested in becoming educated on issues surrounding violence against women will have the opportunity to become either a counselor or educator advocate this fall.

"We are looking for a mix of students and community members to participate in our programs, [because] we need a well balanced staff which will reflect the diverse community surrounding us," said Sage Freechild, the Counselor Advocate Program Coordinator for the Everywoman's Center.

As components of the Everywoman's Center, the Educator/Advocate and Counselor/Advocate Programs are committed to building an organization that reflects racial, cultural and ethnic diversity among women.

The Everywoman's Center Counselor/Advocate Program is committed to serving all survivors of violence against women in its varied forms of rape, battering, incest and sexual harassment.

"The Counselor/Advocate Program deals directly with victims on the telephone and even in the hospital," said Carol Wallace, director of the Everywoman's Center.

The Educator/Advocate Program offers workshops and training to campus and community groups on issues of violence against women, Wallace said.

"Our Educator/Advocate Program differs from our Counselor/Advocate Program because it deals specifically with community organizing rather than dealing directly with the victim," Wallace said.

Applicants for both the Counselor and Educator Advocate Programs are expected to have some awareness of the issues of violence against women.

According to Wallace, applicants should also exhibit the ability to adapt comfortably to the role of a counselor and must demonstrate the ability to speak well in front of groups and facilitate discussions.

All educator and counselor advocates are required to complete 60-hour training on violence against women and attend a weekly staff meeting every Thursday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The meetings will include workshop reviews, in-service training, community organizing sessions and team building activities.

Applications can be dropped off and picked up at the Everywoman's Center located in Wilder Hall.

For more information, call 545-5835.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

The Everywoman's Center staff evades the camera in the resource room on the second floor of Wilder Hall.

Drought victims honored on famine anniversary

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The 150th anniversary of the potato famine in Ireland will begin on Sept. 9, according to the University of Massachusetts professor Peggy O'Brien.

However, the anniversary is only being "celebrated" on this side of the Atlantic. The Irish in America celebrate their date of redemption because they were lucky to get out with their lives. Many Irish living in Ireland now see the anniversary as a time to remember the dead.

"In Ireland, there are a certain amount of people who are skeptical about the idea of an anniversary," O'Brien said. "The famine lasted over five years, rather than one and there were several other [droughts] in the decade, although this was the worst."

Before the famine, Ireland had a population of eight million people. After the 15-year blight only half of that number remained.

"Over one million people died, and another two million emigrated to America," O'Brien said. "Of course, to the Irish at home, there was almost no difference between the two."

O'Brien said that the activities to mark the anniversary in Ireland are very low key. A famine museum has been opened on an old estate where many people actually died.

"The mood over there now is skeptical about celebrating it," O'Brien said. "It's the act of celebrating any atrocious event. They want it commemorated in the right way."

O'Brien believes the debate about memorializing such a horrible time in the history of the Irish people is linked to other cultures, such as those in Judaic and African-American studies.

"The historians are very aware that their work is linked to traumas elsewhere in the world," O'Brien said.

Historians are in the process of going through the records of people who have died and those who immigrated. Since the famine only occurred a little more than a century ago, the research is slow.

"It is as recent as the Civil War in Black history," O'Brien said.

They are currently accounting the psychological damage done to the Irish people. However, Ireland is still fighting a war that began in 1690.

O'Brien believes the saddest part of the famine is the Irish blamed themselves, rather than the English absentee landlords who could have helped them.

There will be a series of lectures given over the academic year. Kevin Whelan, professor of Irish studies and a visiting lecturer from Ireland teaching at Boston College, will be leading a session in late November. Cormack O'Grada, an expert on the economic facts of the famine will also speak.

The irony of this particular anniversary is that Ireland is currently suffering from a drought, reminiscent of the one which killed the potato crops at the turn of the century.

There has been no rain fall in the country for the last three months. The lush green fields that Ireland is known for are now burnt. The government has instilled a water ban which prevents fields and crops from being watered, according to Irish farmers.

ROTC rookies get the rundown

By Robert Dunn
Collegian Staff

Volleyball, hamburgers and a paintball gun demonstration helped kick off the new semester for the University of Massachusetts Army ROTC cadets yesterday afternoon.

At the field across from the Southwest residential area, new and returning cadets were greeted by their advisors and presented with an outline of plans for the upcoming semester.

This was the first leadership lab held by the ROTC and served as an introduction for first year and prospective cadets, according to Cadet 1st Lt. Kathy Schnare.

Cadet Lt. Cmdr. Teresa Baker laid out the goals of the ROTC training program at UMass.

"Train you. Help you. Make sure you have fun," she said.

Professor of Military Science Lt. Col. Jerome Muldowney encouraged the crowd to have fun in the year ahead by taking part in all that the University has to offer.

He also pointed out to the cadets they were "still in college," and reminded them that they still had to keep up with their studies in addition

Turn to ROTC, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Sept. 7

Theater — Auditions: Equus, by Peter Schaffer, directed by Mary Whitehead, Hampshire College, 549-4600 ext. 2425

Theater — Auditions: Our Town, by Thornton Wilder, directed by Ed Golden, sign up outside Room 112, Fine Arts Center, 545-3490, Rand Theater 7:30 to 11 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Macbeth, directed by Caroline Prugh, and The Cradle Will Rock, by Michael Blitzstein, directed by Michael Birtwistle, 542-2411, Fayerweather Hall, Amherst College, 7 to 11 p.m.

Theater — MFA Directing Workshop: An Evening of One-Acts, sign up outside Room 112, Curtain Theater, FAC, 7 to 11 p.m.

Music — Auditions: The Five College Early Music Program, openings for singers and instrumentalists, 538-2079, Room 305, Sage Hall, Smith College, 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Special Event — Dedication celebration for Arts Council Adopt a Public Art Site (ACAPAS), free, UMass campus public art sites, 1 p.m.

Social — Latin American Cultural Center student and faculty social, Southside Room in Southwest, 7 p.m., refreshments will be served.

Meeting — Graduate Christian Fellowship, worship, bible study and prayer time, kick off meeting, Room 901, Campus Center, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 8

Theater — Auditions: Equus, by Peter Schaffer, directed by Mary Whitehead, HC, 549-4600 ext. 2425.

Theater — Auditions: Our Town, by Thornton Wilder, directed by Ed Golden, sign up outside Room 112, FAC, 545-3490, Rand Theater 7:30 to 11 p.m.

Theater — MFA Directing Workshop: An Evening of One-Acts, sign up outside Room 112, Curtain Theater, FAC, 7 to 11 p.m.

Theater — Callback auditions for Macbeth and The Cradle Will Rock, AC, 7 to 11 p.m.

Music — Auditions: The Five College Early Music Program, 538-2079, Bezanson Recital Hall, FAC, 3:45-4:45 pm, Music Building, HC, 11:15 a.m.

Community — Pre-Shabbat Yoga, 549-1710, Hillel House, 4:30 p.m.

Community — Shabbat Services, dinner following service, $4 for students, $6.50 for non-student, 549-1710, Hillel House, 6 p.m.

Community — The Shabbos Experience, celebration of the Shabbos, food, prayer, songs and stories, all welcome, 549- 4094, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Film — The Adventures of Priscilla: Queen of the Desert, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Film — The Shawshank Redemption, free, Chapin Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, 9 p.m.

Film — The Times of Harvey Milk, free, Mead, Stern Auditorium, AC, 9 p.m.

Notices

Heating Oil Savings — The Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative could help save money on home heating this winter. Contact the UMass Commuter Resource Center information, 545-1865, 428 Student Union.

■ ROTC

continued from page 1

to taking part in ROTC activities.

If prospective cadets do decide to keep up with the program, they will be eligible to participate in a repelling exercise called "Warrior Plunge" later this month. They will also take part in an "MS1 hike" and will receive an introduction to general Army knowledge including field training and tasks, Schnare said.

MS1 is the designation given to first-year cadets. Sophomore cadets are called MS2s, and so on.

Milton also took the opportunity to point out some of the cadets' accomplishments during the summer, including an outstanding performance by the Minuteman cadets at Advanced Camp 1995.

This year's Advanced Camp was held at Fort Bragg, N.C., and featured such events as a paintball competition and physical training exercises.

According to Milton, teams from UMass placed first and second in the paintball competition.

Schnare said yesterday's event was being used as a "recruitment tool" in order to create interest in the various ROTC programs.

"It's also a way to welcome back everyone from the summer," she said.

Campus Police Log

Friday, Sept. 1

License plate stolen from vehicle in Lot 33.

Court ordered restraining order received from individual.

Report of a telephone and a clock stolen from Flint Lab over the summer.

Andrew K. Isaac, 22, of 576 Lawrence St. in Lowell, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under a suspended license, as well as operation of a motor vehicle with tire tread depth violation.

Saturday, Sept. 2

Domestic incident resolved outside of Fine Arts Center.

Ping Jin, 26, of 990 N. Pleasant St., was arrested at North Village Apartments under the charge of violating domestic abuse laws.

Individual discovered a screen in Lincoln Apartments had been cut in an attempted break-in.

A marijuana odor was investigated in John Adams Hall.

An individual reportedly drove a vehicle on a pathway by Observatory Road.

A marijuana odor was investigated in Coolidge Hall.

Sunday, Sept. 3

Joseph E. Dapper, 30, of 30 Gates Lane in Worcester, was charged with speeding, operating under the influence of alcohol and driving in the wrong lane.

A rock was thrown through a window in the Fine Arts Center.

An individual reported $350 in cash stolen from John Q. Adams Hall.

Fumes from cars going through Southwest tunnel were checked by EH&S.

An individual with breathing difficulties was taken from Commonwealth Ave. to CDH by ambulance.

An individual on Kennedy Road reported $7 in cash stolen.

Vehicle struck bumper of another vehicle in Lot 22.

Monday, Sept. 4

Troy W. Renaud, 21, of Oak Hill Road in Greenfield, and Peter R. White, 19, of 389 Mohawk Trail in Greenfield, were arrested for stealing a lounge chair — larceny under $250.

A bicycle was reported stolen from a rack by Wheeler Hall.

A U-Haul truck struck the underpass at the Southwest Tunnel.

An intoxicated person at Pierpont Hall was taken to CDH, treated and released into the custody of the UMass Police Department.

A marijuana odor was investigated at John Adams Hall.

A UMass Officer, stung by a bee, was taken to the Health Services, treated and released.

An individual with a head laceration was taken to UMI by friends.

A bicycle was stolen at Prince Hall.

A vehicle backed into another vehicle at the Southwest Mall.

A container of gasoline was found near a dumpster, and was retrieved by EH&S.

An individual with injuries sustained from a fight which occurred downtown was taken to CDH by ambulance.

A beer bottle was thrown through a door at Brett Hall.

Be A Part Of New England's Largest Daily College Newspaper

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is currently looking to fill the fpllowing positions:

Editor in Chief
Black Affairs Editor
Jewish Affairs Editor
2 Staff Artists

Any undergraduate student interested in any of these positions can pick up an application at the Collegian offices located in the Campus Center Basement For more information call 545-3500

Correction

In yesterday's Collegian, the correct date for the series of international music and dance, part of the 25th anniversary celebration of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center is Sept. 19, not Sept. 9.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Photo Meeting
5 pm Friday
Pizza

Collegian Classifieds
They work!

JUNGLE RED SALON
(413) 549-1840
Haircut
Color
Perms
Nails
Lower Level, Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant / Amherst, MA 01002

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
From 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
• Monday - 10¢ Mazzorella Sticks
• Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
• Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4 lb. Popcorns Shrimp for 99¢
• Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Jumbo Drinks & Drafts
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews
Drink Specials
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.95
Charlie's tavern since 1978 AMHERST, MASS.
The Place Where Friends Meet
Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA • 549-5403
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 48" Big Screen T.V.* No Take Out in Food Specials * MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS
Basketball/ Volleyball Court FREE TO MEMBERS
Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes
Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmills • Life Cycle • Nordic Track
Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!
Group Discounts Get Your Friends Together And Save $$$
JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES 317 RUSSELL ST. * ROUTE 9 HADLEY 586-0633

EVERYBODY WINS
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Back To School SALE
Air Fly 64.99
CONVERSE One Star 24.99 30.00
50% OFF Socks! With Any Footwear Purchase!
NIKE AIR DVST8 74.99
NIKE Air Street Deke 59.99
RUSSELL ATHLETIC T-Shirts & Shorts $4.99 Ea.
LONG RIO SHORTS $12.99
JANSPORT Superbreak Backpack $19.99
HEAD STRONG BIKE HELMETS $9.99 Value To $25
Rollerblade Astroblade $89.99
Huge Selection Of Hats Starting At $9.99
Special Group Jackets YOUR CHOICE $59.99
Back To School Savings In Every Department!
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

~ LOCAL NEWS ~

Various banks accessible to UMass students

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

DAYMON SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

Marina Lupishko, a graduate student, checks out the free checking account at the Student Credit Union. This bank is one of many in the area that offers student packages.

After buying books, room decorations or beer, students may be in need of a place to put away the rest of their money.

In addition to the large banks are various smaller local banks and credit unions such as the UMass Student Federal Credit Union which is run solely by students and Bank of Western Massachusetts.

Some of the smaller local banks offer accounts with no fees, unlike the larger statewide institutions.

Both Shawmut and BayBank offer students Automated Teller Machines on campus in the Campus Center, as well as branches in downtown Amherst and through out the state. Both banks also offer 24 hour 800 phone assistant numbers.

The Bank of Western Massachusetts has a branch and an ATM in downtown Amherst, and they charge no fee for using certain ATM machines across the nation.

The student credit union currently does not offer students ATM service, but will in November, said Matthew McCabe, director of marketing.

Both large banks will be on the Campus Center Concourse through Friday afternoon providing students with information on their services. The student credit union will be in front of their office in the Student Union.

When choosing a bank, students should ask questions about the various accounts offered, said Sandra Sacco, vice president of Shawmut's Triangle Street branch in Amherst.

"When opening a bank account or checking account, students should try to determine what their needs will be," said BayBank spokesperson, Bruce Spitzer.

Both Spitzer and Sacco said students should compare annual and ATM fees, which the bank may charge customers.

No Frills Accounts

All four institutions offer varying basic accounts such as basic checking and basic savings.

Shawmut's basic checking costs $2.50 per month unless a student is under 19 than the fee is waived. Basic checking provides customers with unlimited Shawmut ATM use, but limits customers to 10 checks per month.

Shawmut waives the monthly fee if a student chooses direct deposit, which some area employers such as the University offer students, according to Sacco.

BayBank offers a basic checking account, as well. The fees on the BayBank basic checking are the same as on Shawmut's basic checking, but the restrictions are different.

BayBank's basic checking limits customers to only eight checks per month, and four BayBank ATM transactions per month. Each additional BayBank ATM transaction will cost $.75.

The UMass Student Credit Union offers students free checking and unlimited checks per month.

"Our checking works well with people who like to save," McCabe said. "With the credit union, students don't have to worry that money was taken out at the end of the month."

The Bank of Western Massachusetts also offers no fee checking as long as a customer maintains a monthly balance over $1000.

If the account falls below $1000, then the customer will be charged a $5 service fee, and $.35 for each transaction.

The Bank of Western Massachusetts checking account is a NOW account which bears an interest rate of 1.5 percent.

Both Shawmut and BayBank offer students ATM debit cards with their checking accounts. Both Shawmut's and BayBank's debit cards are acceptable at any location where Mastercard is accepted.

Sacco said a debit card is like a paperless checking account which allows a student to limit the number of checks written within a month.

Packages

For students who have more money to invest, both Shawmut and BayBank offer account packages.

Spitzer said BayBank's Student Value Package is a very popular program amongst most college students.

The Student Value Package offers students a checking account, a companion savings account, an ATM or debit Mastercard card, and the option of adding a BayBank credit card from Visa or Mastercard.

The BayBank credit card provides a student with a $300 credit limit, and incurs an annual fee of $21.

The value package costs $6 per month which is waived if a student is under 19. The value package also provides students who are over 18 with $250 overdraft protection. So if a student bounces a check, BayBank will cover it.

BayBank allows out of state students to waive fees during the summer months by freezing the accounts, a feature which Shawmut lacks.

Shawmut does not exclusively offer students a value package because "we do not discriminate," said Sacco.

Shawmut offers the public at large the Partnership Program.

Shawmut customers who deposit over $3000 in various accounts and maintain that balance of $3000 are eligible for the program.

The Partnership Program provides customers the option of tailoring the program to their needs. Customers can link savings, checking, certificates of deposit, and even retirement accounts in the program.

The program provides customers with unlimited free checking, free check reorders and unlimited Shawmut ATM use.

Shawmut provides Partnership Customers with a separate 800 number rather than the standard customers.

Sacco said the Shawmut and Fleet merger will not be complete until later this year, but she does not expect the merger to effect accounts until early next year.

She also said the accounts will probably not change dramatically after the merger is complete.

McCabe said students often do not have a large amount of money to manage, so accounts such as the Shawmut Partnership Program may be inappropriate when compared to the free services of the student credit union.

Tour offers alternative to student alcohol use

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The national Jeep/Eagle Collegiate Health and Fitness Tour, presented by Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (BACCHUS), will be at the University of Massachusetts today and tomorrow with 12 events to inspire healthier lifestyles among students.

BACCHUS is an organization of alcoholic awareness programs across the country. Tour Director Ken Gistedt dares students to come down to the events to "challenge themselves" and to get in shape.

"We want kids, when they have free time, to come down and have fun after class, rather than drinking a beer," Gistedt said.

The whole objective behind the tour is to get students to act responibly when drinking alcohol and to live a healthier lifestyle by exercising, said Gistedt.

"If they're going to drink, which we know they are, we want them to do it responsibly," Gistedt said. "Get a designated driver. Do it in moderation. You don't have to get smashed every time you go out."

The "Natural High" events include an artificial rock climbing wall, the Bungee Run Competition, a velcro fly wall, the Gladiator Joust and Bouncy Boxing, besides others.

Thanks to Sure Fit, there will be the "Ugliest Couch" contest, where students can voice just how ugly their couches are. The ugliest couch will receive a new couch cover.

There will also be an Interactive Alcohol IQ Test which will compare results with other schools across the nation.

Corporate sponsors include Jeep/Eagle, Plymouth, Sprint, Reebok, Hawaiian Tropic, Discover Card, Lipton Original Iced Tea, IBM and Clearly Canadian Water.

Gistedt said he is looking forward to the next two days on the UMass campus.

"We had a great time last year, even though it rained," Gistedt said. "The students were great and the people were super-nice. This is a gorgeous site for the event."

The events will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

DAYMON SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

The Jeep Eagle Health and Fitness Tour arrived yesterday with huge floats and games to promote health fitness and alcohol awareness for students and faculty at UMass.

The Collegian News Department is still looking for one associate news editor, write and make change to buy beer and pizza. See Chris Conner, News Editor, for more information. 113 Campus Center • 545-0719

No. 2
Hi, meet my pencil. I take it with me every day to the Mass. Daily Collegian, where I write lots of cool stories to put in my portfolio. This the best work experience I ever had – plus I don't need a pocket protector. Mass. Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-3500

CAN'T PASS UP THESE GREAT DEALS!!
LIQUORS 44
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
BUD & BUD LIGHT $13.49 + DEP CASE OF 24-16 OZ. BOTTLES
NEW WIDE MOUTH
ROLLING ROCK & LIGHT $12.99 + DEP CASE 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG $6.99 + DEP 12 PACK BOTTLES
BUSCH / BUSCH LIGHT $10.99 + DEP 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS
HORNSBY CIDER NEW $4.99 6 PACK BOTTLES
SARANAC $3.99 + DEP ALL FLAVORS 6 PACK
MOOSEHEAD $6.99 + DEP 12 PACK NR
KEYSTONE $8.49 + DEP LIGHT & ICE CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
½ KEGS $39.99 + DEP BUD, LT, ICE, MICHELOB, LT, DK ICEHOUSE & RED DOG, LITE
COKE, DIET COKE, SPRITE $2.99 12 PACK
CARLO ROSSI $6.99 ALL FLAVORS 4.0L
WINE OF THE MONTH
HICKORY RIDGE CHARDONNAY MERLOT 750ML SALE $3.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $2.49
SEBASTIANI COUNTRY WINE $6.99 CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, MERLOT, FUME BLANC, ZINFANDEL, PINOT NOIR 1.5L
BERINGER $3.99 WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML
FREIXENET CORDON $4.99 NEGRO BRUT 750 ML
BEL ARBORS $4.99 MERLOT 750 ML
BOONES WINES $1.99 ALL FLAVORS 750 ML
BACARDI RUM $13.99 LIGHT & DARK 1.75 LITER
JENKINS VODKA $6.49 1.75 LITER SALE $8.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $10.99 750 ML
JIM BEAM $12.29 1.75 LITER
FLEISCHMANNS GIN $8.49 1.75 LITER SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST
T.G.I.F. AUTHENTIC FROZEN DRINKS MUDSLIDES, ORANGE DREAM B52, PINA COLADA $10.49 1.75 LITER
DEWARS SCOTCH $24.99 1.75 LITER
GOLDSCHLAGER $13.99 750 ML
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/7/95 THRU WEDS. 9/13/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Cards Posters Earrings Candles Bracelets Chains Incense T-Shirts Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads Sweaters Dresses Area Rugs Socks Leather Sole Skirts Baskets Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th Fri 9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St Amherst-Carriage Shops

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Fleming Sports Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Position Vacant Staff Artist
Syed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Poppas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A grilled cheese made with love

Tim White

It might be too early to start thinking about this ... but it seems as soon as you get back to school, the holidays are just around the corner. So, I'm going to submit my Christmas wish list to the University early this year, just to give them a chance to get it together.

My first wish is simple: do something about the dining commons. The D.C.s had a bad semester last spring, starting off with the racial incident that ended in a protest, shutting the hall down for a day. That only added to the taste — or lack of — the food. Although I live off-campus now, my bowels have been through a workout for past three years and it's time there were some changes. The bottom line is the food is bad.

I was sitting next to a table last semester during lunch and a guy threw his sandwich on his tray. "You know," he said, "these grilled cheeses just aren't made with any love." He was right. How can you mess up a grilled cheese? Do something.

The second wish is a little drastic: get rid of the UMass President's office. It seems the office does more harm than good. Last year, former President Michael K. Hooker slipped up in an interview, rating the University system at about a C+. Many considered his little slip a factor in Governor William F. Weld's decision not to give the faculty its pay raise.

I realize that Hooker, who said he was staying for at least ten years, left to be chancellor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (look out UNC, I'm warning you now), but eliminating the office all together would probably save the University, and the state, a bundle of money and headaches.

Third: all I have to say is Whitmore. What a nightmare that place is. I think we should throw a big party, burn it to the ground, and then rebuild a whole new one. I suppose it's not the building itself, but what happens on the inside that makes it such a horrid place.

To be a little more specific on my wish — fix the damn phone system to the bursar's and financial aid offices. All of us have gone through the nightmare when we're innocently enjoying our break between semesters, and we get a cryptic letter saying there is a major problem with our "records" warning us to fix it, or die.

It also asks us to call the bursar's or financial aid office immediately. Do they have one person answering the phones for the thousands of students at UMass? It is impossible to get through. Hire some more people, or don't insult us with giving the phone number.

The fourth wish is something that has plagued this institution for years: administration has to change their method in dealing with racial incidents on campus. I don't know how many times someone has said to me, "So you go to UMass, huh? Got a kind of war going on up there, don'tcha?" No, we don't. The problem is that the media focuses on these incidents, and the University is lethargic about fixing these racially-motivated problems.

It seems they sit on their hands hoping it will go away. The administration has to be crystal clear on what they stand: zero tolerance toward racism and prejudice. Half of the incidents in the past could have been solved much faster if UMass just took a stand on something instead of trying to please everyone.

Fifth: hire an extra cop for the UMass police department, specifically to clean up the little "gifts" the horse patrol leaves for us on the sidewalk. I realize the equestrian police patrol is good public relations, but it is also bad PR when a visitor to the campus finds their foot in a mound of horse dung.

My final wish is directed toward Coach Cal and crew: play to the best of your ability. That does not mean we have to get to the Final Four or even the Sweet Sixteen. I have seen the best games of my entire life over the past three years, starting at the Curry Hicks Cage and now at the Mullins Center. All I ask is for the tradition to continue, not forgetting where this program has come from.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Death doesn't become her

Candice Flemming

A split second.

That's all it takes. One second you're alive, the next you're gone.

I've always heard people say, "you can't take anything for granted because everything you have can be gone in an instant." I always thought I didn't take things for granted and truly enjoyed life, until I almost died this summer.

I went with one of my roommates to a small quarry-like swimming area underneath a bridge. When I first saw the place, I thought it seemed dangerous. There was a rope hanging from the bridge that people were using to jump into the water. To reach the water, you had to swing over a bunch of rocks with a good grip on the rope so you wouldn't fall.

The whole time I was there, I watched all these people jumping in, having a great time. Yet, all I could think about was that I hoped I wouldn't see anyone slip from the rope and hurt themselves. At one point, my roommate was going to try it, but she changed her mind. After an hour of watching, my competitive juices began to flow. I wanted to try it and show everybody that I could do it.

I reached up to grab the rope. I couldn't get much of a grip, but I thought I could make up for it with a good jump. Everybody was watching me, so I couldn't change my mind. I was nervous, but I still wanted to do it.

Bad decision.

I jumped up, but because I didn't have a strong enough grip, I slipped and landed hard on the rocks below and slid down into the water. As I was falling, I was sure my head was going to hit the rocks. I was sure I was going to die.

Luckily, I just missed hitting my head on the rocks by inches. Inches.

Instead of my head hitting the rocks, my left leg hit them. The impact was extremely hard and I thought I had broke my leg. Somehow, all I had was a bruise the size of a squash which started to form not even 10 seconds after impact.

When I first came to the surface I laughed nervously. I didn't know what to say. I was shocked. Everyone around me was shocked too. One guy said to me with a freaked out look on his face, "I thought I was going to see your head cracked open."

I replied, "yeah, that was a real good move." My leg was throbbing as I stepped out of the water and it wasn't until then when I started to realize what had almost happened. I couldn't believe how close I came to death. I couldn't believe what I had almost lost. I thought of my family, my friends — everything that mattered to me most in life.

I wanted to cry, but I couldn't. I was still so shocked. I had such an eerie feeling in my stomach and I started to wonder why I didn't die. Was there a reason?

I've never been a spiritual or religious person, but I started to wonder if there was something in the world for me, if it just wasn't my time yet, because I was so damn lucky.

I started to get angry at myself for doing such a stupid thing, for making such a stupid choice. If I start to get down about something, I remind myself that there is no need for it because my life could be over in a flash. I've come to realize how precious life is and how quickly everything can be taken away from you.

It's such a cliche, but it's true. Once you almost lose everything you have, you appreciate everything so much more and realize what's really important. People sometimes tend, and I know I did, to forget how lucky they are to be alive and how fast everything can be gone.

Now I know how lucky I really am, and I can truly say I enjoy life — because I am alive.

Candice Flemming is a Collegian columnist.

It's a lot more than you know

Christine Lopes

What exactly is your Student Government Association? This is a question that has been on the minds of many. Finally, there is an answer.

The Student Government Association (SGA), is a representative governing organization for the undergraduate student body. I'm your elected President, Christine Lopes, and I want to take this opportunity to give you an idea of what this organization does for you and what it all means.

A year ago, students on this campus accomplished one of the greatest victories possible. The students worked hard and made the SGA one of the only recognized student governing bodies in the country.

To many, that may mean nothing, but it truly is something. Students have the power to not only suggest change, but make it themselves — changes that could effect the University for years to come. In the next year, the SGA plans on making changes and we plan on you being part of that.

The SGA is continuing a strong fight against tuition and fee increases in the next year. For the past two years the SGA has worked on getting an increase from the State House in our annual budget, in order to minimize the cost of attending UMass. And we did it.

With the help of faculty, staff, administration and others, the students have developed a lobbying force that is unbeatable. And this year is no different. We're working hard to make sure UMass is an affordable education and that the students are getting what they pay for.

The SGA has been working on developing a lobbying effort against the proposed cuts to Federal Financial Aid. With the hard work of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, the SGA has been able to work on efforts to not only keep the student body informed, but also involved in the fight against any cuts to Federal Financial Aid.

There are issues the student government plans on focusing on in the next year that are a little closer to home. Such issues include academic advising, food service, developing and producing a Course and Teacher Evaluation guide for the student body, the use of SAT scores for admissions, and voter registration.

This is my way of letting the student body know what we are doing and letting you decide what the SGA needs to do. The way to do that is become an active part of it. In the next few weeks there are going to be elections held for Senators.

If you want to be a part of all that's going on, please come to our office and get more information. This is how the SGA will do it's job best — by having you be part of it.

Last spring we brought you "Putting Student First" and now we are putting those promises into action. The SGA is going to make sure that it happens, but only if the students want it. The SGA is only as strong as the student body wants it to be. And I hope that you make it the strongest it's ever been.

Christine Lopes is SGA president.

Opinion/Editorial

By George, he was right

Andrew Bryce

"You know, Bryce, you've learned more this summer than you have in your whole life," my friend George said to me a couple of days before I left my good ol' hometown. I laughed at George, told him he talks out of his ass and proclaimed he really didn't know as much as he thought he did.

I then walked away after figuring out how George fixed the sink (George is a plumber and I occasionally accompany him to keep him company, though I usually just sit there and make fun of him, not paying attention to what he's doing), and looked back at him in disgust. When the smoke cleared and the clue filled my brain, the shocking truth was revealed to me.

That sonuvabitch was right.

It was not so much what I learned, but it was the various things in life that I experienced being away from school over the past three months. I honestly believed it involved gaining a little more than an ounce of maturity, though I haven't found it just yet. The experience I have gained in life in general may not be something I can actually visualize, but a person like George will notice that change in me and tell me about it.

First things first, though it may not be most important, is how I learned how to install a lawn sprinkler. George, the same self-proclaimed know-it-all plumber friend, also got me this job at the beginning of the summer. When he described the job to me at first, he said there was no digging, that a machine did all of the work.

Did I mention George was also a B.S.'er?

My hands became two full calluses as I dug trenches and holes five whole days each week. I had muscles in my hands by the time I was done. And I learned how to install the underground irrigation systems, which gave me a sense of pride. Sort of.

Of course, I also realized that even though I am a college student and think of myself as a fairly intelligent guy (my G.P.A. is unavailable at this time, though), there are many things I haven't the foggiest idea about. In other words, I was the anchor on the knowledge totem pole as far as lawn sprinklers were concerned. I asked more questions than the prosecution at the O.J. Simpson trial and received some nasty looks.

Yet, in time, even though I was the "stupid college kid," I learned what funny pipe was, what you use conduit, pipe for and which spots on a lawn entail a rotor or a spray head, among many other things involved in the sprinkler field.

That's not to mention how I discovered that if mosquitoes are bothering you while you're bangin' in heads (that's installing sprinkler heads to you youngins'), let them gather on one arm behind your head, and smack them collectively. So, in the process, I also learned that I really can outsmart a bunch of gnats. Ahhh yeah.

I prepared myself for having my own living arrangements over the last few months. I knew I was living in a house off-campus this year, so I readied myself for the experience. I didn't pay rent, but I managed to buy my own food and did scattered work around the house (though Mom won't admit it). As for the food bit, I did exactly what I wouldn't be able to do for the next two semesters — eat out everyday instead of grocery shopping. I learned that an average of five bucks a meal, two meals a day, equals very little money in wallet for school. So what I did I do a few days ago in my monumental first-ever shopping spree at Stop & Shop?

I spent $50.24.

I guess I thought buying 18 Ramen noodles at six for a buck and a 24-pack of peanut butter crackers was the way to go. Yet, I did realize I wasn't buying for an entire family, nor did I remember that this wasn't my only trip to the market of the semester. The only positive thing is if any hurricane, tornado or other storm comes to Amherst, you won't see me standing in line at the grocery store the day before it arrives. Suckers.

I went fishing for the first time this summer. You know what I learned? How to ask people to prepare my rod ... fishing rod, you pigs. I also realized I have absolutely no patience in trying to untangle a tangled up line. And catching a sunfish isn't worth taking a picture, my friends say with a disgusted Archie Bunker face.

Oh yeah, and I now comprehend that you shouldn't put 600 pounds of people into a 250-pound-capacity boat. If the propeller on you motor flies off, and you're in the middle of a reservoir on a boat with no oars just as the sun's going down, it's tough for George (yes, that same George) to pull the other 400 pounds of man to safety in the dark.

I bought a car this summer. A woman at my sister's work was selling her car because she was buying a new one. So her old one became mine — a 1981 Oldsmobile Cutlass Brougham. The car that probably tore it up when Blondie and Devo were hitting the top of the charts is now seeing it's last years. But, for $300, I couldn't go wrong. George, the man of the hour, wrote out a check on the spot.

Yet after I paid him back, I learned that my insurance was very high, getting the car on the road was costly and the brakes needed to be repaired. I figured out the brake problem when, as I reversed out of the driveway, the brakes gave out, and I spun around the neighbor's lawn before throwing down the emergency brake.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Article's focus misplaced

To the Editor:

This is in response to Mr. Ali Raza's article "Whose Promised Land" which appeared in yesterday's Collegian.

Not only was Mr. Raza's article misplaced, but it lacked the content to convince the most ignorant of readers. The writer divided his piece of mind into two awfully simple and see-through sections.

The first sounded more like a fourth grade history lesson and the second had what I call the historically and politically important non-facts which are continuously fed (with vengeance) into the minds of fundamentalist radicals — bombers somewhere in the Middle East.

Mr. Raza stresses the point that Israelis participate only in European events and resent being called Arabs. I would like to point out it was Israel's neighbors that have isolated it for decades with embargoes and travel restrictions. You do not shake hands with someone who steps on your foot.

I also find it difficult to understand why an industrialized nation like Israel is being made the subject of discussion in a section, while the economic and social problem of about a hundred developing nations are ignored? This itself shows the narrow mindedness or Mr. Raza, whose only motivation to write such articles seems to be the creation of a '70s- styled propaganda base at the Collegian.

My advise to Mr. Raza is he should start lobbying for an independent section in the paper from which he could voice his demands, regrets, threats and so on. Better still, start a pamphlet service which would better suit his pitiful literary merits.

Faisal Anseri
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encouroges letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

There will be a meeting for all Columnists and contributing writers on Sept. 10, at 2 p.m. Please meet at the Editorial/Opinion desk in the Collegian. If you have any questions or problems concerning the meeting, call Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

~ Preview ~

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

The world's only roller dance company, Steve Love and the New York Express Roller Dance Show, will entertain at the FAC today.

Roller skaters kick off semester

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The only roller dance company in the world will kick off the Fine Arts Center's year long 20th Anniversary Celebration. Steve Love and the New York Express Roller Dance Show will perform its Rockin' Roller Dance Show today at 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

World-renowned for original combination of precision dance, mime, acrobatics, hip-hop and juggling, the company members use a combination of in-line skates, which are better for speed and stunts, and traditional skates, which are easier for artistic spins.

There are many advantages to using roller skates on stage. Almost any space and surface is appropriate, and performers who draw on varied backgrounds of ballet, ice-skating and modern dance have learned advanced figure-skating jumps, such as axles and toe loops in limited space.

"Whether on traditional or in-line skates, wheels bring a unique third dimension to the modern dance stage," Love said in an interview at the Paramount Arts Center.

Love created the company in 1985, using his background of classical skating and dance as well as his accomplishments as a juggler and street-performer as inspiration.

"I was bored with my first roller rink experience," Love said. "I was seven years old and going around and around the rink was monotonous ... I just had to make it more interesting."

As a choreographer, Love has worked on numerous national commercials, including "Starburst" and "Cheerios," industrials for clients such as Sony and Coca Cola, and educational films for Time Life.

Love himself has appeared extensively in film and television, most recently hosting his own TV show, "Love on Wheels!" Other television credits include "The Today Show," an MTV station promotion and the 1991 Macy's Thanksgiving Parade. New York nightclub credits include Shout! and Sounds of Brazil.

In addition to performing, Love holds workshops and rehearsals at the Lezly Dance and Skate School in New York City. The school offers classes for people who want to study roller dance at all levels.

Following the performance, there will be a cake-cutting ceremony at 2:00 p.m.

The event takes place today at 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. and is free to the public. Due to a new ticket policy all Campus Center events are just $5 to all Five- College students.

~ Books ~

Douglas exposes nerds' lives

Horse whisper, fashion world revealed in book reviews

By Seema Gangatirkar &
Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

MICROSERFS
Douglas Coupland
Regan Books

Ever wonder the difference between a geek and a nerd? Well, Douglas Coupland's (Generation X) fourth novel will enlighten you on that question as well as answer any others one might have about the intimate lives of a computer programmer.

Meet Daniel Underwood and his friends who know they have no lives and are (ta da) computer programmers. They shop at Costco and describe themselves using seven computer-related "Jeopardy" categories (eg., Fortron, Pascal, C++, etc.). The merry band of programming men all work for Microsoft, putting in 14 hours a day reciting the mantra, "Bill is so smart. Bill is wise. Bill is kind. Bill is benevolent. Bill, be my friend ... please!"

Life changes scenery quickly from Seattle to San Francisco when one of the programmers, Michael, begins his own company and the rest of the self-proclaimed Microserfs join him. In the city of hills and trollies, the reader is then exposed to a numerous group conversations about phone numbers, politics, Prozac, "Melrose Place," feminism, Mary Tyler Moore and "Star Trek."

Mix these often riveting conversations with love, disaster and several more species of computer geeks with a few healthy jabs at Apple and IBM and you get a hilarious romp through the lives of a whole American subculture.

Microserfs is a funny and enlightening journey through life. While it quests for identity, it's also about friendship. In fact, Microserfs make geeks look positively cool. A+ (S.G.)

THE HORSE WHISPERER
Nicholas Evans
Delacorte

What do you do when your young daughter loses part of her leg in a riding accident that leaves your loved one angry and the hapless horse crazed? Well, for Annie it means taking both daughter (Gracie) and horse (Pilgrim) to Montana where the Horse Whisperer lives.

What is a horse whisperer? According to what Annie read, it is a person who can talk to troubled horses. So, dragging the belligerent daughter and the crazed steed, the mother, at her wits end, tries to meet up with Tom to heal the daughter and gentle the horse.

Romantic, tragic and windswept, Evan deals with the serious of relationships (daughter and horse, mother and trainer) with style and finesse, making the story predictable, yet soothing and engrossing. Of course, we know that happily ever after is bound to close off the ending, but sometimes you need some sugar to make things go down nice and easy. B (T.M.K.C)

FASHIONABLY LATE
Olivia Goldsmith
Harper Collins

The latest contribution by the best-selling author of The First Wives Club builds around the career of Karen Khan, the hottest new designer on 7th Ave.

It might seem to everyone who watches Karen's charmed life that she had everything she could possibly want (in addition to her career, she has two beautiful homes, a handsome husband, money and good friends). But what Karen wants most of all, and can't have, is a child.

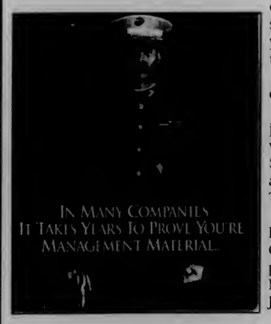
Infertile and with a husband who refuses to adopt, Karen soon finds her marriage on the rocks and the stress of a major business deal pulling her into depression. Unable to talk to anyone except her best friend, Defina, Karen throws herself into her work only realizing that there are more problems with her upcoming shows than she can handle.

Added to that is an insensitive mother, an overly ambitious sister and a search for a birth mother who gave her up for adoption at 3 1/2 years old. Believing that it will somehow fill up the void in her life, Karen is deceived and then finally betrayed by the people she loves most.

Fashionably Late is tedious — for example, six pages are devoted to Karen dressing herself and her philosophy on fashion is mentioned repeatedly.

Plus there is the gay friend, an uptight mother-in-law, an African-American friend, etc. that makes you wonder if Goldsmith is trying to be too character balanced and politically correct. There are also gross generalizations that offend some readers and leave others out cold. Even worse, the story doesn't even start to become interesting until the last hundred pages or so, but most readers won't get that far. C (S.G.)

HOW WAS YOUR SUMMER VACATION?



If you didn't get everything out of last summer that you wanted, if you didn't take steps to secure your path for your future, if you didn't challenge yourself to the fullest . . .

Then you probably should consider this opportunity.

Here's a six-week summer job that gives college credits, provides room and board, pays $1700, and leads to a job offer for a full-time MANAGEMENT POSITION after college.

It's called the Platoon Leaders Class, it's how the Marine Corps selects its officers and pilots, and it's open to FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, AND JUNIORS.

We are accepting a limited number of applicants for the summer of 1996.

SEE CAPT. PETERS ON SEPT. 13 AND 14 BETWEEN 10:00AM AND 2:00PM IN THE NEWMAN CENTER CAFETERIA.

For more information on opportunities offered by
MARINE OFFICER PROGRAMS
Call Captain Peters or master Sergeant Zahn
1-800-255-8762

From The Businesses of Greater Amherst

Come See What We Have For You!

Pick Up A Coupon-Filled Flyer At Any One of the Following Participating Businesses

- Bueno Y Sano
- Valley Bicycles
- Bananarama
- Modriar
- El Acuna
- Subway
- Always In Bloom
- Atticus Books
- Amherst Athletic club
- Raw Carrot
- Lots For Littles
- Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
- Karate Health Fitness Center
- Raos Coffee
- House of Walsh
- Matthew's Shoes
- Pinocchios
- Videos To Go
- Oasis
- A.J. Hastings

Dedications, celebrations at Adopted Public Sites

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Like the state Adopt a Highway program, the University of Massachusetts Arts Council has also created a way for UMass departments to get involved with the upkeep and beautification of the campus.

According to Marlene Housner, Program Director of the Arts Council, she thought of the Arts Council Adopt a Public Art Site (ACAPAS) when thinking about the state's highway program.

ACAPAS

"The celebration and ceremonies for the adopt a site began last January and February. I wanted it to be something like the roadside adopt a highway," Housner said. "The Arts Council wanted to extend their base of caring to other departments so I called some of them and the response was very enthusiastic."

Through ACAPAS, various UMass departments signed up to "adopt" different arts sites and projects around campus like the Coles Garden and the Civility mural.

Today, the Arts Council will be holding four separate dedications simultaneously, giving each participating department their official adoption papers.

"A lot is going on. It's also the 20th anniversary of the Fine Arts Center and as a department of FAC we want to take out parties of participants and join in," said Housner.

The dedications will begin at 1 p.m. with the Kiltie Bagpipers simultaneously playing at the William Smith Clark Memorial, Hampden Sculpture, the Helen Curtis Cole Commemorative Garden, the Civility Mural Courtyard and the Nodding Sculpture by Pondside.

"There will be two celebrations, one at 1 p.m. and one at 1:30 p.m. The first will be the outer dedications at the Maze, Hampden and Clark. [Assistant Programming Director] Sally O'Shea will be at Hampden. [Vice Chairman] Lynne Thompson will be at the Nodding," said Housner. "The second will be the inner sites."

Three departments receiving adoption certificates will be the Plant and Soil Department, the Art Department, the School of Nursing and the Stockbridge School.

"The Stockbridge School adopted Hampden Gardens. They plan to teach garden workshops. The Plant and Soil Department has the

Turn to ART page 7

~ Music ~

NRBQ to liven up stage at the Iron Horse

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

Dubbed "The Greatest Band Available to the Paying Public" by critics alike, NRBQ bring their rock and roll spontaneity to the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight.

While rock and roll is hardly a sufficient tag for the band, spontaneous is even more of an understatement. Covering most, if not all, of American music through blues, jazz, rockabilly and pop, NRBQ manipulate their diverse tastes into a sound all their own.

Performing live is another story, where set lists don't exist and "anything goes" is the total vibe. The fact that the band has been known to cover songs by Sun Ra, Johnny Cash and the Lovin' Spoonful gives a hint of how NRBQ is free- spirited and musically-inclined.

With a built reputation for their great on-stage performances, it's no surprise that the band is promoting their new live compilation, Honest Dollar (Rykodisc). Looking back on over 10 years of touring, the album contains such NRBQ standards as "Riding in My Car," "Wacky Tobacky" and "Green Lights," while supplying treats like Little Richard's "Lucille" and Fat Waller's "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie."

While Honest Dollar may be an apt representation of the band, tonight will prove what NRBQ are capable of in their live performances.

COURTESY ROBERTO ESPINOSA

Popa Chubby will play with NRBQ at the Iron Horse tonight at 7:00 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Also on the bill is up-and-coming OKeh recording artist Popa Chubby, who will open the show with his brand of blues rock.

NRBQ and Popa Chubby play the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight at 7 and 10 p.m. Doors open at 5:30 and 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 in advance and available at Tix Unlimited and the Northampton Box Office.

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

WANT TO RING OUR CHIMES?
The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee NEEDS VOLUNTEER RINGERS! We will train and teach you
Call KEN SAMONDS at 545-1077

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-12 am
DINNER SPECIALS
Save up to 30% OFF
Complete Dinners with your choice of Soup • Appetizer • Entree • Dessert
All For One Great Low Price!

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you're interested come on down to the Collegian offices!
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Sam Adams $4.99/six
Harpoon $4.99/six
Bass Ale $5.99/six
Bud 16 oz bottles $2.49/4 pack
Rolling Rock 12 pack bottles $6.99
Black Label 15 pack cans $4.99
Barcardi Limon $8.99 750 ml
Jack Daniels $11.99 750 ml
Jim Beam $12.49 1.75 liter
Gordon's Gin $6.99 750 ml plastic
Kahlua $12.29 750 ml
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
Fall back into the Saddle!
LOHA COLADAS
$2.75 PINA COLADAS
$3.00 TROPICAL DRINKS
And as always . . .
Home of the 18oz. Fruit margaritas
New Expanded Hours
Wed - Sat Catina Remains open until 1am with new late night menu

~ Review ~

Arlo Guthrie reopens Noho club

Famous folk singer performed at Iron Horse's opening show

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

ARLO GUTHRIE WITH ABE GUTHRIE
Iron Horse Music Hall
Sept. 5, 1995

NORTHAMPTON — It has been a long, dry summer for music fans in the Valley due to the shut down of the Iron Horse Music Hall in early June. For the last 15 years, it has been one of Northhampton's most prized possessions, as it brought world class musical talent to the area on a regular basis.

Tuesday night marked the grand re-opening of the club highlighted by a performance of folk legend Arlo Guthrie accompanied by his son, Abe. Before the show started, the new proprietor, Eric Suher greeted the sold-out crowd who gave him a roar of an applause. To add to the festivities, the mayor of Northhampton cut the symbolic red ribbon, marking the opening of the club. But as always it was the music that shined the brightest.

Wearing all black, Arlo Guthrie took the stage dressed more for a funcral than a grand re-opening celebration, but his mood was all joyous. Son of Woody Guthrie, America's most famed folk singer, Arlo has been following in his father's footsteps for the last 30 years. Arlo's sound is a cross between his father's and Bob Dylan's.

Playing acoustic guitar and harmonica, Guthrie displayed his talent as a musician as well as a songwriter. His son, Abe, helped out on background vocals and keyboard. The songs ranged from classic folk songs to tropical ballads and blues numbers.

Although musically entertaining, Arlo's greatest talent is amusing the crowd between songs. His jokes came non-stop and brought the crowd many a laugh. At one point, he even stopped a song half way through to tell more jokes.

Fortunately, Arlo's not letting his comical career go to waste as he recently wrote a book of poetry for children (it is actually illustrated by Alice, the star of Arlo's most famous song, "Alice's Restaurant.") As a preview to the book, Arlo shared one of his poems about moose, or as he says mooses.

As a songwriter, Arlo may never capture the brilliance of his father, but as an overall performer he is a world class act. Then again, that shouldn't come as a surprise since the Iron Horse is well known for bringing such acts to the Valley. Let's hope it doesn't close any time soon.

UM women's crew makes strides

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Crew is not for the faint of heart, just ask UMass women's crew coach Jim Dietz.

"It starts with stretching exercises at 5 a.m., and by sun-up the boat is in the water. For the next two hours, eight rowers and their coxswain seek a perfect blend of group precision and personal achievement," he said. "That's the mental rush of rowing — and the early morning goal is to reach beyond one's physical limits while keeping the shell moving steadily towards that unspoken dream of a national championship."

■ art

continued from page 6

Maze and they were so eager to adopt," said Housner. "They plan on using the site as an experiment and control site for different wildflowers."

Today's festivities will begin at 1:00 p.m., following the ceremonies the four groups will meet up at the Fine Arts Center to join in the cake-cutting ceremony at 2 p.m.

Dietz's squad finished its championship season with a bronze medal in the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta at Camden, N.J. on June 1-3. Finishing just behind Division I-A Ivy League standouts Cornell and Brown.

The Minutewomen were the only I-AA crew on the water. Following a number of successful regattas late in the season, such as the New England Rowing Championships and the Champion International Regatta, UMass shined in its first season as a varsity sport.

Over the summer, five women from UMass crew honed their skills by competing in the Pre-Elite Rowing camp, an accomplishment considered a pre-cursor for the Nationals. The five women competed in the American Rowing Championships in Syracuse, N.Y. under the Thames River Sculls. The crew's name dates back to 1987 when Dietz founded the program in New London, Conn., where he was head coach of the United States Coast Guard Academy crew program.

Minutewomen Deanna Groark and Wendy Wilbur won gold medals in the double event. Jen Strong received a bronze in the quad event and a gold in the senior eight competition, along with teammate Sarah Jones. Jones is competing for UMass this year, transferring from Santa Barbara, Calif. Rounding out the honors, Minutewomen Amy Kenny received gold, silver and bronze medals.

Returning from regattas with a wide array of medals is nothing new for the UMass crew and there are two new additions to the program. After playing a major role in leading the crew to a successful first season, former captain Wendy Wilbur returns this year as a graduate student and as an assistant to assistant coach Deanna Runeman. In addition, graduate student Jen Sacheck, a graduate of Syracuse University, will be heading up a new lightweight program this spring.

Dietz is looking for new rowers and coxswains to carry last year's success into the new year. Interested women should attend a meeting on Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium to find out how they can be a part of this growing UMass tradition.

THE WORLD OF ARTS & LIVING is by far the most interesting and exciting. So why not come down to 113 Campus Center and find out what it's all about. Ask for Tara, Laura, Mike or Seema and look for the new writer's meeting announcement.

Fall Bike Sale
HAHANNA $349.95
FIRE MOUNTAIN $399.95
LAVA DOME $499.95
CINDERCONE $625.00
KILAUEA $800.00
SEX ONE $975.00
EXPLOSIF $1249.95
Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St., (rear) • Greenfield 774-3701

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you're interested come on down to the Collegian offices!
113 Campus Center
545-3500

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

DISCOVERIES
RECORDS, TAPES, and CD's
New, Used and Collectible • We Buy, Sell, and Trade
Come visit us at: 101 Roundhouse Plaza, Crafts Ave.
Northampton, MA
(around the corner from Peter Pan Bus Terminal)
tel. (413) 582-9908
Receive $2 off any purchase of $20 or more with this coupon
Expires Oct. 31, 1995

Aerobics Instructor Training Program
Accredited by the American Council on Exercise, ACE
September 30-November 18 Saturdays, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. & Exam December 2
Preparation for the ACE exam, certificate earned, CPR training
Vicki Davey - ACE certified, 16 years' teaching experience and Gary Moore - ACE certified, associate professor UMass School of Public Health
For more information, call the UMass Division of Continuing Education, 413-545-2484 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
UMass Continuing Education celebrating 25 years of providing access to adult nontraditinal education

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT)

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT)
EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY "LIKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK!" WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.

Rocketman returns fans' confidence on the mound in 8-2 Oakland slam

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — If there ever was any doubt, it's gone now. Roger Clemens is still the ace of the Boston Red Sox pitching staff.

He had a season-high 10 strikeouts, allowed two hits after the first inning and won his fifth straight decision as Boston beat the Oakland Athletics 8-2 Wednesday night.

At the end of July, Clemens was 3-3 with a 5.81 ERA. Since then, he is 5-1 with a 2.06 ERA.

"I didn't lose any confidence when I felt I wasn't throwing the ball well," Clemens said. "I can't slip out there and just hide, whether I'm the ace, the stopper ... I recognize that role and I attained that a long time ago."

"He's getting stronger every time out," Boston's Mike Greenwell said. "It's just going to be a big plus for us going into the playoffs. We need that guy."

Boston's fifth straight win reduced its magic number for clinching the AL East to eight.

The Red Sox swept the two-game series, hurting Oakland's slim wild-card chances. The A's started the game in sixth place in the race, four games behind Kansas City. They have 21 games left. Oakland begins a 12-game homestand Friday night against the Chicago White Sox.

"If we lose our upcoming homestand, we are out of the race," Rickey Henderson said.

Clemens (8-4) allowed four hits and four walks in eight innings. Rheal Cormier finished up, giving up a run in the ninth.

Two of Oakland's first three batters got hits - a double by Rickey Henderson and a run-scoring single by Brent Gates. Then Clemens retired eight straight batters.

"If it was a low-scoring game, I thought we had a chance," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said, "but Clemens has been pitching real well and they've got a lot of offensive weapons."

Gates started the Oakland fourth with a walk and Geronimo Berroa singled, but Clemens struck out two of the next three batters and held the A's to one hit — Gates' eighth-inning single — in his last four innings.

Clemens had at least 10 strikeouts for the 60th time in his career, the first since he struck out 10 on July 4, 1994, against California.

Boston was 49-38 through Aug. 1 and is 27-7 beginning with Clemens' start on Aug. 2 when he pitched well but lost 5-0 to Detroit.

The Red Sox had 13 hits and tied the game on Greenwell's bases-loaded single in the first off Doug Johns (3-1). Willie McGee and Mo Vaughn added run-scoring singles in the second.

Tim Naehring led off the three-run third with a double and Bill Haselman walked and took second on Johns' third wild pitch of the game. Dwayne Hosey, claimed off waivers from Kansas City on Aug. 31, then doubled in two runs and scored on McGee's double, his third hit in three innings.

Boston made the score 8-1 in the fourth on Jose Canseco's leadoff double and Haselman's fifth homer.

Notes: Clemens moved into 29th place in career strikeouts with 2,312, passing Juan Marichal (2,303) and Rube Waddell (2,310). ... Canseco extended his hitting streak to nine games with a double high off the left-field wall that nearly left the ballpark. He has reached base in 26 straight games ... Haselman's homer was his third in his last four games. ... The A's had their fifth straight game without an error. ... Every Oakland starter except Mike Bordick and Terry Steinbach struck out. ... Clemens is 48-5 in games in which he's fanned at least 10.

Seles makes it happen after a close match

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — On the brink of dropping a set for the first time in her comeback, Monica Seles displayed the one trait that distinguishes her from all other players, that molded her into a champion, and that made her long absence so puzzling.

It was Seles' utter refusal to be beaten, to give up under any circumstances, that marked her eight Grand Slam title runs more than her strokes or style or stamina. It was why those who knew her believed she would come back sooner from her stabbing.

And it was that toughness that was all the difference Wednesday between her and Jana Novotna.

Seles reached the semifinals of the U.S. Open with a 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 victory over Novotna that turned on four pivotal points at the end of the first set when Novotna served with a 6-5, 40-15 lead. The way Seles played those points, the grit she showed while under pressure for the first time in 10 matches over two tournaments, may also be the determining factor when she plays Friday against Conchita Martinez, a 7-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 victory over Brenda Schultz-McCarthy.

In an even closer and much longer match, 1989 men's champion Boris Becker reached the semifinals by surviving the longest duel of the tournament - 4 hours, 7 minutes - against Patrick McEnroe, 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), 6-7 (7-3), 7-6 (8-6).

Becker, who closed the match with his 30th ace, will play defending champion Andre Agassi, a 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 7-5 winner over Petr Korda. Agassi clawed back from two breaks down at 1-4 in the fourth set, fought off two set-points at 4-5 and broke Korda again to score his 25th consecutive victory.

"Korda's a very streaky player," Agassi said. "You go out there and expect him to be inconsistent. I kind of thought he would go away after the first two sets. I didn't quite put the nail in the coffin.

"He got the break early in the third and that got his game going. Next thing you know you're in a dogfight. ... It should never have gotten to that point. Being from Vegas, I knew the odds weren't too good to win the fourth. But I didn't want it to go to the fifth."

Becker, who beat Agassi in the Wimbledon semis, could use the time off until Saturday's match after his long struggle with McEnroe.

"The fourth set was as tough a set as you can get," Becker said. "It just didn't seem to end. Something always would come up. Thank God, I kept my cool. ... Unfortunately, I never had a chance to play John [McEnroe] here at the Open, but his younger brother gave me more than a handful."

For McEnroe, the loss offered an important lesson.

"When it gets to be crunch time against a guy like Becker," he said, "you've got to really go for your shots and not hold anything back, not just hope he misses, because he is not going to miss."

Seles learned that lesson long ago, and when it was time for her to go for broke on key points, she didn't hesitate. Not so Novotna. Novotna and "choke" have become synonymous in tennis, starting with the Wimbledon final in 1993 and continuing through the French Open this year.

"I thought Jana might choke," Seles said. "I know she's done it before, so I knew there was a chance."

Novotna didn't choke this time, didn't panic and simply blow the match she's done before. But she witnessed, along with nearly 20,000 fans in the packed stadium in the heat of high noon, the way a true champion performs.

Going for her first set-point at 40-15, Novotna hit a hard, first serve that Seles ripped even harder with a forehand return down the line and into the corner for a winner.

"I was so mad at myself," said Seles, explaining why she slugged that ball so hard and took such a chance on set point. "I just went, wow, hit it."

That wowed the crowd and Novotna, who disconsolately stared at the spot where the ball landed.

"That is where Monica really showed up," Novotna said. "She didn't worry about it at all, what the score was, and just went for her shots."

Seles then upstaged that shot, ending a long rally by making a rare venture to the net and putting away her first volley with a deft forehand for deuce.

Novotna called that volley "very gutsy." Seles described it simply as "very nice."

For Seles, the best was yet to come. She reached break point on the next rally when Novotna drove a forehand long, an unforced error that once again exposed Novotna's weakness in a tight situation. But Novotna might have recovered from that if Seles weren't so gritty.

At break point, Novotna hit a superb backhand drop shot cross-court, angling it seemingly out of Seles' reach. But there Seles came, charging in from the baseline, running down the ball, and punching a forehand down the line that Novotna couldn't touch.

It was in that moment that Seles' refusal to be beaten was most evident, and fans who seemed to be holding their breath throughout the point let out an explosive roar.

Though a tiebreaker was yet to be played, and a second set still loomed, there wasn't a doubt at that moment that Seles would win. That feeling would be confirmed a few minutes later when Novotna sent a forehand sailing five feet long to give Seles the set.

"When I volleyed, that was a very long point," Seles said. "She gave back a very hard shot, and then I just hit this great volley. But she didn't choke. I never felt that, even in the tiebreaker.

"She is a cool cat. Maybe she needs a little bit more of the fire."

Seles, who served poorly and softly the first set, picked up the pace and accuracy of her serves in the second set to hold all the way through and keep the pressure on Novotna.

Seles, who again wore a black brace on her left knee for protection against tendinitis, asked for the first match of the day to give herself more time to recover for the semis. For a while, she thought she'd play Schultz-McCarthy, who served 11 aces in a tough match against Martinez.

"She serves like a man today," Martinez said of her 6-foot-2 opponent. "It was 130 mph, 105 mph second serves. It was not much I could do."

Interested in writing for
ARTS & LIVING
Come down to the Collegian and talk to Tara Sweeney. Call 545-1361 for more information

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigarettes
Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirt Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

Dance Stuff
220 N. Pleasant St. (Rear), Amherst, MA
For the Dancer, Gymnast, Fitness Minded
We have all supplies for dance majors
Fun Bodywear! Great Shoes!
253-5201

Business Desk
needs writers.
Call Matt Wurtzel at 545-3500 or come down to 113 Campus Center

Mike's Westview
[illegible] Night
16oz. Bud Ice Draft
65¢
COCKTAIL OF THE [illegible]
Vodka, Triple Sec & Pink Grape

September 7
artEventives
UMass Arts Council Present performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards
APAS

A !BagPiPing! Dedicated Celebration ...for the ADOPTion of six campus PUBLIC ART SITES [ACAPAS-Arts Council Adopt a Public Art Site]

They've Adopted!
Certification of Adoption Ceremonies will take place at each of the ACAPAS sites as BagPiPers from the Springfield Kiltie Band sound celebratory notes simultaneously at:

1:00
William Smith Clark Memorial (adopted by the Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning)
Hampden Sculpture Court (adopted by the Stockbridge School of Agriculture)
MAZE ReClaimed Site (adopted by the Department of Plant & Soil Sciences)

1:30
Participants from the above sites create a procession to
Helen Curtis Cole Commemorative Garden (adopted by the School of Nursing)
Nodding Sculpture by Pondside (adopted by by the Art Department)
Civility Mural Courtyard (adopted by the Campus Activities Office)

2:00
All celebrants join together proceeding to the Fine Arts Center where they ReSound with best Wishes for a Happy 20th Anniversary to complete the inauguration of the Anniversary Year and the campus wide ACAPAS project.

Be sure to be there by walking, driving or PVTA campus shuttle (runs southbound to MAZE every 15 minutes). Call the UMass Arts Council, 103 Hasbrouck for more information at 545-0202.

Many thanks for assistance and support from: 41 APAS Adopting Departments, Arts Council Representatives, 41 APAS Faculty Advisors, Al Prober and the University Physical Plant, Mike Davidshofer, Stockbridge School of Agriculture, Roy Vocl, the Director and Staff of Campus Center Building Services, Arts Council Hardeners and 41 APAS Student Stewards.

CELEBRATING 20 YEARS

Pearl Street
Nightclub
WEDNESDAY
GAY NIGHT
With Special Guest D.J.'s
THURSDAY
18+ DANCE PARTY
Hosted by Mick Danger of Today's Wild! The Area's Biggest Dance Party, Music by Spin, Inc.
FRIDAY
RETRO NIGHT
Music From the 70s 80s & 90s.
With D.J. DENNIS
9:00 pm - 1:30 am
"FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD"
SATURDAY
MODERN ROCK DANCE PARTY
Featuring Music by Bush, Better Than Ezra, Elastica, Stone Jack Rodic, Letters to Cleo, and more
LIVE MUSIC...
Thur., Sept. 7 - 9:00 pm 18+ XAVIER
Fri., Sept. 8 - 7:30 pm All Ages MALEVOLENT CREATION Overcast / Scattered Remnants / Malakai
Sat., Sept. 9 - 8:30 pm 18+ MAX CREEK
Wed., Sept. 13 - 7:00 pm 18+ LETTERS TO CLEO Fig Dish
Thur., Sept. 14 - 7:00 pm 18+ JULIANA HATFIELD
Fri., Sept. 15 - 8:30 pm 18+ CHUCKLEHEAD Johnny Socko
Sun., Sep. 17 - 7:30 pm All Ages KORN / Orange 9MM
Tues., Sept. 19 - 8:00 pm 18+ GOD STREET WINE
Wed., Sep. 20 - 7:00 pm MORPHINE
Thurs. Sept. 21 - 7:30 pm All Ages HOME / PHINEAS GAGE
Fri., Sept. 22 - 8:30 pm 18+ SYNAESTHESIA
Sat. Sept. 23 - 7:30 pm All Ages MEPHISKAPHELES / SPRING HEELED JACK
Tues., Sept. 26 - 8:00 pm 18+ BELLY
COMING
9/28 Life of Agony
9/29 Blm Skala Blm
9/30 Roomful of Blues
10/1 Maceo Parker
10/2 Fabulous Thunderbirds
10/3 Joe Ely / James McMurtry
10/5 Dar Williams
10/9 Mike Watt
10/15 Mariane Faithful
Tickets for all shows available at N.U. Box office 586-8686 1-800-THE TICK Strawberries. For The Record in Amherst. About Music in Greenfield 10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413 584-7771

Teachers want tougher schools; some may suffer from reforms

By Sally Streef Buzbee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A campaign by a teachers union to focus school reform efforts on tighter discipline and tougher academic standards is the right way to go, parents and educators say.

But civil rights activists are leery, saying black and Hispanic schoolchildren could be hurt by stricter discipline codes and fail to gain from more rigorous standards.

Conservatives also called the effort by the American Federation of Teachers flawed.

"We have points of agreement here," said Bob Morrison of the Family Research Council in Washington. "We share their concern that schools be safe and orderly. But giving parents choice [in schools] is the way to solve these problems."

Joined by corporate and labor leaders, the 875,000-member teachers union announced the campaign Wednesday for "commonsense" change.

"We're appealing to the silent majority of parents out there who say that first and foremost they want safe and orderly classrooms and high academic standards," said AFT President Albert Shanker.

Recent polls "show a very clear picture of what the public wants and expects — and it happens to be the same thing that teachers want," Shanker said.

"I want my child to have an education," said parent Gina Koyton, who called herself dismayed by her Pittsburgh school's failure to discipline unruly children. "We, as parents, cannot put up with this anymore."

Yet education reformers rarely talk about discipline, instead pushing reforms "that may or may not work and that parents don't understand," Shanker said.

Even worse, teachers often are overruled when they require homework or demand that students behave in class, said Gregory Toatley Sr., a teacher at Philadelphia's Clarence E. Pickett Middle School.

"If you can get your school board to set down a standard, saying clearly what they're going to support you on, you feel more confident," Toatley said.

If schools don't focus on discipline and tough academics, Shanker said, frustrated parents will support conservative proposals to give parents tax money or vouchers to pay for private schools.

But tougher discipline codes could hurt minority children, who already are suspended in disproportionate numbers, in part because of discrimination, said the Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

And tougher academic requirements would not stop some schools' practice of pushing minority children into less challenging classes, Lowery said.

He said he supported the AFT campaign, but added: "I would urge that we make clear that we're talking about equity."

Shanker said the union believes higher standards will force schools to make sure that all children, including minority children, take tough classes. And, he noted, it's often minority children who suffer most from chaotic classrooms.

The AFT has become increasingly supportive of tough academic requirements and school accountability in recent years.

That has sometimes put it in conflict with the bigger teachers union, the 2.2 million-member National Education Association. But the NEA, facing a newly hostile political climate in recent months, also has focused more on classroom issues than labor fights.

Budget srtuggling leads to shutdown

By Walter R. Mears
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — By now, the bluster and bravado have drawn the lines for Congress and President Clinton: before they're finished struggling over the budget there's bound to be some sort of shutdown in the government.

How much of it, how long and who, if anyone, really suffers are answers to come in the next month or so. It's happened before, when Republicans were in the White House and Democrats controlled Congress. Those shutdowns: partial, brief and pointless. They didn't save money; they cost money.

And there is no evidence that the reversal in political power roles would reverse the outcome. The pattern before was one of threats followed by vetoes followed by closing of government functions deemed nonessential, after which there were settlements based on compromise.

In the current situation, the opening phase of the 1996 presidential campaign hardens both the rhetoric and the positions. Clinton is running. Sen. Bob Dole is challenging, and Speaker Newt Gingrich hasn't precluded a run, so the leaders who will decide what happens all have political points to score, and perhaps underscore.

As when Dole, the Senate majority leader, said Republicans will fight, not settle.

"This will not be an autumn of compromise," he said, declaring that the Republicans will win revolutionary change vote by vote, bill by bill.

They may also have to do it veto by veto, since at least six of the 13 bills that will appropriate funds to run the government in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 are on the White House list to be rejected unless they are changed to meet Clinton's objections. And that phase comes only after Congress settles on final versions and sends them to the White House; only one is near that point now.

Hey UMass Faculty & Students!
Get the Morning Paper delivered to Dorms, Offices, and Limited Off-Campus Locations*
50% OFF
The Boston Globe

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $33.00	❒ $62.00
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $16.75	❒ $33.25
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $16.25	❒ $28.75

The New York Times

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $59.30	❒ $110.70
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $26.80	❒ $53.20
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $32.50	❒ $57.50

Subscribe at the Campus Center
call DADS NEWS at 259-1071
or mail to: DADS NEWS, P.O. Box 633, Amherst, MA 01004-0633
$10.00 Charge for Off Campus delivery

Volleyball starts on good note

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's volleyball team swept the three-team field of the Hofstra/Spalding Invitational on Sept. 1-2 in Hempstead, NY.

After defeating Lafayette and Rider in the first two rounds, the Minutewomen defeated host team Hofstra 15-4, 15-3, 7- 15 and 15-5.

Massachusetts coach Bonnie Kenny's squad on the floor included junior outside hitter Giza Rivera with 18 kills and 11 digs. Sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan also recorded a double-double earning 14 kills and 14 digs.

Another Minutewomen who was impressive in the victory was senior middle blocker Rachel Sky, who totalled 11 kills and nine digs. Sky's performance on the court earned her the Tournament's Most Valuable Player award while senior setter Cass Anderson made the All-Tournament team.

UMass now focuses its attention on the west coast as the team travels to Santa Barbara, Cal. to play against perennial Top 10 team Cal-Santa Barbara in the Santa Barbara Tournament. The Minutewomen face Toledo at 2 p.m. and UCSB at 7 p.m.

"To be successful, we're really going to need to pass the ball well," Kenny said. "Nolan, Nash, Rivera and Hartlen all hit the ball with some pretty good velocity, so it's important we pass well. We want to have three options every time we attack the ball. If we're not going to be as good of a blocking team as we like, we're going to need good ball control and back court defense."

Starting off the season with a 3-0 record, Kenny hopes her squad will finish in the top two of the conference and make the A-10 Tournament Finals.

With UMass hosting the 1995 National Championships in the William D. Mullins Center in December, the Minutewomen would like nothing more than to take part in the festivities.

■ NFL

continued from page 12

the opposition. Preseason injuries will sideline Bengals' No. 1 pick Ki-jana Carter and cause Jeff Blake to throw even more bombs. In Houston, Steve McNair will need time to adjust to the NFL but will help the rebuilding process better than Chris Chandler. Jacksonville is the new team which will thrive in the NFL's weakest division.

1. Cleveland — That is with Eric Zeier running the show, not Vinny Testaverde.

2. Pittsburgh — Bill Cowher needs his charisma to keep his team from thinking about last year.

3. Cincinnati — Dave Shula has his father's knowledge, just not the talent.

4. Jacksonville — Don't laugh, they may even be third.

5. Houston — The Astrodome is now their own "Temple of Doom."

AFC West — San Diego gutted their way past the Steelers last year, but will need more than guts to come away with the West this season. Mike Shanahan is back in Denver and is ready to take John Elway and his talented receivers deep into the playoffs with an offensive scheme that could only run better in San Francisco. Another Bill Walsh disciple in Mike White has surfaced in a head coaching position and will stop the fighting on the Raiders' sidelines. Life without Joe means the Chiefs go nowhere. Some people thought the Pats made a mistake by letting Rick Mirer go by for Seattle to take, but who would admit that now?

1. Denver — Elway could be a right-handed Steve Young.

2. Oakland — Back where the Silver and Black belong.

3. San Diego — Natrone Means must carry the load.

4. Kansas City — Chief problem, Bono is no Joe.

5. Seattle — Off-season controversy hurt its rebuilding.

NFC East — Jerry Jones wants Deion to be a Cowboy and he is used to getting what he wants. If he is successful, the Big D will stand for Domination. Buddy Ball has found a QB in Dave Krieg and if Garrison Hearst can run the ball effectively they will be the third best team in the NFC. Philadelphia brings the West Coast offense East and it's just a matter of time before they fly with it. The Giants and Redskins will fight futility as they try and improve for years to come.

1. Dallas — Free agency can't keep them from anything less than the NFC title game.

2. Arizona — No one wants to play against Ryan's defense.

3. Philadelphia — A year away from greatness.

4. New York Giants — Dan Reeves will be calling Phil Simms back to save his job.

5. Washington — The hogs have left and no help is in sight.

NFC Central — Each team has a huge problem. Whichever quarterback can rise above their team mediocrity will be able to carry them to the top of the division. Can Green Bay's Brett Favre survive without the services of Sterling Sharpe? The Bears don't know who their man will be from week to week. Warren Moon has great receivers but he is 39 and not the QB he used to be. Trent Dilfer will be a talent for the Bucs, it's just a matter of when it will happen. Anyone can hand off to Barry Sanders in Detroit but was Scott Mitchell's year in Miami just an abberation?

1. Green Bay — One Word. Experience.

2. Detroit — Barry on first down, Barry on second down, Barry to Herman Moore on third down.

3. Minnesota — Moon will try to right the Vikings ship.

4. Tampa Bay — Free agency saves Sam Wyche's job for another year. They break the streak of 10 loss seasons.

5. Chicago — The amount of shutouts da' Bears defense throws equals their victories.

NFC West — Repeat? Entirely possible, but is the 49ers hunger still there? They had so much desire last year to compliment their talent, they must keep up the intensity. The Falcons are interesting with their Red Gun and the acquisition of Eric Metcalf will in fit nicely. He could touch the ball every down for them, plus return all kicks.

The Saints needed more on defense then just Eric Allen and need a conductor other than Jim Mora. St. Louis hired Rich Brooks to replace Chuck Knox, and their best receiver (Flipper Anderson) left for the Colts. Then their best running back (Jerome Bettis) held out late into the preseason. Not a good start. The Panthers are focusing on the future and Kerry Collins is a good block to start building with.

1. San Francisco — Still the best in the West.

2. Atlanta — Jeff George fires away with the Red Gun.

3. New Orleans — They will party in the streets anyway.

4. Carolina — Opponents will take this team lightly.

5. St. Louis — Starved football fans will want to send this team back. Remember, they could have had the Pats.

Post season picks:

AFC Division Winners — Miami, Cleveland, Denver

AFC Wildcards — New England, Oakland, Pittsburgh

AFC Champion — Miami

NFC Division Winners — Dallas, Green Bay, San Francisco

NFC Wildcards — Arizona, Philadelphia, Detroit

NFC Champion — Dallas

Super Bowl Champion — Miami/Dallas

 Whichever team signs Deion Sanders

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian staff member.

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you're interested come on down to the Collegian offices!
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Come Join . . .
New England Junior Hockey Club!
Try Out Dates:
September 9 & 10
9:00am - 12:00pm
UMass Practice Rink
(413) 789-4566

Give the Collegian an international perspective!
Committee for Development Activities Multicultural Affairs
113 Campus Center
545-3500

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

Cruise Free* On Spring Break!

Connections is looking for outgoing, responsible campus representatives to be group organizers for a fabulous spring break cruise. Just recruit 20 classmates to cruise with hundreds of other college students... and you'll cruise free! We'll supply you with all the tools you need. We'll even come out to your campus, once you have an interested group, show a video of the cruise, and answer everybody's questions. Please call:
CONNECTIONS
1-800-587-6373

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Masterdard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
FINALLY, A BACK TO SCHOOL SALE, YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT!

CATAMOUNT 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $16.99 + DEP.	SARANAC 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $16.49 + DEP.	BUD ICE "5.5" 30 PK. CANS $13.99 + DEP.	BUD & LT. 24-12 OZ. BOTT. $12.99 + DEP.	BUSCH & LT. 24-12 OZ. CANS $8.99 + DEP.	NATURAL LT. 24-12 OZ. CANS $8.49 + DEP.
GENESEE CREAM 30 PK. $9.99 + DEP.	BUD DRY 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTT. $9.99 + DEP.	PABST 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTT. $8.99 + DEP.	HAMM'S 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.19 + DEP.	FRATS! & SORORIETIES FOR A PRICE QUOTE!	CALL 584:8174
KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD $36.99 + DEP.		MICHELOB LT & DK. KEGS $39.99 + DEP.	NATURAL LT. KEG $32.99 + DEP.	BUD ICE KEG $39.99 + DEP.	RED DOG & ICE HOUSE "KEG" $39.99 + DEP.
SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 .750 ML	PEPPERMINT SCHNAPPS PEACH SCHNAPPS $3.99 1.0L	LET'S GO! UMASS FOOTBALL!	CAPT. MORGAN $15.49 1.75L	FOUR SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	BLAMO TEQUILA $6.99 1.0L

ICE!
10 lbs. $1.29
50 lbs. $5.99
100 lbs. $9.99
blocks 10 lbs. .. $1.50
WE DELIVER!
OFF CAMPUS - UMASS
584:8174
Sale Thru 9/14/95.

Ripken passes Gehrig

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken broke Lou Gehrig's unbreakable record Wednesday night when he played his 2,131st consecutive game, becoming the most dependable, most durable athlete in the history of America's oldest sport.

Ripken started his big night by catching the ceremonial first-pitches from his children, then highlighted it by hitting a home run in the fourth inning. Moments later the game between his Baltimore Orioles and California became official and he was in the record book for now and probably forever.

More than a half-century after Gehrig was forced out of the lineup by a deadly disease, Ripken streaked past him as baseball's new Iron Man, likely the last of his kind.

Ripken's string of starting every game for more than 13 years seems even more unbreakable than when Gehrig set the mark in 1939. Major leaguers rarely play every game even in a single month — in fact, the second-longest active streak belongs to Frank Thomas at just 235.

Once resentful that he might be known only for his streak — he's won two AL MVP awards, been a 13-time All-Star, hit more home runs than any shortstop ever and set nearly a dozen fielding records — the Orioles star gracefully slipped into immortality when the game became official in the middle of the fifth inning.

Casually, almost as matter of factly as he showed up for work day after day, Ripken accepted the adoration of the cheering hometown fans. Patting his heart several times, he stood on the field outside the Orioles' dugout as players from both teams and all four umpires joined in the 22-minute, 15-second standing ovation.

Pushed out of the dugout, Ripken trotted a thank-you lap the entire way around the stadium, shaking hands with fans, seeking out those of the children in particular. The usually low-key Ripken even jumped above the center field wall to slap high fives.

When he came to the Angels' dugout, he went down the line shaking every hand while Bobby Bonilla and other Orioles captured the event on video cameras.

The tribute began when the 10-foot numbers on the B&O warehouse across the street from the stadium dropped to reveal 2-1-3-1. Fireworks exploded overhead, near where a blimp displayed the sign "CAL IS 1."

During the ceremony Ripken took off his No. 8 jersey and handed it to his wife and two children, revealing a black T-shirt he wore that said on the back: "2,131+ HUGS AND KISSES FOR DADDY."

Ripken shook hands with his brother Billy, his long-time second base partner with the Orioles who took a day off from his Triple A Buffalo team and missed a minor league playoff game to attend.

A sellout crowd at Camden Yards that included President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore began popping flashbulbs as soon as Ripken stepped on the field for practice, and standing ovations followed him wherever he went.

To Ripken, breaking Gehrig's record has just been a matter of wanting to play, of showing up each day at work ready to do a job.

Until lately, that is, when the weight of what his streak meant started to set in.

"I don't think I got to sleep last night," he said Wednesday afternoon. "I think the last time I looked at the clock, it was around 3.

"I'm trying not to think too much about it. I'm almost fearful that if I do, I'll get caught up in it and lose my focus."

UMass takes season opener; Rudy wins 100th at UMass

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

If you can use the first game as a barometer to a season, then the question of who will score for the Massachusetts women's soccer team has been answered.

Losses of Heidi Kocher, Melissa Mitchell and Nicole Roberts left a void up front but senior co-captain Rachel LeDuc recorded her first collegiate hat trick as UMass (1-0) easily disposed of St. Bonaventure (0-1), 3-0, on Sept. 2.

LeDuc was assisted twice by junior halfback Rebecca Myers and once by fullback Erin Lynch. Though LeDuc was the player credited with the goals, she attributed much of her success to the teammates surrounding her.

"We all worked together well, I just happened to be the one to get the goals," LeDuc said. "All I had to do was put my foot on the ball."

LeDuc will be looked to as a leader on this team and her experience is a part of her play that UMass coach Jim Rudy feels will help in her developing a scoring touch.

"It's nice to see," Rudy said. "She's the only returning scorer up front and so she has more space now. More space means you can operate more. She's the big cheese up there and that's got ot help her confidence."

LeDuc's performance earned her A-10 women's soccer player of the week honors.

The Minutewomen used the strength of the their lineup to take control of the game in LeDuc, Myers and defenders Lynch and Amanda Thompson.

"Rebecca [Meyers] was in control in the middle of the field," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "Almost every ball in the air was hers. On the ground she made some very nice services, they were playing a clearance trap and that was busted three or four times in a row and they switched to a deep sweeper. She had a big hand in that.

"The whole game the other coach was yelling, get No. 11, get No. 11. Every set play, every restart, she controlled the game that much."

The victory raised the Minutewomen up one notch in the Soccer America poll where they are now ranked No. 8. They return to action Friday at 5 p.m. at Richard F. Garber field for the home opener against A-10 rival George Washington.

• • •

Women's soccer notes : The win over the Bonnies was the 100th of Rudy's tenure at UMass. After his first game of his eighth season as coach of the Minutewomen, Rudy's record stands at 100-30-10.

"It is well deserved and it was great to be a part of it," said LeDuc. "Hopefully there will be a 200th win for him."

LeDuc and the rest of his players acknowledged the accomplishment by giving the coach a bottle of champagne and a card.

"The women were very nice about it," Rudy said. "I really wasn't thinking about it, but it was nice that they thought about it."

Even the St. Bonaventure crowd was told of the achievement as it was announced over the P.A. system, but the coach down played the milestone.

"I didn't score one goal," Rudy said. "I have never scored a goal at UMass, the girls have to go out on the field and play the games."

Erin Lynch was selected to the pre-season All-America second team in Soccer News. Lynch was selected to their All-American team after the 1994 season.

■ Rothenberger

continued from page 12

ever has, but she's also taking more of a vocal leadership role," Donnelly said. "She is demanding of other players that they step up.

Despite everything she has done, Rothenberger is still often overlooked on the national scene, when All-America teams are picked.

"I think she is one of the top players in the nation. I don't know why she doesn't get more attention," Donnelly said. "But she doesn't care. For her, it's all team. She just wants to win. I'll take her on my team every chance."

If Rothenberger keeps getting the ball at the end of games, there's a pretty good chance they will.

■ football

continued from page 12

one to make plays."

"Coach Hodges and [assistant] coach [Doug] Berry talked to me right after they talked to Andrew [McNeilly], and [McNeilly] been in my corner 100 percent," Campanile said." [McNeilly's] a winner, he's been in there over 25 games. I have someone to fall back on as far as questions go, so it helps."

Campanile was not surprised he was named the starter, but he did not expect the role either. Intensity plays a major factor in Campanile's approach to his game. He looks to pick up the team this year and compliment them with the job he has earned.

"I just hope that when I'm in there the team will respond, because as a quarterback, that is what you got to do," Campanile said. "You've got to make the people around you rally, because when you got a tough situation, that's your main job and your main focus."

The Minuteman offense will focus around Campanile, as he may be the missing piece to the Yankee Conference Championship puzzle.

Minutemen Notes: Senior co-captain and Walter Payton Award candidate Rene Ingoglia has accepted an invitation to participate in the 50th Hula Bowl Classic in Honolulu, Hawaii. Ingoglia was chosen as one of the nation's top running backs, joining such Division I-A backs like Auburn's Heisman Trophy candidate Stephen Davis, Nebraska's Clinton Childs and Ohio State's Eddie George. Ingoglia will be the first UMass player ever to participate in the Hula Bowl.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0090

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8
$3/Hr. Fri., Sat. & Sun. Unlimited Players! $4/Hr. Weekdays
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8-9 ft. Tables
• Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
• All Sporting Events
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may be placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention all University women: Please join us for informer rush on Thurs Pick up is at the Horse-shoe in Southwest at 8:30 look for Chi Omega signs! Call Heather at 549-4723 to RSVP!

AUTO FOR SALE

Mercury Marquis, 1984 70K miles runs excellent, power windows & doors. 1,000 or BO Call JJ 549-8861

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals free delivery 253-9742

Farmers Falls Shirt with porch & storage can be furnished 20 min. to UM on Bus Line 430 1st & last & utils Norman 413-863-2275

FOR SALE

Carpeting, dressers, desks chairs, lighting, shelves, boothes, tables, etc 413-863-4823

HELP WANTED

Wait staff experienced only Apply within Kip Oh Restaurant 586-2774

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop corn grass from wrecking vital antipollution laws. Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule $6-$8/hr. Can lead to summer job, career opportunity. 584-9830

$331.00 Sell 72 funny college t-shirts & prints $331.00 Risk free. Choose from 27 designs, or design own. Free catalog. 1-800-700-4822

Park Rangers! Game Wardens, park police $6.20 per hour. Year round positions for men and women. Call 1-504-429-9231 Ext. P9416 24HRS

$300 to $500 Weekly Fun/Part time processing simple paperwork in your area. Own hours. No experience necessary. Call 1-504-429-9233 Ext. D9016 24 Hrs

Help Wanted! Easy work! Excellent Pay! Assemble products at home! Call 1-504-429-9227 Ext. H5016 24Hrs

WANTED Junior or Senior student only to do light housecleaning, cooking, errands, walk dog & some secretarial! Must have car M-W-F 7-9am Call Nancy for interview 549-4569 $8.00 an hour. Near UMass, off E. Pleasant St.

$12/DAY. Mullins Center looking for students to work part-time, late nights, and weekends doing post-event clean up. Stop by Mullins Center, 2nd floor, and fill out an application TODAY

Kitchen Help Sat. and Sun. Day 8-5 Or Nights 30 Hours a week. Also delivery persons apply at D.P. Dough

Spring Break '96 Sell trips, earn cash & go Free! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest Rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Divers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted. KRETE RESTAURANT 586-8750.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits. With a patient and supportive teacher- sign up early limited schedule. Call Peter 253-5763

Performing Arts Division Offers group and private instruction in music, theater, and dance. Registration for group instruction runs Sept. 6-22, 1995. Private instruction is on-going. We are located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass, 413-545-0518, for info.

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel Free with SunSplash Tours. Highest Commissions, lowest prices. Campus Reps Wanted! Sell Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710

Largest Student Travel Planner on East Coast looking for campus rep to promote Kodak Spring Break Trips "Guaranteed" lowest package prices and best incentives. You handle the sales we handle the bookkeeping. Cnacn, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre, Orlando, and Key Wast. Earn Big $$$ and/or free trips!! Great for Resume!!! Call 1-800-222-4432

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classifed Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard hedings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Word Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

REGARDING PERSONALS
1 All personals MUST be presented by Collegian classified employees before payment & acceptance of the classified.
2 Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3 Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4 Addresses, or drorp insert numbers are not allowed in personals.
5 Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6 Profanity may not be used in personals.
7 The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

CLIP & SAVE

Okay, so it's not a coupon, but we got your attention right? You think that you night want to make cool stuff like this too?

Well, The Collegian Graphics Department is hiring for the Fall semester.

First -year students and sophomores are encouraged to apply. Work-Study is not necessary, but helpful.

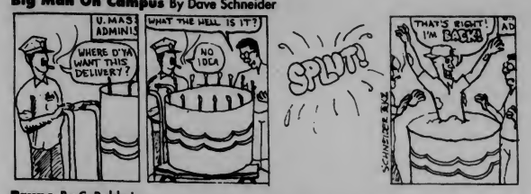
Macintosh experience is great, especially QuarkXPress, PhotoShop, FreeHand, Illustrator, and Microsoft Word.

Even if you don't have any knowledge of those programs, if you're interested, come down, fill out an application and ask to speak to Marni or Jim.

Collegian Graphics:
"We're up all night putting together New England's largest college daily."

113 Campus Center • 545-1864

Big Man On Campus By Dave Schneider



Bruno By C. Baldwin

COME ON JAMIE, IT'S BEEN FUN. WE'VE HAD LOTSA GOOD TIMES. I JUST NEED A CHANGE OF SCENE. I'M SUFFOCATING IN A "RELATIONSHIP." COME ON....
JAMIE.... I'M NOT TALKING ROCKET SCIENCE HERE!
ROCKET-SCIENCE

Butterling By John Ottinger

HEY! WHAT'S WITH THIS SARDINE CAN OF A COMIC STRIP? IT'S A WEE BIT CRAMPED IN HERE!
IF I WANTED TO BE ON A POSTAGE STAMP, I WOULD SHAVE MY NIPS LIKE I HAD A RAT IN MY UNDERWEAR, GET FAT AND DIE!
USA 29
I HOPE YOU GOT A CHUCKLE OUT OF THAT ONE, MR. CARTOONIST! NOW, GET THE RAT OUT OF MY THERMOMETER!

The Amazing Spider Man By Stan Lee

THE NEXT DAY...
MR. BELOSH, COULD I PHOTOGRAPH YOU FOR THE BUGLE?
YES! I WANT THE PUBLICITY!
I'VE DECIDED TO DO HORROR FILMS AGAIN!
CURSES, FOILED AGAIN!
MEANWHILE, IN LAS VEGAS...
I'M AFRAID TO THINK WHY BOGART SENT FOR ME!

The Amazing Spider Man By Stan Lee

WHAT MADE YOU DECIDE TO RETURN TO ACTING, MR. BELOSH?
IT STARTED WITH SPIDER-MAN...
BUT I CANNOT TELL THE STORY!
THE WORLD WOULD THINK ME MAD!
RIGHT! I WAS THERE--AND I STILL CAN'T BELIEVE IT!

Wally By Michael W. Hogan

"GEEZ, COACH, THERE GOES THAT 'WHOOSHING' SOUND AGAIN."

Quote of the Day

"You may marry the man of your dreams, but fifteen years later you're married to a reclining chair that burps."

–Roseanne Arnold

HEY YOU!!!

...yeah, you with the pen and paper, and you with the pencil; get over here!

You see this huge gaping hole on the comics page? Well this space could be filled with your comics. If you have some artistic talent and a sense of humor you could be drawing comics for New England's largest college daily. So why are sitting in class doodling on your notebook? Come on down to the Collegian, Room 113 Campus Center Basement. Leave your name and a sample of your work with the Managing Editor. The next thing you know, this space will be filled with your work instead of wordy fillers. Come on down and get involved!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mom's been raising me all by herself. She doesn't have much money. Sometimes she's so busy. She bought me a whole bunch of new clothes. She left them on my bed on Friday afternoon.

I really appreciated it so I left her a note on the kitchen table before I went camping for the weekend:

"Thanks for everything. Goodbye."

She thought it was a suicide note and went crazy crying all over the neighborhood, and calling everybody on the phone.

My friends and I thought it was funny....

Sometimes, she is so funny.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... T.J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Production ..... James Ganley, Matt Audette

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Clam Roll	Roasted Beef
Grilled Chicken Sand.	Cheese Spinach Strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
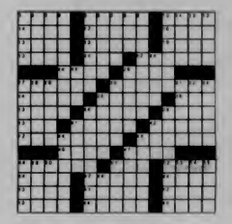
Clam Roll	Hearty Latin Stew
Cauliflower Casserole	Cheese Spinach Strudel

Daily Crossword



ACROSS
1 Reminder
6 Pitched
10 Like Thomas's shoe
14 "Tender Mercies" ___ James
15 Bullfight bravo
16 Stage
17 13th or 15th of the month
18 Tugged for Titans
19 Part of UHF
20 Lobbies grants
21 Sandwich letters
22 Hoodlum
24 Hoosier
25 Bound
27 One of Eddie's aces
28 ___ reading
29 Groom
30 Whoa and ___
31 To the ___ degree
32 Mold bag
34 Kind of watercolor paints
36 Period comic
38 Tourism tablet
40 Book: Acrobat
42 Albanians
43 Pa Ingalls's
44 Mother with a "rolled" Titan
46 Shamed
47 Last names in Seinfeld
48 "___ Is for Hunters" set
50 Lab
51 ___ Jr.
52 Actor Estrada
53 Mark Boniface
54 Pepper food
56 Gambling rubes
57 Sonnets
58 Sailor
60 Jardin garden
64 Abie's neighbor
65 Behoove

DOWN
1 Bridge
2 Housemouse
3 Ump's ___
4 Ode to Keppra
5 Spec unwillingness
6 "Take ___ all seconds"
7 Brush
8 Language suffix
9 Hush
10 Denuded
11 Maneuver equal to four rods
12 Ingredient for exquisite cuisine, I guess
13 Pedestrian
23 They moved Stanton
24 Hold a match
26 Sojourn
27 Schools
29 Chrome
31 Sense
33 Beethoven's tenth assoc.
35 Bandleader Shaw
37 Geographic reference book
39 It was never called the Forbidden City
41 ___ of a Mad Housewife
43 Opponents against
45 House freshers
47 Bodies in rock lineups
49 Spaghetti beverage
50 Open one's eyes
52 Lab eggs
53 Categorical or leafy title
55 Lyric sigh
57 Tree ally
59 Kind
61 Slender fish
63 Fish sheriff
64 Tough evening (2 wds.)
65 Singer Tashlin et al
66 So what's new?

Your Horoscope

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Ease a tense moment this week by just taking a deep breath and nodding. You'll keep the other person from feeling they are being ignored. That feeling could make them fly off the handle, rather than listen to reason.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A kindred spirit comes to you early in the week with a request. If your initial impulse is to refuse, think again about their reasons for asking you—you may be their only hope! It may be worth your while to investigate alternative ways to help.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Extra effort you made in the past to prevent mishaps pays off this week as things run smoothly. Contact a sick friend or acquaintance. Your words of sympathy will perk up their mood and help them heal.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Save money this week by packing your lunch—you may discover a new way to count calories. Planning ahead makes an enormous task easier. Call in some favors to further ease the load.

LEO
July 23-August 23
A fascinating conversation may tempt you to neglect some other duties, but try to resist. Although you could achieve some important lengths, the consequences of missing a deadline are too great.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Discuss a particularly trying problem with a sibling or mate—the solution could be as close as your back yard. Give yourself and a loved one a treat this weekend to relieve stress, but don't overspend, since that will bring the stress level right back up.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
You may need to draw the line when an annoying person oversteps their bounds, but use more than your usual amount of tact—you don't want to make an enemy. Pool your resources with an ally to make a large outlay more affordable.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A private talk with a sweetheart has you feeling renewed and happy in the relationship. Cover all your bases at work. A deadline could be sneaking up on you. A private lunch could bring insight into a sticky political situation.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Take stock of all your talents if considering a career change. You may find a more lucrative, satisfying enterprise with only a slight shift in focus. Making an effort to save money also helps increase your prosperity.

CAPRICORN
December 23-January 20
Try to decide how best to spend your efforts before you exert your influence. You don't want to squander your energy, particularly not this week. There may be demands from an unusual direction.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
An opportunity in disguise may reveal itself, so take the plunge now if you think you'll regret your inaction. A moody partner or member of your immediate family may just need some extra attention from you. Have you been neglecting them lately?

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A career challenge begins to take a toll on your stress level. Persevere—there may be rewards that have not become fully apparent just yet. A quiet get together with friends could get your mind off the worst of the stress

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
TOP 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things Overhead in the D.C. Kitchen

10. "Hell, I ain't eatin' it!"
9. "Cooked–shmooked!"
8. "Is this legal?"
7. "Mmm ... fresh weasel."
6. "Do you think they'll notice?"
5. "Shhh ... Oprah's on!"
4. "No, they definitely won't like this."
3. "Look what I found in the beef stroganoff!"
2. "Is this edible?"
1. "That ain't chicken!"

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

Sports

Soccer America's Women's Top 20

1 North Carolina	6 Portland	11 Santa Clara	16 Brown
2 Notre Dame	7 Hartford	12 Vanderbilt	17 Washington State
3 Stanford	8 UMass	13 Wisconsin	18 Harvard
4 Duke	9 Connecticut	14 Virginia	19 Dartmouth
5 William & Mary	10 Clemson	15 Oregon State	20 Southern Methodist

Field hockey wins in double OT

By Brian Perillo & Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Seven yards.

In field hockey a penalty stroke is as close as you come to one on one. One player against the goalie, with only seven yards between them.

With 5:02 remaining in the second overtime, junior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger capped off UMass' first win of the season by flipping a penalty stroke past Boston College goalie Sarah Egnaczyk. The goal broke a scoreless tie and secured the Minutewomen's 1–0 victory over the Eagles.

"She's clutch," Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly said. "She comes up best in the big moments."

Massachusetts	1
Boston College	0

UMass was awarded the stroke when Egnaczyk was called for lying on top of the ball in front of the goal. The Eagles' goalie had gotten tied up with UMass' sophomore forward Missy Sweeney.

The victory evened out UMass' record at 1–1, and gave them some momentum heading into a big weekend confrontation with Maryland.

"We needed a win, especially before the road trip," Massachusetts goalie Stacy Walker said.

"It would have been one long bus ride if we had to go to Maryland after opening up 0–2 at home," Donnelly said.

UMass would have had to deal with that long bus ride had it not been for some overtime heroics from Walker, as well.

As the first overtime wound down, Walker was called for an intentional takedown during a scuffle in front of the goal with 1:16 remaining on the clock, forcing a penalty stroke. BC senior Alexi Siglin lined up seven yards from the net to take the stroke for the Eagles.

Siglin's shot was high and to Walker's right, and the UMass keeper was able to deflect it away with her stick.

"That save was such a big shift in momentum," Donnelly said. "The team is really starting to have confidence in Stacy."

"Her save really got us going," Rothenberger said. "It brought us out of our rut."

Walker has stepped into the big shoes of last year's goalie and Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Hilary Rose.

"Stacy played incredibly," Rothenberger said. "She has come out of Hilary's shadow, and made a name for herself."

UMass and Boston College were engaged in a defensive showdown during regulation. The Minutewomen held the edge in penalty corners, 9–5, but neither team was able to capitalize.

BC had the last real chance for the win with 33 seconds left on the clock, but Rothenberger broke up an Eagle penalty corner, proving she can make the big play on defense as well as offense.

Under the new NCAA rules, both teams began overtime with only six players and goalies on the field.

UMass got a scare when its senior defensive leader Andrea Cabral was hit in the arm by the ball less than two minutes into the extra period. Cabral was tended to by the trainer, but was able to stay in the game.

The Minutewomen had an excellent opportunity to put the game away when UMass received a penalty corner with 10:44 remaining. Egnaczyk was able to make a diving save to her right to thwart a Rothenberger shot and keep the game scoreless.

The Eagles had another key chance to win when UMass was assessed three penalty corner shots in just over a minute, beginning with 4:13 left in the first OT. Walker and the Minutewomen defense, however, were able to step up to the challenge.

"The defense was strong all game," Walker said. "They were able to push everything out to the sides, and avoided all one–on–ones for me."

This was the second time in as many games the Minutewomen have gone into double overtime this season.

"It's a lot of running for us, and for me it's a lot of thinking," Walker said.

"We needed a game like this where we fought through and play tough and finished," Donnelly said. "We've seen both ends of the spectrum."

New Hampshire 1, UMass 0, 2OT

Despite outplaying the Wildcats for four periods, the Minutewomen dropped the season opener on Sunday.

Just 5:45 into the second overtime, JoAnne Fortin converted on a rebound to beat Walker and give UNH the victory.

In addition to the loss, Massachusetts may have lost senior Kerry Metelski for the season. Metelski, who was scheduled to start, fractured a bone in her leg during warm–ups. Sophomore Courtney MacLean replaced her in the starting line–up.

Three freshmen cracked UMass' starting lineup as Kate Putnam, Erica Johnston and Katherine McClellan all saw considerable action.

In fact Donnelly showed so much confidence in Johnston and Putnam she left both players in the game for the six–on–six overtime.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior midfielder Kyle Rothenberger enhanced her reputation as a big game player as she scored the winning goal in UMass' 1–0 OT victory over Boston College.

Rothenberger is clutch once again

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

As Kyle Rothenberger stepped up to take the penalty stroke with 5:02 left in double overtime, Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly turned to her bench.

"Erica, get ready to get back in there," she said to freshman forward Erica Johnston.

"But coach it's going to be over ... it's Kyle," she responded.

Johnston was right. Rothenberger calmly stepped to the line and flicked it past Boston College goalie Sarah Egnaczyk to give UMass the 1–0 win.

After Missy Sweeney forced the stroke, there was no debate or discussion on the sideline over who would take the stroke. Rothenberger stepped in.

"She is clutch. She comes up best in the big moments," Donnelly said. "There's never a doubt. In those moments, Kyle gets the shot. She's come through so many times."

For Rothenberger, scoring big goals has become almost routine. Of her 14 career goals, 10 of them have been game winners.

As a freshman, against then–defending National Champion Old Dominion, Rothenberger scored the game winner to give UMass only its third–ever victory over the perennial power.

Almost exactly a year later, the Gilbertsville, Penn., native did herself one better.

The 1994 Minutewomen were coming off a shaky stretch in their season that included three ties against Rutgers, Northeastern and Syracuse, as well as a 2–0 loss to Old Dominion going into a showdown with No. 1 North Carolina, who entered the game undefeated.

After a scoreless regulation, Rothenberger stepped up and fired home the game winner to effectively turn UMass' season around.

One week later against No. 2 and eventual 1994 National Champion, James Madison, she came through again.

With her team down 1–0, it was Rothenberger's penalty stroke goal that forced overtime and enabled UMass to pull off its second upset in as many weeks.

With those previous big goals on her resume, the Minutewomen, like Johnston, come to just expect production from the All–America candidate.

Stacy Walker, who stymied the Eagles' best chance to win by blocking their penalty stroke, said that she knew the game was over as soon as the stroke was celled.

"I knew it was in," said the junior goalkeeper. "She has all 18 of us confident."

The confidence Rothenberger has, when she steps up for a stroke, plays a key role in her success.

"I'm confident with my strokes, I've practiced them a lot. You just have to go up with head up, shoulders high and intimidate the goalie."

According to Donnelly, you can predict Rothenberger's success just by looking at her.

"You see something in her eye and you know its going in," Donnelly said.

As a midfielder, Rothenberger doesn't worry about just offense, as she has been solid defensively, as well.

With 33 seconds left in regulation, BC had a penalty corner and a chance to capture the game. Rothenberger came out and deflected the shot, thwarting the Eagle scoring opportunity.

What Rothenberger has added goes beyond what she does on the field. On a team that starts three freshmen, both vocally and by example, Rothenberger has clearly emerged into a leader.

"I try to use the experience I have to help everybody," she said. "We all help each other."

While Rothenberger was modest, Donnelly continued to laud her star player's leadership.

"She's playing better than she

Turn to ROTHENBERGER page 10

Minutemen pummel UMaine Black Bears

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

With 1994 A–10 Rookie of the Year Karsten Bremke sidelined with a groin pull, junior Dave Siljanovski stepped forward, spurring the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team (2–0–1) to a 4–1 drubbing of Maine (1–2) yesterday before 564 in attendance at Richard F. Garber Field.

Siljanovski served up a perfect cornerkick to the head of Mike Butler at the 23:39 mark and later added a pair of goals of his own, as the Minutemen, ranked fifth in New England, captured their second victory of the young season.

Massachusetts	4
Maine	1

The Black Bears entered the match ranked seventh in New England, but following an impressive opening 70 minutes, slowly saw their strength dwindle. UMass was able to capitalize by posting a pair of goals in the final 15 minutes to secure the victory.

"It's a good win," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "Maine's a tough team but they ran out of gas at the end. We had a lot of young players playing, with Karsten out of the middle, and we weren't sure going in how we'd control the middle of the field. But Steve Jones did a good job and we got a good all–around effort from everyone. I'm very pleased."

"We knew coming in that this would be a tough New England game," Siljanovski said. "We needed respect going into the BU game, the Hartford game and the UNH game, with them ranked ahead of us in the poll."

Maine opened the match with a ferocious swarming defense, keeping 10 players inside their own 18 on several early UMass attacks. Maine maintained the pressure, tenaciously attacking the ball carrier with up to five men.

The first serious Minuteman opportunity came as Siljanovski collected a Butler pass and rocketed a shot off the left post, in the 22nd minute.

Siljanovski returned the favor on the ensuing cornerkick by lofting a perfect ball right to the head of Butler, who flicked it past Maine goalkeeper Nathan Benoit.

The Black Bears roared back, just 33 seconds later, as Mike Dunphy tiptoed around UMass sweeper Bennie Sheally and fired a low shot past goalkeeper Eric Gruber.

While a precision short passing game started to open up windows in the Maine defense, the UMass defense was solid, blocking a pair of drives by Maine off of a direct kick in the 33rd minute. Joe Jacobson's stellar job of stopping Maine's top scorer Jake Ouimet helped hold off the Black Bears.

UMass took the lead for good at the 43:07 mark as Siljanovski sailed a 25–yard freekick over the six–man Maine defensive wall and just inside the top left corner.

Maine spread out their offense to open the second half, producing some serious opportunities, but Gruber had to make but one save in registering his second win of the year.

By the 70th minute, Maine finally collapsed after receiving a pair of yellow cards at the 76:20 mark, their third and fourth of the match.

Just nine seconds later, UMass was awarded a penalty shot after Jared Morse tripped Siljanovski. Benoit was able to get a hand on it and deflect Siljanovski's shot, but could not keep it out of the net, as the Minutemen took a 3–1 lead. The goal was Siljanovski's fourth in three games.

"That's [Siljanovski's] job, to score goals," Koch said. "He's doing it now and what's great is that even if they put two men on him, [Colin] Johnson, Butler and [Paul] Corcoran and others can score some goals for us. It's great that there's not as much pressure on Siljanovski and that's part of the reason why he's putting them in."

Junior Fabio Maniatty, a transfer from Liberty University, closed the scoring with his first UMass goal, off of a Brad Kurowski feed, just 31.5 seconds from full–time.

Corcoran, a freshman, continued his exceptional play for the Minutemen yesterday. In each of the first three matches, Corcoran's play offensively, defensively and in the midfield has been sensational. Corcoran's precise throw–ins added another weapon to the UMass arsenal yesterday, as well as in the win over La Salle and tie with Virginia Tech this past weekend.

"[Corcoran's] done an outstanding job," Koch said. "He's not playing like a freshman. He stepped in when we needed him to do a good job for us and he's been able to do it."

UMass will return to action Saturday at Garber Field when they host new A–10 foe Fordham at 1 p.m.

Campanile will be QB

By Mike Brown
Collegian staff

University of Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges has given sophomore Vito Campanile the starting nod at quarterback for the 1995 season.

It was a photo–finish between the three contenders, but it was Campanile who edged senior Andrew McNeilly and sophomore Anthony Catterton for the job.

Campanile sat out last season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament suffered in a preseason scrimmage, and was medically redshirted as a result.

The UMass quarterback last saw action in 1993, when he stepped in for the then–injured McNeilly and led the Minutemen to three wins in four starts throwing for 371 yards during that span. With a year's experience breaching Campanile's career, he is not phased by his long comeback and is focused on the task at hand.

"I was talking to my cousin last week and he said that you got to remember that the game doesn't change, it's football and you've got to remember that," he said. "You have to step in and do what needs to be done."

Campanile is certain his knee problem will not hinder his performance on the field. He knows worrying about an injury can only hurt his game, he feels blocking out the pain and self–inflicted pressure is the way to go.

"My knee is as good as it's going to get. I'm fine. Would I say it were 100 percent? No," Campanile said. "I'm not worried about it when I go out there. I'm ready to go."

The decision is made, the knee is intact, and now Campanile is one of the main attractions of the Minuteman attack. He is the favored quarterback at practice and the UMass offense prepares for its first game with its field general.

"I feel a lot better and I feel a lot more comfortable because I'm getting a lot more reps with the people that are going to be in the game," he said. "That is a big factor."

Choosing the starting quarterback was a very difficult decision for Hodges. Campanile's preseason performance forced Hodges to ask his three–year starter and incumbent at quarterback, McNeilly, to take the back seat and give Campanile shotgun for the start of the season.

"Overall, Vito demonstrated an ability to move the team and make plays better than the other guys," Hodges said. "He's been consistent and we need some-

Turn to FOOTBALL page 10

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore quarterback Vito Campanile will take the first snap for UMass in its home opener against Richmond on Saturday.

Who will win Prime Time Sweepstakes?

Is this the year for the AFC to finally win a Super Bowl? If Deion Sanders returns home to Miami to play for Don Shula, the answer could very well be yes. The line to sign Prime Time forms at the rear and the winner of the Sanders sweepstakes will be the odds on favorite to take home the 30th Lombardi trophy. The AFC has caught up to the NFC with talented teams overall, but only the Dolphins are a serious threat to Dallas and San Francisco this year. Without further adieu, here is how the teams stack up.

Smith
NFL

AFC East — The most competitive division in the NFL. Is this Don Shula and Dan Marino's farewell tour? If they win it all, they will leave on top. The Big Tuna has a running back now to compliment Drew Bledsoe, but the Pat's are just a defensive line away from the big dance. The Bills need to deal their aging stars for young prospects in order to rebuild. The Colt's will surprise a lot of people and Marshall Faulk will run wild with a real quarterback to accompany him. Rich Kotite had talent with the Eagles and couldn't win when it counted, how can he help the talent–depleted Jets?

1. Miami — One more Prime Time off–season deal to make and they can reserve hotels in Tempe, Az. for January.

2. New England — Can Bledsoe's arm score more points then its defense will allow?

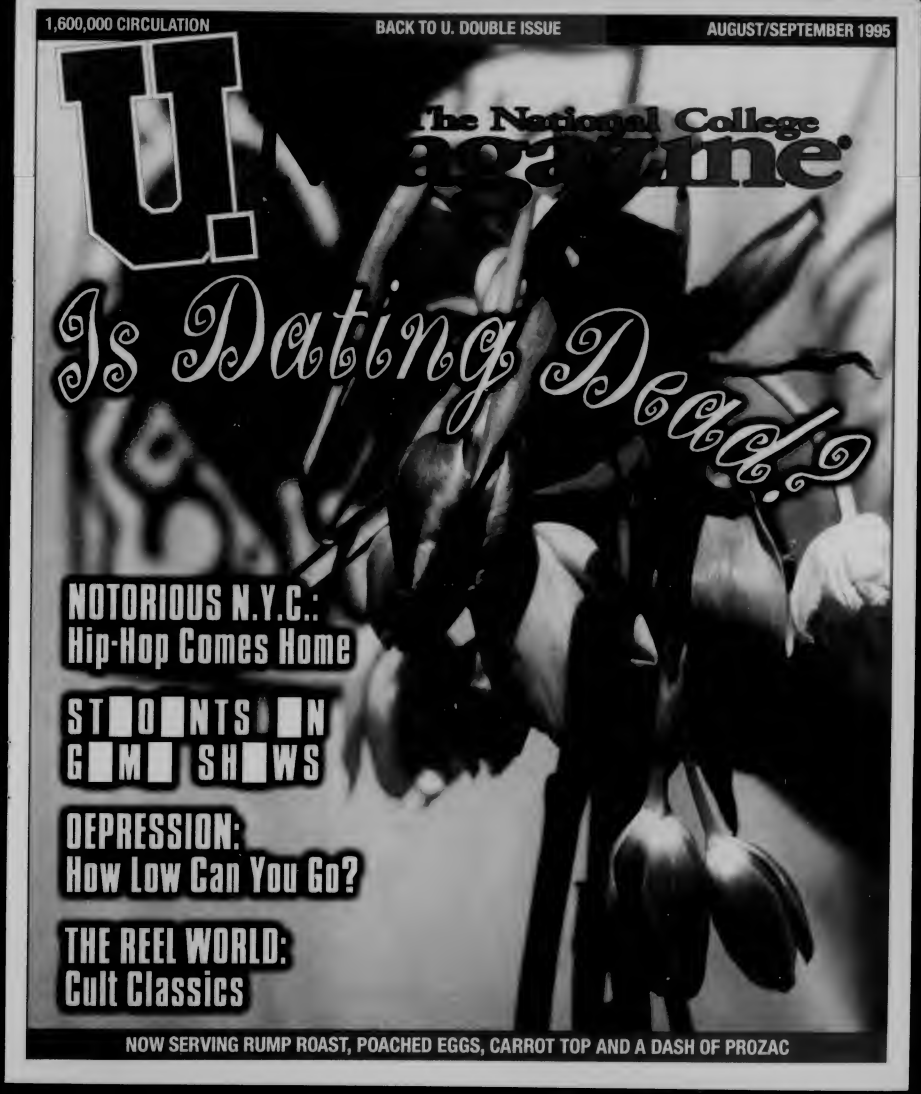
3. Indianapolis — Can anyone stop Faulk?

4. Buffalo — Without the Fountain of Youth, Kelly and Co. won't go anywhere.

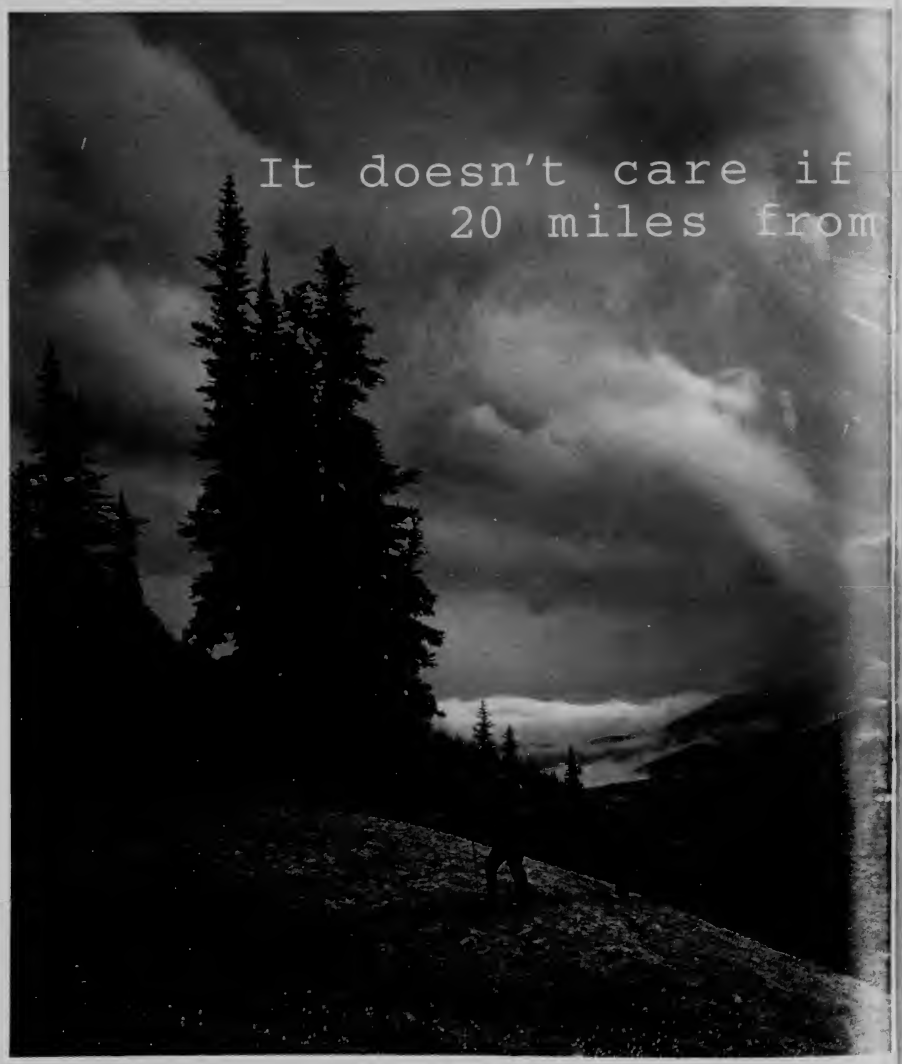
5. New York Jets — Bubby Brister is not the answer.

AFC Central — Pittsburgh should have been in the Super Bowl last year and free agent losses will hurt tremendously. Cleveland has the defensive dogs to sink their teeth into

Turn to NFL page 9



1,600,000 CIRCULATION
BACK TO U. DOUBLE ISSUE
AUGUST/SEPTEMBER 1995
U.
The National College magazine
Is Dating Dead?
NOTORIOUS N.Y.C.: Hip-Hop Comes Home
STUDENT GAME SHOWS
DEPRESSION: How Low Can You Go?
THE REEL WORLD: Cult Classics
NOW SERVING RUMP ROAST, POACHED EGGS, CARROT TOP AND A DASH OF PROZAC



"WHAT'S THE WEATHER GONNA DO?"

is a question asked by rookies.

The answer to this question is obvious.

It'll do what it damn well pleases when it pleases.

or only wearing a T-shirt.

It has better things to do.

storms to brew, winds to whirl,

that sort of thing.

Not that weather doesn't occasionally listen in.

It eavesdrops on the millions of forecasts transmitted through it daily, and in a low,

hearty rumble,

laughs.

Just

do it.

ACG

NIKE

U. VIEWS

The naked truth

Just because Tom Carter has never seen a naked woman before doesn't make it obscene (U. Mail, May 1995). I'm sure that the young woman in the photograph was shocked to learn that he considers her a barnyard animal. I hope that Mr. Carter doesn't make this his latest crusade in his ongoing effort to make a name for himself in right-wing circles. Get off the soapbox and start working on solving real problems.

Robert Fernandez, senior, U. of South Florida

If you believe in God (Judeo-Christian, and 75 percent of us do, according to the poll), and you believe that humans are created in God's image, then finding the human form "obscene" is to find God's image obscene as well. If ya don't like the merchandise, the fault lies with the manufacturer.

Simon Rubenstein, senior, UCLA

Land of the free

I read "Banner Yet Waves" (May 1995), and I was appalled that so many people find it difficult to acknowledge our national flag. Are we, as one melting pot of individual cultures, no longer believers in true diversity? Or is it that because we are so diverse, we fail to realize what plucked the strings in our ancestors' hearts to create this wonderful nation?

Although many would say America has many strengths and weaknesses, would we not rather say that throughout it all, our national flag has been a symbol of what the entire world has sought to be? Stand up and honor our nation's flag.

A.J. Werner, sophomore, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical U., Ariz.

Getting to U.

OD on sarcasm [Welcome to U. 1995], but I found the information insightful. How do I enter these contests? Can I write for U. Magazine? How?

Beckie Cheung, freshman, U. of California, Davis

Editor's Note: For more info on our contests, see page 3 of this issue. If you'd like to write for U., send clips and story ideas to Frances Huffman, Editor, U. The National College Magazine, 10100 Century Park East, #1020, Los Angeles, CA 90067-5513.

Preview blues

I am upset with the [coverage of] the new Ron Howard film, Apollo 13 (May 1995). This is by far one of the greatest rescue operations ever. Due to an explosion, mission control, as well as the astronauts, had no idea what was wrong or if the capsule was able to be brought back. They were not lost in space, as you were led to believe by [the] comments. I am a movie fan. This is a story that is living overdue in being told, and it should not lose its significance by people misinterpreting the story.

And an added "F" to whoever is responsible for the caption in the photograph "Riding mower, space shuttle. Same difference, right?" Space travel is not something to be taken lightly, much less to be made fun of. It was far from funny.

Todd Christopher, junior, Ohio State U.

Anti-opinion poll?

I'm writing in regard to your May students opinion poll. Are you pro-choice or anti-abortion? The polling revealed 57 percent pro-choice and 43 percent anti-abortion. But upon reading the students' comments, I noticed an incredibly high number of anti-abortion views printed in comparison with those pro-choice. To be exact, I found only three statements, out of the 12 expressed, to be consistent with the 57 percent pro-choice. Are the people in charge of the polling subtly revealing their own opinion? Or do you just feel that because anti-abortionists have been so loud, outspoken and sometimes violent in expressing their beliefs, you need to give them more space in your magazine? It greatly disturbs me that you can so easily distort the information that's been given to you. Is this what your magazine has come to? I hope not.

A.E.B., senior, U. of Houston

I would like to make a suggestion for you when preparing an opinion poll. When you ask the question, "Are you pro-choice or anti-abortion?" you are already, by means of the way your question is phrased, biasing your readers. "Anti" causes a negative emotion in readers, whereas "pro-" causes a positive feeling. "Pro-abortion" and pro-life" would be more appropriate. You would be omitting the "anti-" bias-producing word. I would suggest that you repoll your readers using language that is consistent with an unbiased philosophy of journalism — one that promotes objectivity, not liberalism.

Actually, when you really analyze the situation, "pro-choice" denotes that a choice is available for all involved. However, the baby is given no choice in an abortion. Consider the possibility that you and your staff could have been aborted babies as a result of the misguided irresponsibility of the parents.

J. Kim Cook, grad student, Texas A&M U.

ILLUSTRATION BY BRYCE MORGAN, ARIZONA STATE U.

O.J.: What's your verdict?

Guilty: 57 %
Innocent: 31 %
Not Sure: 5 %
Don't Care: 4 %
Other: 3 %

I think O.J. is guilty, but America is drawing this thing out so much that he'll probably get off. Phillip Kraft, junior, U. of Maryland

Just because he was a wife beater doesn't mean he's a murderer. Megan Hollmann, junior, U. of Maryland, College Park

Guilty as sin. Tim Smith, senior, Eastern Michigan U.

If he were a Hispanic man who worked in a diner, he'd already be convicted and in jail. Perhaps this trial will prove one thing: that money can buy anything in this country, even justice. Stacey Cohen, junior, U. of Alabama

I don't believe anybody could be so stupid as to leave that much evidence around. Chenoa Sykes, grad student, U. of Cincinnati

When was the last time you saw an innocent man fleeing from a crime scene? Dennis Dobbs, senior, U. of Minnesota

I think that Nicole's best friend, Faye Resnick, did it. Jennifer Logan, freshman, Sam Houston State U., Texas

Three letters for you: D-N-A. He's guilty. Katherine Patterson, freshman, Kent State U.

My verdict is: Who cares? Nick Rupp, grad student, U. of North Carolina, Greensboro

I hope that justice will [prevail] and that if he's guilty he'll be dealt with severely. If he isn't guilty, let him go and let's move on. Gregory Casey, sophomore, Grambling State U., La.

This Month's Question

Should the government regulate Internet activity?

800/6U-VIEWS 688-4397 Ext. 63

Nothing is for Everyone

Experts say our generation knows nothing, knows nothing and will become nothing. What's the problem?

Nothing is the great natural resource it once was. Nothing is a good investment. Nothing lasts forever, and an ever-growing slice of America has nothing to call its own.

Nothing is in our wallets, in our leaders, in our media. We're given nothing every day, and every day we have nothing to show for it.

Our very dollar — the essence of American being — is backed by deot, backed by nothing. What do Wall Sueet traders really trade? Nothing. Hog futures? Hogs that do not yet exist? Nothing.

Nothing is keeping American industry alive. U.S. companies are producing nothing in America; U.S. auto makers are selling nothing at a fair price, and we're axporting nothing to Japan.

Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich has promised nothing for public broadcasting, nothing for the arts and nothing for education. In return, many Democrats say Gingrich is good for nothing. Interesting.

But the Republicans credit the media for nothing. I think they're right. The entire media-created and media-sustained idea of Generation X is based on the premise that we do nothing. "There's nothing to it," media executives say. I agree.

The mega-hit fixture of NBC's entire programming week — Seinfeld — is a self-proclaimed show about nothing. The satirical wit of syndicated columnist Dave Berry is about nothing.

Angst and indifference are nothing. The collective cultural derivative of an aborted Pearl Jam tour — nothing. (Nothing should be written in stone.)

What do we have after eight months of the O.J. trial? Nothing.

Kato Kaelin. Joey Buttafuoco. Fuck. These people did nothing. And their message is simple — nothing guarantees a successful Hollywood career.

Late-night infomercials are nothing. "You too can make nothing by doing nothing at home. Send nothing for our new self-help video 'You'll do nothing, and you'll like it.' Just call 1-800-NOTHING."

Scholars, politicians and half-baked columnists, all with sweeping psychobabble stereotypes of our generation. All — nothing.

So next time someone tries to tune you in with everybody else, just let him know that nothing is for everyone.

"Thanks," you say?

It's nothing.

By Robert Manker, Assistant Editor

Accepted at more schools than you were.

It's everywhere you want to be.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1994

U Magazine

PUBLISHER & EDITORIAL DIRECTOR

EDITOR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

WRAP/MUSIC EDITOR

ASSISTANT EDITORS

ART DIRECTOR

ADVISORY COUNCIL

PRODUCTION AND OPERATIONS

MARKETING, RESEARCH AND PROMOTION

ADVERTISING SALES OFFICES

Main Office

New York

Midwest & Detroit

Dallas

San Francisco/Pacific Northwest

AMERICAN COLLEGIATE NETWORK INC.

U Magazine is published nine times a year and printed in the U.S.A. on recyclable paper. Subscriptions are $18. Copyright © 1995 U Magazine and American Collegiate Network are registered trademarks of American Collegiate Network, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Printed with ABC

U. VIEWS / The Campus Dialogue
4 U. Mail, Opinion Polls and Nothing is for Everyone

QUICKIES / Our Concession to Your Attention Span
8 Charming campus anecdotes in tasty, digestible chunks.

U. NEWS / The Lighter Side Of...
10 Rump Roast, Pre-College Rx, The Man Behind the Mascot, College Trek, U. Lose, 15 Minutes and oh-so-much more.

U. LIFE / Where The Wild Things Are 14 Pop / May the Cash Be With You
In the collectibles market, kitsch culture equals cash.
14 Tech / The Daily Download
On-line student newspapers — there's nothing like a hot cup of coffee and the morning web page.
15 OffBeat / Abracadabra
Magic: The Gathering — I'll see your elemental and raise you a warlock.
16 Class / Transferitis: A New U.?
Switching schools makes you the new kid on the block.
16 Pulse / An Apple a Day...
From hangovers to hangnails, home remedies are a cheap, if not reliable, option.
18 Etc. / Don't Myth Out
Legends and lore from Campustown, USA. Folks 'round here say it's haunted. —
18 Dollars / Bookstore Backlash
Textbook buyback policies — is The Man keeping you down?

FEATURES / More Liberal Media Agenda Setting
19 Sweeping up Stardust
So ya wanna make it in movies, eh kid? Well, here's where you start paying — in sweat.
21 Breaking Tradition
College isn't restricted to the young and carefree crowd, whippersnapper — some full-time students are parents and even grandparents.
22 Friends in Low Places
Clinical depression is more than just a bummer — especially when it happens to a friend.
23 Big Money! Big Money! No Whammies!
Students on game shows agree on one thing — Alex Trebek may be smarter, but frankly, Vanna's got the vowels.

COVER STORY
25 Courtship Adjourned?
When's the last time you or anyone you know went on an honest-to-god, flowers-at-the-door, peck-on-the-cheek date? Exactly. Has Blockbuster and beer replaced dinner and dancing?

28 Leaps of Faith
Looking for God can lead students off the beaten path, and the line between "alternative" religion and cult can be a thin one.

R+R / Rock 'n' Reel — Braincandy Blowout!
30 Cult-ure Shock
From Corman to The Cars That Ate Paris, these are movies for people who like to talk smart about movies.
32 The Empire Strikes Back
New York's frenetic hip-hop scene deploys the Imperial fleet.
34 Rock
Urge Overkill's disposable swank — plus Rapid Fires, Pocket Band and our U. Radio Chart
35 Reel
El Mariachi's sequel, Desperado — plus On The Set with Quentin Tarantino.

WRAP / Say Goodnight, Gracie
38 All-Consuming Passion
You are what you buy. Plus Double Take and Strip Tease.

CARROT TOP / Guest Expert
In the Raw
We tore Carrot Top away from his comedy tour (kicking, screaming and cursing Madonna the whole way) just long enough to get his not-so-expert opinion on a smorgashord of stories. Why? Because you like him. Carrot Top was named "1994 Campus Entertainer of the Year," but who really cares? He's darn funny and oh-so-much more than a flaming redhead with an attitude.

Cover Photo by Justin Warren, UCLA

August/ September 1995

Student's Little Helper?
Page 22

"I've got your Daily Double right here, Alex."
Page 23

What's love got to do with it?
Page 25

Campus Shots

All packed up and nowhere to go. David Lieb takes a break between the crates while helping daughter, Annie, a U. of Iowa student, move in.

Photo by Carey Diego-Saavedra, U. of Iowa

QUICKIES

Illustrations by Mark Berry, Colorado State U.

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Mankato State U., Minnesota

GOOD THINGS ALWAYS HAPPEN in threes. It was diplomas all around for the Sogge family when father, daughter and son all graduated on the same day this spring. Coincidence? Maybe, but only two years before that, their aunt, uncle and grandmother also crossed the Mankato State stage within hours of each other to receive their diplomas. Didn't Sister Sledge sing about these guys?

DRINK UP!
U. of Florida

GEORGE SORIANO OF THE U. of Florida has a drinking problem, but he says he can handle it. Snapple Corp. sent Soriano, a senior, 20 cases of the drink in response to a letter he wrote singing the praises of the company's product. For his laudations of the fruity beverage, Soriano received 480 16-ounce bottles of strawberry lemonade — his favorite flavor — and a Snapple watch. "I'm kind of addicted to Snapple," he says.

TEA TIME, PART 2
U. of California, Davis

(BEGAN FROM SPRING '95.)
After deciding the perky drink ads were "really terrible," UCD student Sean Flinn and his bandmates decided to "juice up" the radio jingle. Although their dream of receiving free cases of the beverage were shattered, they did get some money and that groovy watch. "It constantly puts a smile on my face," Flinn says. Hearing the song on the radio, that is.

PITCHER PERFECT
Ohio U.

"AS THE SAYING GOES, A PICTURE'S WORTH A THOUSAND ... BEERS. Yeah, that's it. Or maybe it's a thousand beers are worth a picture. Ohio U. '95 graduate A.J. Wolfe thought so. For his spring documentary photography class he brewed up a project — Beer Goggles: Love, Beer and Court Street. This is How We Look — on the Athens bar scene. "It's a documentary of us as college students," Wolfe says. A Court Street deli displayed the heady exhibition in June. And the best thing about it is the more you drink, the better it looks. Just kidding.

ON YOUR MARKS
Brigham Young U.

THE PROMISE OF extra quiz points seduced approximately 50 Brigham Young students to race against the clock — and their professor. Students in Bill Hansen's business law class strapped on their sneaks at 6:30 a.m. to meet the professor's challenge: If he beat 75 percent of the class in the race, he'd give the whole class an extra quiz grade of 10. The catch was that at least 75 percent of the class had to sprint out of bed for the early morning run and lose the race. Although some ran from the opportunity, 90 percent of the class showed up.

SUPER-SAFE SEX
U. of Georgia, Athens

IT'S A BIRD! IT'S A PLANE! IT'S A PROPHYLACTIC! The new superhero for safe-sex students, Condom Man, appears on Georgia campuses to dispense rubbers of all colors, styles and tastes. Recently spotted at the U. of Georgia's lesbian, gay and bisexual student union's awareness week, mild-mannered Jonathan Kivett donned his cape and teamed up with his STD fighting partner Rubber Maid to provide protection for all.

YOU MAY ALREADY BE A WINNER
U. of Tennessee, Knoxville

TAMMY BEAVERS, A U. of Tennessee senior, got a visit from the prize patrol, and she never even had to send it in. She just signed up for on-campus living and won a free room for the '96 spring semester. The director of residence halls, Jim Grubb, really got into the Ed McMahon spirit as he delivered the news of her prize right to her dorm room with the announcement "Dreams really do come true!" We hear Grubb's been hanging out at the dean's office, laughing at all his jokes.

CENTS AND SENSIBILITY
U. of Florida

WHOEVER SAID ONE CENT won't buy anything hasn't been hanging around the ultimate penny-pincher and recent U. of Florida grad Joshua Smith. His freshman hobby of picking pennies off the ground, saving change and receiving donations from friends allowed him to pay off the remaining $99.01 he owed for tuition his senior year. The office graciously accepted the coins, after insisting that Smith put his name, Social Security number and phone number on each of his 198 rolls. Scrooge McDuck would be proud.

COMING TO AMERICA
Florida A & M U.

FLORIDA A & M OFFICIALS SAY they plan to breed, sell and maybe even eat (yes, eat) the $5,500 worth of South African boer goat semen the school recently purchased. The university bought the semen from the $80,000 goat because of the large frame, meatiness and consistent coloration associated with the breed — three qualities lacking in North American goats. Talk about bahhhhhhd investments.

TRASHY GET-UPS
Mankato State U., Minnesota

WHO NEEDS THE MALL WHEN you have recycling bins? Members of the women's center at Mankato State hosted a toxic fashion show in April to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Earth Day. Partier-pants strutted their bad, plastic, environmentally unfriendly selves while emcees explained the recyclability of their outfits. One student carried an umbrella made of 12 pack soda cartons and wore plastic garbage bag pants. But first prize in our book goes to the student who wore a full length skirt made of plastic MSU student ID cards.

ALTERNATIVE EATING?
U. of Massachusetts, Amherst

AMHERST STUDENTS with cafeteria blues can take their business elsewhere. Two alumni have created the Off-Campus Meal Plan, which entitles students to as much as a 15-percent discount at 10 area restaurants. And if they get a hankering for deep-fried mystery meat, students can always go back to Chez Amherst. Richard N. Rossi, Amherst's director of food services, says the university meal plan is actually cheaper, but that the school will honor the off-campus card at one location.

"C"S GET DEGREES
Broward Community College, Fla.

MAYNE EDWARD W. SEESE WAS a big David Letterman fan. When Seese died in March, he left behind $4.5 million to be used only for scholarships to "C" students, much like a smaller gift the gap-toothed comic endowed to his alma mater, Ball State U. The state of Florida might later add to the Fort Lauderdale businessman's contribution and raise the total to $8.5 million. The bequest, the largest in the school's history, could benefit as many as 250 average Joes and Joettes each year.

GOLDFINGER
U. of Houston

TO CARRIN HUBER, A FINGER is worth $440,000. That's the amount she accepted to drop a lawsuit stemming from an incident at a 1991 U. of Houston fraternity party. Huber, a former U. of Houston student, said she lost her right pinkie fingertip attempting to break up a fight between her boyfriend and Stephen Jack Ferro, former chapter president of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. Ferro said he bit the finger in self defense.

HEY, THESE AREN'T MY SIZE
Cedarville College, Ohio

A FORMER CEDARVILLE COLLEGE STUDENT has been sentenced to probation for stealing 257 pairs of panties, three bras and three slips. Daniel Meeder, 25, admitted pilfering the panties from Cedarville dorms and the bras and slips from a local Laundromat. The undergarments began disappearing last year and were later found in Meeder's apartment. The presiding judge also ordered Meeder to undergo counseling and pay $174 in restitution. Sounds like he got off easy.

SHARING A 10' X 14' ROOM
THAT'S YOUR BEDROOM, ENTERTAINMENT ROOM,
LOVE ROOM, DINING ROOM, STUDY ROOM,
AND RECREATION ROOM DOESN'T LEAVE MUCH ROOM FOR A COLOR PRINTER.

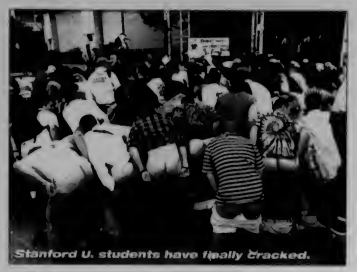
The BJC-70 Color Printer

Introducing the compact Canon BJC-70 Color Bubble Jet Printer. Brilliant color. Fast, sharp black and white. Holds up to 30 sheets of paper. Small price. Big two-year limited warranty. Free InstantExchange. And of course, the perfect size for any container you now call home. Need more info? Call 800-848-4123, Ext.101.

Canon

U. NEWS



Stanford U. students have really cracked.

Rump Roast

A BRIEF BUT MEMORABLE EPIDEMIC OF FULL MOON fever struck Stanford U. in June when resourceful psychology students turned a class project into a Guinness record. Well, almost.

The group of students tested the limits of marketing influence by publicizing Moon at Noon, an organized protest against university policies and an attempt to set the record for mass mooning.

What the mooners and gawkers alike didn't know was that the "protest" was actually part of a research project testing theories of influence used by advertisers and salespeople. The students had to use social-influence techniques to encourage people to do something they wouldn't ordinarily do.

With a tempting lack of mooning records in the Guinness Book to inspire them, the students posted fliers and contacted local newspapers and radio stations to maximize coverage and interest in the event.

And unwitting students at Stanford took to the idea as a rebellious move against what they felt were increasingly strict rules set by the university.

"Moon" organizers had to grin and bare it along with approximately 220 cheeky drawer-droppers and 700 witnessing jaw-droppers who showed up at the crack of noon to lend their buns to the cause.

Photo by Teressa Ann Trusty, The Stanford Daily

The Buzz

• Gina Grant will attend Tufts U. this fall. Grant was initially accepted by Harvard U. and Columbia U., but both universities rescinded after admissions officials discovered that in 1990 she had pleaded no contest to manslaughter charges for the death of her mother.

• Remember the Harvard murder/suicide from last spring (junior Sinedu Tadesse stabbed her roommate, junior Trang Ho, 45 times and then hanged herself)? Been wondering what more has come out (especially since before the incident, the school newspaper had received a note and picture of Tadesse reading, "Keep this picture. There will soon be a very juicy story involving the person in this picture.")? Keep wondering. The Harvard Crimson turned over the note and photo to police, and the Middlesex County district attorney's office has nothing new to report on the case, says D.A. spokesperson John Towle.

• U.S. District Court Judge C. Weston Houck ruled in June that Shannon Faulkner, the first woman member of the Citadel's all-male cadet program, will not live in the school's infirmary — apart from the male cadets — or receive a less strenuous training program. Citadel officials withdrew their request that Faulkner shave her head in the fall when she begins the cadet program.

• During promotions of its college football coverage, ABC Sports is airing music performed by the Michigan State U. marching band. Eighty-five of the band's 285 members recorded a fight song in June to be used in the spots.

Pre-College Rx

THESE DAYS, IT'S NOT a question of if you are going to college but where — four-year university or community college? But what if even that choice was taken away?

Outrageous? Not to the Californians for Community College Equity, who have proposed to eliminate all freshman and sophomore classes at state universities and shift them to 107 community colleges.

"Community college transfers are outperforming the people who start as freshmen at University of California and California State University schools," says Robert Oliphant, executive director of CCCE. "You're not only saving money, but you also improve the quality of the upper-division programs."

U. of California, Berkeley, senior Mark Leong doesn't see a problem with the proposal. "I went to community college first, and I don't think the experience diminishes my education," he says.

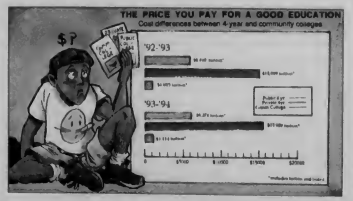
Could this signal the end of freshman life as we know it?

"I think this idea sucks," says Deidra Hale, a freshman at CSU, Northridge. "Being forced into a community college regardless of how well we do in high school is unfair because it takes away our choice."

"If I'm smart enough to get into a university, I should be able to go to that university," agrees Cecelia Waring, a CSU, Sacramento, sophomore.

"There are a lot of myths surrounding this idea," says Charles Lindahl, associate vice chancellor of the CSU system. "Where they implemented it, it failed."

Florida put the concept to the test in the '60s by creating four upper-division-only universities, but they weren't equipped to adapt to the state's rapidly growing population, says Alan Stonecipher, spokesperson for the Florida State U. System Board of Regents.



"We had to keep changing and adding on to the university system," Stonecipher says. "So in 1981, the legislature authorized lower divisions for those four universities."

Under the new system, students could save some serious cash, but at what expense?

"If they do this, there isn't any incentive to do well in high school," Hale says. "I studied hard, helped out in student government, volunteered, and I don't know if I would have done it if someone told me this only place I could start was at a community college."

Amy Zukeran, Florida A&M U./ Illustration by Korey Coleman, U. of Texas, Austin

Go Speed Racer, Go!

SOME KIDS SETTLE FOR TEE BALL AND MAJOR league dreams. Others dribble on the playground, hoping for dunks in the Final Four.

Not Adam Friend. He found inspiration on a race track in Maine and pursued his dream to race stock cars — and New Hampshire College picked up part of the tab.

Friend, a junior at New Hampshire College, persuaded his school to give him an athletic scholarship — worth more than $15,000 — to race.

"When I went looking for a sponsor, I knew I couldn't ask Pepsi or Pennzoil, because they probably weren't going to give that kind of money to a raw rookie," says Friend, who's 21. "So I said to my parents, 'What about the school?' They thought I'd flown over the cuckoo's nest, but that only made me want to do it 110 percent more."

Armed with plenty of enthusiasm and a detailed proposal, Friend took his dream straight to the president of the 1,100-student college. Friend sold the administration on his unique idea for representing the college, and they gave him the green light and some cash. Although the Maine Ford Dealers give Friend some financial support, New Hampshire College is his main sponsor.

From the cuckoo's nest to the American–Canadian 18-race tour circuit, Friend's proposal has taken off. He's probably the only driver to show up at races with a Ford Thunderbird bearing his school's name and blue-and-yellow colors.

"I knew if I could make this thing fly, it would be good for the school," Friend says.

And with the exception of the all-too-frequent speeding ticket he gets when he's feeling competitive on the highways of New England, Friend says he has tried not to let racing change his life as a student.

"People don't look at me like a celebrity or anything," he says. "And I don't expect them to. I go to college and people see me every day. I'm just a regular person."

Ryan D'Agostino, Middlebury College/Photo courtesy Bill Weston

IF IT'S NOT STRONG
IT'S NOT BEAUTIFUL
VIBRANCE
NEW VIBRANCE ORGANIC CARE BUILDS STRONG HAIR. PENETRATING THE HAIR SHAFT. INFUSING ROOTS WITH ORGANIC NUTRIENTS. IT'S ROOTED IN STRENGTH.
VIBRANCE ORGANIC CARE

The Man Behind The Mascot

Who is that masked man? Tony the Tiger? No, it's Chris Ernest of Wayne State U., honest.

CHRIS ERNEST IS AT HIS BEST WHEN he's not himself. The junior from Michigan's Wayne State U. has played everything from McDonald's "Mac Tonight" to Michigan State U.'s "Sparty" to the Detroit Tigers' "Paws."

Ernest is clawing his way through school as a professional mascot.

The Ferndale, Mich., native got his start in 1989. A ninth grader at the time, Ernest began to shine as the "Mac Tonight" moon man for public appearances in the Detroit area. "My mom worked for the guy who made appearances as Ronald McDonald, and they needed somebody to fill in," he says. "I was just in the right place at the right time."

Then came stints as his high school mascot and later as Michigan State's "Sparty" Spartan. By that time, he says, mascoting was in his blood.

But when Ernest first stepped onto the lush, green grass of Tiger Stadium this summer, he knew his dream had come true. Twirling his orange-and-black-striped tail in his hand, Ernest debuted as the Tigers' first mascot — "Paws."

"I just sent in my resume," he says. "There were about 100 of us. There wasn't an actual tryout, just an interview process. They knew my talents ahead of time, I guess."

Ernest's favorite part of the job is playing cat and mouse with the crowd.

"The fans are really starting to like me," he says. "I enjoy being able to get smiles on the kids' faces. It's just the biggest rush. I just love to get people all pumped up.

"But getting people pumped up every day has its down side, too.

"I haven't had a day off in, like, three months," Ernest says. "But I love it.

"In addition to Tigers games, Ernest appears as Paws for birthdays, weddings and other functions.

"The only thing I won't do is bachelorette parties," Ernest says with as much pride as a man in a tiger suit can have. "That's just something for the reputation of the organization."

Ernest transferred from Michigan State to Wayne State this fall to be closer to his job, but he says he won't try out for the mascot job there. "I'm was too busy with Detroit," Ernest says. "And I'm not even sure Wayne State has a mascot."

Ernest, a broadcast journalism major, says he'd like to be the Tigers mascot for another five to 10 years before pursuing his ultimate career goal — sports broadcasting.

Ernest doesn't have a long-term contract with the Tigers, and he won't say how much money he makes — not even a ballpark figure. But he's not ruling out the idea of staying in his current field.

"Who knows what will happen," he says. "Maybe I can make the Tiger mascot bigger than life, maybe even bigger than the San Diego Chicken."

Tony Hansen, Michigan State U./ Photo courtesy Detroit Tigers Inc.

College Trek: The First Generation

AT TENNESSEE TECHNOLOGICAL U., TYPICAL reactions include screaming and tears. That's what Rick Stegall sees from students awarded one of the school's new "first-generation" scholarships.

Because his parents did not attend college, Samar Lightfoot can.

Stegall is director of the Capital Campaign fund-raising group at TTU, one of a growing number of schools offering special scholarships to students who demonstrate financial need and whose parents do not have bachelor's degrees. Terms of the programs vary from one school to another, but the principle behind them is the same.

One young lady that we awarded it to last year had already borrowed all the money she could borrow," Stegall says. "She broke down and wept; she was so happy."

Samar Lightfoot, a sophomore at Colorado State U., says his scholarship allowed him to attend CSU rather than a smaller school in his native Cleveland. "It's two less loans I have to take out," he says.

"If I didn't get a pretty big scholarship, I wouldn't be able to go here," says Josh Cooper, a senior at TTU. "I was relieved."

Paul Thayer, director of the center for educational access and outreach at CSU, takes credit for starting the first program of this kind in 1986.

In Colorado, people have seen how successful it has been in attracting and retaining students," Thayer says. "On a national level, it's probably being looked at as an alternative to other kinds of scholarships — race-based scholarships and the like.

Thayer says he doesn't know an exact number of the schools with similar programs, but he thinks CSU's programs is rare. "There's been a lot of interest," he says. "I really do think it's going to be a promising concept for a lot of places."

At CSU, approximately 275 students benefit from the program. In its first year, the TTU program had only eight recipients even though 60 percent of students were eligible, Stegall says.

"What's surprising is how well the students have done in terms of leadership and performance," Thayer says. "We're serving a different cut of students that isn't otherwise recognized, rewarded and encouraged."

Feona Huff, Norfolk State U., Va./ Photo by Erica Carlson, Colorado State U.

Affirmative Action: The Burning Question

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION'S 30-YEAR-OLD fire was again stoked this summer by the Supreme Court.

The Court's 5-4 decision made all race- and gender-based programs vulnerable to court challenges. But university admission, scholarship and hiring practices may get burned the worst.

"This [ruling] doesn't mean courts threw out affirmative action," says Andi Butler, director for affirmative action at Northwestern U.

But it does change how universities develop affirmative action plans, Butler says.

"The programs will be much more narrowly defined in order to survive the scrutiny test," she says.

Under the October 1972 Higher Education Guidelines, colleges and universities receiving federal funds were required "to make additional efforts to recruit, employ and promote qualified members of groups formerly excluded, even if that exclusion cannot be traced to particular discriminatory actions on the part of the employer."

The court's decision, however, hinged on the fact that the Constitution guarantees protection of individual — not group — rights.

On July 20, the U. of California regents abolished race-based preferences in admissions, hiring and contracting. The vote made UC the first university system in the nation to scale back its affirmative-action programs.

Paul Thomas, director of the U. of Colorado (CU)'s student advocacy center, is worried about the ruling's effect on minorities. "Minorities will be more pessimistic about opportunities available in higher education because they won't see the race-specific scholarships there," he says.

One way CU is trying to increase minority status is by changing admissions standards. All universities need to find a way around affirmative action," says Loren Sharpls, a senior at CU and president of the student body. "We have to find a new way to achieve the same result. Economic standards could be used instead. Approximately 15 percent of CU's student population is minority.

Sharply also is concerned about the ruling's impact on recruiting and retaining minority faculty. Down the road, he says, students could suffer from the lack of minority teachers.

Torrie Lima, associate director of the Office of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action at the U. of Utah, says the decision and its impact on the U. of Utah is still unclear.

The court applied a high and strict scrutiny standard to federal institutions, ... so it won't be as liberal as it once was," Lima says.

But the ultimate fate of affirmative action is still to be determined, especially since President Clinton is so against ending it.

"This particular decision has definitely perked everybody's ears up," Lima says. He says that affirmative action programs should have ongoing yearly reviews to make sure they're meeting the needs of their communities.

"We need to be more conscious of what we're doing in affirmative action," Butler says. "I don't think our work is done."

Erica Kaikofen, U. of Wisconsin, Stout/Illustration by Scott Magoon, Northeastern U.

Students Get the Last Laugh

MAYBE YOU REMEMBER competing in the school talent show. Maybe you recall singing "Yesterday" in a voice-cracking pubescent howl. Maybe you think you were pretty good. Well....

Youth and exuberance fade, but the talent show will always be around. And the mother of them all was recently initiated by MasterCard and the National Association of Campus Activities.

Featuring 10 finalists drawn from 81 schools and more than 200 contestants, the first National Collegiate Talent Contest represented the best of campus music and comedy. A Texas Southern U. a cappella group and a junior comedian from Christopher Newport U. in Virginia walked away the winners at the Anaheim, Calif., finals on Feb. 18.

"We were very nervous because they had some amazing talent," says Texas Southern U.'s Derek Brotherton, whose a cappella group 2nd Nature took first place and won $15,000. "We weren't eager to win or lose — we were just eager to sing."

This year's competition will include more than 100 schools, says Ron Lafitte, NACA's event coordinator. (Check with your campus student activities board to see if your school is registered.) There is also a new video submission category — students can send in short VHS tapes of musical or comedy routines to 13 Harvison Way, Columbia, SC 29212. Call NACA at 1-800-962-2287 for more information.

"The students get to intermingle with entertainment industry folks," Lafitte says. "It's a really great opportunity for them to get their talent shown and for agents to see what's out there."

Mandy Stadtmiller, Northwestern U.

Schools Drop Their Scores

PACK UP YOUR NO. 2 PENCILS, KIDS. A RECENT survey from the National Center for Fair and Open Testing reports that more than 200 colleges and universities have dropped SATs or ACTs as an admissions requirement.

Hasta la vista, SAT!

"The bottom line is that SAT/ACT scores are not good predictors of how students will perform in college," says Pamela Zappardino, executive director for the American testing watchdog group. "The best predictors are high school records."

Zappardino says the scores are unreliable and highly coachable, which gives added opportunity to students who can afford coaching material.

"Nothing says schools must use SAT scores, but our studies have shown an increase in the number of schools using [them]," says Jan Gams, executive director for the SAT College Board.

Kansas State U. offers open admission to students graduating from an accredited Kansas high school but requires SAT/ACT scores from out-of-state students.

"Requirements for out-of-state students are stricter, but we do not discourage them from applying," says Barbara Dawes, associate director of admissions at KSU.

Dawes believes that SAT/ACT scores are a good comparative assessment of a student's skills and sometimes all a school has to go on.

After one semester of being SAT/ACT free, Connecticut College has diversified its campus, a move that both students and faculty have praised.

"We felt attention on a four-year examination of quality was more important than a three-hour test," says Lee Coffin, Connecticut's dean of admissions.

Courtney Minden, a junior at Connecticut College, says the change is good and that she looks forward to a more well-rounded atmosphere.

"My SAT scores were a huge hit on my self-confidence because I didn't do as well as I'd hoped," Minden says. "I think some students fear college because of their scores. This way, students can think about college and not about outsmarting an SAT test."

Amy Osmulski, Texas Tech U./Photo by Maggie Welter, James Madison U.

Watch Your Step

WHEN YOU THINK OF PEOPLE TRAMPLING A stage, you probably envision a rock concert with a bunch of security guards yanking fans out of the spotlight.

But at the MGM studios in Orlando, Fla., about 50 members of six black fraternities and sororities stomped around on stage as much as they pleased... to the tune of a $5,000 award.

In this year's annual stepping competition, S.T.O.M.P.! '95, each team had only three minutes to wow judges with their best step routines. And we're not talking step aerobics. Stepping is a traditional dance made up of synchronized footwork and clapping that has been passed down through generations of black Greek life.

After outstepping the competition, the Phi Beta Sigma men from Clark Atlanta U., Ga., and the Delta Sigma Theta women of Southern Methodist U., Texas, walked away with the prize money.

Phi Beta Sigma members never doubted they'd take first place. "Of course we came on with a cocky attitude — who didn't?" says Phi Beta Sigma member William Jones.

Missed the competition? You can rush the stage at next year's event or catch S.T.O.M.P.! '95, hosted by rapper LL Cool J. and TV Siren Adrienne-Joi Johnson, on national TV this fall.

By La Chanda Jenkins, Howard U.

Step this way.

U. LOSE

Poached Eggs

At the U. of California, Irvine, "scrambled eggs" have taken on a new and disturbing meaning.

In June, three panels appointed by the university found that Ricardo Asch, a fertility specialist at UCI's Center for Reproductive Health, had transplanted patients' eggs and embryos and conducted research on them without the donors' knowledge or consent.

Officials at UCI announced in July that as many as 35 women may have been involved in improper transplantation of eggs and embryos at the clinic. The panel also found that at least nine patients received a non-FDA-approved fertility drug.

The initial findings by the panel released in June estimated that only five women received eggs from non-consenting donors.

The accusations alleged that Asch and two other doctors, Sergio Stone and Jose Balmaceda, mishandled the consent process, didn't report all of their earnings to the university and didn't make the required payments to the university for the undeclared income.

The investigation stemmed from several reports, dating to February 1994, filed by various administrators who dealt with the clinic. Because the investigation began seven months later, UCI also was accused of neglecting to respond quickly to the complaint, but the panels didn't sustain the allegation.

Fran Tardiff, a university spokesperson, says the investigation progressed slowly because the physicians refused to produce the necessary records and information. The panel also found that the university acted as quickly as it could to put together the investigations, Tardiff says. All three doctors have denied any wrongdoing.

On June 2, the university terminated its contract with the clinic and told its doctors to remove their medical equipment from campus.

Although the preliminary investigation is over, Tardiff says that the university is in the process of suing the clinic for records that the physicians have refused to release. Until those documents are recovered, "the true scope of the wrongdoings will remain unknown," she says.

"The doctors were wrong, and a lot of people here feel it was wrong for UCI to cover this up," says Ken Felipe, a sophomore at UCI. "It's not really the talk of the school or anything.... But I think an explanation of exactly what happened and what the school will do about it should be published."

Heather Orey, California State U., Fullerton

U.LIFE MAY THE CASH BE WITH YOU

E[illegible] GI Joes. Yeah, GI Joe was there, all right, [illegible] barbed wire [illegible] frowned and tested for flame [illegible].

It we'd known in the early '80s that the action figure would be worth up to $300 today, would we have gone easier on old Joe? Probably not. But now we're rummaging through the toys we didn't notch for some quick cash.

[illegible] Bernard, a junior at the [illegible] Austin, converted his [illegible] Smithsonian by trading his GI Joe [illegible] for a prototype [illegible] Star Trek action figure [illegible] Bill Sun, manager of the Pacific Zone in Santa Monica, Calif. It was the first one Sun ever saw in the store.

Some of the high-value items in the collectibles shop include a Star Commercial Land Speeder, $500; Grand Gore gas set, $225; and a light saber replica signed by Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker) that sells for more than $1,000.

View-Masters, Pez dispensers, Swatch watches and lunch boxes are a few other nostalgic items that collectors are snapping up in the '90s. But before you make plans to pay off next year's tuition with your Smurf collection, it's best to check their value in trade magazines so you don't get ripped off.

Collector bibles like Warman's Americana & Collectibles, Action Figure News & Toy Review and Amazing Figures give prices and guidelines for would-be collectors and sellers.

Junk, however, is still junk. Despite the revival of Daisy Duke short-shorts, the Dukes of Hazzard lunch box will net you only $10. Pac-Man fever, however, is still raging in collecting circles. The metal lunch box sporting that famous ghost chomper is worth about $40.

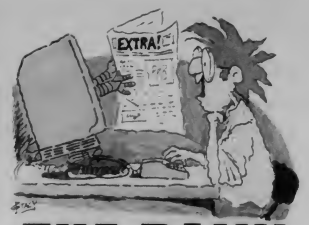
So don't plan on striking gold with every retro-tique in the attic. The current price tag of $120 for Remco's 1978, 12-inch energized Batman action figure may be encouraging, but Mattel's Masters of the Universe 6-inch He-Man figure ($10) will barely pay for a used CD.

Now that it's big money for little toys, all we can do is pray for the day that vinyl records and Garfield books make a comeback.

Casey Pogue, U. of Texas, Austin/Photo by Audrey Parsons, U. of Tennessee, Knoxville

POP

Valley of the Dolls? Barbie and friends are riding high in the collectibles market.



THE DAILY DOWNLOAD

[illegible] download. To date, more than 75 college publications have expanded to include on-line versions of their newspapers, and the number is growing rapidly as the information superhighway spins an even bigger Web.

Why the expansion from broad sheet to byte? Cost is one factor. "For smaller newspapers, the biggest expense is newsprint and distribution," says Marshall Miller, a junior at Brown U. and executive editor of the Brown Daily Herald. Being on the Web broadens circulation without the added expense of print.

"College students have the time, the knowledge and the freedom to try new things, and there are few barriers to their creative freedom," says Jeff Boulter, a senior at Bucknell U. in Pennsylvania and editor in chief of The Bucknellian, which jumped on the Web in 1994.

TECH

The story of The Bucknellian's on-line version is fairly typical: Initially the newspaper was available through Gopher, a clumsy Internet tool that limited the paper to a text-only format. Then the newspaper was placed on the Web, which, with the addition of pictures and graphics, made it more user-friendly.

The new audience for college newspapers ranges from students and alumni to random Web surfers. It's a little frightening to think that someone across the globe can read about what's going on at school just as easily as one of my classmates can," says Karen Apollo, a senior at Cornell U. "But as long as I have a paper copy of the Sun to keep me busy during lecture, I guess there's no harm in going on-line."

For those who fear that their campuses will become just another truck stop on the information superhighway, some editors have a more positive outlook.

"The college campus as a separate and secluded entity is a prehistoric notion," says Charles Ratliff, a grad student and editor in chief of The Summer Wildcat at the U. of Arizona. "The traditional campus will continue to be replaced by a more global and virtual one. ... The move to on-line newspapers is only part of a much larger trend, and a good one at that."

Good or bad, there remains much room for growth. Currently, most on-line papers are simply pared-down electronic editions of the original paper versions; they typically have all text and few or no photos. Unlike print editions, however, publications on the Web offer the bonus of linked sources, which allow immediate access to various Web sites, newspaper archives and school homepages.

So what exactly does the future hold? On-line papers will probably evolve into DIY publishing — Web users will designate, point by point, the exact content of the news or information they wish to receive rather than settle for the broad, standardized matter chosen by others.

But whether students and their publications are able to remain the creative spinners of the Web — or are destined to become entangled in it — has yet to be decided. Stay logged on.

Brian Saisberg, Harvard U./Illustration by Stacy Holmstedt, Arizona State U.

Check out our list of must-see college papers at: http://www.umagazine.com

ABRACADABRA

IT'S A MAGICAL LAND, BUT IT SURE ISN'T OZ. It's Dominia — and ruby slippers and good witches offer no solace when playing Magic: The Gathering.

Invented by Richard Garfield, a former mathematics professor at Whitman College in Washington, Magic is a role-playing fantasy game a la Dungeons and Dragons that uses poker-deck-sized playing cards to cast spells, summon creatures and conquer lands.

OFFBEAT

"Magic combines the natural fun of playing a game with the collectability aspect," says Paul Nobles, who organizes Magic tournaments out of his hobby shop in Minneapolis.

The combination was intentional, says Carrie Thearle, marketing director for Wizards of the Coast, which sells the game. The colorful cards, bearing images of scaly dragons, lush landscapes and wizards were designed by several artists to give each a unique quality.

Originally targeted at college students, interest in the game has expanded to include people of all ages. Magic is now so popular that Wizards of the Coast is able to deliver only one-tenth of the 900 million decks of cards ordered.

"It's brought a lot of new people into game and hobby shops," says U. of Minnesota senior John Stephenson, manager of Phoenix Games. "I've taught more than 150 people to play."

Players can acquire cards and build their decks by trading or betting on the game's outcome. "I usually don't [bet my cards], because it's so random," says U. of Iowa senior Doug Carlson. "[To bet], you just pick a card from your deck—it could be anything."

Players say Magic offers the chance to think strategically, pass the time — even take on a new personality.

"I've got a real thing for goblins," says Bryan Von Donslear, a U. of Iowa grad student. "I get together with friends, and I have this desire to utterly destroy them."

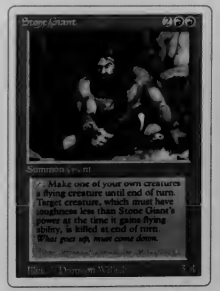
Starter decks for Magic retail for $8. Booster packs, which can add the card needed to conquer the world, cost between $1.50 and $3.

The game, with all of its twists, turns and infinite possibilities, has hooked enough players to create a $175 million-per-year business. It also seems to have cast a spell over some of its fans.

"We limit the amount [of Magic decks] that people can buy in one day," Stephenson says. "They were getting overly hooked — so into the game that they would use their food money to buy Magic."

U. of Iowa senior Mike Niemeyer insists that there are more harmful addictions. "It's better than drinking," he says. "At least you can play all night and still be OK when you wake up."

Devon Alexander, U. of Iowa



Stone Giant
Summon Giant
Make one of your own creatures a flying creature until end of turn. Target creature, which must have toughness less than Stone Giant's power at the time it gains flying ability, is killed at end of turn. What goes up, must come down.

BE WITH THE ONE YOU WANT TO BE WITH.

Somewhere, there is someone you want to be with. Let Greyhound take you there. We go to over 2400 destinations around the country. Fares are low every day on every bus. Just walk up and buy your ticket. You'll be on your way to a great time together. Don't let a few miles stand between you and that special someone. To find out about our low fares and convenient schedules, call 1-800-231-2222.

Go Greyhound and leave the driving to us.

© 1995 Greyhound Lines Inc. Certain restrictions and limitations apply

TRANSFERITIS: A NEW U.?

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED, transfer, transfer again. At least that's what some students say after unsuccessful attempts to choose the perfect college. Glossy brochures and admissions counselors don't always paint a realistic picture — some students find that the college they picked doesn't add up to their ideal institute.

CLASS

Suzanne Cobban, a senior at Ramapo College in New Jersey, has made transferring an art form — she has three notches in her undergraduate belt. Cobban, a New Jersey native, started at New York U. for a taste of city life but soon found cosmopolitan living less than glamorous.

"It was what I pictured life after college to be like — living on my own, taking care of day-to-day things," Cobban says.

She says her first transfer — to Boston College — was like going back to high school. "Very clique-y and nearly impossible for a transfer to meet people."

By the end of her sophomore year at Boston College, pressure to choose a major forced her into a yearlong sabbatical from school. Last fall, Cobban enrolled at Ramapo, and she plans, for the moment, to stay.

Josh McKinley, a sophomore at the U. of Miami in Ohio, transferred from Rhodes College in Tennessee to escape the crash course in Beer and Fraternity 101.

McKinley says he wasn't getting his money's worth at Rhodes. "I drank too much," he says. "I came here to calm down. It's a much bigger campus — drinking isn't the only thing to do."

Eric D. Stern, a junior at Northwestern U., considered transferring to a smaller school for a more personal education.

"You think [college] is going to be like Berkeley in the 60s — lots of activism and interaction with faculty," Stern says. "[But] I got thrown into huge classes where I hardly knew the professors." Once Stern learned how to find smaller, more personal classes at Northwestern, he changed his mind about transferring.

Gary Englegau, executive director of admissions and records at Texas A&M U., says that transferring is a good option for students who do the right research. "Students must recognize that four-year institutions have unique personalities with unique requirements," he says. "The earlier you investigate, the better."

Eating solo in the cafeteria, finding your way around campus and straightening out class credits top the list of hassles you can expect to encounter when transferring. But for many, temporary setbacks are worth the move.

Wes DelCol, now a senior at Rhodes College, transferred from Union College in New York. "I came from a prep school, and Union was just like [it]," DelCol says. "It was a huge fraternity school. The academics were fine for engineers, but it wasn't the best place in terms of off-campus opportunities."

With a year at Rhodes behind him, DelCol is settling in. "Sitting alone in the dining hall is a pain in the ass," he says. "I constantly questioned whether I made the right decision. [But] it wouldn't be transferring if you weren't starting all over again."

O.K. I'VE PAID TUITION AND HANDED IN MY TRANSCRIPT. NOW ALL I NEED TO KNOW IS WHAT KIND OF BEER THE STUDENTS DRINK HERE.
TRANSFER STUDENT REGISTRATION
MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO COLLEGE OF FUZZY NAVELS

Colleen Rush, Assistant Editor/ Illustration by Steve McNutt, Bucknell U., Pa.

The cure for hiccups is right at your fingertips.

AN APPLE A DAY...

RUBBING A WEDGE OF LEMON IN YOUR ARMPITS TO MEND A MIND-blowing hangover may not be how you spell relief. Still, you might want to give this and other home remedies a shot — they're cheap and easy, and they just might work.

Kitchen cabinet remedies aren't cure-alls, say Joan Wilen and Lydia Wilen, authors of Chicken Soup & Other Folk Remedies (Fawcett Columbine), but they do offer inexpensive and safe alternative treatments to minor ailments.

From head to toe, books on home remedies feature a variety of treatments for almost everything that ails you. For example, if you're snot on trying the lemon hangover cure, a tablespoon of honey every minute for five minutes may make you feel sweet again. Or load up on liquids — just not the kind that come with pink umbrellas.

PULSE

If insomnia is keeping you up all night, the Wilens suggest putting chunks of a yellow onion in a tightly sealed jar. When you have trouble falling asleep, open the jar and take a deep whiff. Either the initial shock or the gradual essence d'onion should knock you out in no time (about 15 minutes).

Instead of popping cough drops to soothe a sore throat, ease that dirty sock off after a long day and sleep with it wrapped around your neck. It'll take your sore throat — and breath — away. A convenient rationale for owning 30 pairs of dirty socks or a bona fide remedy? Take a stinkin' guess.

Meanwhile, at the bottom (that's feet — what were you thinking?), salt water and sunlight can send athlete's foot back where it came from. So can walking foot-naked on the beach in the Bahamas, but that might cancel the inexpensive part.

But tryer, beware. Not all remedies work for all people. Michael McLure, a junior at Trinity U. in Texas, attempted to get rid of a wart by putting a used tea bag on it for 15 minutes every day for 10 days. "I'd have to say there was a slight wart reduction," McLure says, "but I think I'm convincing myself that it's flatter because I spent all that time strapping tea bags to my elbow."

Kristina Schurr, a graduate student at the U. of Maryland, College Park, tried to ease the itch of a mosquito bite by putting saliva and wet soap on it. "The whole idea was a little distasteful," Schurr says. "The soap got dry and crusty. It was gross, and it made me think about it more. I'm scratching it right now."

Ken Braslow, U. of Southern California/Photo by Noah Berger, U. of California, Berkeley

Which way to the psycho-ceramics lecture? Only the mysterious Professor Carberry knows.

OON'T MYTH OUT

Y ou get an automatic A if your roommate dies. Students nationwide have passed this tale around for years. The fact that it isn't true hasn't stopped them. But hey, isn't that the nature of a myth?

ETC.

Call it studentlore — the fiction or stranger-than-fiction that binds students at a particular college. Here's some of the most enduring:

Harvard U. keeps afloat the rumor of required swimming lessons. It's true that on April 16, 1912, the Titanic sank and that Eleanor Wiedner's son, a Harvard student, drowned. It's also true that in her son's memory, Wiedner donated money to Harvard for a library (now known as Wiedner Library).

But contrary to what Harvard students have believed since then, it isn't true that Wiedner attached a stipulation requiring all students to pass a swim test. Lessons are merely encouraged for students who want to participate in water sports, says a source in the Harvard news office.

At Duke U. in North Carolina, a 3-foot stone wall surrounds the former women's campus (from when the men's and women's campuses were separate). According to the myth, endowment benefactor James B. Duke stipulated in his will that a 10-foot wall separate the men from the women. But the rebel builders got around that requirement — by putting 7 feet below ground.

The truth: What you see is what you get. "It's just ornamental," says David Roberson of Duke's public affairs office.

Students at Brown U. are still awaiting the emergence of professor Josiah S. Carberry. Evidence of Carberry, a fictitious character believed to have been created by a Brown professor, first surfaced in 1929. A notice was posted advertising Carberry's lecture on psychoceramics — the study of cracked pots — to be held in University Hall.

Every Friday the 13th since, fliers have appeared around campus touting the mystery lecture. A room is always reserved — but no one shows up for Carberry's speech. That's part of the tradition, too.

At Yale U. and the U. of Florida, truth has become legendary.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. — perhaps the nation's most revered war monument — is a product of Maya Ying Lin, who was a senior at Yale when her contest entry for the memorial design won in 1981. Lin first designed the memorial as a class project. Her professor, Andy Burr, also submitted a blueprint, but Lin won the contest and the $20,000 prize. Burr gave her a "B."

Because the tropical heat often dehydrated the U. of Florida football players, Robert Cade, a professor of medicine and kidney research at the university, chose the pigskin handlers as guinea pigs for his new drink. Now known as Gatorade — sorry, not Gator*Cade* — the drink was a hit with the football players. It was named for their mascot, the Gator, and the university receives a portion of Gatorade profits.

Hit or myth?

Now, see if you can tell fact from fiction. True or false:

- The U. of Maryland, College Park, awarded a doctorate — in health and human performance — to a dead woman.
  (True, in 1994, to Rafaela Coello, who was 84 when she died.)
- Famed U. of Notre Dame football coach Knute Rockne really told his players, "Win one for the Gipper."
  (False. His actual words were: "The day before he died, [Notre Dame football player] George Gipp asked me to wait until the situation seemed hopeless — then ask a Notre Dame team to go out and beat Army for him. This is the day, and you are the team.")
- About the only thing that can get you out of class is a natural disaster.
  (True. Washington State U. canceled classes for four days in 1980 when Mount Saint Helens erupted; classes at the U. of Miami were canceled for a month in 1926 because of a hurricane; Hanover College lost 32 of its 33 buildings and a week of classes in 1974 when a tornado swept through Indiana.)

BOOKSTORE BACKLASH

[illegible] textbooks. Traditionally, students have cut their losses in part by reselling their books at the end of the semester. Bookstores, wholesalers and used-book clearinghouses are the most frequent buyers, but they rarely pay even 50 percent of the retail price.

"It's at the buyback where they screw you," says U. of Alabama senior Stacy Cohen. "When they buy it back, it's like, 'Here's your $3. Hope you learned what you had to learn.'"

To make matters worse, bookstores often refuse to buy back certain texts after professors opt to change the edition used in their courses.

Fortunately for students, there are alternatives to the traditional bookstore.

Cohen and some friends are planning to open an alternative bookstore on the Alabama campus. She says her group hopes to pay students half of the original purchase price for all books.

DOLLARS

"We're trying to put together a jazz hall with an art gallery and an alternative bookstore upstairs," Cohen says. "There's not really a bookstore here that sells new and used classics and has the texts right there, too."

MaryPIRG, the campus public interest group at the U. of Maryland, holds a book swap at which students can trade their old texts for credit toward new ones.

But even the alternatives pose problems. "Sometimes you wait for the book swap, and then they don't have what you need," says Maryland senior Matt Ramsdell. "So you end up going to the bookstore anyway."

Another alternative, offered at Eastern Illinois U., is a school-run textbook-rental system. A fee of about $5 per credit hour is added to students bills when they register for classes. Although some courses require more books than others, university officials say the fees even out over four years.

"We've really gotten positive feedback," says Donna Dawson, text book-rental clerk at EIU, "especially from transfer students who come here and are amazed that they don't have to spend hundreds of dollars on books."

The U. of Wisconsin, Eau Claire, and the U. of Wisconsin, Stout, sponsor similar textbook-leasing programs, and at the U. of Minnesota, Duluth, student-run organizations buy used texts for charity.

Just remember — if you look hard enough, you'll be able to hit your books harder than they hit your wallet.

Dan Avery, U. of Maryland, College Park/Photo by Aaron Lathem, U. of Arizona

Sheeeshi Getting caught in the bookstore trap could cost you an arm and a leg.

Kathleen Seiler, Syracuse U./Photo by John Forasté, Brown U.

Sweeping Up Stardust

Production assistants gofer it

BY KAREN BRADDOM
PHOTO BY BARRY SCHWARTZ, OREGON STATE U

Ever dream of working side by side with Martin Scorsese? Can you imagine Quentin Tarantino asking your advice on whether to leave in the ear-slicing scene? Would you be willing to risk an ulcer to give stardom a chance?

If you're one of the risk-takers, chances are you're heading toward your first position: production assistant — a.k.a. the glorified, underpaid, under-appreciated, catch-all position that thousands of college students and recent grads pour into each year.

Plebes Anonymous

At the bottom of the totem pole, PAs often find themselves working 16-hour days, making average pay and submitting to a lot of psychological abuse. "All the pressure trickles down to the PAs," says Satalane Bos, a '95 graduate of Western Michigan U. and a PA for Mighty Morphin Power Rangers: The Movie. "If you don't have thick skin, you'll never survive."

Rubbing elbows with Hollywood moguls for a living sounds like fun, but not when you're every one's keeper. Getting actors on the set at the right time is easier said than done.

"When the actors wouldn't listen to me telling them they were needed on the set, I'd get reamed," Bos says.

Bradley Ross, a graduate of the U. of Missouri who has PA-ed on the sets of On Deadly Ground, Maverick and Little Giants, says he didn't like being treated like a subhuman species. "I almost got fired once for not checking to see if there was sour cream on one of the lunches I was sent to pick up."

New York U. film student Jordan Montminy, who has spent a few semesters working as a PA for Iron Fist Productions and several student films, remembers driving more than an hour to a location to find he was the only one there. "The crew hadn't bothered to tell me that they wouldn't be filming that day," he says. "There's no place for pride in the PA position."

Cleaning the set down to the last cigarette butt is just another demeaning experience for PAs, but it's a blessing compared with other tasks. "I've known PAs who have had to search for hours for a certain kind of cigarette, and one who was ordered by an actor to buy condoms," Ross says.

The highs are real high, but the lows are real low for PAs, says Donald Cager II, a graduate of the U. of Southern California who has PA-ed for Hagmann/Landau Films and recently worked on the set of the upcoming movie Eye for an Eye. Cager recalls one of his worst days as a PA. "A two-ton generator that took 12 men to push it around rolled onto the tip of my big toe. I yanked my foot away just in time but limped around the rest of the day."

How do PAs cope with the psychological warfare? "No matter what somebody else yells at you about you cannot say anything back," says Bos, who once was accused of lying to the first assistant director and could say nothing in her defense.

It helps to have a team of PAs to vent to, she says. "When we all came together at the end of the day to wait for the OK to go home, it would quickly turn into a PA support group."

Without other PAs to console him, Ross agrees. "I just had to suck it up."

A lose-win situation?

Despite the grunt work and humiliation of the humbling, pay-your-dues position, being a PA does expose you to the action.

Wanna be the wind beneath a Power Ranger's hair? Be a production assistant.

"Once when the Power Rangers were shooting pick-up shots for their movie," Bos says, "I got to wave a piece of cardboard to create a breeze in one of the Ranger's hair."

The highlight of Ross' career as a PA was being on the set of Little Giants with executive producer Steven Spielberg. After watching him give direction in the movie, Ross was determined to speak to him.

"I asked him if he wanted a water. He said no," Ross says.

"In between my PA duties, I once got to hang out with Sugar Ray Leonard's son, who had accompanied his father to the set for a home video boxing game commercial," Cager says.

"Kid from Kid 'n Play came over to one of my friends and started rapping with him," says Tim Kelly, a '95 graduate of the U. of Southern California who has on-set experience working for Galaxy Films and for student productions. "A month into it and you're no longer star struck."

Mark LaFontant, a graduate of Michigan State U. who wants to write feature films, paid his dues working as a PA for Rescue 911. The pain is worth the price, says LaFontant. "Unless you have other connections, this is really the only way into the entertainment industry."

Dear Abby...

Catherine Schwenn, a U. of Arizona graduate who worked as a PA for the movie IQ and is now an assistant to the executive producer on the set of Heads of a Feather, has seen PAs crying on the set. Besides just enduring the pressure, learn all you can by absorbing everything everybody tells you, Schwenn advises.

Take your job seriously...no matter how demeaning it is," Ross says. "There are thousands of PAs out there with attitudes, so you have to automatically prove yourself. Double and triple check people's lunch orders because that's your existence."

"Use the job as a stepping stone," LaFontant says. Which is exactly what he did. By the end of LaFontant's three-year stint at Rescue 911 running for bagels turned into producing the second half of the segments aired on television.

Working as a PA does get you on the sets of major motion pictures, but it isn't as glamorous as it may seem. You have to start at the fish food end of the Hollywood food chain before you get to rule the jungle.

Karen Braddom, a '95 graduate of Manhattan College in New York, would kill for a plum position in the publishing industry.

The Best Way To Save Money On Stuff (Other Than Borrowing Your Roommate's).

Roommates tend to get weird when you borrow their stuff. (They're funny like that.) Better to get yourself a MasterCard® card. Then you could use it to buy the things you really want. And with these College MasterValues® coupons, you'll save up to 40%. And until you get your own place, it's the smartest thing you can do. Roommates are weird enough as it is. MasterCard. It's more than a credit card. It's smart money.®

JCPenney — 50% OFF ANY EYEGLASS FRAME

TWEEDS — SAVE $10 ON WOMEN'S APPAREL

ARTCARVED — SAVE UP TO $140

JOIN AND SAVE $45

CAMELOT MUSIC — SAVE $3 OFF A CD

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL — 49% OFF A SPECIAL 12-WEEK SUBSCRIPTION

TIME WARNER Viewer's Edge — GET ONE VIDEO FREE WHEN YOU BUY THREE

MOTOPHOTO — 50% OFF FILM PROCESSING

SAVE 25%

SAVE 20%

WORDEXPRESS for Windows — SAVE 40% ON WINDOWS WORD PROCESSOR

THE SHARPER IMAGE — SAVE 15% ON YOUR NEXT PURCHASE OF $75 OR MORE

© 1995 MasterCard International Incorporated

BREAKING TRADITION

College: The Choice Of A New, Older Generation

BY SHARON LAROWE

PHOTOS BY BRENT A. NICHOLS, UTAH STAGE

In the evenings, they hand crayons and paper to Liv, and the rest of the family sits down together to do homework.

EXPECTING TO SEE A LOT OF FRESH young faces in your classes this year? Well, we've got news for you — the face of America's college student is changing. It's growing older, with more wrinkles and responsibilities than the traditional 18- to 21-year-old has.

Twenty-nine-year-old J.D. Burke should know. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, 40 percent of today's students are over the age of 24. Burke is one of them, and his second time back, the U. of Wyoming has lost its charm. This time he's all business.

Getting serious

"I came to college right out of [high] school, like everybody else," he says. "Drank a lot of beer and chased a lot of girls. I just did what everybody else was doing, except the homework." His grades freshman year were so low that he was put on probation and eventually suspended.

After losing funding for college, then sowing his oats in the Navy, Burke is back to hitting the books as an electrical engineering major — with a lot more riding on his studies than just finding a fulfilling career. He has a wife and two (soon to be three) children to think about.

Katie Flynn, 52, of the U of Utah, was in the same boat. She cheered at the graduations of her husband and daughter, then decided it was her turn. But before she could earn her anthropology degree, Flynn had serious hurdles to clear — like learning how to be a student again. "I hadn't taken a test in 30 years," she says.

Approximately one-third of the students attending the U. of Utah qualify as nontraditional, Flynn says. As former president of the Non-Traditional Student Organization, she made sure there were programs that addressed issues such as peer mentoring and what to do when studying and attention-craving 2-year-olds divide students' time.

Flynn, who sometimes took classes with her 30-year-old son, feels privileged to have had so much family support. Other nontraditional students aren't so lucky, she says.

Without a Mom-and-Dad scholarship, many older students — often alone, sometimes divorced and supporting children — have to tap other sources for tuition money and basic living expenses.

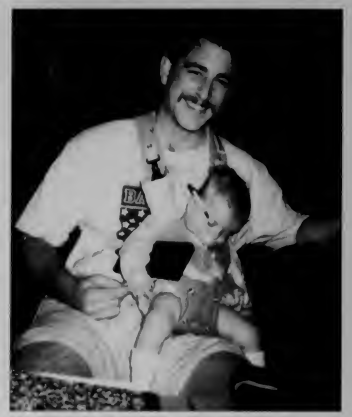
For the Burkes, both full-time students at the U of Wyoming, other sources include Uncle Sam. Sure, J.D.'s GI bill helps out, but what really keeps them afloat is the government-provided food and child care for their 4-year-old, Liv. Their third-grader, Simon, goes to school, which frees up Mom and Dad to take classes.

In the evenings, they hand crayons and paper to Liv, and the rest of the family sits down together to do homework.

It may be hard to survive on welfare now, but Burke sees it as the government's investment in his family's future.

"It is absolutely imperative that you get your degree, Burke says. "Otherwise, you'll be an absolute drain on society, and you'll be behind the eight ball."

The statistics are on his side. The National Center for Education Statistics says that college educated men earn a yearly average of $17,000 more than those with only a high school education. A college-educated women earn $12,500 more.



Nontraditional students balance a lot more than a full course load.

Changing priorities

Thirty-year-old John Tyler can sympathize. He and his wife Susan, are expecting their first baby, which makes his return to college even more necessary.

"It puts pressure on me to get good grades and get through school," says Tyler, who attends Austin Community College in Texas. "Making an 'A' in class was important to me [before]. Now I'm more interested in learning the material so I remember it after the class.

Because many draw an older clientele, community colleges often have more programs to ease nontraditional students into the workload.

"ACC really helps nontraditional students get acclimated," Tyler says. He plans to earn his associate's degree there and then transfer to a larger, four-year university nearby.

Lisa Gallico's story may very well be every student's worst nightmare. Sixteen years and five colleges after first entering the world of higher education, she has finally found the right school and program at James Madison U. in Virginia.

The twist is that the 34-year-old grad student is still living in undergraduate housing because the university doesn't set aside housing specifically for grad students.

For both Gallico and her sophomore roommate, Debra Jacob, this has been a trying semester. Gallico is frustrated that Jacob likes to watch TV and listen to the radio while she's trying to study. Jacob feels she must ask for permission to do those things.

"Sometimes I feel like I'm living with my mother," Jacob says.

"I feel like I am her mother sometimes," responds Gallico. But in the end, mothering isn't her goal; she just wants a quiet place to study.

"That's all she does," complains Jacob, who just wants to return from classes to dorm-sweet-home.

Despite her dorm room dilemma, Gallico says she deals with problems similar to those of most students — choosing a major and then getting the classes she needs.

But Gallico handles the social scene a little differently from traditional students. "I just want to center on the classes," she says. "Then maybe later I can meet more people."

Payoff time

Even though she's had her share of setbacks, Gallico expects to earn her master's in dietetics by fall and say goodbye to college once and for all.

"Lord have mercy, I've been in school half my life," she says. "People ask me why I'm still doing this. I've been in school this long, I may as well finish."

Tyler has a different reason for his return. "When you get to be 25 or 30 and you look around and everybody [your age] has their degrees or their own home, you want to settle down," he says. "We're going back to get some stability in our lives."

Whether you're under the legal drinking age or old enough to take calculus with your kid, college classrooms are a common ground. Soon there may be no such thing as a "nontraditional" student.

Sharon LaRowe is a "traditional" senior at James Madison U.

Friends In Low Places

Depression: Can you help?

BY HEATHER KEAFER
Photo Illustration by Dave Drum

For weeks, Danielle*, 21, a junior dietetics major at Temple U., picked at her food or ate nothing at all. She slept late — right through 9:40 biochem and 10:50 lab, through lunch and The Young and the Restless.

Her roommates were frustrated. They tried to wake her up for classes and to make her eat. Danielle wished they would leave her alone. She didn't care anymore.

A week before finals, they found her in the bathroom — gaunt and pale except for a bloodied left wrist, but alive. A razor had eased the feeling of emptiness and made the plea for help.

Depression is the leading cause of suicide, and, according to the American Psychiatric Association, suicide is the third leading cause of death among 15-to-24-year-olds.

Jeff Vansyckle, a psychologist with Temple counseling services, says that most college students he counsels have problems with ongoing depression. "Usually it's related to academic or relationship problems," he says.

One in four women and one in 10 men develop depression during their lifetime. And those numbers don't include loved ones, who can be just as affected by the disease. Nothing prepares them for noticing depression and helping someone through it.

"When the behavior becomes something they cannot pull out of, it's time for friends to step in," says Michelle Dixon, a social worker at Philhaven women's services in Pennsylvania.

Commonly recognized symptoms of depression include feelings of hopelessness and sadness, loss of motivation, change in sleep patterns (either sleeping too much or too little), loss of appetite, low energy, poor self-esteem, worrying about the past, irritability and loss of interest in activities previously enjoyed.

It's tough to tell whether a friend is clinically depressed or just sad, to know whether to intervene or butt out.

"I wish I had recognized it earlier as depression and not just my roommate's personality," says one of Danielle's roommates, Carey, a Temple senior.

"I felt limited trying to be a best friend, balancing the role of a confidant and knowing what she really needed," Carey says.

Danielle attempted suicide twice before Carey and other roommates involved a school counselor.

"It's normal to want to help, but know that you cannot change things," Dixon says. She says that when someone becomes isolated, indulges in dangerous behavior or engages in suicidal acts, outside help is needed. Many college and university counseling centers treat depression.

Between 80 and 90 percent of all depressed people respond to treatment, which can include psychotherapy, medication or a combination of the two, according to the APA. Nearly all depressed people who get treatment see at least some relief from their symptoms.

Depression is often as bewildering to victims as it is to their loved ones.

"I wish my friends understood that I had no control and couldn't just snap out of it," says a female Temple senior who is being treated for depression.

Friends who try to help can also get sucked into depression, Dixon warns.

Know your limitations," Dixon stresses. "Realize that you cannot help the situation on your own."

Dixon suggests that friends of depression victims do what they enjoy to help relieve stress and prevent becoming depressed themselves. Also, it's important that friends have support systems of their own. Carey says that talking to friends helped her reassess the situation and feel better.

Danielle has taken a semester off from school to receive therapy. "Show you care by taking an active role," she advises. "Don't pretend depression doesn't exist."

 Name has been changed*

For a free pamphlet on depression write The American Psychiatric Association, DPA Dept. NCM, 1400 K St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Heather Keafer is a senior journalism major at Messiah College in Pennsylvania.

Shiny, Happy People

The latchkey kids of the '80s are flying into the real world with more emotional baggage than can fit into the overhead compartment.

There are statistics to prove it: Those born after 1955 are three times as likely to suffer from depression as those born before, and since 1945, the 20-to-29 age group has more than tripled its suicide rate. Simply put, many members of our Breakfast Club won't be joining us for lunch.

But now there's Prozac.

Since its introduction in 1988, Prozac has become the second most commonly prescribed drug in the country. And because nonpsychiatric physicians can prescribe Prozac, it's also being used to treat an ever-wider range of afflictions and bad habits — smoking, PMS, weight control, premature ejaculation, you name it.

But despite its versatility and impressive 65 percent success rate in treating depression, everyone reacts differently to the wonder drug of the '90s. Sally, an Orange Coast College junior, had quit school, used amphetamines and cocaine, was bulimic and fought constantly with family and friends. Today, two years after going on Prozac, Sally is a drug-free 4.0 student who enjoys a happy, productive life.

Then there's Lillian, a recent U. of Texas graduate who found Prozac's side effects to be nothing but trouble.

"It screwed up my sex life," Lillian says. "I was no longer orgasmic."

This is a consequence that often divides users along gender lines. Women are irked by the reduction of sexual sensation, while guys claim Prozac makes them Energizer bunnies of love.

Surprisingly, it's not cases like Lillian that concern skeptics, but success stories like Sally's. Critics worry about the long-term effects of taking Prozac. Some fear future medical problems, while others envision a New World Order society of passionless robots.

Ridiculous? Yes. But these concerns are valid, since Prozac will undoubtedly affect the events that unfold in our lifetime. The question for our generation is: Will the change be for better or worse?

If a substantial portion of the population is on Prozac, how will that affect, say, politics? Would John F. Kennedy have been voted in by an electorate of Prozac poppers? If so, would Oswald, if on Prozac, still have assassinated him? Would a chemically balanced Jim Morrison still have written "The End," then overdosed himself into oblivion? Or would he have written more sanguine pop songs ("A Fresh Start"?) and be participating in a joint reunion tour with the Eagles right about now?

As we bravely march toward the end of the millennium, Prozac, for better or worse, is now part of our arsenal. And like any device, it is only as helpful or destructive as the person who uses it.

By James Hibberd, U. of Texas, Austin

BIG MONEY! BIG MONEY! NO WHAMMIES!

From multi-vitamins to big bucks, students get the goodies from game shows

BY ROSS ALLEN
Illustration by Jess Weiss, Murray State U. '95

"Jane Student, come on down!!!!" Jane — wearing a sweatshirt emblazoned with a college crest or Greek letters — jumps up and runs down to the stage, her heart pumping with excitement. Cash and fabulous prizes await. The only question is whether she'll win the car she can't park on campus, the money to pay last semester's tuition or the bedroom set that won't fit in her dorm room.

Lots of students fantasize about striking it rich on a TV game show. And why not? Going to college might not get you a job, but it can at least give you a chance to make megabucks from one roll o' the dice.

After all, if Jane can have access to those fabulous prizes, why can't you?

Jen Tipka, a senior at West Chester U. in Pennsylvania, tried her luck two summers ago as an aspiring game show contestant. Donning a big smile and a "pick me, pick me!" look, she joined the Price is Right studio audience in Los Angeles. Simply showing up for the taping — with no guarantee of a spot on the show — catapulted her into the above-mentioned fabulous. (you know the rest).

"It was very exciting," Tipka says. "I was shaking when I went up there."

Although she didn't make it past contestants row, she did win a bread maker, the game Scattergories and a $25 gift certificate for Lifesavers candies as parting gifts.

The only bad part about her appearance on the show was that she was called late in the game, Tipka says. As a late-comer in the bidding war, she competed for only two items. But hey, thanks for playing.

I'd like to buy a vowel, Pat

Game show contestant Veronica Grey, a junior at UCLA, went to the bank with more than a bread maker and candy. She won $23,000 on Wheel of Fortune's spring '94 college tournament.

But getting there wasn't easy. At UCLA, more than 150 word-wielding hopefuls tried out to share the stage with Pat and Vanna.

Those who passed the preliminary exam — 15 puzzles in five minutes — went on to the next level, a written exam consisting of five more minutes of white-knuckle, beat-the-clock Wheel of Fortune-style puzzles. Grey says most students can't handle the pressure and are eliminated during this round.

> "I'm full of vim and vigor, but I'm sick of Rice-a-Roni."
>
> Edward Stash, U. of Pittsburgh

Before the final cut, contestants not only take a variety of written tests but also are judged on speech and voice quality, enthusiasm and presentation. Being bashful won't get you a spin of the Wheel.

After hours of dodging vowels and slaying consonants, four students from four different schools were crowned as finalists. Their royal mission: a trip to Orlando, Fla., for a week of sun and fun — and oh yeah, competition. For last year's "college week," the 16 college contestants were put up in a posh hotel at Disney World and ate at local restaurants — total tab for one night's dinner: $2,000. Let's hope Pat didn't stiff on the tip.

"Those people on television have gone through a lot to get there," Grey says. "It's harder than it looks on TV."

But students say getting on Wheel of Fortune is a cakewalk compared with making it to the stage on Jeopardy! Wheel college tourney alum and two-time Jeopardy! hopeful Edward Stash says the tests for Wheel don't hold a candle to the Jeopardy! exam.

"The written [test] for Jeopardy! was so hard," says Stash, who competed on Wheel of Fortune during his senior year at the U. of Pittsburgh. "Only four people out of 250 passed. The questions were that tough."

The Wheel experience earned Stash $2,150 cash, with a mail delivery time of four months. He also brought home some wonderful parting gifts, including Centrum Silver vitamins — for the "mature" consumer — and cases of that ubiquitous game show treat, Rice-a-Roni.

"I'm full of vim and vigor," Stash says. "But I'm sick of Rice-a-Roni."

The vitamins aren't the oddest parting gift contestants received, Stash says. "Other people got 'Hooked on Phonics.' You'd think that someone in college who's playing Wheel of Fortune would know how to read."

Things that start with "J"

Jeopardy! has a slightly different search method for its college tournament, says Jeopardy!'s contestant coordinator Suzanne Thurbet.

By promoting the college tourney in September, Jeopardy! joins the back-to-school hype. So when you buy your new jeans, backpack and spiral notebooks, join the 10,000 to 20,000 students who send in postcards in hopes of getting on the show. But don't hold your breath, because Alex only draws about 1,200 names for the first cut.

Patrick Toft, a junior at the U. of Minnesota, got his chance after Jeopardy! drew one of the 11 postcards his mother sent in for him. Eleven wasn't necessarily his lucky number — his mom just got tired of sending them, Toft says.

After his name was drawn, Toft faced a grueling battery of tests, including a killer 50-question video exam. About 90 percent of applicants fail to make it to the next level: a mock game. But Jeopardy! is looking for something different from Wheel of Fortune in its oral auditions.

"If they're enthusiastic, that's great," Thurber says, "but we're mainly looking to see if they understand the structure of the game."

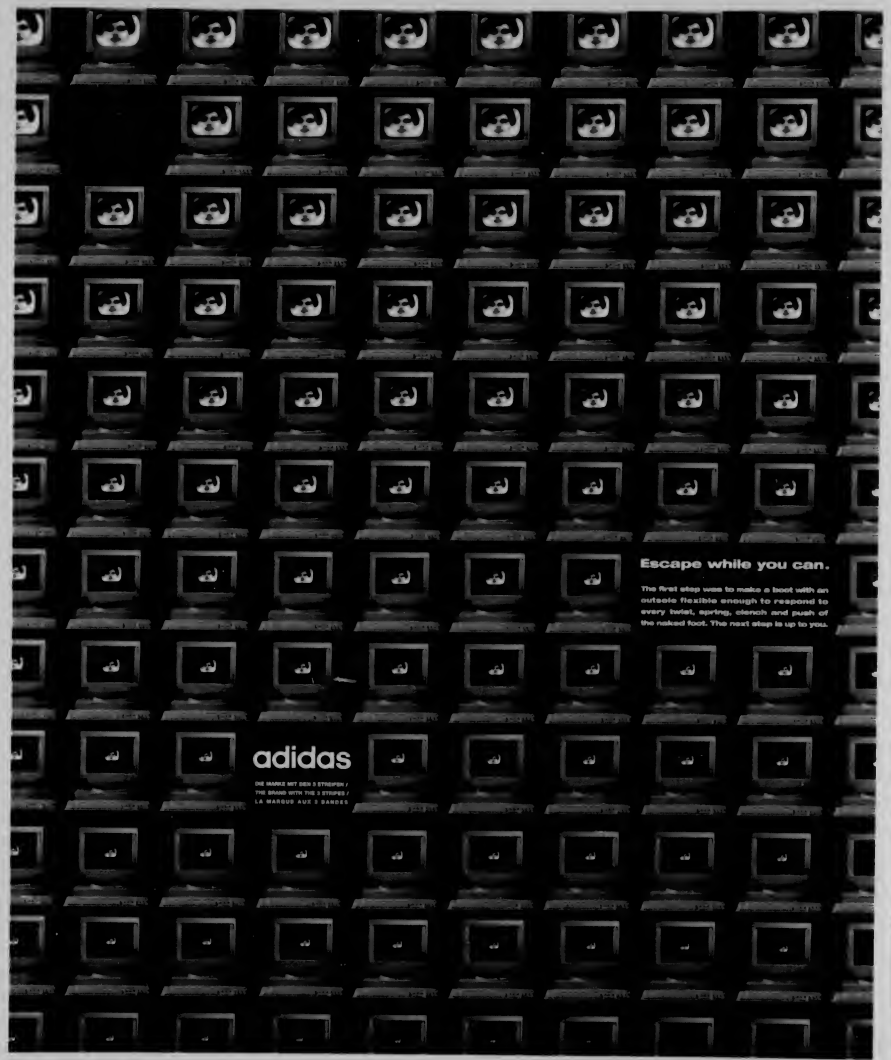
Toft got it — he won $5,000.

"It was nerve-racking but a lot of fun," Toft says.

The only drawback, Toft says, is that it takes 120 days after the air date to get your money. Because of the lag time between taping and airing the show, Toft is actually waiting about five months for his prize. Talk about nerve-racking....

Taking a trip to California for the modern gold rush — only to walk away with empty pockets — could turn someone off to correct spelling and remembering to phrase responses in the form of a question. But it could prod a starving student to ask: What's one way to earn a year's supply of Rice-a-Roni?

Ross Allen is a '95 graduate of West Virginia U.



Escape while you can.
The first step was to make a boot with an outsole flexible enough to respond to every twist, spring, clench and push of the naked foot. The next step is up to you.
adidas
DIE MARKE MIT DEN 3 STREIFEN /
THE BRAND WITH THE 3 STRIPES /
LA MARQUE AUX 3 BANDES

Courtship Adjourned?

BY BONNIE DATT
PHOTOS BY BARBARA WI...
CALIFORNIA STATE U., LONG BEACH
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MATT LEFEBVRE, NORTHEASTERN U.

I REMEMBER IT WELL. SHE WORE FLANNEL — ripped. Her nose ring glistened like a morning dewdrop. She danced with ease, never once spilling her beer. Damn. Of all the dollar-pitcher joints in all the college towns in the world — she had to walk into mine.

Ah, college romance. Instead of dressing up, spritzing on cologne and trying to remember which is the salad fork, we're hooking up, popping in gum to cover beer breath and trying to remember what name we gave to the person we're dancing with.

The jury is still out on whether dating is dead

What happened to dating?

The answer may be pathetically simple: poverty. We aren't dating in the traditional style because we're broke. Hanging out in groups and meeting people at parties is much more economical than going on individual dates.

"It's costing more and more to go to college, and parents and students aren't making more and more," points out Anita Cory, coordinator of Greek affairs for sororities at Washington State U. "Students can't afford dating the stereotypical way. It becomes studying together or going to campus events."

And when someone goes on an actual date, it's a campus event, Cory says.

"There's this student I know pretty well who asked a girl out, and after the first date, he sent her flowers. All of the students were just amazed. It was such a novel idea."

Group dates, however, allow you to take inventory, to decide if you're ready to commit to the bigger investment of a real date.

"Mostly, I meet girls at a party, then ask them to go out on a date," says Jason Wildey, a senior at Marshall U. in West Virginia. "I don't go out on too many dates. Sometimes I'll see them again at another party and go from there."

The answer may be even more simple. We don't date because we don't have to. If there are always other fish in the sea, the Campus Ocean is where to cast your line. See, dating used to be something you did for awhile before you had sex. These days, it's often the other way around.

"Dating is more like a drunken hook-up than a nice dinner and a movie," says Jeanne Fugate, a senior at the U. of North Carolina. "Last night I heard some guys talking. One of them was going on about how he actually took a girl out to dinner — spent probably $10 — and was upset because she wouldn't have sex with him."

Our parents didn't have this problem. But they

"Dating is more like a drunken hook-up than a nice dinner and a movie."

JEANNE FUGATE, SENIOR, U. OF NORTH CAROLINA.

didn't have this type of access. At UNC, more than half of the students are women, which Fugate says translates to smorgasbord in the eyes of some men.

"Men don't feel pressure to treat women nicely," she says. "They can be more predatory."

But women shop at the meat market, too. Willey says Marshall women are taking on the old stereotypical men's roles.

"It's hard to find a girl that you're compatible with," Willey says. "You find girls who like to drink a lot of beer and who look more for a one-night stand than for a boyfriend. My [male] friends, they're the ones who are being stood up."

So it's even more basic, then? We're replacing dating with sex?

Yes, according to Ellen Goodblatt, who speaks at more than 100 colleges and universities a year about relationships. Courtship, she says, has been reduced to "Hello. How are you? Let's go to bed."

There's no such thing as dating on many campuses, Goodblatt says. Students have a fear of other people knowing their business. What frightens me is the cavalier attitude they're adopting toward sex.

By the desperate questions students ask her — "Why doesn't he call?" "Why don't women like nice guys?" "How do you take a relationship from friendship to romance?" — Goodblatt has concluded that students have a huge fear of being alone.

That causes them to make bad choices, she says. Often nightly — a different selection each night.

"I want them to look inward first," she says, "and not to accept anybody just to have somebody in their lives."

The perceived casual attitude students have toward sex may be a sign of confusion about gender roles, says Rebecca Adams, an assistant professor in family and consumer sciences at Indiana's Ball State U. She teaches classes on marriage and family relations.

"We're in an era of transition, and it's a little uncomfortable for both genders," Adams says. "Some women still want men to open doors for them. ... And there's still a big dichotomy with sex — it's still the walk of fame [for men] and the walk of shame [for women]. Some women are becoming freer, and that's good, but I hope they're being responsible."

But even Fugate wouldn't say that dating's dead.

"Just altered significantly. It's not the '50s idea of the drive-in, holding hands."

That's it. It's not that dating's dead. It's that it's so... done. Something our parents did and that we packed away with our band jackets and prom key chains.

"People are still doing the old-fashioned thing," says Renée Norcott, a senior at San Diego State U. "But only if they want to impress someone. In college, there are no parents to impress. Your friends aren't going to see you meeting someone at your locker like in high school."

Exactly. We're at college to meet new and different people, to expand our horizons. Not to hole up with one person for four years.

"I have a lot more fun when I go out with a bunch of people," says Robert Garcia, a junior at Florida International U. "I've never actually tried to meet a female [to date] at school."

Norcott has a boyfriend now, but she didn't jump into a relationship.

"The first year, I casually dated a whole lot of people. Dates were more hanging out with friends than going on a formal date."

No, dating's not dead.

"Maybe sleeping," says Roger Sikes, a sophomore at the U. of Central Arkansas. "It's harder to find someone who wants to settle down during college. They just want to have fun."

Since college is by its very nature a transitory experience, it makes sense to shy away from commitment.

"A lot of students don't know where they're going to be after graduation," Norcott points out. "They may not even know if they're going to be around next semester."

If dating's sleeping, when will it wake up? Just in time to enter the Real World, for many. Now, while you're surrounded by people of similar ages and interests, it's OK to be unattached.

After college, though, you may not live in a college town. The pool of eligible singles gets smaller. Relatives and friends — who when you were 18 said you were too young to get serious and that you should concentrate on school — begin making that ticking noise.

"The older I get, the more pressure I feel to have a boyfriend and to date seriously," UNC's Fugate says.

"People's priorities change," San Diego's Norcott explains. "They become more concerned with finding a person who would benefit them socially and be a lifetime mate. Going to a bar with beer on sports night might become going to a nice dinner."

FIU's Garcia compares the change to the transition from high school to college.

"There was this whole group of people you only saw during class. Once you graduated, you saw only your good friends. I guess the same thing might happen. You get better jobs, more responsibilities. You have less time to just hang out."

And once we have the means to date, suggests WSU's Cory, we may not know how.

"A recent graduate maybe needs to use different strategies to date," she says. Hence the entire surrogate courtship industry of personal ads, dating services and cyberdating.

This is part of the future of dating, say Rodney M. Cate and Sally A. Lloyd, authors of the book Courtship.

"The initial events of courtship may be changing from informal introductions by one's friends to formal services that may maximize the chances of compatibility," they say.

Cate and Lloyd make several other predictions, among them a rise in the age at first marriage, another wave of sexual liberalism (once AIDS is cured or more reliably prevented) and still more equality between the sexes.

Sounds like we're on track. And, it seems, shallow waters run deep. Or something like that. Casual dating now is paving the way for more solid and equitable relationships later, says Ball State's Adams.

"People want more emotional relationships," she says. "They want more caring on both parts but haven't been conditioned for it." Again, Adams sees prescribed gender roles as a barrier.

But we're the ones crumbling those barriers and coming at relationships on more equal terms.

"That makes for a deeper, more in-depth, more interesting relationship," Adams says.

And that, conveniently, concurs with Cate and Lloyd's ultimate conclusion:

"We believe that 'the couple' will remain a primary unit, and that love, togetherness, quality time, good communication and mutually satisfying sexuality will remain important themes in our culture through the next century."

Bonnie Hutt, associate editor of U. Magazine, admits that the only flowers she ever gets are from her dad.

Who cares if flannel and Chucks have replaced Chanel and tuxes? College is like an all-you-can-eat cafeteria. Sure you could go to a fancy restaurant and order the specialty. But at the cafeteria, you can wear your boxers and a ripped T-shirt, and the choices are endless. You can mix and experiment — philosophizing and philandering one semester; studying and buddying the next; a term of learning and loving, and so on. You might decide to move on to the filet mignon. But hey, there's nothing wrong with shepherd's pie, either.

Bon appetit!

"When someone goes on an actual date, it is a campus event."

ANITA CORY, WASHINGTON STATE U. COORDINATOR OF GREEK AFFAIRS

Leaps of Faith

Students explore alternative religions

BY PAMELA HARRELL

Photographed by Paul Kolb, U. of Kansas
Photo illustrated by Glen Rothstein, The Way International

Sorry Nietzsche — today, the phrase "God is dead" holds as much water as a stale Communion wafer. From the Bible Belt to the D.C. Beltway, Net-heads discuss the meaning of Baha'i while television viewers bear witness to CNN updates from assorted holy wars.

Some students would like to forget the religious regimen dictated by well-meaning parents. To many of us, God was someone who held up dinner and wasn't too keen on coveting.

But according to Cynthia Kisser, executive director of the Cult Awareness Network (C.A.N.), more college students are turning to less-structured or nondenominational religions. Kisser reports an increasing number of complaints about Bible-based groups preying on this resurgence of student interest in spiritual issues.

"College students are at an open point in their lives intellectually," Kisser says. "They're questioning. They're searching." The new pressures and freedoms associated with college may increase a student's vulnerability to membership in religious cults, she says.

Catching the spirit or losing your religion?

Marks of a Destructive Cult

- Thought reform — Members are manipulated, coerced or persuaded to act or think in accordance with the cult.
- Charismatic leadership — One person or a small group of individuals at the top makes all of the decisions and filters selective information to the lower levels.
- Deception or hidden agendas (often financial)
- Isolation of members — Members often dissociate themselves from family and friends who are not involved in the organization.
- Exploitation of members — Members may be required to give an excess amount of money or energy to special projects.
- Special or divine purpose — The rights and independence of members are secondary to the goals of the group.

Reprinted with permission of the Cult Awareness Network.

Cult or not a cult?

But don't confuse cults with alternative religions, says Carol Giambalvo, an exit counselor for individuals trying to leave a cult. "The issue is not one of belief systems — it's one of psychological coercion and thought reform," she says.

According to C.A.N. representative and former cult member Martin Butz, cults are groups that use some means of coercive persuasion or deception to recruit and maintain members.

"We estimate that there are 2,500 to 5,000 destructive cults and that as many as 5 million people are affected by the cult issue," Butz says.

A consensus on cults, their number and their impact is unlikely. According to J. Gordon Melton, director of the Institute for the Study of American Religions in Santa Barbara and author of The Cult Experience (Pilgrim Press), "reports of cults numbering in the thousands and involving people in the millions contain grossly exaggerated figures circulated by anti-cult groups to promote a climate of hysteria."

Melton estimates that there are only 700 "alternative" religions in the United States and Canada; "5 have been identified as cults. About 25 of those groups are considered controversial, and the remaining 50 are only involved in passing controversies.

For more than 15 years, C.A.N. has been collecting articles on the controversial ministry The Way International, a Bible-based Christian group with headquarters in New Knoxville, Ohio.

Ramona Meraz, a senior at Arizona State U., has found The Way.

Bill Greene, director of public relations at The Way International, says the ministry has no members, although there are fellowships in every major city in the United States and 37 countries. "People are free to come and go as they wish," Greene says. "You do not join. It's a free-willed decision."

Will and The Way

Ramona Meraz, a 21-year-old Arizona State U. senior, is a "follower" of The Way International. According to Meraz, the Way teaches followers how to ask questions and find answers in The Word (God's).

"Anyone who has been to a Way fellowship or meeting can tell you that nothing strange goes on," Meraz says.

Witnessing, evangelizing, pioneering — whatever the term — makes up part of the weekly work for followers. Meraz asks new friends to come to at least one fellowship service.

"A lot of friends I've brought to fellowship do come back," Meraz says. "They don't necessarily have the same commitment I do, but they see that they've been blessed."

Giambalvo says that new members typically devote only a few days a week to the group, but with time, the commitment involves more peripheral activities, such as picnics, date nights and Bible studies.

Greene counters that people who fellowship with The Way work only three to four hours per week.

In addition to doing course work for The Way, attending fellowship meetings and reading The Word daily, Meraz supports herself and receives grades worthy of grants and scholarships.

Meraz is considering dedicating her life to ministry in The Way Corps, but her postgraduate plans aren't set in stone.

Equally confused about postgraduate life is 23-year-old Jennifer Steedly, a former Jehovah's Witness and recent U. of Oregon graduate.

Steedly was a Witness before she started college. As a Witness, she wasn't allowed to date, celebrate birthdays or participate in sports or extracurricular activities.

"I was socially atrophied," Steedly says. "At first it was easier having people know I was a Witness because it excused my ignorance. Now only my close friends know."

During high school, Steedly pioneered door to door for 60 hours a month. After graduating, Steedly pioneered 90 hours a month and had a part-time job to pay for living expenses.

Emergency exit

Getting out can be as difficult as being in a cult, but many do eventually leave. Exit counseling is a voluntary method of intervention. With deprogramming, members are forced to listen to a counselor.

Steedly was a Witness for a year before her father, who was not a Witness, got her exit counseling. He became concerned when Steedly decided not to attend college.

"Going to college was deeply frowned upon," she says. "They felt the end of the world was near and your highest priority should be proselytizing."

At first, Steedly refused to speak with the exit counselors. Eventually, she watched a succession of videos about mind control, cults and the Witnesses and became convinced Steedly that she had been deceived by the leaders of the Witnesses.

Her faith in God was the only thing that kept her sane after leaving the Witnesses, Steedly says. By leaving, she lost contact with all of her family and friends still involved with the Witnesses.

"I've learned that there's a huge difference between believing in God and being religious," Steedly says. "I don't consider myself a religious person, but I still believe in God."

Destructive cults and myths go hand in hand, according to Kisser. One of the predominant myths is that people who get involved in these organizations are weak-minded or have some sort of psychological problem.

"We [at C.A.N.] want to emphasize that everyone is a potential recruit," Butz adds. "There are plenty of good people [in cults] — good people caught up in a bad thing."

Pamela Harrell is a graduate student at New York U.

PLUG IT IN. TURN IT ON. CRANK IT UP. U. ENTERTAINMENT

R+R

Return of the EAST COAST FLAVOR

N.Y.C.'s Boogiemonsters

End of the Dogg Days?

YOU ASKED FOR IT. YOU GOT IT. http://www.umagazine.com

CULT-URE SHOCK

Classic college films keep reeling from the mainstream

BY SEAN NELSON
U. of Washington

THE ZANINESS of Rocky Horror, the lunacy of Mondo Cane and the dark humor of Harold & Maude — that's what cult movies are made of. We quote them at parties and revel in their wit, but what makes a low-budget flick a cult classic?

In countless articles not unlike the one you're about to read, college journalists have tried to define what makes a movie a cult favorite, and none has ever succeeded.

But let's get real. Cult films exist for a reason. Their appeal, although not quantifiable, is easily generalized.

College cinemas used to embrace these films because students were eager seekers of ideas that couldn't be expressed within the drill confines of mainstream popular art.

Do you remember hearing about a time when college cinema was synonymous with words like "fringe," "underground" and yes, "cult"? When offbeat independent or foreign releases could count on college audiences (without advertising on MTV) to boost [illegible] sizeless of there.

Of course, that was before the advertising industry really learned how to sink its teeth into the naive flesh of the student demographic. Before television had entirely brainwashed whole generations. Before Robin Byrd.

Now, instead of hosting obscure films, many college cinemas pride themselves on showing the same old crap you can see at any multiplex.

The tragedy of college cinemas crapping out is that cult films, above all, defy the conventions of the medium. Whether in terms of form or content, these movies flout the whole idea that anything has to be done according to rules established by someone else.

In rock music, that's called the punk ethic. The same thing extends to film. The very nature of the experimentation — the divergence from the road more traveled — is what makes the film worth seeing.

The divergence however, doesn't necessarily make it good — which is another classic hallmark of cult films, and one that most people fail to understand the beauty of. The movies are often incompetently assembled bits of random celluloid wankery in the guise of narrative. But that guise, and the way they tear it down, is the whole point.

The Sex Pistols weren't about anarchy. They were about the shock value of calling themselves the Antichrist on the BBC. It all comes down to personal expression.

Lunacy, B-grade horror, cowboy songs — cult films offer the whole schmeer.

Cult films turn over A New Leaf.

Cult classics every college student should see

Here are some cora picks — best viewed at midnight, of course.

The Parallax View (1974, Alan J. Pakula) The scariest conspiracy film of all time puts JFK to shame. Warren Beatty plays a reporter who gets caught up in a web of intrigue and murder while investigating the assassinations of political figures. So cynical and dark a version of America that even the light at the end of the tunnel is dim.

Spider Baby (1964, Jack Hill) And you thought John Waters (Pink Flamingos) was weird. This tale of a family of inbred killers is the standard old dark house genre with twists so kinky they put hard-core fetishists to shame. Classic exploitation filmmaking.

Head (1968, Bob Rafelson) Starring the Monkees and written by Jack Nicholson, this is the only truly successful (although not financially) psychedelic film. It's an active deconstruction of the prefab teenybopper rock stars, and it revels in smashing icons — the group appears as dandruff in a hair commercial at one point — and tweaks the nose of rock movies in general. Even the music is good.

A Bucket of Blood (1959, Roger Corman) Made in two days, this strange little horror story about a coffeehouse busboy with dreams of being a sculptor proves that ultra-low-budget films can be not only well-made but also more witty and subversive than studio projects. Walter Paisley wants so badly to impress the artists who hang around the cafe that he's willing to kill... accidentally, at first.

Joe Versus the Volcano (1990, John Patrick Shanley) With Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan? Yes. It's a criminally underrated allegory of the movie business — with a bad ending tacked on by timid producers. This one combines the elements of magical realism: Brechtian theater, pulp '30s serials and cowboy songs. Some of the best lunatic romantic dialogue ever lensed. The story is daffy, as are the characters. That's the best part. Don't believe what you've heard.

Q (The Winged Serpent) (1982, Larry Cohen) A prehistoric god in the form of a giant pterodactyl has built a nest in the Chrysler building! You really don't need to know any more about it, except that it elevates the standards for characterization in B-grade horror films with an impressive array of actors who are really allowed to act. (Also see God Told Me To by Cohen.)

The Trial (1963, Orson Welles) The consummate Kafka nightmare done up in classically expressionist detail by the greatest director of all time. The spaces squeeze Josef K. into odd corners, just like the plot does. The real story lies in the shadows, barely visible.

A New Leaf (1971, Elaine May) Starring Walter Matthau, this long-lost dark comedy is about class in America told through the ayes of star-crossed lovers. One of them spends most of the film trying to kill the other in order to save the family fortune (in the vein of The Ruling Class, which is also highly recommended).

My Breakfast With Blassie (1983, Johnny Legend, Linda Lautrec) Starring Andy Kaufman, this satire of the pretentious My Dinner With Andre takes place at a Sambo's restaurant in Los Angeles. Two characters order greasy food and chew the fat about their careers as entertainers and wrestlers. So subtle it's almost not even there. But it is. The joke is on you. Nothingness hasn't been so absurd since Waiting for Godot.

Forbidden Zone (1980, Richard Elfman) Odd nightmare set in what looks like a Betty Boop cartoon of hell, all of which breaks loose. Freaks and pervarts abound as Queen Doris and King Fausto battle for control of the forbidden zone, where Oingo Boingo make the music and everybody scores. Consummate cult.

OK, we ran out of space. But here are some more cult movies you won't want to miss: Little Shop of Horrors (original), The State of Things, Invasion of the Body Snatchers, The Cars that Ate Paris, Children Shouldn't Play with Dead Things and Mickey One (a Holy Grail of cult filmdom — starring Warren Beatty).

Sean Nelson, a junior at the U. of Washington, is the film critic for the Glass Onion, and he watches way too many movies.

They're selling music but not selling out.

EMPIRE RECORDS

Open 'til Midnight.

REGENCY ENTERPRISES PRESENTS A NEW REGENCY / ALAN RICHE AND TONY LUDWIG PRODUCTION A FILM BY ALLAN MOYLE
EMPIRE RECORDS ANTHONY LAPAGLIA MAXWELL CAULFIELD AND DEBI MAZAR RORY COCHRANE JOHNNY WHITWORTH
ROBIN TUNNEY RENEE ZELLWEGER AND LIV TYLER CO-PRODUCER PAUL KURTA EDITED BY MICHAEL CHANDLER PRODUCTION DESIGNER PETER JAMISON
DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY WALT LLOYD WRITTEN BY CAROL HEIKKINEN PRODUCED BY ARNON MILCHAN, MICHAEL NATHANSON, ALAN RICHE AND TONY LUDWIG
DIRECTED BY ALLAN MOYLE

FEATURING THE MUSIC OF GIN BLOSSOMS
THE CRANBERRIES EDWYN COLLINS
TOAD THE WET SPROCKET BETTER THAN EZRA
EVAN DANDO APE HANGERS

ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACK AVAILABLE ON A&M RECORDS

COMING THIS SEPTEMBER

New York's lyrical assassins bring the noise

THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK

BY MATTHEW J.X. MALADY

> "O DISRESPECT TO the West, true indeed// I rock it to the East/ The East is the seed."
>
> —Lauren Hill of The Fugees, from "Nappy Heads" remix.

Don't look now, but the seed may be sprouting again. We all know it's been a West Coast, Dogg Dogg world for the past couple of years. MTV and pop radio made heroes of Dr. Dre, Ice Cube, and Snoop — but no rapper from east of the Mississippi was invited to the party. Hip-hop shifted away from its birthplace in New York City as the media and the record buying public began to favor lazy P-funk beats over intricate lyrics, gangstas over poets and Compton over all.

Then, by some form of divine hip hop intervention, a chain reaction of sorts swept outward from the rotten apple. The Wu-Tang Clan dropped "Protect Ya Neck." Nas showed that the world was his. Craig Mack blew up the spot with "Flava In Ya Ear," and the Notorious B.I.G. began his barrage on the Billboard charts. Suddenly, there were whispers throughout the industry about an East Coast resurgence.

Manhattan transfer

People on the East Coast began to realize that they had to take their music to a different level, because a lot of the stuff was gettin old," says Kevin Powell, staff writer for Vibe magazine. "Things had to change."

And they have. In fact, change is everywhere.

The East is definitely back in the ballpark," says Wu-Tang's Chet Rackwon. "We brought it to a level where skills are everything."

Newer East Coast artists are invoking an unyielding lyrical street flow — the kind of dense word play that echoes a time when Kane was Big Daddy, Rakim was king and Eric B was president.

But this time around, the rappers are getting paid. Debuts by Wu-Tang and Biggie Smalls soared past the platinum mark, and first efforts by Nas, Mobb Deep, Method Man, Old Dirty Bastard and Smif n Wessun all reached

"There's people straight talkin' about murder as acceptable and degrading women as acceptable. We're trying to move away from that."

YODAFED OF THE BOOGIEMONSTERS

sale levels formerly achieved by only a select few veterans on the East Coast.

Change is also registering on the charts. Singles by New York artists now frequently show up on the Billboard top 10 and New York radio station Hot 97 (WQHT) saw its ratings skyrocket when it switched to a predominantly East Coast hip-hop format. More importantly, the new artists themselves are bucking past trends of competition and rivalry in favor of cooperation and unity. Guest spots on albums are now more common than ever, and there seems to be a real sense of community brewing as rappers realize the value of collaboration for the music's sake.

"Everybody's comin' together, and there's not as much jealousy, envy and animosity," says Tek of Smif n Wessun, one of the many new groups that have been more than willing to lend out their skills in an effort to help their brethren. Both Tek and his partner Steele rapped on Black Moon's debut "Enta Da Stage," and the two also contribute a verse on a posse cut for the East Coast all-star album The Do-D Project.

"I check brothers out there like AZ, Nas and Mobb Deep," says Rackwon. They're making it more real, and you gotta respect that."

This type of camaraderie was nowhere to be found a few years ago, but the new breed of East Coast artists seems to value the opportunity to work with other talented rappers. "It's all one love, and we're a part of that," says Tek. "We're just doin our thing, and keepin the music alive."

Righteous brothers

New artists are also keeping the East Coast tradition of hip-hop innovation alive. Following in the lofty footsteps of innovators like A Tribe Called Quest, De La Soul, and Digable Planets, both the Roots and the Boogiemonsters are taking the musical horn to new levels of creativity.

Both bands recently released stellar debuts that have critics and true hip-hop fans drooling over the welcome change of pace. The Roots are the first group to fuse purely live instrumentation and lyrical dexterity while retaining street credibility. The Boogiemonsters, who refer to the Roots as one of their "brother groups," rely heavily on spirituality and an ever-fluid style, which they hope to use as a tool in changing hip-hop. One of their goals is to bring the music away from repetition and dryness — thus, the water imagery on their debut Riders of the Storm: The Underwater Album.

"When we talk about water, it's like we want to take hip-hop under water for a baptism, because a lot of it is dirty right now," says Yodafed, one of the four-man Boogiemonsters crew.

"We're trying to inspire a move toward righteousness. There's a line being drawn in hip-hop, with two definite sides — the side of the wickedness and the side of righteousness. There's people straight talkin' about murder as acceptable and degrading women as acceptable. We're trying to move away from that, and we know not everyone is going to follow, but we're trying to set the pace so those who want to come out and speak righteousness can follow our lead."

East Coast family

But will new East Coast artists follow the lead of the Boogiemonsters, Wu-Tang Clan, Biggie and the others? Are we seeing the opening stages of a long-term upswing in East Coast hip-hop or just being blessed by a very cool false alarm?

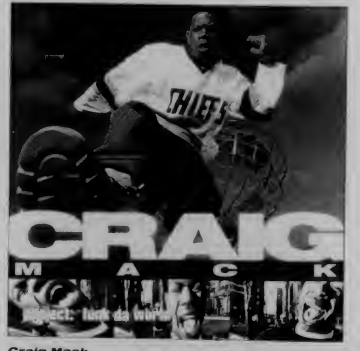
Powell is not sure.

"I don't know if I'd call what we're seeing a resurgence," says Powell. "People are realizing that they have to change things up, and that's cool, but I don't know if a few groups blowin' up makes it a resurgence yet."

All seeds need time to grow. Let's hope this is only the beginning.

Matthew J.X. Malady is a senior magazine major at Syracuse U. He wants you to vote Q-Tip in '96.

New York's Wu-Tang Clan — Obi-Wan has taught them well.



Craig Mack — the Force is strong with him.

R+R COVER PHOTOS BY CARL POSEY

1-800-217-4588

Rock

BY GLENN McDONALD

Rating system
 race car
* hat
 dog
 thimble
* horse
(it always fails over)

Pocket Band

Extra Fancy

Los Angeles' Extra Fancy may be the nation's most famous unsigned band.

Countless aggressive live shows and a deafening street buzz have earned the band extensive media coverage — typically the sort of hype reserved for a major-label debut.

"Everything is sort of happening the opposite way from how it normally does," says bassist D.A. Foster. The band — which also includes vocalist Brian Grillo, guitarist Michael Hateley and drummer Derek O'Brien — has been playing in the L.A. area for nearly three years.

With great hype comes great headaches, though. The band is often pegged as "homocore," a media tag Grillo, the only gay member, says he could do without.

"[Our music] is not 'homocore,'" Grillo says, "because there are three straight guys playing along. Our music's for everybody."

Sinner Man*, the band's independently produced debut, incorporates the heavier and of punk, industrial and even rockabilly, complemented by Grillo's husky vocals and candid lyrics.

"When I first started this band, I was at a point in my life where I really needed to start looking at myself and getting inside my head," Grillo says. "It's very liberating to expose every little detail about myself in front of a bunch of people. The cool thing about this punk movement coming back is that people really seem open to new things."

For more info, e-mail the band at ExtraFancy@aol.com

Rob Hooper, U. of Southern California

Urge Overkill
Exit The Dragon
Geffen

★★★

I've figured it out. See, Urge Overkill is less a rock band than a perpetual meditation on the state of rock bandom. They've cultivated a martini-and-velvet image of swank that is so breathtakingly cool it threatens to take over not just the band's music — but the entire planet.

Coolness has its cost, however, and in the case of Urge, it means you can never dissociate the music from the image. Which isn't a problem if you're in the mood to just feel hip and be rocked, you know, like Cheap Trick rocked. It's in the quieter moments, like Exit's delicate "View of the Rain," that the coolness becomes a problem. Because in your heart, you want to sing along with a line like "Take a walk outside yourself/Get to know the person behind the face/Is it someone you can really love?" But you're afraid the boys in Urge would laugh and call you a sissy.

Musically, the band continues to appropriate the best rock riffs of the past 20 years, but I don't think that's even a crime anymore. Urge is the best there is at what they do — making dashing, disposable rock history. And that's a compliment.

Spirit of '73: Rock for Choice
Various Artists
Sony

★★★

It took three years to get this record made, as skittish major labels, freaked by the Ice-T/Warner fiasco, refused to mess with the politics of a pro-choice compilation. So sisters did it for themselves.

Featuring "girl bands of the '90's doing covers of girl singers of the '70s," the album celebrates the disco decade musically and politically (1973 was the year of the Roe v. Wade decision). Highlights include Joan Jett and Rock for Choice founders L7 covering the Runaways' "Cherry Bomb" and Eve's Plumb's faithful version of "If I Can't Have You."

What's on the record is fine — it's what's not on the record that's a bit disappointing. Where are the big hitters? Sinead O'Connor, Salt-n-Pepa, The Breeders, The B-52s and MC Lyte — all staunch supporters of women's rights — were reportedly contacted for the project. Sure, logistics can be tough on a compilation, but jeez — where'd everybody go?

Hurricane
The Hurra
Grand Royal

★

So here's Hurricane — a guy who's been on the scene since Def Jam's heyday in the mid-'80s, who's DJ'd for hip-hop innovators the Beastie Boys for nearly a decade — and all he can come up with is 14 tracks about how fly he is. Mmm. Refreshing.

He's not very convincing, either. On tracks like "Pass Me The Gun" and "Feel The Blast," Hurricane posits himself as another gat-totin' player, which isn't all that interesting, even if you do believe him. And guest raps by Beastie Ad Rock and Cypress Hill's Sen Dog only highlight Hurricane's shortcomings on the mike.

To his credit, Cane raises the political stakes on "Can We Get Along," and the maelstrom production on "Where's My Niggas At?" could rival some of the Bomb Squad's best work.

Blind Melon
Soup
Capitol

★★★

A good example of a modern music hu phenomenon, Blind Melon became a Huge Rock Band when MTV picked up the "No Rain" video off their 1992 eponymous debut album. Now the band has to convince us once again that their resourceful blend of southern rock and trippy stylistic switchups is worthwhile.

It is, in a way. The band has a knack for tenacious hooks, and although there's nothing as addictive as "No Rain" on Soup, there are enough interesting moments to keep your head ringing. Weirdness abounds — gothic cellos ("Car Seat"), New Orleans horns ("Lemonade") and even a kazoo solo ("Skinned"). But it all wears thin after a few listens. More brothy than chunky, Soup should nevertheless keep Blind Melon from the pit of discarded MTV bands. For now.

RADIO, RADIO

1. Yo La Tango, Electr-O-Pura, Matador
2. Fugazi, Red Medicine, Discord
3. Bjork, Post, Elektra
4. Foo Fighters, Foo Fighters, Capitol
5. Thurston Moore, Psychic Hearts, DGC
6. The Muffs, Blonder and Blonder, Reprise
7. Alanis Morissette, Jagged Little Pill, Maverick
8. Primus, Tales From the Punchbowl, Interscope
9. Matthew Sweet, 100% Fun, Zoo
10. Buffalo Tom, Sleepy Eyed, Elektra

Chart based solely on college radio airplay. Contributing radio stations: KRNE U. of Nebraska; KTRU Rice U. Texas; KUCB U. of Colorado, Boulder; KWVA U. of Oregon; WCBN U. of Michigan; WFAL Bowling Green State U., Ohio; WUTK U. of Tennessee, Knoxville; WVRT Virginia Tech; WWVU West Virginia U.

The U Radio Chart is sponsored by
VIBRANCE
ORGANIC CARE

Clueless
Original Motion Picture Soundtrack
Capitol

★★★★

Soundtracks are usually a dodgy investment. Many times, the tracks are throwaways, filler or irritating themed songs (Remember "Bat dance"?). Now, Clueless the movie may or may not suck, but the soundtrack producers have pulled together an immensely appealing collection.

In the standout single, Kim Wilde's '80s anthem "Kids In America" gets a punked-out makeover by the Muffs (why didn't someone think of this before?). Otherwise, listen for Luscious Jackson's disco inferno "Here," still groovy despite a too-busy dance remix, and Coolio's gangsta-pop "Rollin' With My Homies." Other strong contributions come from newcomers Supergrass ("Alright"), Husker-Du-esque punkers Smoking Popes ("Need You Around") and the ever-perky Jill Sobule ("Supermodel"). This CD will make you feel young, hip and beautiful all over again.

More reviews, more releases, plus sound bytes at http://www.umagazine.com

Rapid Fires

South Circle
Anotha Day Anotha Balla
Suave/Relativity

Blame Dr. Dre. All guns-and-ganja hip-hop sounds essentially the same these days — horror flick synth lines over thick bass grooves. Ah, well. At least Houston's South Circle throw in a little southern funk and the sophisticated rhyme styles of rappers Mr. Mike and Thorough.

Superchunk
Incidental Music 1991-95
Merge

Chronicling four years of b-sides, split singles, EPs and compilation tracks, Incidental Music 1991-95 is a great way to get acquainted with this most excellent band. For the initiated, it's a great way to get the rarities without spending a fortune on out-of-print vinyl.

Luna
Penthouse
Elektra

Before techno/house/trip-hop/etc., trance music depended on metronomic drumming and inventive guitar sounds (think Velvet Underground). Luna's Dean Wareham (formerly of Galaxie 500) has this routine down pat, and his lovely lyrical landscapes make Penthouse feel like a slow barbiturate dream.

Catherine Wheel
Happy Days
Fontana/Mercury

As their radio hit "Black Metallic" evidenced, Catherine Wheel can do wonders with guitar dynamics. In fact, the temptation is to call the guitars on this CD "majestic," but then you sound like a publicity person. Oh, what the hell — they're majestic. Check Rob Dickinson's duet with Belly's Tanya Donnelly, "Judy Staring at the Sun."

The Wizard of Oz
Original Motion Picture Soundtrack
Rhino

Divvied up into a Good Witch CD and a Bad Witch CD, this collection has it all — the songs, the score, outtakes, alternate takes, extended versions and even rehearsal demos. Plus a 48-page booklet with photos, storyboards and production notes. Oz-some!

The Presidents of the United States of America
The Presidents of the United States of America
Columbia

These wiseacres have taken up enough space with their damn name, so here's the quick skinny: In the Weezer/Pavement vein, only more punky, less ambitious and a lot funnier. Features "We're Not Gonna Make It" ("Cuz there's a million better bands/With a million better songs.").

Reel

BY BONNIE DATT

HOW DO YOU TOP A SEXY SQUAW (step aside, Jessica Rabbit) and a benippled bat (holy codpiece) for the fall lineup? You don't even try. You just roll out the last round of action, romance, comedy, mystery and Brad Pitt movies. And thank God that Kato Kaelin isn't in any of them.

Desperado
Columbia Pictures

Robert Rodriguez started the indie fire burning with his $7,000 El Mariachi. Now, with big-studio backing and big-name talent (Antonio Banderas plays the musician with the loaded guitar) for its sequel, he puts his tricks aside — or at least polishes them — and does some serious filmmaking.

To Die For
Columbia Pictures

Here's another from-blonds-to-celluloid picture, but with less blood than Natural Born Killers and less-offensive language than S.F.W. Nicole Kidman stars as an attention-crazed weather girl. Matt Dillon plays her murdered husband. Gus Van Sant directs, so yes, it'll be quirky.

Canadian Bacon
Gramercy

Roger & Me's Michael Moore lays off GM and goes after the White House with his scenario of what would happen if we declared war on Canada. And if Hawkeye Pierce were president. Not really, but Alan Alda does play the man with the plan. Rhea Perlman (Cheers) and the late John Candy also star.

Hackers
United Artists

This is a blood-and-guts horror flick that... No, it's about computers. But you knew that. In it a bunch of Gen Xers (that means they're cool, not geeky — get it?) become cybersuspects in some technological treachery. They're looking for an exit off this superhighway to hell.

Seven
New Line

The seven deadly sins. Let's see: anger, avarice, envy, gluttony, pride, sloth... What's the seventh? Oh well. Morgan Freeman (The Shawshank Redemption) and Brad Pitt — Lust! That's it! — star as two cops after a serial killer who's serious about those sins being deadly.

Nadja
October Films

Just your average black-and-white, vampire lesbian horror/comedy/love story. Did we mention that David Lynch executive produced? Elina Lowensohn (the Romanian gymnast on that one Seinfeld) stars as the vampire Nadja. Peter Fonda plays Dr. Van Helsing as well as Dracula.

Jeffrey
Orion

A romantic comedy about the search for Mr. Right. Nice, fluffy common film fodder. Unless the one searching is named Jeffrey (played by Steven Weber [TV's Wings]). Philadelphia got serious about gay love in the age of AIDS. Now Jeffrey wants to get silly with it.

The Brothers McMullen
Fox Searchlight

The McMullen brothers are Catholic and Irish in New York. Which can be hell on relationships. One's single and playing; one's married and straying; one's committed but delaying. Ed Burns, who produced, wrote and directed this Sundance winner, also plays the player.

The Run of the Country
Castle Rock

Think your transition from high school to college was rough? Danny (Matt Keeslar, Safe Passage) goes through about every emotionally scarring event an 18-year-old Irishman can encounter, from death to pregnancy to more death and near death. But at least his country's peaceful.

Beyond Rangoon
Castle Rock

While her sister was piercing every body part for Pulp Fiction, Patricia Arquette (True Romance) was slogging through the jungles of Malaysia, which passed for war-torn Burma, circa 1988. She plays a woman who, by immersing herself in a nation's tragedies, is able to get past her own.

National Lampoon's Senior Trip
New Line

Those crazy high school kids. The "slackers" get detention and have to write to the president with suggestions for improving the educational system. So The Prez invites them all to DC. With Tommy Chong (as in Cheech and) at the bus wheel, what a strange trip it'll be.

Previews! Reviews! Movie Trailers! http://www.umagazine.com

On the Set

A special-effects artist painstakingly arranges yak hair on a giant rat creature. "Take note of this," says actor Tom Savini (Creepshow I and II). "Everybody else turns into a bat. I turn into a rat."

Savini plays Sex Machine, a customer at the Titty Twister bar in From Dusk Till Dawn, the upcoming Robert Rodriguez (Desperado) vampire horror film. Scriptwriter Quentin Tarantino (Pulp Fiction) and George Clooney (TV's ER) play gangster brothers who seek refuge at the Titty Twister.

Greg Nicotero, the "N" of the KNB special-effects company, demonstrates another of his creations, a twitching bat that attacks Clooney in the movie. "George was upset because the bat out-acted him," Nicotero says.

Nicotero also points out a decapitated head, which is modeled after Robert Kurtzman ("K" of KNB). "This is human hair," he says. "You can't style synthetic. See, Bob has kind of the Ohio high school hairdo." Everybody in the special-effects room gets killed at some point in the movie, Nicotero says.

Production designer Cecilia Montiel explains her vision of a new design for vampirism in Mexico: "Don't expect any Gothic here. It's naco. Border style — tacky and decadent."

Screen Saver

A Reason to Believe

A movie on date rape? Ugh. No thanks. But wait, there's A Reason to Believe.

Higher Learning* was disappointing because it tried to tackle too many issues and couldn't give any the treatment they deserved — particularly the rape plot line, which got further convoluted with the sexual-orientation-questioning plot line.

A Reason to Believe* is a thorough exploration of the subject, but it doesn't feel like an after-school special or one of those good-for-you movies you were forced to watch in health class — movies that are OK but that in no way relate to your life. These scenarios are believable, and the movie's actually still fun to watch. Music includes songs from REM, Blind Melon and 10,000 Maniacs.

A Reason to Believe* stars Allison Smith (TV's Kate & Allie). It opens nationally in September.

U. is here

http://www.umagazine.com

CLASSIFIEDS

NANNY SERVICES

BOSTON NANNIES. [illegible]

TRAVEL

STUDY ABROAD [illegible]

FINANCIAL AID

FREE FINANCIAL AID

ATTENTION ALL COLLEGE STUDENTS!

All students are eligible.

1-800-263-6495 ATTENTION 198576

TUITION MONEY —[illegible]

GRANT & SCHOLARSHIP HOTLINE

Get 25 "FREE" sources when you order our reference listing of Over 1100 Grants and Scholarships which cover all majors! Back to School Special for this month only $19.95 (reg $40.00) plus sh

THIS IS A 60% SAVINGS!!!

TOLL FREE 1-800-362-2797

We accept Visa, Mastercard and American Express

COLLEGE MONEY GUARANTEED Scholarships, Grants, Aid & Private Funding. Most Extensive Database Available Anywhere. Individually Tailored Programs. 1-800-549-2403, ext. 9111.

MONEY MAKING OPPORTUNITIES

CAMPUS SALES REPS NEEDED!! Custom Imprinted T-Shirts, etc. Send $5.00. Receive information and prepaid phone card! CCRL, Route 17, Box 131, Harrisonburg, VA 22801

BOOKS

The Slacker Handbook — A Financial Survival Guide for College Students. Send $5.95 to Brian Bolte, PO Box 217, Decatur, IL 62525.

EMPLOYMENT

WORK IN PARADISE

Summer positions available at Nationwide destinations including Hawaii, Florida, the Rockies, Alaska, New England, etc. Earn up to $12.00/hour + tips! For more info call RESORT EMPLOYMENT SERVICES (800)807-5950 ext.R98522

EARN $1,500 WEEKLY [illegible] GUARANTEED! Money, STEP, [illegible] Begin NOW! FREE packet. MENAS, Box 4001, Conifer, CO 80433. [illegible]

Capitol Records is hiring College Field Reps statewide. You must be able to get college credit and work a minimum of 15 hours per week. Music experience, radio retail is required. Sophomores and Juniors interested fax resumes to 213-962-6403, attn: Robin.

ALASKA SUMMER EMPLOYMENT – [illegible] Earn up to $8000+ in two months. Free transportation! Room and Board! Over 5,000 openings. No experience necessary. Call (206) 545-4155 ext. A8820.

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING

Earn up to $2 000+ per month working for Cruise Ships or Land Tour Companies. World Travel. Hawaii, Mexico, the Caribbean, etc. Seasonal and Full-Time employment available. No experience necessary. For more info call

(206)634-0468 ext.C98529

HOBBIES

BREW YOUR OWN BEER! Easy to use, makes excellent beer! Complete kit $49.95. Call 1-800-451-6000.

MUSIC

http://www.subpop.com

Meet The Press

Composed of the crème de la crème of recently graduated college journalists, U. Magazine's mighty (or sometimes dismal) staff members frequently put in two and a half to three hours a day in their limousines to chronicle all things collegiate. Aside from their breathtaking knowledge of grammar rules, the U. editors can physically combine to form a 40-foot-tall, crime-fighting super robot.

From left to right:

Bonnie Datt*, Associate Editor, B.A. in Communication, Chatham College '93 — Sex, drugs and copy editing — that Bonnie's motto. She has forgotten more about dependent clauses than Webster ever knew.

Tricia Stephenson*, Assistant Editor, B.A. in English, Colorado State U. '95 — Possessing an intimate knowledge of New Orleans underground barter economy, Beads, Inc. is a U. Magazine's only real fashion consultant.

Robert Manker*, Assistant Editor, B.A. in Journalism, Eastern Illinois U. '95 — Robyn's riddle wrapped in an enigma. Some call him the Triple-Sided Paradox. He also sees the world as a Dodgers fan.

Colleen Rush*, Assistant Editor, B.A. in English, Bucknell U. '95 — Colleen is sort of the Han Solo of U. Magazine. She's the best at pilfering off us than ever seen. She made the Kessel run in 6.8 parsecs!

Wendy Rutherford*, Assistant Editor, Bachelor of Journalism, U. of Texas, Austin '94 — Being a Texan, Wendy wields strange powers born of a deep Southern gothic mysticism. She makes good queso, too.

Glenn McDonald*, Music and Wrap Editor, B.A. in English, Michigan State U. '94 — Clueless and frail, Glenn is the weak link in the U. Magazine chain. Frankly, he'll be lucky to last the summer.

Have we got a job for U.?

All seriousness aside, the U. Magazine assistant editor program is a great opportunity to gain real-world experience in all aspects of magazine publishing — coming up with story and art ideas, writing, editing, assigning to freelancers and picking up the slack when freelancers punk out. Assistant editors live and work in Los Angeles for a one-year period (approximately mid-May to mid-May). But this isn't an internship — you get paid!

If you would like to apply for a 1996–97 assistant editor position, or if you're just interested in writing, taking photos or doing illustrations for U. Magazine, send a SASE to: Frances Huffman, Editor, U. The National College Magazine, 1800 Century Park E. #820, Los Angeles, CA 90067. You can also send e-mail to Frances Huffman at Umagazine@aol.com or check out application info at http://www.umagazine.com — click on "Work for U."

CONTESTS

4TH ANNUAL U. PHOTO CONTEST WIN FOUR $1,000 GRAND PRIZES

[illegible] your chance to win big money, U. is offering $1,000 cash grand prizes for the best photo entries submitted in four categories: Campus Life/Traditions, All Around Sports (mud to varsity), Road Trippin' and Funniest Sights. PLUS, for each entry published in U. during the year, we'll pay you $25. Last year's contest had more than 100 winners — and $10,000 in cash prizes.

Photos can be of anyone or anything on or off campus. Be normal (whatever that is) to outrageous. For best results, keep the faces in focus and the background as light as possible.

Winners of the month will be published in U. and on our Web site at http://www.umagazine.com (click on "U. Contests"). The four $1,000 Grand Prize winning entries will be featured in U.'s May 1996 issue in our 12th annual College Year in Review special section.

Send entries on color print or slide film, labeled (gently) on the back with your name, school, address, phone number (school and permanent) and info on who, when, where, what and what the photo was taken. Include names of people in the photos if possible. Entries cannot be returned and become the property of U. Magazine. Deadline for entries is March 15, 1996.

Mail your entries to
U. MAGAZINE
PHOTO CONTEST,
1800 Century Park East, Suite 820,
Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511

$1000 Grand Prize Winner: Trippin'* —
Al Arqueta, Penn State U.

$1000 Grand Prize Winner: Campus Life* —
Shelly Chetarie, U. of Pennsylvania

U.* Photo Contest Winner —
An Phan, U. of California, Berkeley

$1000 Grand Prize Winner: All Around Sports* —
Jennifer Smolder, West Virginia U.

$1000 Grand Prize Winner: Funniest Sights* —
Benjamin Glotzer, Syracuse U.

WIN 2 ROUND-TRIP AIRLINE TICKETS, $1,000 CASH AND A CANON COLOR BUBBLE JET PRINTER!

All it takes to win is imagination! Send us a postcard or e-mail describing the coolest, funniest, smallest, wildest or weirdest place you could print with a Canon® BJC-70 Color Bubble Jet™ Printer.

This new Canon printer can go anywhere you can think of! It's compact (11.8" long x 6.2" wide x 2.2" high), weighs only 3.1 pounds, can be powered by a rechargeable battery and prints anything in brilliant color and sharp black and white. (For more info see the ad on page 9, or call (800) 848-4123 ext. 101.)

The Grand Prize winner will get $1,000 cash AND round-trip airline tickets for two to anywhere in the U.S., Mexico or the Caribbean AND a new Canon BJC-70 Color Bubble Jet Printer! PLUS, two second prize winners will each receive a new Canon BJC-70 Color Bubble Jet Printer AND $500 cash. Five third prize winners each win $349 cash (about what it takes to buy a Canon BJC-70 Color Bubble Jet Printer).

To enter, send your entry (50 words max) describing your most creative print site to U. MAGAZINE Canon Cool Print Site Contest, 1800 Century Park East, Suite 820, Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511 or e-mail to http://www.umagazine.com (click on U.Mail, Canon Cool Print Site Contest), Umagazine@aol.com or umagazine@earthlink.net.

All entries (snail mail or e-mail) must include your name, school, address (school and permanent) and phone number to be eligible to win. There is no limit to the number of times you may enter. Deadline for entries: Dec. 1, 1995. Winners will be notified by Dec. 20, 1995, so be sure to include your permanent phone number.

Poll Question

Your first time—ecstatic or traumatic?

800/6U-VIEWS
688-4397
Ext. 62

3RD ANNUAL U. CAPTURE THE NIKE SPIRIT CONTEST

[illegible],000 AND your entry published with a multinational ad!

Wherever you go, climb, hike, raft, bike, skydive, parasail, hang glide, bike, jump, explore or kick back, take your camera and capture the Nike Spirit — those unforgettable experiences in sports and everyday life. Maybe you and your Nikes will hike to the most awesome place on earth, climb the biggest mountain or rock, catch big air (with or without wheels), ride the rapids, backpack into a canyon, round around (or into) a lake, bungee jump off a bridge or rappel (or leap over) the tallest building on campus. Or maybe you own the World's Oldest Living Pair of Nikes, or the most battered pair still alive, or you can get the most pairs of Nikes in one photo with the most people attached. You decide and JUST DO IT!

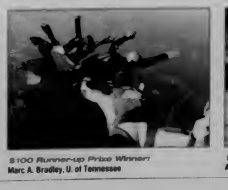
Each month, the best entry will be published in U. and the winners of the month will receive $50 cash.

The Grand Prize winner will receive $1,000, and the winning photo will be published with Nike's ad in the January/February issue of U. PLUS, the top 30 entries will receive cash prizes. (Last year, we gave away $5,000 in cash prizes.) AND every month this fall, the best entry will be published in U. and on our Web site at http://www.umagazine.com (click on "U. Contests"). Winners of the month win $50 cash.

Send your entries on color print or slide film, labeled (gently) on the back with your name, school, address, phone number (school and permanent) and a brief description of the Nike spirit you've captured (who, when, where, doing what, etc.). Deadline for entries is Dec. 1, 1995. Entries cannot be returned and become the property of U. Magazine. There is no limit on the number of entries you can submit.

Mail your entries to
U. MAGAZINE
CAPTURE THE NIKE SPIRIT CONTEST,
1800 Century Park East, Suite 820,
Los Angeles, CA 90067-1511

$100 Runner-up Prize Winner:
Brent Tadsen, U. of Minnesota, Duluth



$100 Runner-up Prize Winner:
Marc A. Bradley, U. of Tennessee

$500 Second Prize Winner:
Adam Warot, U. of California, Santa Barbara

$1000 Grand Prize Winner:
Brian Hendrix, U. of Tennessee wrap

ALL-CONSUMING PASSION

BY GLENN MCDONALD

Illustrations by J. Thomson, Auburn U.

The products of our generation

IT'S TAKEN TWENTY-SOME YEARS of social programming and millions of hours of television saturation, but it has finally been accomplished. The advertising industry has created the perfect consumer generation.

I realized this last week when I saw a TV commercial for Red Wolf beer. I was about six hours into an afternoon of sports programming, so I was already susceptible to subtext, when I started thinking.

"Red Wolf — yeah, man. I'm like a red wolf. I'm mysterious and solitary, stalking moonlit forest glades. I totally. I'm a red wolf, dude. I hunt alone because I'm like, you know, a lone hunter and shit."

So I bought a six pack of Red Wolf. As I sat down with my first beer, I noticed I did feel a little more ferocious. By the fifth beer, I was downright savage.

Anyway, I've decided to stop fighting and be the consumer I was born to be. Most of my opinions and values have been provided by TV, as it is. So I figure, what the hey — for a few measly dollars I can have a brand-new, self-image laboriously crafted by the nation's finest advertising thinkers!

First things first. I went out yesterday and bought a Gillette twin razor. I figured, those guys that use Gillette razors on TV are real manly like and sexy. Now, don't get me wrong. I'm plenty manly like. After all, I wear Patagonia outdoor wear. You can tell just by looking at that label that I'm rugged, man. I'm probably out climbing some breathtaking vista right now.)

Armed with my close, comfortable shave, I went out to get some more products — the kind of products that say, "Hey. I'm young and hip and free. I'm the kind of guy who goes clubbing, reads Details and has a lot of sex."

I got some cologne because Kate Moss digs guys that smell somewhere between love and madness. Then I bought a pair of Doc Martens because I'm the type of blue collar fellow that can afford really expensive impostor work boots.

Also, because I'm thrill-seeking and dangerous, I got me a top-of-the-line 15-speed mountain bike that hangs upside down in my apartment, right next to my cross-country skis and snowboard.

I felt pretty good, but something was missing. So I replaced all my furniture with cool post-modern wood-finish stuff that looks like it came off a Caribbean cargo boat. Then I bought some matte black electronic devices and wired them all together into a central remote system with stereo surround sound. Finally, I just put a down payment on a Land Rover — a mighty juggernaut of a vehicle that can handle all terrains and go for 8,000 miles on a single tank of gas. Unfortunately, I dinged the bumper on a telephone pole so now it's in the shop.

Granted, all these changes have been a bit expensive, but that's OK. Because Commerce, in her infinite wisdom, has provided me with a wallet full of credit cards. It's a warm feeling, actually, having merged into this grand, all-encompassing entity that is consumer America. Not unlike say, the way a massive gelatinous space blob incorporates the local townsfolk into itself, dissolving them slowly and painfully until their boiling flesh is literally melted from their—

Whoa! Sorry, getting a little off track there. But you see my point.

BASEBALL CAP: SPORTY, ATHLETIC SUNGLASSES: MYSTERIOUS, ENIGMATIC
CIGARETTE: DANGEROUS, TOUGH
CLOSE, COMFORTABLE SHAVE!
LEATHER JACKET: HIP, PUNK ROCK
COOL BAND T-SHIRT: DOWN WITH INDIE ROCK SCENE
BOXER SHORTS: MANLY, SEXY
DARK, IMPORT BEER: SOPHISTICATED, YET FUN
BAGGY, DESIGNER JEANS: HIP, URBAN
4-WHEEL DRIVE VEHICLE: RUGGED, ADVENTUROUS
PROLETARIAT WORK BOOTS: ANTI-ESTABLISHMENT, YET EXPENSIVE
THE ULTIMATE CONSUMER

Double Take

Burn, Baby, Burn

Fed up with years of self-indulgent generational irony, national fraternity Gamma Zeta Chi recently announced a ban on kitschy '70s references in all fraternity-owned houses. "We're particularly strict about referencing a certain 1970s family that is 'much more than a hunch,' if you know what I'm talking about," said president Kip Kaplan at a press conference.

Any fraternity member caught singing Schoolhouse Rock songs or publicly displaying Cheryl Tiegs posters will be immediately deactivated.

"We're serious," Kaplan said. "No girls in those clingy iron-on shirts, no novelty lunch boxes and no late-night drunken choruses of a certain soundtrack that rhymes with Hatter Gay Fight Beaver. Oh, yeah — and no playing ball in the house!"

Kaplan was immediately impeached.

Seth Lives* Sebastian Conley, Harvard U. Strip Tease

WAIT, DAVE -- YOU MEAN YOU CAN USE THIS COMPUTER TO PICK UP WOMEN?
OF COURSE, MIKE. HERE, GIVE IT A WHIRL!
WELL, I... I WOULDN'T KNOW WHERE TO START.
JUST TYPE SOMETHING! YOU NEVER KNOW WHO'S OUT THERE!
Sebastian 3/95
IT'S REALLY AMAZING! YOU COULD BE TALKING WITH THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND AND YOU'D NEVER EVEN KNOW IT!
HEY YOU SIZZLIN' BED OF STEAMY LOVE-- HOT FOR YOU, MOMMA.
YOW!

IF LIFE'S A BEACH, MAKE SURE YOU'RE ON IT.

NO annual FEE,

a $1,000 CREDIT limit

and our SMARTRATE® program.

okay, now hit the beach!

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.®

©1995 Greenwood Trust Company. Member FDIC

NOVUS

Man with a mission

Antonio Banderas stars in the movie Desperado. Take a look at what our movie reviewer thought of this sequel (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Oregon Republican leaves Senate

Sen. Bob Packwood (R.-Ore.) resigned yesterday under intense pressure over sexual harassment accusations (See story, page 9).

Reid returns to face old team

Former UM football coach Jim Reid returns to his old turf tomorrow when his new team, the Richmond Spiders, invade McGuirk Stadium (See Sports, Page 14).

Weekend Forecast

Hot and humid all day with a chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Saturday it will cool off with balmy breezes in the late afternoon. Expect sun and warmer weather on Sunday.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 87 LOW: 79	HIGH: 78 LOW: 65	HIGH: 93 LOW: 69

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 3 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, September 8, 1995

Fitness tour educates students while giving daredevil thrills

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Giant glove boxing was a popular event at the Jeep Eagle Health and Fitness Tour which promoted better health and alcohol awareness.

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Over 300 students climbed walls, bungee jumped, stuck themselves to walls, jousted, or just drank tea at the Jeep/Eagle Collegiate Health and Fitness Tour yesterday.

Students can sign up for intramural athletics, a credit card, or long-distance service. They can walk away with a car or a hacky-sack, health information or a couch cover.

The tour, which is continuing today at the campus pond area from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., is free, thanks to 14 national sponsors.

Jeep Eagle, Plymouth, Sprint, Reebok, Foot Locker, Sure Fit, Discover, Lipton, Vivarin, Hawaiian Tropic and Clearly Canadian are offering information, as well as either prizes or samples.

"Challenge yourself, challenge your friends, instead of sitting around doing nothing," said Tour Director Ken Gistedt.

BACCHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students) is presenting the national tour in hopes of spreading its message of "fitness and healthy lifestyles."

In its third year, the Jeep Eagle Tour is traveling to 100 schools. About two-and-a-half million students are expected to at least walk through the national tour, according to Jon Lesser, Director of Special Events for Intercollegiate Communications. UMass contributed 1500 to that number yesterday alone.

Students who sign a release form may participate in several "natural high" activities, including a 30 ft. high artificial rock climbing wall, speed pitch, human bowling, soccer challenge, football challenge, ladder climb, bouncing boxing, miniature golf, the Velcro Fly Wall, and the Bungee Run Competition.

CompuTrainer, the Official U.S. Cycling Team Trainer, allows students to race against either themselves or a computer-generated competitor.

Some prizes are reserved for active participants, but couch potatoes can win a couch cover if the description of their sofa is worse than all other contestants.

Information is available on everything from eating healthy, stretching, exercise intensity, stress, and the affects of alcohol.

An Interactive Alcohol IQ Test allows students to compare their scores with students across the nation.

The University of Massachusetts Inter-Fraternal Council invited the tour "to bring some excitement" to campus, according to Jason Rose, vice-president for rush. He is coordinating the event, along with Josh Endler, president, Jarrett Geotz, treasurer, and Diego Figueroa, secretary.

"[The tour] is going to draw a crowd," said Jeff Gravel, of Sigma Alpha Mu. "It can help freshman and undergraduates to find their niche in the University."

Therien joins 5–College staff

Assistant academics director wants to move in new directions

By Gayle Dougherty
Collegian Staff

Five Colleges Incorporated appointed a new assistant coordinator for academic affairs this year. On August 1, Nathan A. Therien joined the five-college staff and anticipates a busy schedule.

As assistant coordinator of the consortium linking the Amherst College, Hampshire College, Smith College, Mount Holyoke College and University of Massachusetts campuses, Therien will oversee student interchange, five-college calendar coordination, and several collaborative arrangements. He will also be working with faculty committees and councils engaged in joint projects with the five-college staff.

"My primary responsibility is to assist in academic affairs and insure student interchange and collaborative activities through the calendar," Therien said. "But I am excited to learn about the different projects afoot at the five colleges."

Therien will be working with groups such as the center for East Asian studies at Smith, as well as the East Asian languages programs, the African studies programs and geologists from each campus.

"I like to have my ear to the ground and witness what students and faculty are doing at the different colleges," he said.

The most recent changes to the five-college network are a position in Chinese philosophy at Hampshire college and a new course called comparative Japanese and American economics at UMass, Therien said.

A large grant from the Mellon Foundation will also fund innovative changes in information areas such as the libraries, he said.

Therien also manages funding for lectures, events and new classes.

"[The consortium] helps the colleges decide how to allocate money for lectures, public Valley events and seminars for faculty," he said.

Many times representatives from other institutions bring groups to the colleges, Therien said. He helps write the applications these groups must file to hold their events at any of the campuses.

Although Therien does not expect dramatic changes to the five-college system this year, he said the consortium is always ready to move members in new directions.

"We help groups of campuses become more innovative when they are ready," he said. "It's an exciting time in the valley with new presidents and new ideas. The consortium plans to help develop these ideas."

The Stanford University graduate and Phi Beta Kappa member brings tremendous experience to the consortium. In 1985,

He received his doctorate in European cultural history from Harvard University. While working as the program officer for the Great Lakes Colleges Association (GLCA) in 1986, he honed his skills in consortia administration.

Therien also served in various positions, from visiting faculty to administrative positions at many schools, including Louisiana Scholars College, Denison University, Kalamazoo College, the College of Wooster and Beloit College.

Arts receive grant money from lottery; Megabucks is source for $14.1 million

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Area organizations are the beneficiaries of a large amount of Massachusetts state-appropriated funding collected from a popular lottery game.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC) awarded over 30 Hampshire County arts and cultural groups a combined $406,250.

This grant money came from the $14.1 million raised by the Megabucks lottery game earmarked for the Cultural Council. This is a 19 percent increase from last year's funding, according to Lisa Safier, communications coordinator for the MCC.

One of the recipients of this arts funding was Jazz in July, a program coordinated by Mark Baszak, the associate director for multicultural programs at the University of Massachusetts.

Jazz in July is an intensive two week program which allows students to study with some master jazz musicians, Baszak said.

He added that $9,000 awarded to Jazz in July will go towards providing people with full and half scholarships to attend the program.

"Grant money is given out through a competitive process," – Lisa Safier

"Grant money is given out through a competitive process," Safier said.

Groups which are vying for the MCC money must fill out an application, and the applications are then scrutinized by independent panels consisting of both the applicants' peers and other "lay people," Safier said.

According to the Northampton Arts Council, the $25,320 which they received is going to be used on two particular projects.

One of the projects the money will fund is "Four Sundays in February," an arts series which will take place at the Academy of Music in Northampton.

Grant funds are also to be used for the construction of a kiosk in the center of Northampton which will be both a work of art and an information center, including a schedule of upcoming arts and cultural events in Northampton.

Applications for the MCC grants are judged by separate panels from each of 13 disciplines, which are eligible to receive grants, including music and dance, Safier said.

The recommendations made by these panels are submitted to the agencies board, who make the final decisions.

UM police investigate reported assault in Southwest

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Wednesday night, the University of Massachusetts Police Dept. responded to a report that a student had been assaulted in Southwest.

The student said she left her residence hall around 10:15 p.m. and walked to the vicinity of Hampshire Dining Commons before realizing a male was following her. As she proceeded down the stairwell near the Dining Commons, she was assaulted and thrown to the ground.

The victim "indicated her assailant used some type of edged instrument during the assault. She received minor lacerations and abrasions," according to the UMass police log.

The police have a description of the assailant, a white male, 5'10", 180 lbs., with "brown scruffy hair."

The subject was wearing a navy blue shirt with a yellow emblem on the chest and jeans or jean shorts.

Anyone who has information or who possibly saw or heard anything is requested to call the Community Disorders Unit of the Police, at 545-0893.

Any information provided to assist the police in this investigation will be confidential. An identi-kit sketch is not available at this time.

Judge orders probation for Williams; former Minuteman not formally guilty

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Mike Williams, who was ejected last season from the Massachusetts basketball team, was ordered yesterday to serve a year of probation and pay back stolen money in a bad-check case.

Williams, who earlier called the case "a misunderstanding," admitted in Northampton District Court that the facts were sufficient to convict him.

Without a formal guilty finding, he was ordered to serve the probation and pay back money to settle charges of theft and forgery.

Authorities had accused Williams and Andre Burks, then a first-year guard on the team, of giving a $4,000 check to another University of Massachusetts student, who deposited it and gave them that amount in cash.

But the student was later told that the April check was drawn on a closed account in a Virginia bank, according to authorities. The hearing Thursday brought only the latest trouble to Williams, a 22-year-old clutch-shooting guard. He was suspended from the team in February.

Team officials never gave a reason publicly. But Williams acknowledged that he stayed out late during a road trip to Southwestern Louisiana and missed a team breakfast four days later. Burks was suspended from the team in March after he was charged with slapping a girlfriend in a dormitory. Also without a guilty finding, Burks was later ordered to serve probation and undergo counseling to settle both the assault and bad-check cases. He later withdrew from the University of Massachusetts and enrolled at McNeese State in Lake Charles, La. Burks' family home is about 200 miles away in Baton Rouge.

In recent months, Williams has been living at his family's home in Hartford, Conn., and trying to catch the eye of NBA scouts. Even without Williams, Massachusetts went on to finish the season in the Elite Eight of the NCAA tournament.

UMass installs new sprinkler systems

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

While students took a summer vacation, the Environmental Health and Safety Department (EH&S) was busy installing a new computerized fire system in Greenough and Lewis Residence Halls and a sprinkler system in Cashin Residential Hall, beyond their "routine preventative maintenance."

"These systems provide state of the art protection for residents as well as reducing the number of nuisance alarms," according to David J. Beaudin, of EH&S.

The new computerized systems constantly check the wiring and the smoke detectors. For example, the computer sends a message if the detectors are too dirty or the wiring is broken, according to Beaudin.

All post stations, where a person could trigger fire alarms without intervention by the computer, are wheel-chair accessible, as dictated by the American Disabilities Act.

"This type of activity places all residence hall residents at risk, as well as contributing to increased costs for students."

Also, all strobe lights are set at a certain degree of brightness and rate, for the visually impaired.

The continued reduction of false fire alarms is a chief concern for the fire safety staff this fall, Beaudin said. There were 20 false fire alarms last year, despite a 61 percent decrease, according to figures maintained by EH&S.

"This type of activity places all residence hall residents at risk, as well as contributing to increased costs for students," according to a recent press release.

In addition to the new alarms in Greenough and Lewis, Cashin Hall in the Sylvan Residential Area had a sprinkler system installed this summer. It is designed to detect a fire, sound the alarm and extinguish the fire before it gets out of control.

Besides monitoring these new systems, fire prevention staff from EH&S, assisted by staff from Physical Plant and Housing Services, spent the summer testing fire

Turn to FIRE, page 3

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

And the band plays on...

Rob Boladieu, a member of the UMass marching band, practices playing his tuba at a rehearsal last week. The marching band will perform at half-time during the September 9th home football game.

Campus Police Log

Friday, Sept. 1

License plate stolen from vehicle in Lot 33.

Report of a telephone and a clock stolen from Flint Lab over the summer.

Andrew K. Isaac, 22, of 57b Lawrence St. in Lowell, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under a suspended license, as well as operation of a motor vehicle with tire tread depth violation.

Saturday, Sept. 2

Domestic incident resolved outside of Fine Arts Center.

Ping Jin, 26, of 990 N. Pleasant St., was arrested at North Village Aparments under the charge of violating domestic abuse laws.

Individual discovered a screen in Lincoln Apartments had been cut in an attempted break-in.

An individual reportedly drove a vehicle on a pathway by Observatory Road.

Sunday, Sept. 3

Joseph E. Dapper, 30, of 30 Gates Lane in Worcester, was charged with speeding, operating under the influence of alcohol and driving in the wrong lane.

A rock was thrown through a window in the Fine Arts Center.

An individual reported $350 in cash stolen from John Q. Adams Hall.

Fumes from cars going through Southwest tunnel were checked by EH&S.

An individual with breathing difficulties was taken from Commonwealth Ave. to CDH by ambulance.

An individual on Kennedy Road reported $7 in cash stolen.

Vehicle struck bumper of another vehicle in Lot 22.

Monday, Sept. 4

Troy W. Renaud, 21, of Oak Hill Road in Greenfield, and Peter R. White, 19, of 389 Mohawk Trail in Greenfield, were arrested for stealing a lounge chair — larceny under $250.

A bicycle was reported stolen from a rack by Wheeler Hall.

A U-Haul truck struck the underpass at the Southwest Tunnel.

An intoxicated person at Pierpont Hall was taken to CDH, treated and released into the custody of the UMass Police Department.

A UMass Officer, stung by a bee, was taken to the Health Services, treated and released.

An individual with a head laceration was taken to UMI by friends.

A bicycle was stolen at Prince Hall.

A vehicle backed into another vehicle at the Southwest Mall.

A container of gasoline was found near a dumpster, and was retrieved by EH&S.

An individual with injuries sustained from a fight which occurred downtown was taken to CDH by ambulance.

A beer bottle was thrown through a door at Brett Hall.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Sept. 8

Theater — Auditions: Equus, by Peter Schaffer, directed by Mary Whitehead, HC, 549-4600 ext. 2425

Theater — Auditions: Our Town, by Thornton Wilder, directed by Ed Golden, sign up outside Room 112, FAC, 545-3490, Rand Theater 7:30-11 pm

Theater — MFA Directing Workshop: An Evening of One-Acts, sign up outside Room 112, Curtain Theater, FAC, 7 - 11 pm

Theater — Callback auditions for Macbeth and The Cradle Will Rock, AC, 7-11 pm

Theater — Auditions: Flyin' West, by Pearl Cleage, Rooke Theater, MHC, 7-10 pm

Music — Auditions: The Five College Early Music Program, 538-2079, Bezanson Recital Hall, FAC, 3:45-4:45 pm, Music Building, HC, 11:15 am

Community — Pre-Shabbat Yoga, 549-1710, Hillel House, 4:30

Community — Shabbat Services, dinner following service, $4 for students, $6.50 for non-student, 549-1710, Hillel House, 6 pm

Community — The Shabbos Experience, celebration of the Shabbos, food, prayer, songs, and stories, all welcome, 549- 4094, Chabad House, 7 pm

Community — Astronomy Club Meeting, Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association, free, 256-6234, Wilder Observatory, AC, 7:30 and 10 pm

Film — The Adventures of Priscilla: Queen of the Desert, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 pm

Film — The Shawshank Redemption, free, Chapin Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, 9 pm

Film — The Times of Harvey Milk, free, Mead, Stern Auditorium, AC, 9 pm

Saturday, Sept. 9

Theater — Auditions: Flyin' West, by Pearl Cleage, Rooke Theater, MHC, 7-10 pm, Room 201, FAC, 2-5 pm

Community — Morning Shabbat service, 549-1710, Hillel House, 10 am

Community — Shabbos morning services, with traditional meal, 549-4094, Chabad House, 10 am

Community — Solar Observing, Amherst Common, 1 pm

Community — Planetarium Show, Bassett Planetarium, Morgan Hall, AC, 4 pm

Community — Observatory observing, free, Wilder Observatory, Snell St., AC, 9 pm

Film — The Adventures of Priscilla: Queen of the Desert, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 pm

Music — Onion Bob, local traditional bluegrass band, with blues funk group the Filter Kings, the Bayssiate, Northampton

Meeting — Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League (RAIL), Cape Cod Lounge, 7 pm

Social — Korean Students Assoc. social dance party, $3 before 10:30, $5 after, free for returning members, 10th floor Campus Center

Sunday, Sept. 10

Community — BBQ and Beach Volleyball, free, 549-1710, Hillel House, 1-4 pm

Film — The Adventures of Priscilla: Queen of the Desert, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10

Notices

Heating Oil Savings — the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative could help save money on home heating this winter. Contact the UMass Commuter Resource Center information, 545-1865, 428 Student Union

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256 8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1 – Oct. 31, Mon-Fri 9-5 pm

CORRECTION

In yesterday's Collegian, the correct date that the "20/20" segment that included an interview with Dr. Barbara Halpern aired was on August 18.

The Collegian regrets the error.

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Thursday
September 14, 1995
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center 25th Anniversary
Or Would You Rather Be Studying ?

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS
Basketball/ Volleyball Court
FREE TO MEMBERS
Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes
Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmills • Life Cycle • Nordic Track
Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!
Group Discounts
Get Your Friends
Together And
Save $$$
JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES
317 RUSSELL ST. • ROUTE 9
HADLEY
586-0633

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
EVERY TOY WINS
Back To School SALE
Air Fly 64.99
CONVERSE One Star 24.99 39.99
50% OFF Socks! With Any Footwear Purchase!
AIR DVST8 74.99
Air Street Deke 59.99
RUSSELL ATHLETIC T-Shirts & Shorts $4.99 Ea.
LONG RIO UMBRO SHORTS $12.99
JANSPORT Superbreak Backpack $19.99
HEAD STRONG HELMETS BIKE HELMETS 9.99 Value To $29
Rollerblade. Astroblade 89.99
Huge Selection Of Hats Starting At $9.99
Special Group Jackets YOUR CHOICE! 59.99
Back To School Savings In Every Department!
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

Local police to receive equipment

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

State grants totalling almost $8,000 will allow the Northampton Police Department to buy a breathalyzer unit and the Pelham Police Department to purchase a Laser/Lidar unit which will enable police to clock speeds more accurately.

Pelham's new Laser/Lidar unit, which is being ordered, will be able to pinpoint the speed of an object with only three to four feet of error at a distance of a thousand feet, according to Chief Ed Fleury.

"On our small roads we have a lot of traffic that may be close together," said Fleury. The Lidar unit allows police "to make sure who you are clocking is who you are getting."

The "target selective" Lidar unit is capable of clocking a specific car at a quarter of a mile in six lanes of traffic, according to Belchertown Police Officer Jeff Sendek.

It can also compute an object's speed by measuring how long it takes for it to get from one point to another, which is useful when investigating accidents, according to Fleury.

The two laser units currently being used in Pelham are capable of clocking speeds while in a moving vehicle, something the new Laser/Lidar will not be able to do, according to Fleury. However, the speed of an object not at a right angle to the current laser units is recorded as lower than it actually is, due to the Doppler effect. All three units will be used, he added.

The Pelham Police Department received a $3,925 Governor's Highway Safety Bureau grant for the Laser/Lidar unit, which will cost about $4,000.

The Northampton Police Department will receive $4,000 to buy a $6,050 breathalyzer unit to replace the seven-year- old unit they are currently using.

"That was our most critical need," said Northampton Police Chief Russell Sienkiewicz.

The grants are "federal funds distributed through the Executive Office of Public Safety to improve or maintain safety on the highways," said State Senator Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst.).

"I congratulate the Northampton and Pelham Police Departments on their successful proposals," Rosenberg said in a recent press release. "But the real winners are the motorists in these towns who will be driving on safer streets."

The Belchertown Police Department also received $1000 from the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, which will be used to purchase mobile video equipment, according to Officer Jeff Sendek.

The video equipment "can go wherever the officers go," said Sendek.

It can document accident scenes, domestic violence, searches, and drivers operating under the influence of alcohol.

Hispanics urge ousting of judge

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus are seeking the ouster of a Texas judge who ordered a woman born and raised in Mexico to speak English to her 5-year-old daughter.

In a letter yesterday to the executive director of the Texas State Commission on Judicial Conduct, the eleven lawmakers expressed "outrage" over the Aug. 16 ruling of State District Judge Samuel Kiser, and asked the panel to start removal proceedings.

"Denying a mother's right to speak to her daughter in whatever language she chooses raises serious constitutional questions," they wrote. "... It appears that he has allowed his personal prejudices to influence his judgment."

"Labeling the Spanish language as abuse is an affront to Hispanic-Americans and all who value their cultural heritage. These statements also mock the seriousness of child abuse."

In ordering Marta Laureano to speak some English to her daughter, Kiser said during the custody hearing: "You're abusing that child and you're relegating her to the position of a housemaid."

The lawmakers wrote: "Labeling the Spanish language as abuse is an affront to Hispanic-Americans and all who value their cultural heritage. These statements also mock the seriousness of child abuse."

Laureano speaks English but said she uses Spanish at home so her daughter will become bilingual.

Kiser didn't immediately return a telephone call to his office in Amarillo, Texas. Nor did a commission spokesman.

The controversy comes amid heightened interest by a growing number of members of Congress and Republican presidential candidates, including Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, to designate English the nation's official language.

Dole supporter chastises nominee

Gay GOP congressman shocked by candidate's homophobia

By John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A gay Republican congressman who has endorsed Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole for president chastised Dole on Wednesday for returning a contribution from a gay GOP group.

"Are you rejecting the support of anyone who happens to be gay?" Wisconsin Rep. Steve Gunderson said in a letter to Dole. "If this is so, do you intend to now reject my support and request those on your staff who happen to be gay to resign?"

Dole's campaign recently said it was returning a $1,000 contribution from the Log Cabin Club, an organization of gay Republicans. Dole spokesman Nelson Warfield said the campaign would not keep the money because Dole did not share the organization's views.

Log Cabin officials, however, produced a letter showing that the Dole campaign had solicited the contribution, and said the campaign decided to return it only after media inquiries. Dole aides then said campaign finance chairman John Moran should not have sent the letter.

Gunderson supported Dole's 1988 presidential campaign and was among the earliest members of Congress to endorse Dole's 1996 effort. Gunderson said he was at a recent dinner when friends mentioned the Log Cabin episode."I assumed my friends had mistaken yours for the campaigns of other decidedly bigoted candidates. I was embarrassed to learn I was wrong," he said.

Gunderson closed his letter by asking Dole to "please assure me that my support of your campaign has not been misplaced, and that the recent incident is not reflective of what a Dole presidency would look like."

Warfield confirmed that Dole had received the letter but said the campaign had no immediate comment.

Gunderson said Dole's campaign had misrepresented the Log Cabin Club's agenda as somehow extreme, and said it does not seek any special privileges for homosexuals. He said the group shares the core GOP principles of balancing the budget and returning power to state and local governments.

Gunderson noted that Dole offered words of support when it was first reported last year that the congressman is gay.

Councils on Aging receive county funds

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Thanks in part to a state grant, some Hampshire County organizations will soon be able to further help those in need of their services.

The Councils on Aging are town-based groups which were created to help their communities' elderly citizens. The only requirement for someone to become eligible for council services is that they must be 60 or over.

These groups normally are allotted money by the towns or cities in which they are located, but this money is often found to be inadequate for their financial needs.

In response to this, the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs has given local Councils on Aging a combined $45,310 in grants.

"[Senator Rosenberg] supports funding for the Councils on Aging," said Tom Mitchell, an aide to state Senator Stan Rosenberg (D-Amherst), "He feels they do great work for those who contributed a great deal to our community."

This money was allotted to each town's Council through a system which gave between two to three dollars per resident over 60, said Jane Booth, the director of the Hadley Council on Aging.

"We receive $110,000 from the town of South Hadley, plus $48,000 for transportation, and $58,000 for meals from the government," said Marilyn Isher, director of the South Hadley Council on Aging, "but out of that $110,000, only $6,000 goes towards expenses, the rest is for staff."

The money that is received from the state will go towards a newsletter, and shopping assistance for the homebound, neither of which is funded by the town, Isher said.

She also said that a growing need for transportation services will be fulfilled by the grant money.

"They [the Councils] make sure to help keep elders independent for as long as possible," said Joanne Borkowski, a planner for West Mass Elder Care, a company which works closely with the Councils. "They make sure [the elderly] get all the services they need."

Services the Councils offer the elderly include transportation, delivered meals and meals at a nutrition center, classes, as well as assistance with benefits and housing problems.

"They're a very vital organization in each community," said Borkowski. "They do a very positive, effective job."

continued from page 1

alarms, sprinklers, standpipes (pipes that run through the larger buildings on campus) and fire hydrants in and around campus buildings.

Members of the campus community who are concerned about fire safety or would like personal fire safety instructions should contact EH&S at 545-2682.

Come Join . . .
New England Junior Hockey Club!
Try Out Dates:
September 9 & 10
9:00am - 12:00pm
UMass Practice Rink
(413) 789-4566

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains Incense
Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Socks Leather Sole
Area Rugs
Baskets
Skirts
Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).
MORE LAMPS $9.95
MORE BOOKCASES $34.95
MORE CHAIRS $69.95
GET BACK TO IT.
MORE TABLES $24.95
FROM $7.95
MORE RUGS
MORE BEDSPREADS
MORE POSTERS
FROM $3.50
FROM $9.95
Faces
OPEN 7 DAYS
MAIN STREET ~ NORTHAMPTON
EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY, "LUKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK!" WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.
AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Dasmion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Position Vacant Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt Vitmer Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni F. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Rian Corrtemanche Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The flaunting freaky world

Evan Young

Some people are real freaks. The other day I saw some guy walking down the street with a slicked-up one foot high mohawk, a pointy studded black leather jacket, black leather pants and boots, and some other accessories — the typical chains and flaming skulls and other things that people tend to wear with tight shiny leather.

All of this attire would have been okay, except for one thing: the t-shirt that showed through his jacket said "stop staring at me aface." Needless to say, I stared at him until he was out of sight because I wondered if he would really get pissed. To tell the truth, I wanted him to get pissed, because if someone flaunts that kind of style and has the gall to wear a shirt that calls anyone who looks at him an aface, he deserves to be annoyed by the rest of the normal world.

So now my question is this: Just exactly what is going through these peoples' minds when they decide to look a certain way — specifically, what goes through the minds of people who look like they are just trying to get attention?

A few days ago I saw a girl walking down the street with brown valour pants, some kind of flowers tight long-sleeve shirt, a nose-ear chain, Buddy Holly glasses and long fluorescent green hair. What was possessing her to look like that? It was obviously non-functional attire, because it must have been about two thousand degrees that day. Did she want people to stare at her and think "some poor woman went through hours of painful labor to give birth to that?"

As if seeing that wasn't enough freakishness for one day, I also saw some guy dressed like the long-lost member of the village people walking down the street with a ferret in his hand. I saw some other guy wearing a cut off-at-the-sleeves brown flannel shirt with a real license plate strung to the back of it.

I also saw someone who looked like they got lost on the way to a Robert Smith look alike contest. Sometimes, I just can't help but wonder... why? Who are they trying to impress? They can say that they are non-conformists, but that wouldn't be true. Wherever you go around here, no matter what you look like, there are hundreds of other people around who look just like you do.

You can't just dye your hair red anymore and stand out in a crowd, but rather you have to pick out a particular shade of red because there are 20 other people in Central with red hair. You can't just get a plain ol' nosering, (because everyone has them now) you have to get a nose-chain that wraps around your armpits three times and doubles as a jock strap just to be original.

Now, I can't say that I have skipped these "non- conformist" stages. I had blue hair once, I had big ugly lambchop sideburns my freshman year. I still wear red corduroys pants. Why do I dress the was I do? Am I dressing just for myself, or am I also dressing to impress? Am I being too hypocritical?

When I dress the way I do, I don't really care if other people think it's stupid or not, and I'm sure that the people who dress like freaks think the same thing.

But, the problem is this: We are all, in some way, dressing to impress someone. Some women do it with makeup. Some men do it with long goatees. Mini-skirts, tight Springsteen jeans, sweater vests, knit leather belts that hang just so. All are forms of getting attention from other people by sporting a certain style.

Is there anyone out there who goes to the bureau before a party and doesn't pause for half a second to try and figure out what would look the best on them, instead of simply not giving a hoot? I doubt it. We are all trapped in society, and we are all governed by its unwritten laws in some way or another.

Last semester I knew a girl up here who insisted, day in - day-out, that she didn't care what anyone else thought about her. Every day she told me this, which eventually led me to believe that deep down in some hidden part of her mind she really did care what other people thought about her. I've been friends with a lot of strange-dressing people, and they all say that they dress purely for themselves, wearing what they do because they like the way it looks on them or because it gives them satisfaction. They also say they dress for comfort.

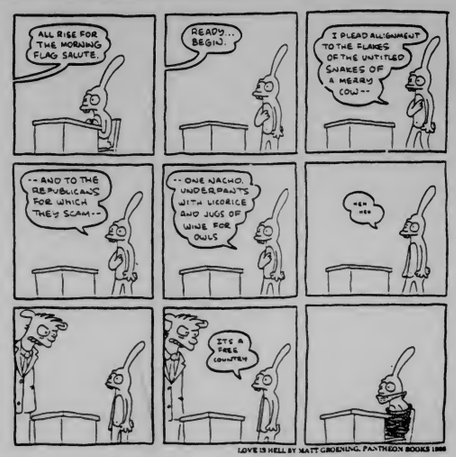
Since when is a tight, buttoned-down, polyester, butterfly- collared shirt comfortable? They didn't even like wearing those things in the 70's when they were actually en vogue.

I suppose I'll admit to hypocrisy and say that I too wear certain clothes to attract others, or to draw attention to myself. But one thing you will never catch me doing is sporting tight leather pants and a 12-foot-high mohawk. To exert the amount of effort it takes to look like a freak is a waste of time.

I guess that's the real problem I have with freaks. Why put all that time and energy into gathering meaningless stares from strangers as you walk down the street? Why not do something a little more worthwhile than making yourself look different? Standing out in a crowd is really not that important.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist

Opinion/Editorial



ALL RISE FOR THE MORNING FLAG SALUTE.
READY... BEGIN.
I PLEAD ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAKES OF THE UNTITLED SNAKES OF A HEAVY COW--
--AND TO THE REPUBLICANS FOR WHICH THEY SCAM--
--ONE NACHO, UNDERPANTS WITH LICORICE AND JUGS OF WINE FOR OWLS
--EK--EK--
ETC. A FREE COUNTRY

LOVE IS HELL BY MATT GROENING. PANTHEON BOOKS 1986

Notes from the campus center basement

Ahh... Autumn at UMass. The leaves are changing colors, fraternities are recruiting and there are 30-foot tall blue jeans, Snapple bottles and other inflated foolishness scarring the ducks, blocking your path to class, as you make your way across campus.

It's that time of year again. The time when big promotional advertisement carnivals cover the lawn surrounding the Campus Pond.

Matt Vautour

So if you're in the market for useless free stuff or want to be the next American Gladiator, you need only to shuffle over to the Campus Pond.

* * *

Speaking of the filthy water hole, there are plans in place to change the shape of the pond to make it easier to get across campus.

Are you serious?

Did I miss the announcement that UMass has won the Galactic Lottery?

Buildings are falling apart, tuition is continually rising, departments are understaffed, and some genius decides that the pond is in the wrong shape?

Stick this in the same brilliant idea file as replacing the library because it looks too much like a phallic symbol, and put the money toward something useful.

* * *

Welcome to the first season in quite a few years that the football team is as good as the band.

* * *

You like to start every year wiping the slate clean. You know, end grudges, give out second chances... but Whitmore didn't even give us a chance.

Due to a pretty big error, not 10, not 100, but over 240 students were left without housing for the first week of the year.

What is really sad is that nobody seems even remotely surprised that it happened.

The swing space/Campus Hotel solution might work OK as a temporary solution. To keep this from ever happening again, students should be allowed to live with the housing service employees.

You can be sure after spending two weeks with drunken students, that housing would never make the same mistakes again.

* * *

Is it me or does the Cannabis Reform Coalition have way too much time on its hands?

If you're looking for an opportunity to waste your time on an absolutely hopeless cause, then sign up.

These people trudge through the dorms getting signatures to get non-binding referendum questions onto ballots. They have rallies and preach about the wonders of marijuana.

Give it up already.

It's never going to get legalized.

Even if pot does get legalized, these people will have long since died of lung cancer.

It's not like its that hard to toke up anyway.

There are far better things to protest if you really have that much energy.

* * *

The amount of horror stories that come out of Whitmore is staggering, but don't lump every Whitmore employee into the incompetent category.

One Financial Aid employee's performance is worth mentioning.

Irene Lankarge is pleasant. She explains everything clearly and thoroughly and truly goes the extra mile for the students.

When bureaucracy seems to be all too prevalent, Irene is a breath of fresh air. Too bad she can't help out at the housing office.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

Putting the dead on the mantle

This past summer the world lost two great people, two great people who each had their demons. These demons proved to be the fatal flaw of these men. I'm sure you are familiar with the men I am referring to — the great Mickey Mantle and the legendary Jerry Garcia.

Their demons, however, are in no way deserving of a head-swelling intro. Please now allow me to introduce you to Mr. Alcohol and Mr. Drugs.

Regardless of the marvelous things that these men did, and the many successes that they had, they both failed in one big subject — life.

Andrew Trodden

For years Mickey Mantle battled alcoholism, and, in the end, it gave him liver cancer. Unfortunately, he lost in the last inning. Jerry Garcia probably handled more drugs than the local pharmacist and where did it get him? Dead. That's where years of abusing drugs got Jerry, dead.

Jerry and Mickey died because of the sheer amount of abuse they put their bodies through. I'll bet you if they never abused drugs and alcohol, they'd still be alive. Jerry used so many drugs his heart stopped. Hearts generally don't just stop, unless they're 95 years old. Jerry's heart just up and said the hell with this, I quit. Something had to cause that, hmmm... could it be the drugs? It's a possibility, don't you think?

How about Mickey's liver? It didn't stop only because it didn't have a chance to. They sent in the pinch hitter, a new liver, but he struck out with three ducks on the pond.

Regardless of the marvelous things that these men did, and the many successes that they had, they both failed in one big subject — life. After all, the whole secret to life is not dying.

These men were heroes to the masses. People looked up to them, emulated them and even imitated them. Look no further than the enormous mass of Deadheads who followed Jerry and the Dead everywhere, puffing away as they drove down the pike. If they stepped on the brakes a little they may actually be able to catch a glimpse of their lives going past them.

I'm sure Jerry didn't attain his level of popularity because he could roll up a big fat joint and smoke it quicker than he rolled it. He garnered his fame from his music, as Mickey did from his ability to hit a ball clear out of sight, not by being able to drink a quarter keg dry in one sitting.

Nonetheless, the two had these problems, these addictions, which are generally frowned upon in this country. So why is it that we seem to overlook these problems when it comes to people of lofty stature? If it was just some junkie off the street that died, no one would blink an eye. They would say it served him right for using drugs.

I wonder if there comes a point where the bad things a man has done will overshadow the good that he has done. I think there is, and it's very unfortunate. It sends a poor message along the wire telling people with fame, fortune and power that they can really screw up, and we, the ever- forgiving U.S. citizens, will still love them.

But if you're just some joe schmoe, our ever-forgiving attitude does a Houdini and disappears. People don't want to hear the sob story unless you're famous. It's about time that we start calling things like we see them and stop trying to cover up all the bad things. We've got to stop pulling the wool over our own eyes, acting like the bad isn't really mixed in with all the good.

If we see Mick we have to say, "Mick you're an alcoholic, and you need help," not "Mick you're a drunk, but who cares as long as you keep hitting homers."

Mickey and Jerry were role models, they put themselves in a position to influence a lot of people, and they let us down. The old "do as I say, not as I do" theory does not always work well.

Mickey and Jerry were both very great men, as far as their careers go. Their contributions to this world will truly be missed, but their post game/concert activities were not great, and will not be missed.

It is my belief that there is only one demon worse than the one Mickey and Jerry had, and that is the devil himself, one can only hope that they haven't met him.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Voting is not enough

To The Editor:

Marni E. Helfner's column, "One Step Toward Equality," was especially delightful to read because of its refreshing message: Some victories are worth pursuing whatever the odds and however long it takes.

However, I feel I must make a correction. This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the Constitution which ensures women's right to vote. The Seneca Falls Convention was held 147 years ago and marks only the beginning of what turned into a 72-year campaign to pass the 19th amendment in 1920.

It will no doubt surprise many to learn that women who lived in Amherst during the suffrage campaign were very unsympathetic to the idea of women voting. To their credit, once the 19th Amendment was adopted, so many women turned up to register to vote that after keeping the office open until 10 p.m., the Amherst Town Clerk had to schedule a special Saturday voter registration session to accommodate all the women who wanted to register.

People don't have to stand in line to register to vote anymore. Thanks to the Motor Voter bill, it's possible to mail in voter registration forms or sign up at the Department of Motor Vehicles, social service agencies, high schools and college campuses. It took five years to convince Congress to pass the Motor Voter bill, and it is still under constant attack. This should be of concern to college-age voters since the remarkable increase in registered voters in the past few months is most significant in the college-age population.

The Motor Voter bill and the successful campaign to win its passage were the work of women and men who are following in the footsteps of the suffragists through their membership in the LWV. Founded by Carrie Chapman Catt and other leaders of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association in 1920, the LWV is marking it's 75th anniversary by celebrating its many successful campaigns and continuing the fight to save the Motor Voter bill.

Although the suffrage movement didn't fare well in Amherst initially, we've made up for it since by organizing one of the largest local chapters of the LWV in the U.S. Several decades ago when the first man joined the LWV he became a member of the local Amherst league. We've kept the name to honor the 72-year struggle of the suffragists, but our work is carried on by all those who recognize that "there is more work still to be done."

Since 1992, the Amherst League has worked with UMass student organization to register more than 8,500 student voters. Many, many other students have told us they registered to vote in their hometowns before they came to college.

Between now and the presidential election in 1996, there will be several opportunities to vote in primaries and other annual and special elections either here in Amherst or in your hometown. But simply pulling a lever in a voting booth isn't enough. After 75 years of working to put into reality the democratic vision of the suffragists, the Amherst League of Women Voters would like to challenge the college age voters of today to commit themselves to actively work for local, state and national policies that benefit all the people of this country.

Joan Flood Ashwell
Amherst LWV president

History of problems

To The Editor:

The Back To School issue of the Collegian carried a column by Mark Mitchell about the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (BATF). The column was especially timely since the U.S. Senate hearings on the BATF Ruby Ridge fiasco are taking place now. There are a few misrepresentations in the column, and I would like to address one of them.

Mitchell discusses the highly publicized letter in which Wayne LaPierre, CEO of the National Rifle Association, called the BATF a bunch of "jack-booted thugs." Ex- president Bush resigned his membership in the NRA because of the letter, and the media had a field day with it. Mitchell states that the label was later rescinded. It was not. The NRA did say that it never intended to malign law enforcement persons, but it stood behind its stand against BATF practices and violations of law and the Constitution.

What Mitchell did not mention, nor has the media in general, is that the contentious label did not originate with LaPierre. BATF has been in trouble before this. Congressman John Dingell said in 1980, "If I were to select a jack-booted group of fascists who were perhaps as large a danger to American society as I could pick today, I would pick BATF. They are a shame and disgrace to our society."

This was said before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee documented in Feb. 1982, after hearings that BATF was engaged in harassing innocent citizens and engaged in illegal actions, such as entrapment and secret lawmaking. All of this was before the Ruby Ridge incident started in August of 1992. While the Ruby Ridge and Waco incidents have received a lot of publicity, there is a long list of similar outrages committed by BATF which are under reported.

So, the NRA, through Mr. LaPierre, did not just invent either comparison of the BATF to Nazi storm-troopers or its illegal practices. The media either chooses to ignore this or it is not doing its homework. Maybe both.

O.T. Zajicek
Amherst

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

There will be a meeting for all Columnists and contributing writers on Sept. 10, at 2 p.m. Please meet at the Editorial/Opinion desk in the Collegian. If you have any questions or problems concerning the meeting, call Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

~ Album Review ~

Dambuilders latest album goes mainstream

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

THE DAMBUILDERS
Ruby Red
EastWest Records

Working within the confines of the pop world can often be quite similar to walking on thin ice. When done with enough ingenuity and zest pop music can be one of the most rewarding genres around. But, too often, bands fall back on lazy cliches and all too familiar melodies (i.e. Gigolo Aunts, Better Than Ezra) and eventually sink into the icy depths of "one-hit-wonder" status.

Boston's Dambuilders have been trotting across the surface of the pop world since day one, and while they have yet to take the plunge, the ice is definitely cracking beneath their feet. On last year's major label debut, Encendor, the group managed to squeek by with a collection of songs that were rooted in traditional pop/rock structures, but were saved due to the bands somewhat punkish delivery and the unorthodox violin playing of Joan Wasser.

On Ruby Red, The Dambuilders still prove that they can turn a catchy hook, but unfortunately fall prey to the pitfalls that reared their ugly head on the group's earlier releases. There are just too many darn concessions to popular radio here — enough to dilute the four or five really excellent songs that the album boasts, turning the whole affair into a rather dismal listening experience.

For example, after a false start with the opener "Smooth Control" (the band was obviously looking for a "rocker" to open with, but this song is just plain silly) the group hits their stride with "Special Ed" and the slightly melodramatic "Teenage Loser Anthem." But don't get your hopes too high because after that Ruby Red is nothing more than a series of peaks and valleys.

For every track such as "Velocidad" and "Cosmonaut" (probably the two finest songs the band has laid down on tape) there is an overabundance of mediocre ballads that are so sterile and unthreatening one can almost imagine them being played right between the latest hit by Hootie and The Blowfish and some James Taylor classic. "Drive By Kiss" and "Bending Machine" (which sounds eerily like a beefed- up version of Heart) almost make you feel embarrassed for the group, and "Rocket To The Moon" gets an "A" for experimentation but still can't help from falling on its face.

COURTESY MICHAEL MILLER

The Dambuilders (Eric Masunaga, Dave Derby, Kevin March, Joan Wasser) latest release, Ruby Red, is only mediocre.

Although it's hard not to be disappointed with Ruby Red (the group had showed so much promise) the album is not a total bust. Take the handful of excellent songs and you have what would be one of the year's finest EPs — in other words, tape this one from a friend. C

German expressionists reflect today's problems

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Mead Art Museum at Amherst College is currently exhibiting a collection of German prints dated in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. "Spiritual Treasures: Modern German Prints" features 30 graphic works depicting the movement from 19th century academic traditions through the 1920s and up until German's modern life including Naziism in the 1930s.

The exhibit focuses on works by Max Klinger, Lovis Corinth, Kathe Kollwitz, and the German expressionists Max Beckmann, Erich Heckel and Max Pechstien.

According to Jill Meredith, the curator of European Art at the Mead Art Museum, many of the artists used "personal circumstances" and "intense personal emotions" to influence their work.

"In the works you see a lot of personal expressionism and feelings. It's about personal expressionism especially during the 20th century with World War I. There is also a historical aspect in the artist's perception of events," Meredith said.

According to Meredith, many of the artists were banned from exhibiting their works and forced to flee to the United States and other parts of Europe. The exhibit also has significance because of interest in WWII and the Holocaust.

Printmaking goes as far back in German history as the 15th century, with the invention and refinement of the art by printmakers like Albrecht Durer and Alois Senefelder, the former for woodcuts and the latter for lithography.

Modern day work by German artists have emotion and imaginative properties that symbolize their connection to early processes with a modern touch.

World War II greatly influenced Germany socially, economically and politically, but also emotionally and spiritually. The modern works represent this turmoil and rapid expansionism that followed the war.

"Most of the exhibit focuses on Kathe Kollwitz. She is one of the more renowned artists and a large part of the exhibit involves her works," said Meredith.

Meredith said that modernism in and of itself is a huge topic, but the works are based on subject matter in everyday life and in contemporary issues. These observations are then expressed with "personal vision" with a "inner spiritual" outlook.

"Works are usually compelling but formally simple with emotion. Basically it's simple forms with emotional works," Meredith said.

She added that she believes viewers will be able to relate to the work because similar turmoils that the artists experienced are now present in today's world. She urged people to visit the exhibit because the actually viewing of the work speaks for itself. The Mead Arts Museum is located off the east side of the Amherst College quadrangle. Admission is free. Hours are Mon.-Fri. 10 a.m.-4:30 p.m. and weekends 1 p.m.-5 p.m. For further information and scheduled tours call 542-2335.

DON'T BE LEFT OUT IN THE COLD . . .
THIS WINTER . . . JOIN THE . . .

UMASS SKI CLUB

Ski Club Meeting
General Information
Sunday, Sept. 10, 1995
7:00pm
Campus Center

ALL LEVELS OF SKIERS WELCOME!

- Day Trips Member/Non-Member
- Membership Sign-ups
- Information on Quebec, Killington & Breckenridge Trips

Be Part of the Tradition
For More Info Contact:
UMass Ski Club, 430 Student Union, 545-3437

Pain reliever / Fever reducer

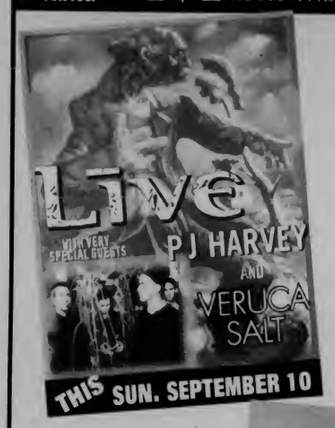
INDICATIONS: For the temporary relief of minor aches and pains associated with the common cold, headache, toothache, muscular aches, backache, for the minor pain of arthritis, for the pain of menstrual cramps, and for reduction of fever.

SUMMER'S OVER.

Thank goodness there's Advil.® Advanced medicine for pain.

Pick up your free sample at The University Store.

Budweiser
THIS BUD'S FOR YOU.
THE Meadows MUSIC THEATRE
Meadows Exit 33 off I-91 • Hartford
SPRINGFIELD EAST HARTFORD HARTFORD NEW HAVEN



THIS SUN. SEPTEMBER 10

Tickets available, cash only, at STRAWBERRIES Music and Video Stores —
Avon • Bloomfield • Branford • Bristol • East Hartford • Enfield Farmington • Hadley, MA • Holyoke, MA • Killingly • Manchester • Naugatuck • Norwalk • Norwich • New Haven • New London • North Haven • Orange • Springfield, MA • Southington • Torrington Trumbull/ Bridgeport • Wallingford • Waterbury • West Springfield, MA • Wethersfield • Willimantic •

DAVID BOWIE
WITH VERY SPECIAL GUESTS
nine inch nails
AND PRICK
ARE THE OUTSIDE TOUR 1995
SEPTEMBER 14

radio 104 WHRQ • modern rock
BIG DAY OFF
10 BANDS FOR 10 BUCKS*
Belly
Juliana Hatfield
Letters to Cleo
Joan Osborne
Jewel
Dandelion
Innocence Mission
Smoking Popes
Supergrass
Plus a very special guest
SEPTEMBER 21

or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX
203-422-0000

SUN. OCTOBER 1

*Patrons are responsible for all parking charges & service charges.
NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, lawn chairs, umbrellas, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility gates. No refunds. No exchanges. Performances rain or shine. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change.

NEWSDAY The Official Weekly Home for "The Monsters" people's bank Member FDIC

Showgirls elicits mixed responses

Paul Verhoeven's latest causes uproar amongst communities

By John Horn
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Two big theater chains won't show it, a few newspapers won't advertise it and the Christian right won't like it. Showgirls almost has it made.

The explicit account of Las Vegas strippers is the first studio film since 1990's Henry & June to carry the adults-only NC-17 rating. With its constant nudity, rough language, soft-core sex and occasional violence, Showgirls was assumed to be an impossible sale too hot to handle. The conventional wisdom held that you couldn't find films like this at the local mall multiplex. You had to mingle with the raincoat crowd at the Pussycat to sneak a peek. Yet three weeks before the movie's Sept. 22 premiere, MGM has secured nearly 1,000 theaters nationwide for the film's debut weekend, far more than showed Henry & June. The studio also has not struggled to purchase Showgirls advertising, buying a flood of national TV and print spots.

Starting Sept. 11, video stores will give away 250,000 promotional video cassette of a Showgirls trailer to promote the movie's theatrical release. The video is rated NC-17, Showgirls may be the biggest test yet for the NC-17 taboo, but the taboo so far is losing badly.

"The whole myth that you couldn't release an NC-17 film widely was just that — a myth," says Gerry Rich, MGM's executive vice president of worldwide marketing.

Less than three years ago, MGM (under different management) canceled a planned NC-17 release of Madonna's Body of Evidence. The studio said theater owners and newspapers would shun the film unless it came out with the less-restrictive R rating.

The adult-oriented films Damage, Natural Born Killers, Shiver and Basic Instinct, among several others, similarly were re-edited to avoid the NC-17 mark often with sufficient publicity to drum up prurient interest for the truncated, R-rated version.

MGM feels that Showgirls is the perfect film to test the NC-17 rating, and did not appeal or re-edit the film when the Motion Picture Association of America gave Showgirls an NC-17 rating in July.

The MPAA created the rating, which bars patrons under age 17, to replace the X mark five years ago. The new rating was intended to distinguish high-minded fare for mature viewers from low-rent sex films, but the rating was promptly appropriated by the makers of the skin flicks Blonde Emmanuelle in 3-D and The Secret Sex Lives of Romeo and Juliet. Legitimate film companies often said they would release a NC-17 film, but always backed off at the last minute and released the movies either unrated or cut them for an R.

MGM didn't. Under the new leadership of studio chairman Frank Mancuso, director Paul Verhoeven (Basic Instinct) asked for and received permission to make an NC-17 film. Knowing well before the $40 million film was finished that it would be given the adults-only mark, MGM started wooing theater owners in February, showing them clips and, more recently, the finished film and advertising materials.

MGM said this week it had locked at least 700 and as many as 1,000 theaters for the film's opening weekend. "It's not like we're going to be skipping any markets," says Larry Gleason, MGM's president of worldwide theatrical distribution. "We'll be in every market in America."

The ad campaign is so broad, MGM says, it could be for any mainstream R-rated film. Still, the message is that this movie is for adults and adults only; theater owners are being told by MGM to check driver's licenses and make sure ushers are not 16.

Two large theater chains with Southern hubs — Texas' Cinemark chain and Georgia's Carmike circuit — will not show the film, saying company policy prohibits NC-17 releases. General Cinema will not run Showgirls in some markets, Gleason said.

"In the South, we have an awfully lot of small towns — we just feel it's not in good taste to play this picture," said Tony Reed, the film vice president for Carmike, the nation's second-largest chain behind United Artists with 2,104 screens.

The Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma City and the Fort Worth Star Telegram in Fort Worth, Texas, have both declined to run Showgirls advertisements, MGM says.

"It's reflective of our readers — very conservative, very religious," says Phil Record, the ombudsman for the 350,000 Sunday circulation Texas paper. "We're in the Bible Belt."

Theater owners running the film are mixed about the commercial prospects of Showgirls. Some say it could be a mild success, but others say the story about a talented dancer trying to make it is weak, that the acting by Elizabeth Berkley, Gina Gershon and Kyle MacLachlan is poor.

Some theater owners also say the NC-17 mark — not the movie itself — is the film's best marketing hook. Indeed, MGM's pledge to pay for additional theater entrance ticket inspectors is more than vaguely reminiscent of 1950's Hollywood showman William Castle, who would have doctors in theaters showing his cheesy horror films.

"I think the material is incredibly provocative and energetic," Rich says. "It stands on its own. The rating is making it topical, but people won't just see a film because it's NC-17 rated."

The American Family Association, the Rev. Donald Wildmon's Christian right organization, already has criticized ABC and NBC for running ads for Showgirls. The organization, which has not been shown the movie, calls it a "hard-core porn movie" and probably will condemn Showgirls again. When the film debuts on home video, it may not be carried by Blockbuster, the nation's largest video chain with nearly 4,000 outlets. Store policy forbids NC-17 titles.

MGM already says its bold NC-17 gamble has paid off. "Based on the experience that we've had this time, we would not hesitate using the NC-17 rating again in the right place," Gleason said.

If Showgirls actually connects at the box office, expect other Hollywood studios to jump on the NC-17 wagon. Just think — we might not be too far from an adults-only Pocahontas.

"Be Unique . . . Go Greek!"
Fall Rush 1995

Alpha Chi Omega
Carolyn Longbotham
38 Nutting Ave.
549-7297
Sept. 7th: 6:30 - 7:30pm
11th: 6:00 - 7:30pm
12th: 7:00 - 8:30pm
13th: 5:30 - 7:00pm
14th: 6:30 - 8:00pm

Alpha Epsilon Phi
Lindsay Samuelsohn
338 Lincoln Ave.
545-2711 (Greek Affairs Office)
Sept. 9th: 12:00 - 4:00pm (Yankee Candle Trip/Trans. Prov@ SW Horseshoe)
11th: 8:00 - 10:00pm
338 Lincoln Ave.
13th: 8:00 - 10:00pm
338 Lincoln Ave.

Chi Omega
Heather Ruest
549-4723
Sept. 6th: 6:00 - 8:00pm
7th: 6:00 - 9:00pm
8th: 5:00 - 7:00pm
(Rain Date: 9th: 5:00 - 7:00pm)
11th: 5:15 - 6:30pm

Delta Zeta
Tammy Sartor
11 Phillips St.
549-3511
Sept. 11th: 7:00 - 9:00pm
12th & 14th: 6:30 - 8:30pm
17th: 4:00pm

Iota Gamma Epsilon
Kristen Keene
406 No. Pleasant St.
549-7845
Sept. 9th & 10th:
3:00 - 5:00pm
11th & 12th:
7:00 - 8:00pm

Kappa Kappa Gamma
Erin Morrison
32 Nutting Ave.
549-2646
Sept. 11th & 12th:
6:00 - 8:00pm
13th: 7:00 - 9:00pm
14th: 5:00-7:30pm

Sigma Delta Tau
Tara Turoczy
409 No. Pleasant St.
549-5415
Sept. 11th & 12th:
6:30 - 8:30pm
13th & 14th:
7:30 - 9:30pm

Sigma Kappa
Antonia Vasilakis
19 Allen St.
549-1627
Sept. 12th: 5:30 - 8:30pm
13th & 14th: 6:00 - 9:00pm
16th: 12:00 - 3:00pm
19th: 6:30 - 9:00pm
20th & 21st: 6:00 - 9:00pm

Sigma Sigma Sigma
Jennifer Roy
Campus Center Rm. 805-809
545-2711 (Greek Affairs)
Sept. 13th, 18th & 26th:
7:00 - 9:00pm

The Panhellenic Welcomes You Back!

~ Preview ~

Blues man to take Horse stage

COURTESY DAVID HERWALDT

Luther "Guitar" Junior will grace the Iron Horse's stage this coming weekend.

Michael Burke
Collegian Staff

New Orleans is the home of jazz, Nashville has its country, and Chicago is the land of electric blues (and the Smashing Pumpkins).

Before their deaths, Muddy Waters and Magic Sam were Chicago's top blues artists, but now the torch has been passed on to Luther "Guitar Junior" Johnson, who recaptures the West Side Chicago blues sound like no one else around.

Johnson first gained international attention during the 1970's when he spent almost the whole decade serving as guitarist and vocalist for the legendary Muddy Waters' band. Playing concert halls across the world, Johnson had the opportunity to jam with some of Rock 'n' Roll's most famed artists, including The Allman Brothers, Eric Clapton, and even The Rolling Stones.

After gaining much experience Johnson left the Muddy Waters' band to become a solo artist. In 1984, Johnson won a Grammy for his live cover of "Walkin' The Dog," and the next year saw the release of his first domestically released album. With the help of his touring band, The Magic Rockers, the album gained much praise and was even named one of the best contemporary blues album at the W.C. Handy Blues Awards.

Over the past ten years, Johnson has endlessly toured America, as well as Europe. His live shows are notorious for mixing Chicago blues with some Rock 'n' Roll, R&B, country, and soul. And Johnson's soulful singing rivals his guitar playing as his strongest asset.

As a solo artist, Johnson has shared the stage with musical legends Ray Vaughan, Bonnie Raitt, and Jerry Garcia, and his guitar playing has influenced guitarists across the globe.

One highlight of Johnson's musical career was in 1989 when he was chosen to be a "musical ambassador" for the United States Arts America program. Through this, he toured ten nations in Central America and the Caribbean.

His newest album, I Want To Groove With You, released on the Bullseye Blues record label, contains more classic tunes which his fans have come to expect.

Johnson's show at the Iron Horse tonight will surely feature new songs as well as lots of his older hits. Expect a fun-filled show with wild guitar solos and deep soulful vocals.

Luther "Guitar Junior" Johnson plays the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton tonight. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $11 in advance and available at Tix Unlimited and the Northampton Box Office.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Let them eat cake

Karen Chan, a sophomore undecided major, and Mary Olander, a junior Spanish major, help cut pieces of a cake to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Fine Arts Center.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

BLUEGRASS ARTISTS
Onion Bob Meet
Martha's Vinyard's
Filter Kings
Saturday
Bay State Motel

Cruise Free* On Spring Break!
Connections is looking for outgoing, responsible campus representatives to be group organizers for a fabulous spring break cruise. Just recruit 20 classmates to cruise with hundreds of other college students... and you'll cruise free! We'll supply you with all the tools you need. We'll even come out to your campus, once you have an interested group, show a video of the cruise, and answer everybody's questions. Please call:
CONNECTIONS
1-800-587-6373

GEAR UP FOR
CAMPUS SURVIVAL!

IN THE DORM

49.99 Voice-activated micro answerer
Don't miss important calls when you're not in your room. Remote operation. #43-752MB

24.99 Basic trim phone saves space
Lighted keypad for dialing in the dark. Three colors. White #43-585MB Almond #43-586MB Grey #43-587MB

59.99 Upright cordless phone won't tie you down
CCT circuitry provides excellent clarity and range. Handy base-to-handset paging. #43-1006MB

79.99 EACH Shielded die-cast 2-way A/V speaker
Great for use near PC or TV. 4" woofer and 1" soft-dome tweeter. Black, #40-2048MB White, #40-2059MB

34.99 AM/FM cassette music system with E-Bass
Compact speakers let you share the music, headphones let you listen privately. #14-1209MB

19.99 Indoor TV/FM antenna improves reception
Fine-tuning control for clearer picture and sound. #15-1809MB

IN THE CLASSROOM

39.99 Microcassette recorder
Great for recording class notes. Easy one-hand operation. Two speeds. #14-1159MB

39.99 Scientific calculator
Stores up to 12 frequently used formulas and runs them with just a few keystrokes. #65-808MB

49.99 Advanced thesaurus
Small enough to carry in your backpack or purse. #63-2100MB
Franklin is a registered trademark of Franklin Electronic Publishing, Inc

Survival check list
❑ Phone cords and accessories
❑ Alarm clock or clock radio
❑ TV, VCR and video accessories
❑ Security devices
❑ Computer and accessories
❑ Batteries
❑ Stereo equipment, speakers and audio accessories
❑ Heavy-duty flashlight
❑ Smoke alarm
❑ Part-time job (see the manager of your local Radio Shack store)

AC accessories to power your dorm
4-outlet adapter. 2-prong. #61-2621MB ... 2.99
6-outlet surge protector in metal housing. #61-2101MB ... 22.99
6-outlet adapter. For 3-prong outlets. #61-2622MB ... 3.99
6-outlet power strip. Master on/off switch. #61-2150MB ... 8.99
Single-outlet spike protector. #61-2791MB ... 6.99
6-ft. 3-outlet ext. cord. White #61-2744MB Brown. #61-2745MB ... 1.99
9-ft. 3-outlet ext. cord. White #61-2746MB Brown. #61-2747MB ... 2.39
15-ft. 3-outlet extension cord. #61-2748MB ... 3.49

Prices apply at participating Radio Shack stores and dealers. Items not available at a participating store can be special-ordered (subject to availability at the advertised price). A participating store will offer a comparable value if the product is sold out. Independent Radio Shack dealers and franchisees may not be participating in this ad or stock or special order every item advertised. Copies of applicable warranties are available upon request at stores for inspection before sale or by writing Customer Relations 1400 One Tandy Center Fort Worth TX 76102. FedEx trademarks used by permission.

Radio Shack Gift Express
We can wrap a gift, add a card and ship it anywhere in the US via FedEx® delivery service. For a store near you or to order, call
1-800-THE-SHACK℠

Radio Shack®
You've got questions. We've got answers.℠

THE REPAIR SHOP by Radio Shack
Out of whack? Out of warranty? We fix most major brands of out-of-warranty electronics. For a store near you, call
1-800-THE-SHACK℠

~ Movies ~

COURTESY RICO TORRES

Caroline (Salma Hayek) and the Mariachi (Antonio Banderas) team up together in this action/comedy film.

Desperado flies high on big screen

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

DESPERADO
Directed by Robert Rodriguez with Antonio Banderas, Steve Buscemi

Desperado has the gunslinging gangster style of a Tarantino flick, the action stunts of a Stallone-Schwarzeneggar thriller and about as much seriousness as Who Framed Roger Rabbit, but the tale of the singing Mariachi who sets out to avenge the death of his love is uniquely the creation of Robert Rodriguez.

Antonio Banderas (Interview With A Vampire) stars as the Mariachi in Rodriguez's sequel to his highly acclaimed, made-on-a-shoestring-budget Spanish film, El Mariachi.

We learn from Steve Buscemi (Reservoir Dogs) in hilarious bar scene with Cheech Marin that this guitar case-filled-with-guns-toting Mariachi is in town and on a ruthless killing-spree, looking for a notorious drug lord named Bucho. Apparently, Mariachi witnessed the murder of his one true love, and will not cease the bar room bloodshed until he gets revenge.

While Antonio's probing stares and furrowed brow display how intensely he played the role, his firearm acrobatics and overly inflated macho attitude make his character difficult to take seriously. Not to mention the guns that magically fly out of his sleeves and pockets at the exact moment he dodges bullets and shoots someone from behind his back, between his legs, and around a corner.

We don't hate this hero because he prays in confession for the trail of carnage left behind him, and, after all, the men he kills are all drug dealing scumbags; however, Mariachi is so traumatized by his love's death, his emotions are only revealed through a short series of flashbacks, and later, through a steamy romance with a bookstore owner named Carolina (Salma Hayek).

Quentin Tarantino has a cameo as a pick-up guy who offers a few witticisms and reminds us that he should stay behind the camera.

Symbolism is ever present, albeit not deeply meaningful, in this movie, as the guitar serves as a facade for everything Mariachi loves and hates. He used to love to play music, but can barely bring himself to play now. His guitar hides an arsenal of weapons big enough to defend a country. Other guitars, which belong to his enemies, serve as drug smuggling vehicles.

Enjoying, and more importantly, believing Desperado is easy, just abandon all rational thoughts before you see it. B

New faces will become familiar

Mike's Mental Stew

About three years ago this past Sunday, I rolled into the University of Massachusetts on Route 91 with my parents in tow, turned right onto Route 9, drove over the bridge and then... nothing. I sat in traffic for about an hour.

When I finally got onto the grounds of the University the first thing I saw were the Southwest Towers. A very intimidating sight for a 17-year-old — young for his class, short, quiet, from an ultra-conservative 99.9 percent white and stagnant North Attleboro, Massachusetts.

After checking in, getting my key and moving all my stuff up to the fourth floor of Lewis, I found that the next thing I would have to do was... wait in line at Whitless — er, Whitmore, and get my phone card which for some reason wasn't sent to me.

Setting the red tape aside, walking around campus the first few days, going to the Campus Store, the Textbook Annex and the barracks at the Worcester D.C. (don't let them pull that "Hillside Room" junk), I was just simply flabbergasted at the sheer number of people. I said to myself, "I'm never going to see the same people every day. Making close friends will be next to impossible." The campus seemed huge — an ugly mass of people with no names or identities, just a bunch of blank looking faces.

With each passing year, however, the campus began to creep in towards me. I realized that I could make it from Mahar to Dickinson in less than 15 minutes, and the faces in the D.C. started to look more and more familiar. The Southwest Towers looked far away, but somehow, knowing that there were people over there made them appear a tad bit more welcoming.

I learned to love the protests on the Student Union steps, as well as the lines at Antonio's on a Thursday night, the cheap movies ($3.50 vs. $7.00 — no contest), the road trips that uncovered places and views I didn't even know existed until I started to explore. I also learned that you can't make friends with all the students here, and that to let that intimidate you is foolish.

So much in life is hectic that eating lunch with just a Collegian became a welcome addition to my day. Before, I knew it I could pick out actual people I knew in the Campus Center. And believe it or not, I began to run into people I knew every time I left the dorm, and it grew on me.

There is something about the Pioneer Valley that draws people in and then refuses to let them go. Is it any wonder that so many students end up hanging around after graduation? You could say it's the atmosphere, or the scenery, or even the wide range of activities that go on here. But in all likelihood it has to lie with the people. This area has such a wide range of different people, each with their own unique perspective on life, that it is hard not to feel like no matter what your ideals, there is a group that will no doubt welcome you with open arms.

Those arms opened again about a week ago as I rolled into UMass for my last year. There was no hoopla, no traffic. I came here via the countless shortcuts and back roads that I have learned over the years. Not taking the main route to UMass took some of the mystique out of the entire ordeal and, in a way, I don't feel like I was leaving home anymore when I get here, but that I'm getting home after a summer away.

My brother came with me on the drive this year, the day before he was due to move in to the dorms with the rest of the freshman. We stopped to get a drink on the way, and somewhere on Route 9 in Belchertown he hurled his plastic cup out the window of the car into the woods. And much to his, and my amazement, for that matter, I proceeded to unleash a verbal assault on him with the intent of explaining to him that in the Eastern part of the state that may be a common practice, but out here it's not something you do.

He asked me why there was such a difference, and even though I could have spouted a bunch of theories about nature and that out here there is a lot more respect for your surroundings, all I could seem to muster up was, "Give it a year, you'll understand."

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8
• 40" Big Screen T.V.
• 8-9 ft. Tables
• Live Entertainment
• Every Fri. & Sat. All Sporting Events!
• Karoke Wed. Nights
• Mon. Night Pool League
$5/hr. Fri., Sat. & Sun. Unlimited Players!
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The ACTION
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Flag Football (M/W/C) 9/11
Soccer (M/W) 9/11
Co-ed Softball 9/12
Ice Hockey (M/W) 9/20
Track & Cross Country (M/W) 9/20
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215

Dance Stuff '95
220 N. Pleasant St. (Rear), Amherst, MA
For the Dancer, Gymnast, Fitness Minded
We have all supplies for dance majors
Fun Bodywear! Great Shoes!
253-5201

How do we lug thee?
Slip on. Zip up. Knock out.
ZANY
Amherst Williamstown Brattleboro

Welcome Back Students!
From the Information Data Bank
545-1555
Hours: 8:30am - 6:00pm Mon Fri

Aerobics Instructor Training Program
Accredited by the American Council on Exercise, ACE
September 30-November 18 Saturdays, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. & Exam December 2
Preparation for the ACE exam, certificate earned, CPR training
Vicki Davey -ACE certified 16years' teaching experience and Gary Moore - ACE certified, associate professor UMass School of Public Health
For more information, call the UMass Division of Continuing Education, 413-545-2484 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
UMass Continuing Education celebrating 25 years of providing access to adult nontraditinal education

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
Fall back into the Saddle!
LOHA COLADAS
$2.75 PINA COLADAS
$3.00 TROPICAL DRINKS
And as always . . .
Home of the 18oz. Fruit margaritas
New Expanded Hours
Wed - Sat Catina Remains open until 1am with new late night menu

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

~ NATIONAL ~

Packwood resigns amidst numerous accusations

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 10,000 pages of newly released documents in the Bob Packwood case reveal a senator worrying about running afoul of campaign finance laws, contemplating dirty tricks against an opponent and compulsively seeking sexual favors from subordinates and support staff.

Packwood's diaries do not acknowledge the incidents of sexual misconduct cited by the Ethics Committee. As Packwood himself said, he included "nothing about being a rejected suitor — only my successful exploits."

One diary reference talks of "the 22 staff members I'd made love to and probably 75 others I've had passionate relationships with..."

The diaries are part of documents released by the committee in support of its recommendation that Packwood be expelled. The recommendation became obsolete when Packwood announced his resignation yesterday.

Packwood has denied some allegations of sexual misconduct, admitted that others probably occurred and contended he could not recall still others.

Some of the key examples of Packwood's behavior, as reflected by the newly released documents:

• Sexual misbehavior. In a deposition, former Packwood staffer Paige Wagers described an incident when the senator called her to his office and suddenly pinned her against the wall. She said he was "groping" at her body, trying to fondle her breasts and pressed his body against hers "so closely that I could not move." Packwood kissed her.

"It seems like your whole life passes in front of your eyes... It seemed like an eternity," she said.

Another example was Kerry Whitney, a part-time elevator operator at the Capitol, from whom Packwood demanded a kiss nearly every time he was on the elevator alone with her. She let him come to her house when he asked to, thinking she could get him to stop grabbing her. But he began kissing her and said he wanted to make love to her. She pushed him away and declined his invitations. He continued to kiss her in the elevator until she was switched to an elevator he did not use.

• Campaign Finance. The report contained a passage deleted from the diaries, in which Packwood indicated that another senator — with Packwood's knowledge — agreed to direct $100,000 from a GOP party committee "to be used to benefit Sen. Packwood's campaign..." This entry raises questions about the possible violation of campaign finance laws," the committee report said.

• Political intrigue. Packwood wrote in his diaries he tried to use one of his staffers to feed misleading information to her husband — a staffer for Democratic Rep. Peter DeFazio of Oregon. DeFazio was considering running against Packwood. The senator wrote he wanted his staffer to be "a mole and a spy into the DeFazio organization..."

The documents also provide startling detail about dealings between Packwood and five lobbyists and political backers the Ethics Committee says he asked to hire his former wife in order to cut his alimony payments.

At one point, Packwood wrote in his diary of a 1990 dinner conversation with Ronald Crawford, a major fund-raiser for the senator, at which the lobbyist offered to put up $7,500 a year to help support Packwood's wife, Georgie, after their marriage broke up.

"If you're chairman of the Finance Committee, I can probably double that," he quoted Crawford as saying. Packwood, who at the time was a senior minority member of the tax-writing panel, later told the Ethics Committee the remark was meant as a joke.

Also mentioned in the documents:

• A staff assistant whom Packwood grabbed, pressed close and kissed on the mouth during a chat in her office pushed him away and said she was happily married. She quit her job shortly after that because "it made her uncomfortable" to be around him.

• Gail Byler, hostess at a Portland restaurant, was getting a glass of water from a hallway off the closed dining room when "all of a sudden, she felt a hand go from her ankle, up the inside of her leg, to her crotch." She turned quickly, saw Packwood and told him to get away from her. "Do you know who I am?" he demanded. She said she knew and didn't care. He said Byler had not heard the end of it. "I felt that he was threatening my job," she said.

• Former aide Julie Williamson said Packwood kissed her then followed her into a back office and she warned him never to do it again. As she tried to kick him in the shins, "he stood on my feet, grabbed my ponytail and pulled my head back with it so that he could kiss me. At the same time his right hand... was trying to reach up under my skirt to pull off my panty girdle," she said.

"I ran into the front office and he stalked out past me, stopped at the threshold to the hallway and said, 'If not today, then someday.'" Several days later, as Williamson sat at a bar between her husband and Packwood's wife, Packwood whispered to her, "Don't tell your husband and don't quit your job."

Active volcano doesn't phase town

California villagers live above potential natural disaster

By Steve Geissinger
Associated Press

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — The earth beneath this resort town seems cursed.

The ground shakes, rises and spits steam. It belches gases that kill trees. It boils creeks.

That's because there is a volcano below Mammoth Lakes. The U.S. Geological Survey calls it among the most likely in the lower 48 states to erupt in coming decades, though no eruption is imminent or even certain.

Most residents aren't worried.

"It's just too beautiful here to worry about the volcano," said Danielle Lane, 23, who recently moved to the resort town of 5,000.

"I'm not moving," said Bradley Foster, 33, a natural gas company employee.

This Sierra Nevada village sits at the edge of what is called Long Valley. The valley is really a 9-mile-wide, 19-mile-long collapsed volcanic crater. Scientists call it a caldera, the Spanish word for caldron.

Long Valley, 250 miles north of Los Angeles, is the most restless volcano among more than a dozen in Washington, Oregon and California, said USGS volcano expert C. Dan Miller. The last to erupt was Mount St. Helens, near Vancouver, Wash., in 1980. That eruption killed 60 people.

Earth movement and other signs of unrest around Mammoth Lakes are caused by molten rock that rumbles around some four miles underground, said David Hill, who monitors Long Valley for the USGS.

Underground vents cause some creeks to boil, spew steam and rock of sulphur. Carbon dioxide seeping through the ground has killed thousands of pine trees and forced closure of one campground to overnight camping because of the high concentrations of the gas. About 760,000 years ago, the volcano blew mountains of debris halfway across the continent in one of the planet's most powerful eruptions. It spewed 130 cubic miles of material, 600 times more than the eruption of Mount St. Helens.

The Long Valley eruption formed a spectacular resort site, ringed by mountains resembling those 20 miles west in Yosemite National Park. Mammoth Lakes draws up to 30,000 tourists a day. "The volcano is part of the attraction," said Alexandra Campbell, 18, a recent visitor.

Community leaders don't see the volcano as a hindrance to growth in Mammoth Lakes, which started as a mining camp in the mid-1800's. "It's not a requirement or a feeling on our part that it should affect land use planning," Mammoth Lakes city manager Glenn Thompson said.

City codes require strong buildings, but that's to handle the region's heavy snowfall, not volcanic fallout, Thompson said. Not everyone is quite so nonchalant.

Amy Corsinito, 19, said her parents like to visit but are hesitant about buying a house. "You can't get volcano insurance," she said.

The movement of lava in two underground chambers during the past 15 years has raised the center of Long Valley by more than two feet. It also has caused tens of thousands of minor earthquakes. In May 1980, four earthquakes of about 6 magnitude caused minor damage.

People here are gambling the earth won't suddenly explode. Experts say it's a good bet. Odds are overwhelming that a major eruption would provide days or weeks of warning.

"Other places in California shake, rattle and roll, or flood, or burn," said longtime resident Jack Clausen.

Discussing the strength of a recent quake, Clausen said, "That's nothing. I'll show you a 3.0 quake." The forestry worker kicked the bumper of his truck. "That's a 3.0."

The volcano's restlessness caused the USGS to issue a "notice of potential volcanic hazard" in 1982. The warning, coupled with quakes, damaged tourism and the real estate market and angered local business people.

"We've never stepped back from saying there have been eruptions in the past and there will be again in the future," Miller said. But the USGS dropped its official warning in 1984.

The rugged beauty of volcanos throughout the West attracts people. Towns sit near at least four volcanos.

Local government officials said volcanic hazards are usually discounted when policy boards consider development. Many of the towns were well established long before serious consideration of the dangers, officials said.

House votes to build more B-2

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House voted narrowly Thursday to protect a Republican plan to build more B-2 stealth bombers as it pushed through a $244 billion defense appropriations bill.

Also included in the measure was an amendment to ban abortions at military hospitals.

Final passage of the defense bill came on a 294-125 vote after a day of debate that ranged from social policy in the military health care system to investing billions in radar-evading warplanes. In a 213-210 vote, supporters of the B-2, the world's most expensive warplane blocked an effort to cut $493 million for it from the defense appropriations bill even though the Pentagon said it doesn't need more of the radar-evading bombers.

The money would enable the Air Force to begin buying more B-2s than the 20 already in service or on order. Because the Senate defense appropriations bill contains no money for more B-2s, the issue will have to be worked out in negotiations for a final version of the legislation.

Under the House bill, the Pentagon would get $7.8 billion more for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 than President Clinton requested, and $2.5 billion more than the government is spending on defense this year.

The measure reflects the Republican view that the administration has cut too deeply from national defense at a time when world instability appears to be on the rise.

"As the world's only superpower, it is vital that America remains the world's finest fighting force," said Rep. Bill Young (R-Fla.) chairman of the House Appropriations national security subcommittee.

Candidates spread message over internet

By Dana Calvo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Thanks to a booming new neighborhood on the Internet, Americans can bypass bug-infested campaign picnics or rhetoric-filled rallies and dive into presidential politics from home.

Voters who want more than TV sound bites are taking part in on-line chat sessions with the 1996 presidential candidates. They're reading speeches delivered hundreds of miles away and calling up campaign schedules to see who's coming to town. Since 1992, the Internet has moved beyond circles of computer-literati into the home computers of millions of voters. The candidates' computer sites seem to reflect their personalities. Unassuming Sen. Dick Lugar, (R-Ind), asks visitors, "Who is Dick Lugar?" while hard-driving Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas) wants browsers to know they're part of something bigger. Before signing off his site, a recent visitor is informed she is "the 147,889th visitor to this page."

In his "Issues" section, Pat Buchanan's views on border politics spill forth in a lengthy introductory essay: "Illegal immigration must be halted and no illegal alien given welfare. The presidency must become a bully pulpit for traditional values. Not gays in the military."

Viewers can return to the campaigns' on-line sites as they are updated with daily quotes from political pundits, augmented trip schedules and candidate responses to incoming mail.

"You don't even have to wait for sound bites anymore. You have Interbites," said Paul Unger, a specialist in telecommunications and vice president of Chicago-based A.T. Kearney Executive Search. Unger said the Internet also may protect candidates from "foot in mouth" disease. "You at least may avoid some of the mistakes that are made in the heat of the moment," he said.

Let the browser beware, though. Mischievous Net users already have launched fake home pages that can put a candidate's foot securely in his mouth.

Experts estimate that one quarter of all U.S. homes will be on line in the next five years. Already, there are more than 25 million Americans hooked up.

Most presidential hopefuls have set up their own "home page" — the first screen image viewed by a browser who stops at their site. The candidates also are holding on-line chat sessions and town hall meetings — the Internet's version of the teleconference.

For candidates such as Rep. Robert Dornan, (R-Calif.) who haven't set up their own home page, browsers can check up on them through unofficial sites, such as the GOP Presidential Candidates account launched by Project Vote Smart, a non-profit service that compiles voting records of politicians.

The political parties are making themselves known on the Internet as well.

Every Friday, for example, the Democratic National Committee releases "The NewtGram" on line and on faxes to give voters a Democratic spin on the activities of House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.).

Martha Baer, features editor for "Wired" magazine, said the Internet allows voters to participate in campaigning without leaving home or office.

"You're bringing individuals together to speak to one another," she said. "They may be from far ends of the spectrum, but that's the wonder of the Net — it's one to one," Baer said. Part of the allure of the Net to politicians is its price and reach. For about $20 a month, a candidate can open and maintain an account that reaches increasing numbers of readers. For a few thousand dollars more, candidates can spruce up their home pages with snazzy graphic designs.

But there is still a significant population — both statistically and strategically — that is not even grazed by the computerized political handshake.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The ACTION
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Flag Football (M/W/C) 9/11
Soccer (M/W) 9/11
Co-ed Softball 9/12
Ice Hockey (M/W) 9/20
Track & Cross Country (M/W) 9/20
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215

Slip on. Zip up. Knock out.
ZANY
Amherst Williamstown Brattleboro

Doc Martens will see you now.
ZANY
Amherst Williamstown Brattleboro

CAN'T PASS UP THESE GREAT DEALS!!
LIQUORS 44
BEERS
BUD & BUD LIGHT $13.49 + DEP — CASE OF 24-16 OZ BOTTLES
ROLLING ROCK & LIGHT $12.99 + DEP — NEW WIDE MOUTH — CASE 24-12 OZ BOTTLES
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG $6.99 + DEP — 12 PACK BOTTLES
BUSCH / BUSCH LIGHT $10.99 + DEP — 30 PACK — CASE OF 30-12 OZ CANS
HORNSBY CIDER NEW $4.99 — 6 PACK BOTTLES
SARANAC $3.99 + DEP — ALL FLAVORS 6 PACK
MOOSEHEAD $6.99 + DEP — 12 PACK NR
KEYSTONE LIGHT & ICE $8.49 + DEP — CASE OF 24-12 OZ CANS
½ KEGS $39.99 + DEP — BUD, LT, ICE, MICHELOB, LT, DK, ICEHOUSE & RED DOG, LITE
COKE, DIET COKE, SPRITE $2.99 — 12 PACK
WINES
CARLO ROSSI $6.99 — ALL FLAVORS 4.0L
WINE OF THE MONTH
HICKORY RIDGE $2.49 — CHARDONNAY MERLOT 750ML — SALE $3.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST
SEBASTIANI COUNTRY WINE $6.99 — CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, MERLOT, FUME BLANC, ZINFANDEL, PINOT NOIR 1.5L
BERINGER $3.99 — WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML
FREIXENET CORDON $4.99 — NEGRO BRUT 750 ML
BEL ARBORS $4.99 — MERLOT 750 ML
BOONES WINES $1.99 — ALL FLAVORS 750 ML
LIQUORS
BACARDI RUM $13.99 — LIGHT & DARK 1.75 LITER
JENKINS VODKA $6.49 — 1.75 LITER — SALE $8.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $10.99 — 750 ML
JIM BEAM $12.29 — 1.75 LITER
FLEISCHMANNS GIN $11.49 — 1.75 LITER — MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
T.G.I.F. $10.49 — AUTHENTIC FROZEN DRINKS MUDSLIDES, ORANGE DREAM B52, PINA COLADA — 1.75 LITER
DEWARS SCOTCH $24.99 — 1.75 LITER
GOLDSCHLAGER $13.99 — 750 ML
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/7/95 THRU WEDS. 9/13/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

~ INTERNATIONAL ~

Jewish school target of bombing

VILLEURBANE, France. (AP) — A car bomb exploded in front of a Jewish school yesterday and injured 14 people, but a faulty school bell had kept the 700 children inside and none were killed. The explosion in this Lyon suburb was the sixth in a series of bombings or attempted bombings in France since late July and the first car bomb in France since 1982.

Children screamed, parents wept and dense black smoke swirled in front of the school. But the three breathless words on everyone's lips were ones of relief: "It's a miracle."

The bomb was timed to go off at the moment the children leave school in the afternoon, but a tardy bell delayed their exit by two minutes. Police said this saved dozens of lives.

Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debre said the bombing appeared to be linked to the other recent attacks. Nuts, bolts and fragments of a gas canister — the same components used to make the recent bombs — were found at the scene of yesterday's bombing, authorities said. Algerian Muslim militants who have threatened France for its support of the military-backed government in its former colony are prime suspects in the attacks, authorities say.

Police said they detained a man seen running away with two others just before the attack. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the bombing in Villeurbane, about 270 miles southeast of Paris.

Among the 14 injured were three adults and three children who inhaled smoke. Six people were hospitalized, and three other children suffered shock.

The 4:55 p.m. explosion destroyed the car, set fire to another car parked nearby and ignited a blaze in an adjacent apartment, officials said.

"We can thank God that this attack did not cause total carnage, because it happened at exactly the moment school gets out," Lyon's deputy head rabbi, Isaac Elhadad, said at the scene.

The blast came three days after a bomb was found in Paris and defused. Three bombings in Paris since July have left seven people dead and more than 100 injured and have prompted heavy security measures throughout the country.

Police have mounted a nationwide effort to tighten security and search for suspects since the first bombing in a Paris subway train on July 25, which killed seven people and injured 84.

After police boosted patrols and searches and covered up trash cans in subway stations, another bomb exploded on a street near the Arc de Triomphe on Aug. 17, wounding 17 people, including 11 tourists.

On Aug. 26, authorities found a bomb planted on a high-speed train track north of Lyon. The bomb, which like the other two was made from a gas canister filled with an explosive and bolts, failed to detonate.

Lyon's head rabbi, Richard Wertenschlag, criticized French authorities for not heeding his request for greater protection in the period leading up to Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur.

France's Jewish community remains haunted by the memories of terrorist attacks on Jewish targets in Paris in the 1980s. Shortly after the explosion yesterday, the rector of the Paris Mosque and head of France's Muslim community, Dalil Boubakeur, sent a message of sympathy to Wertenschlag, saying Muslims were "shattered by the ignoble attack."

Prime Minister Alain Juppe called an emergency meeting of anti-terrorist investigators and other officials late last night. He said authorities will step up monitoring "of establishments of any nature open to the public."

Juppe said the latest attack "can only reinforce the government's determination to identify and try those who resort to acts as unacceptable as they are violent."

Paris police headquarters announced that "maximum security measures" would be instituted by this morning at all schools in the capital.

The police said cars would be banned from parking in front of schools and barriers would be erected. Security was already tightened earlier this week at schools reopening after summer holidays, mainly by forbidding entry to parents and other adults.

Iraq's antiquities up for grabs as effects of embargo continue

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — When word reached Baghdad that another archaeological site was being looted, the Antiquities Department rushed an armed team to halt the illegal dig in the southern city of Amara.

It took a fierce gunbattle to drive away dozens of nomads who had gouged huge craters and carted off hundreds of cuneiform tablets more than 4,000 years old.

Muayad Damerji, head of the government's Antiquities and Heritage Department, lamented that the thieves probably damaged many tablets by hacking out holes with shovels and other tools.

"These people were peasants who had no idea what they were doing," he said. "They might as well have been digging for rocks."

Iraq's economic crisis has left the Antiquities Department desperately short of cash. That has meant a near shutdown of the museum system and the extensive archaeological work that was being carried out in ancient Mesopotamia, the "cradle of civilization." Iraq lists 4,000 pieces that were stolen from its museums in the aftermath of the 1991 Gulf War, including jewelry, pottery, coins, cylinder seals and terra cotta figures. The number of items taken from archaeological sites is probably in the thousands as well, according to officials.

Only one item has been recovered — a cuneiform tablet confiscated from a London art dealer and returned by British authorities in 1992.

Damerji receives regular reports of clandestine digs in a country that has 10,000 archaeological sites and only a handful of poorly paid guards to protect them.

"The history of Iraq is the history of the ancient world," said Damerji. "And this treasure is being badly damaged."

In southern Iraq, it is mostly peasants who either stumble upon sites or are offered money by foreign smugglers to dig up known sites, Damerji said.

In northern Iraq, there are tales of highly organized digs by people with European features around the towns of Irbil and Sulaimaniya, areas now controlled by ethnic Kurds.

The relics are smuggled out to Jordan or Iran and eventually make their way to Europe, most often to London, said Damerji, who has run the Antiquities Department for 18 years.

Economic sanctions imposed by the United Nations after Iraq invaded Kuwait "make it difficult to buy our daily bread, and this has encouraged people to steal our national treasures," Damerji said.

The illegal dig in Amara, which took place in February, is one of the few cases to end with authorities retaining some of the treasures.

After the intruders were driven off, officials counted 240 freshly dug holes, some 12 feet deep and 15 feet wide. Many tablets undoubtedly were taken away, but authorities recovered 470 others — enough to fill one of the larger rooms at the Iraq Museum in Baghdad.

During a reporter's recent visit, four women at the museum were poring over the dun-colored tablets, some the size of a book, others as small as the palm of the hand. The women painstakingly brushed away dirt from the tiny, precise grooves that were carved into the soft mud. They then recorded the symbols by hand on notebook paper.

These tablets are not riveting reading. Recording agricultural production figures, they are essentially a 4,000-year-old Farmer's Almanac.

Aside from occasional exhibits, the museum has been closed to visitors since the Gulf War. Its magnificent collection, with relics from the earliest human settlements more than 6,000 years ago, are locked away in storerooms.

Before the war, at least a dozen teams of Western archaeologists visited Iraq each year. That all stopped due to the comprehensive embargo placed on Iraq by the United Nations.

Damerji's budget has been wiped out by runaway inflation. He had 75 vehicles to patrol archaeological sites before the war. Today only six are in service due to a lack of money and spare parts, he said.

American pressure has prevented international contacts with Iraq by such groups as the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, based in Paris, he said.

"It's UNESCO's job to send inspectors and help us track down these missing items. They have done nothing," Damerji said.

But Iraq's own record in handling cultural treasures has been badly tarnished in recent years.

After Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait, Iraqi officials went to Kuwait's national museum and packed up the spectacular Islamic art collection, which was then sent to Baghdad.

Some priceless items, such as intricately carved wooden doors from a 10th century mosque, were too bulky to be removed. So Iraqi soldiers torched the entire museum shortly before they were driven out of Kuwait. The huge doors and several other unique pieces were reduced to ashes.

Babylon stands silent as tourists stay away

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

BABYLON, Iraq — From the precious shade of a date palm tree, tour guide Abdul Hussein looked out on the silent and deserted ruins of Babylon and shook his head.

"There used to be thousands of tourists from all over the world," said Hussein, who declined to give his last name.

"Now no one comes," the 18-year tour guide added.

President Saddam Hussein spent millions of dollars in the 1980s to restore part of this biblical city to its long lost glory. But United Nations sanctions prevent foreign tourists from visiting, and the country's economic crisis makes it a luxury that most Iraqis cannot afford.

To Iraqis, the city represents Mesopotamia's monumental past. Saddam fancies himself a modern-day Nebuchadnezzar, who ruled his empire from Babylon from 604 to 562 B.C.

Hammurabi wrote the world's first legal code here almost 4,000 years ago, the city's Hanging Gardens were one of the wonders of the ancient world, and Alexander the Great conquered it as he stormed across Asia.

Saddam's government largely rebuilt a 600-room palace based on Nebuchadnezzar's, but most work in the dusty plains near the Euphrates River stopped following the Gulf War.

The only building going up at present is a luxurious, modern palace on Saddam Hill, an artificial mound overlooking the ruins. A guide from the government's Information Ministry warned Associated Press journalists not to take pictures of the palace, where bulldozers were busy in temperatures that topped 100 degrees. The expensive new palace is a sensitive subject at a time when most Iraqis are struggling to get by on incomes ravaged by inflation.

The government is rushing to complete the building before a cultural festival being held Sept. 22-Oct. 6 in Babylon, about an hour's drive south of Baghdad.

The annual celebration features dancing, singing and plays and is one of the few events that can draw a crowd through the arched Ishtar gate, covered with paintings of mythic animals.

"The Iraqi people are facing hard times," said Hussein. "We hope the tourists will come back soon."

Graves near Suez Canal shed new clues on union of Egypt

By Manuela Badawy
Associated Press

ISMAILIYA, Egypt — A 5,500-year-old cemetery on an arid patch once watered by the Nile River is giving up clues about the union of Upper and Lower Egypt, the event that ushered in the Pharaohs.

Archaeologists are uncovering skeletons, shards of clay and alabaster pottery and other artifacts at the 90-acre cemetery nearly 10 miles west of the Suez Canal near the Sinai Peninsula, the historic bridge from Africa to Asia.

"We don't know when Egyptian culture began, and this is the key to find out," said Fekri Hassan, an archaeologist at University College in London and head of the Egyptian-British group studying the site.

So far, archaeologists have uncovered 813 graves spread over 240 square yards and more are sure to be excavated, making it one of the largest prehistoric burial grounds in Egypt.

What is striking, they say, is that some of the graves appear to date to the reign of Narmer. He is considered the first ruler who united the Nile Valley of Upper Egypt with the fertile delta of Lower Egypt, regions which had developed as separate kingdoms. The process of unifying the north and south is thought to have taken centuries. Much of it still concealed in legends and half-truths from later records.

"It is the beginning of the culture," said Abdel-Halim Noureddin, the Egyptian antiquities chief, who believes the site may become more important than the Giza Pyramids.

Origins of Egyptian mythology might date to those times as well, and some artifacts suggest the beginning of social differentiation, state religion and the uniformity in religious beliefs that came to characterize Pharaonic Egypt.

In one of the biggest graves, archaeologists found skeletons of a bull, a cow and a child. The cow's skeleton is arranged so that it appears to be suckling the child. Some have suggested the configuration to be a precursor of the cult of Hathor, an Egyptian goddess often represented as a cow or cow-headed woman.

The placement of the skeletons may also be one of the earliest indications of the belief in resurrection and life after death, a powerful doctrine diffused throughout ancient Egypt.

In another grave, what was believed to be a government official was buried with clay and alabaster pots, one of them inscribed with the name of King Narmer — dating to 3000 B.C. or earlier.

"This period is important in revealing the first steps in the formation of the centralized state which was the foundation of ancient Egypt," Hassan said in an interview at the site. "This is an important link between the prehistory and the written history." Just yards away was a grave of copper merchants, believed to date to 3500 B.C., suggesting vibrant trade ties between Palestine, Egypt and Mesopotamia across the Sinai.

The ancient cemetery was found by accident in 1988, a construction company wanted to build a condominium on the site. Some pits were dug, and the graves were found.

In the past, archaeologists had not bothered to inspect the area because it was once the site of a branch of the Nile and it was thought that water, silt and erosion would have wiped out its antiquities.

FROM THE INVENTOR OF THE DORM BED. NOT.

The Outrageous College Deal that's Great for Sleep and Play.
Futon & Frame starting at $139 (Twin Trifold & 6" cotton futon.)
Platform Beds, Lamps, Desks, Mattresses & Box Springs, Chairs, Rugs, and much more.
HAMELIN Furniture & Futon OF NORTHAMPTON
Masonic Street (off Main Street, Downtown Northampton) • Across from Academy of Music • 586-7970 • We Deliver!

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line $139 4 months STUDENT SPECIAL AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

V-ball heads to California

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team is hoping to continue its unbeaten streak as it begins play in the Santa Barbara Tournament today at 2 p.m.

The 3-0 Minutewomen will play the University of Toledo first at 2 p.m., followed by California-Santa Barbara, ranked No. 16 in the nation, at 7 p.m..

Massachusetts coach Bonnie Kenny has intentionally strengthened her non-league schedule by setting up matches against strong teams to ready her squad for a tough Atlantic 10 lineup. UCSB, along with Syracuse, Michigan, Brown and UConn, are all respectable opponents the Minutewomen will face before opening up its A-10 season at St. Bonaventure on Sept. 22.

"The level of competition we have scheduled at our preseason tournaments is high," said Kenny before the start of the season. "Hopefully, they'll do a good job of preparing us for the Atlantic 10 schedule."

On paper, UMass appears to be a better team than the Toledo Rockets (2-3). Thus far, the Rockets have defeated Georgia St. (3-1) and Evansville (3-0) while losing to Indiana St. (3-1), Tennessee-Martin (3-2) and Michigan (3-0). UMass, coming off a strong campaign last year, netted victories over Rider, Lafayette and Hofstra at the Hofstra/Spalding Invitational Tournament last weekend.

The Rockets, coached by Reed Sunahara, are led by Jean Ann Harrison, who was named to the All-Tournament team at the Evansville Invitational.

Right now, UCSB (2-1), who has three top 20 ranked teams in its conference, the Big West, looks like UMass' most difficult match of the year. Its only loss has come to No. 14 nationally ranked Arizona.

The Gauchos are led by seniors Tommy Siiner, who had a career record of 16 digs against the Wildcats, and Kim Keys, who has a team-high 49 kills and is averaging a team-high 4.9 kills a game.

This weekend's tournament should be a good test for the Minutewomen and will give the team an idea of where they stand, and where they need to make improvements.

Candice Flemming contributed to this article.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 14

UMass' gameplan hinges slightly on the status of Karsten Bremke. Bremke is listed as "questionable" due to a groin pull, and his status will not be determined until game time.

Bremke played solidly against La Salle and Virginia Tech, anchoring the midfield corps and leading the offense. When forced to play without Bremke on Wednesday against Maine though, Steve Jones chipped in an excellent performance and Dave Siljanovski picked up the scoring slack, minimizing Bremke's loss. The depth will benefit UMass as the grueling portion of its schedule commences.

"We certainly missed the way [Bremke] pulls the whole midfield together, but we were able to play without him," Koch said. "It was a nice win to be able to [beat Maine] without him in the midfield. Karsten is definitely our best center midfielder, but Jones did a great job in his absence."

"Karsten's our main target on the field with freekicks and working the ball out of the back," Siljanovski said. "Without him it put some more pressure on [our forwards]. It made me work up front a little harder."

A talented crop of freshmen have shined, taking full advantage of the extra playing time. Scott Regina, Jake Brodsky, and Brad Kurowski in particular have been impressive in the midfield. Paul Corcoran has impressed in all capacities, contributing to all facets of UMass' game.

"We've been able to see some freshmen play and we got some good things out of that," Koch commented. "As a coaching staff we now know a little more about the younger players that we've never really seen play before."

As the Minutemen gear up to host the Rams tomorrow, Koch is far more concerned with his own side than Fordham's front-runners.

"We're just going to worry about ourselves," Koch said. "Our main objective is to make sure that we play well and play our game. We don't need to really worry about the other team as long as we're doing the things we need to do."

■ women's soccer

continued from page 14

back to the goal," Rudy commented on the GW freshman striker. "She receives her balls well and gets them away quickly."

GW has another star in their goaltender, Danielle Dourney.

"She played injured in that [A-10 Championship] game," Rudy commented on the Colonial netminder. "In the first 15 minutes of that game she had a couple of one-on-one confrontations, got knocked to the ground and she still stayed in there. She came in against us a little banged up, but she had a hell of a game that day."

Rudy feels that both teams are strong and that the game will pose as a measuring stick as to how talented each of the teams are.

"This is a very complete team we are facing in George Washington," Rudy said. "They return all their starting midfield, as do we, which is a strength for both teams, and they have the counter-attacking ability with the lefty Chemar Smith."

Rudy also explained that each team may have a weakness in today's contest.

"We aren't exactly the fastest team," said Rudy. "Their defense is very quick, it's going to be very hard to beat them with speed because they are so fast.

"The only question with them is: Do they have a bench?" Rudy asks. "We haven't really seen that in the scouting reports or in the game stats."

* * *

Minutewomen notes:

• Entering the 1995 season, the UMass' women's soccer program is sixth overall in the country based on their winning percentage of .740. The schools ahead of the Minutewomen are: 1. North Carolina (.975), 2. Stanford (.865), 3. Notre Dame (.840), 4. Portland (.800), and 5. Wisconsin (.768). UMass' percentage is better than Northeast Regional foes Connecticut (.739), and Hartford (.716).

• Today's home opener against GW is also "Amherst Youth Soccer Day." Admission is free to the game and there will be prizes and giveaways for the loudest cheering fans.

"It's going to be a great atmosphere," said Rudy. "Amherst Youth Soccer has always supported us and this is our opportunity to give something back."

COLLEGIAN FILE
Erica Iverson is part of a formidable UM defense that takes on George Washington today at Garber Field.

Sports notice

There will be a meeting for all students interested in working for the Media Relations office in the Athletic department on Monday, Sept. 11 at 6 p.m. in 255 Boyden Building. For more information, call 545-2439.

Other UMass games this weekend

Women's cross country vs. Brown, New Hampshire and Maine, at Thetford, Vt.

Men's water polo at the Cambridge Invitational, at Cambridge, Mass.

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together ☆ New England's largest college daily newspaper. ☆

Do You Have Work Study?
How about experience, or an interest in art?
The Student Union Art Gallery is seeking responsible students with work-study to fill 3-4 positions as gallery guards.
• 8-10 hours per week
• $5.00 per hour
• Flexible schedule
• Some evening receptions
• Great work environment/ experience
For more info call 545-0792

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
Jumbo Drinks & Drafts 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
• Monday - 10¢ Mozzerella Sticks
• Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
• Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4 lb. Popcorns Shrimp for 99¢
• Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
• Friday & Saturday - Enjoy our full menu including nachos, fried zucchini & mushrooms, chili, salads, burgers, broiled chicken, sandwiches, pizza
Drink Specials
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.95
Charlie's tavern AMHERST, MASS. since 1978
The Place Where Friends Meet
Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 4B" Big Screen T.V.
549-5403
* No Take Out in Food Specials * MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

TOTAL FITNESS Without Waiting In Line $139 4 months STUDENT SPECIAL AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

We Deliver
Kai Chi
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-8774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-12 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Unfortunately, our competitor is struggling with this simple test:
○ True
○ False
Now we're not saying anyone's lying, you understand.
It's just The Princeton Review can't seem to figure out exactly what's true. Their advertised average LSAT score improvement dropped from "10+ points" in 1993 to 7.5 last year. Now an arbitration panel has ruled that their "study" really only supported an average improvement of 6.9 points. That same arbitration panel ruled similarly for their MCAT, GRE and GMAT studies.
In fact, Princeton Review has been forced to abandon or lower every score claim that has ever been legally challenged and resolved.
It's no wonder more than twice as many students take Kaplan, the acknowledged leader in LSAT, MCAT, GMAT and GRE preparation. Our expert instructors know the test inside out, so they can help you get your highest possible score. And our score improvements are backed by rock-solid Price Waterhouse studies.
Honest.
1-800-KAP-TEST
KAPLAN
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
Before you take your test, call for our free brochure
The Truth About Test Preparation Companies.

UM to face Richmond in opener

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts football coach Mike Hodges said that Richmond has an excellent running game — according to the statistics. Although he doesn't know how the Minutemen's upcoming opponent did it, Hodges does know by the statistical wrap-up, that the Spiders did beat Virginia Military 51-28 last weekend.

And that's all he can count on.

"Since we didn't play last weekend, we don't have a film to exchange with them. So, we are not allowed to see any film on Richmond," Hodges said, noting that was a Yankee Conference rule.

Film or no film, Richmond is in town for UMass' home opener, with kickoff set for 1 p.m. tomorrow afternoon at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The Minutemen's preseason was filled with questions as to who was going to be starting quarterback. A week back, Hodges and staff answered the question with their choice in sophomore Vito Campanile, who sat out last season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament suffered in a preseason scrimmage. Three-year starter Andrew McNeilly was relegated to a backup role.

"I feel comfortable that we've made the decision [to go with Vito]," Hodges said.

The entire backfield is intact from last season, so there should not be too many drastic changes in the Minuteman offense. Senior All-America Rene Ingoglia, junior Frank Alessio and junior Ron Brockington form one of the most powerful rushing attacks in the nation.

Ingoglia was recently chosen to participate in the 50th Hula Bowl Classic in Honolulu, Hawaii. He was picked along with such running backs as Auburn's Heisman Trophy candidate Stephen Davis, Nebraska's Clinton Childs and Ohio State's Eddie George.

As for Richmond, they are coming off the 23-point win over VMI. Junior tailback Minoso Rodgers made his first career start, rushing for 193 yards and three touchdowns on 34 carries.

■ Reid

continued from page 14

finishing sixth in total defense (266.1 yards per game) and ninth in scoring defense (14.7 points per game). And his defense was the key in the Aloha Bowl victory over Kansas State on Christmas Day of last year.

The Richmond job then opened up. Head coaching job. The Spiders went 3–8 when Reid was in Eagle land. The job was his if he wanted it. But why leave Boston College?

"I knew what was down here..." Reid began to say.

But that wasn't it.

"... and everybody said, 'you can't win down here.' And to say that you can't win something is an indictment on a sport that I love, whether it's right or not right," Reid said.

And so now, Reid is a instrumental part of the construction plan in Richmond. The football program needs direction, one that leads to success not only in the classroom (Richmond is a school noted for its academic excellence more than its athletic accomplishments), but on the field, as well.

"We're on a journey here," Reid said. "It's the beginning of a six-year journey when we have goals. Our first goal is to have conditioned athletes with a good attitude. We haven't talked about winning. There's 100 things that need to be accomplished before we win."

While talking to Reid about his rebuilding process at Richmond, you can't help but ask him if he wishes he was working under UMass A.D. Bob Marcum. The smoke being settled around UMass football since 1992, the program being refurbished and rejuvenated, everything looking up since Marcum arrived...

"No way. What I do feel good about is the job [Marcum] has done. I don't look at it that way. I have a lot of pride in the UMass program, regardless of what some may say. I do appreciate him for treating me with cordiality.

"Bob brings fans back, and we're...," Reid pauses, realizing he said 'we' when talking about UMass, and then corrects himself. "They're finally reaching their potential."

There are those ties to UMass again.

Football a 'passion' for Reid

You can hear it in his voice, you can see it in his dedication to the game of football and, most importantly, the kids themselves. Reid has a deep down desire to aid the development of the players on his team.

"I have a passion for the game," Reid said. "You'll go to the game, and you'll see two teams competing against each other. Yet football is so much more than you see, you get into the player's lives. It's the greatest environment.

"Football is people getting to know each other. You talk about races — black and white... everybody gets together, everybody helps each other out, everybody gets a role. It's everything about football... not just what you'll see on Saturday."

So, it's safe to say that football is Reid's life. Right?

"Well, yeah, but you have to remember what football means to me, what it encompasses," Reid said. "Yes, football's my life, but it's not coming in, telling the team to lift, getting them on the field, yelling at them, and then leaving. It's more of a developmental thing. it's fun to watch them develop."

At UMass, Reid saw teams develop while being an assistant coach for the likes of MacPherson (1973–77), Pickett (1978–83) and Robert Stull (1984–85). He did the same while being in charge of the Minutemen from 1986 to 1991. Reid got small doses at Richmond and Boston College, and now he's back at Richmond for some more.

"Some guys come back to see me," Reid says, "and say, 'I never quite understood what you wanted from us, but now I understand.' That's better than any $85,000–$90,000 salary."

Welcome back to Amherst, Jim Reid.

COLLEGIAN FILE

The Minutemen backfield, including tailback Frank Alessio, hopes to be running wild against Richmond tomorrow.

■ horn

continued from page 14

I've ever had. It was sunny, the grass was green and the organ was playing. How beautiful. I even forgot about the strike while I was sitting there watching the Sox pound the Angels 8–1.

But even though I love Fenway, I agree that there should be a new ballpark built. But don't tear Fenway down. Keep it as a landmark. Do something. It would be a shame to see the park that played host to so many great games, to so many great players, reduced to nothing. It would be disgraceful, just as tearing the Boston Garden down will be.

Don't do it.

• I never thought I would say it, but Michael Jordan is a greedy bastard. The man makes around $4 million just playing for the Chicago Bulls and makes over $30 million in endorsements. But he still has the gall to say that he'll never be able to make what he's worth. I'm sorry, Michael, but do you really deserve to make all that money when you're just playing basketball? No. You're not saving any lives. You're not making a difference in the world. You're just playing basketball. I used to be your biggest fan. I thought you were down to earth, I thought you were unlike everyone else in the sports world. But you're just like everyone else.

Greedy.

• Watch out for the Red Sox in the playoffs. Everyone is saying beware of the Seattle Mariners and that the Sox can't beat Cleveland. But I'd put my money on them in both match-ups. If the Sox' pitching holds up then they have a great chance to win the pennant. Their hitting is there, but the pitching will lead them to victory.

If the Wakefields, Clemens and Hansons can continue to throw well, Boston could be heading for a return trip to the World Series. And, like the commercial says, "Buckner will be avenged... Buckner will be avenged."

• A special thanks to Iranian Jabim Rabudabi for the flowers. I really appreciated it.

Candice Flemming is a Collegian Columnist.

■ field hockey

continued from page 14

know how good Deleware is, so I have no idea how good Maryland is."

Sunday's game will be Massachusetts' first ever against American. The Eagles were one of last season's biggest surprises finishing with a record of 15–3. They return nine starters from that squad.

American enters with a 1–0 record as well and is also coming off of a pounding. The Eagles offense exploded for six goals over Drexel. Last year's leading scorer Stacy Ann Siu-Butt (35 goals 12 assists) picked up where she left off with three goals and one assist.

The two games will be the first of many on turf for the Minutewomen, whose first two games have been on the grass of Totman Field. UMass has not been able to convert on any penalty corner chances so far this season, but Donnelly thinks that the level turf might be the answer to that drought.

"I think the penalty corner is going to be very good on turf," she said. "We have an excellent battery. I think its going to be a good penalty corner."

Massachusetts will counter both teams with a line-up that includes three freshmen. Erica Johnston has been solid so far at forward, while both Kate Putnam and Katherine McClellan have contributed at midfield.

Donnelly said that while she expects them to make some mistakes, she is confident in what they can add to the team.

"We brought them in because we believe in them. You have to put them out there," Donnelly said. "You know they're going to make mistakes, but what they'll do for you is more important than the mistakes.

"They have to go through it. At some time they're going to have to make mistakes in the game, and let them go and be confident against the Carolinas and Old Dominions."

Sports meeting

The Sports staff meeting has been changed to Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center Basement (opposite the ATM machines). Anyone interested in writing for sports is welcome, no experience necessary. For more information, call Candice Flemming, Sports Editor, at 545-1749.

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be type written with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Collegian Classifieds
They work!

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce
New England's BEST college daily

Be A Part Of New England's Largest Daily College Newspaper

Editor in Chief
Black Affairs Editor
Jewish Affairs Editor
2 Staff Artists

Any undergraduate student interested in any of these positions can pick up an application at the Collegian offices located in the Campus Center Basement
For more information call 545-3500

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classifed Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (In the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard hedings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment & acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals or a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harrassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid can/v2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m

AUTO FOR SALE

Mercury Marquis 1984 70K miles Runs excellent Power windows & doors 1500 or B.O. Call JJ 549-9881

1982 Toyota Tercel runs super Inspection no problem or/sz 750 Call 253-4012

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey Ever wanted to play hockey? Here's your chance. Join our growing club team. No experience necessary! Come to our informational meeting Wed. Sept. 13 at 7pm in the Campus Center (Meet outside the Bluewall). For more info call 549-1881 or 549-0603. See you there!

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling," "Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking of." "What are you trying to tell me?" "Relevance, trust, intellectual enlightenment." "Frank down the hall?" "No! Alliance Christian Fellowship, committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit-filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info: Mark or Elizabeth 253-7206

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9747

Turners Falls 5 rm with porch & storage can be furnished. 20 min. to UM. On bus line. 430 1st & least & units. Norman 413-863-2275.

FOR SALE

Carpeting, dressers, desks, chairs, lighting, shelves, booths, tables, etc. 413-863-4823

IMusic 100 soft cover text and 3 tapes never used $30 253-7277

Sony car disk man. Shock plate, earphones, adapters, cap. dual illum. $130 or B.O. 253-2777

Toshiba 29" Stereo w/ remote 3yr old esh for age call 549-8563

Macintech LC3 w/14" monitor, 20mega Ram Exc. Condition $950 or offer. Call 498-5733

HELP WANTED

Wait staff-experienced only. Apply within Kan-Oh Restaurant 586-2774

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop congress from wrecking vital antipollution laws. Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule, $6 $8/hr. Can lead to summer job, career opportunity 584-8930

Mullins Center looking for students to work part time, late nights and weekends doing post-event clean up. Stop by Mullins Center 2nd floor and fill out an application today!

WANTED Junior or Senior only to do light housecleaning, cooking, errands, walk dog & some secretarial. Must have car. W&F 7-9am call Nancy for interview 549-4569 $8.00 an hour. Near UMass, off E. Pleasant St.

Kitchen Help Sr & Sun Day 8-5 Or nights 20 hours a week. Also delivery persons apply at D P Dough

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted. KREE-RESTAURANT 586-8255

PCA for male quad. Evenings, overnights and weekends 7 85/hr. Call 546-0666

$331.00 sell 72 funny college t shirts profit $331.00 Risk free Choose from 27 designs, or design own. Free catalog 1-800-700-4822.

Spring Break '96 Sell trips earn cash & go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach Call 1-800-648-4849

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits. With a patient and supportive teacher. Sign up early, limited schedule Call Peter 253-5263

Performing Arts Division Offers group and private instruction in music, theater, and dance. Registration for group instruction runs Sept. 6-22, 1995. Private instruction is on-going. We are located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass, 413 545-0519, for info.

MUSICIANS

Musicians Wanted Singer looking for drummer, bassist, and guitarist to form all/punk band. Call Adam 6-6635

PERSONALS

Amanda Shaw Happy 22nd birthday Try not to steal anything this weekend! You'll be getting gifts Hugs and Kisses Jo and Janet

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel Free with Sun Splash Tours. Highest commissions, lowest prices. Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710

Largest Student Travel Planner on east coast looking for campus rep to promote Kodak Spring Break trips. "Guaranteed" lowest package prices and best incentives. You handle the sales, we handle the bookeeping. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S Padre, Orlando, and Key West. Earn Big $$$ and/or free trip(s) great for resume!!! Call 1-800-222-4432

VOLUNTEER

Jimmy Fund Walk SUn Sept 10 in Boston Free T-Shirt! Cheer on walkers, decorate course, be happy call Dave @ 546-9680

Dilbert By Scott Adams

HAVE FUN LOOKING I'M OFF TO THE TWO-WEEK MANAGEMENT RETREAT IN THE MOUNTAINS
IT'S SO SAD YOU CAN'T COME. I GUESS THERE ISN'T ROOM AT THE FOUR-STAR HOTEL
NOW I KNOW WHY IT'S CALLED A RETREAT

Bruno By C. Baldwin

YEAH, I'D LOVE TO BE A WRITER. I JUST CAN'T WRITE. MY STANDARDS ARE TOO HIGH SO I'M NEVER HAPPY AND I HAVE NO PATIENCE TO RE-WORK IT ENOUGH SO AS TO BE PLEASED
SO YOU DON'T WANT TO BE A WRITER?
NO, I'D LOVE TO BE ONE.
SO YOU'RE LAZY.
WELL... NO, IT'S JUST I CAN'T SATISFY MY HIGH LEVEL OF TASTE.
SO WHAT YOU'RE SAYING IS THAT YOU CAN'T REGURGITATE PERFECTION. AND YOU GUYS PICK ON ME FOR GROWING UP WITH DISNEY GLAZED EYES.

Butterling By John Ottinger

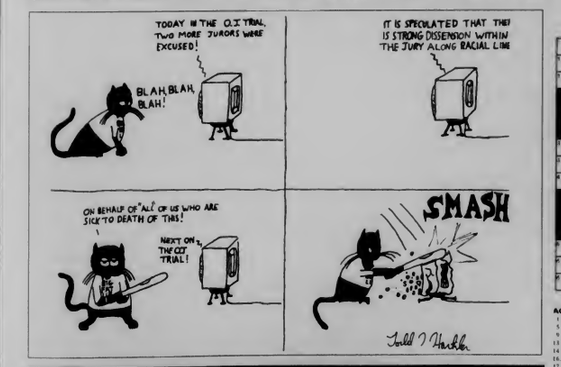
SINCE I AM WORTH A KING'S RANSOM TO THE STAR OF THIS SO-CALLED COMIC STRIP, I WANT A FAT RAISE THAT REFLECTS IT. TALENT AND LOOKS, SUCH AS MINE, ARE UNIQUE AND IRREPLACEABLE, YOU KNOW.
UH-HUH... MAYBE JUST A SMALL RAISE...
ALL RIGHT! I'LL TAKE A PAY CUT! NOW STOP IT! IT'S BEGINNING TO REALLY STINK IN HERE.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I ASKED SAINT DOGBERT TO MEDIATE OUR DISPUTE OVER WHAT KIND OF COMPUTERS ARE ALLOWED HERE
I SHALL GO TO THE DESERT AND SEEK ENLIGHTENMENT. WHEN I RETURN I WILL REVEAL THE TRUE PATH OF COMPUTING.
PALM SPRINGS
YOU CALL THIS AN ENDORSEMENT CONTRACT?! GO TO THE END OF THE LINE!

Business as Usual By Bill Porter

WE DON'T HAVE ANY WORK FOR THE AFTERNOON. WHERE CAN WE GO WHERE THE BOSS WON'T FIND US?
A KID TOLD ME ABOUT A GREAT HIDEOUT
THIS ISN'T WHAT I HAD IN MIND.
HONEYCOMB HIDEOUT



TODAY IN THE O.J. TRIAL, TWO MORE JURORS WERE EXCUSED!
BLAH, BLAH, BLAH!
IT IS SPECULATED THAT THE IS STRONG DISSENSION WITHIN THE JURY ALONG RACIAL LINE ON BEHALF OF ALL OF US WHO ARE SICK TO DEATH OF THIS!
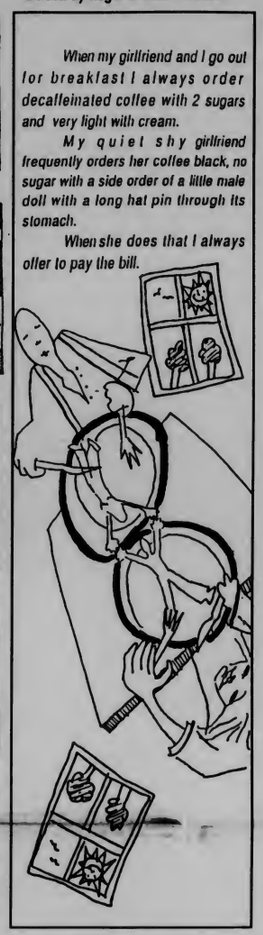
NEXT ON THE O.J. TRIAL!
SMASH

HEY YOU!!!

...yeah, you with the pen and paper, and you with the pencil; get over here!

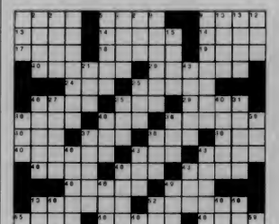
You see this huge gaping hole on the comics page? Well this space could be filled with your comics. If you have some artistic talent and a sense of humor you could be drawing comics for New England's largest college daily. So why are sitting in class doodling on your notebook? Come on down to the Collegian, Room 113 Campus Center Basement. Leave your name and a sample of your work with the Managing Editor. The next thing you know, this space will be filled with your work instead of wordy fillers. Come on down and get involved!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



When my girlfriend and I go out for breakfast I always order decaffeinated coffee with 2 sugars and very light with cream.
My quiet shy girlfriend frequently orders her coffee black, no sugar with a side order of a little male doll with a long hat pin through its stomach.
When she does that I always offer to pay the bill.

Daily Crossword



ACROSS

1 Ph.D. postulant's exam
5 Big bundle
9 Actor Mullaney
13 Copenhagener
14 Aware
16 Grocers
17 Harrow rival
18 Creed
19 Petitioner Parks
20 Interest
22 Foment
24 "Lion" or "Sex"
25 Bush's e.g.
26 Sounds from the bleachers
28 Shade
29 Supporter
32 Ire
33 Pull forcefully
34 Former Phoenix star Thomas
36 Japanese sash
37 Hershey unit
38 M's spouse
39 Wind direction
40 Rich hen gadget
42 Baby's seat
44 Skywalker of "Star Wars"
46 Wooden nickel
48 Bomb with no bang
49 "A ___ in the Dark"
50 Take fire
51 Jewel
53 Combat zone
56 An optimist looks for a silver one
58 Poway
59 Playful water mammal
60 Watcher of "Lois & Clark"
61 Song
62 Signified
63 Love forth
64 Cry of woe
65 Biblical figure of devotion
66 Drysdale and Mattingly

DOWN

1 Poetic homage
2 Preserve
3 Peasantry
4 Like too many after-dinner speeches
5 Merit for one
6 Bitter drug
7 Shake a ___
8 White Fat
9 Zoo animal
10 Turmoil
11 Alternative indicator
12 Gavel pres.'s pushing agency
15 Purgatory
21 Sounds of appreciation
23 Hesiod's partner
25 Summer mo. (abbr.)
26 Rustics
27 Pirogyeny's helper
28 "Ben ___"
30 Nobelist Pauling
31 They're coming, in "Diver Three"
32 Jim Dandy
35 Cigarette byproduct
36 Little dinner
39 Laugh short
42 Engender
43 Very foolish or badly thought out
45 Sways abruptly
47 European nation (abbr.)
48 Restricted
49 Small fish
50 Range of knowledge
52 Imperil
55 Circumference
56 Father of Jonathan
57 Sally's high point
58 Ironed
59 Verne's captain
54 Show of pleasure
55 Harpers Valley group
57 Type of crime
59 "___ Only A Paper Moon"

Close to Home By John McPherson

"For heaven's sake, Frank, this is no time to be a hero! Give them what they want! You've got a family to think about!"

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Joshua Grey
Production ..... James Ganley
Marni E. Hellner, Lauria Witt

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Tacos
BASICS LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Vegetable Taco

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Linguini w/Sausage
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Ratatouille

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
TOP 10 By Brian Marchianni

Chancellor Scott's Top 10 Pet Peeves

10. Didn't take the final cut for the hoop team
9. Never got to appear in an MTV "Spring Break Moment"
8. Didn't win trip to the Cannabis Cup at the extravaganja
7. Can't mow lawn without running over at least 12 beer cans
6. Never gets invited to any cool frat parties
5. Beavis & Butthead is on past his bedtime
4. Balding keynote speakers who liken him to a polish infantryman
3. Caligari's pay check
2. Student's who score on his front lawn
1. The Boston Globe

Your Horoscope

ARIES
March 21–April 20
A milestone as your life passes this week with a joyful celebration with friends and family. Express your appreciation for all the help you have received, and enjoy the attention – it only comes once!

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Trust a hunch in regards to a major personal decision. It is important that you not over rationalize every decision. A friendship that's on the mend will suffer if you neglect it. Drop that person a line to keep from making a false impression.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
A difficult week may have you wondering if all the effort is worth it. Relax and enjoy some extra attention that's coming your way – the stress will soon subside. A commitment you make toward the end of the week will last forever.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
A charitable undertaking will provide valuable experience for the future. Not only will you feel good and make a difference in someone's life, you'll meet someone who could be important to you someday soon.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Listening to a sweetheart's advice keeps the home fires burning. An investment opportunity merits further research. If it seems too good to be true, it probably is, so be sure of what you're getting into.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
An invigorating time for you at work could be a stressful episode for a co-worker. Lend a hand if at all possible – you'll have an ally and possibly make a good impression on a superior who notices more than you think.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
A good time for domestic projects. Reorganize a closet, rearrange some furniture or just thoroughly clean out behind the couch. You may notice that your activity has an impact on your outlook in general, as well as the impression you make on others.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A period of financial strain eases when the new budget you've set takes effect. Try to discover the simple things in life – cheer a loved one with some hand-picked wildflowers or a glass of fresh squeezed lemonade.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A good time to consider updating your career skills. You may be able to take off in a new, exciting direction with a minimum of effort. If you've been feeling burned out, consider a long, relaxing weekend, rather than a lengthy, detailed vacation.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
An interlude with family recharges your batteries for a demanding time at work. Let them know you appreciate their company. Be sure to watch out for your health during stressful times. Take those vitamins!

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A small physical discomfort, perhaps one you don't even really notice, could be wreaking big havoc on your moods and feelings. Check out your immediate environment with an eye toward reducing your physical distress to improve your outlook.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
If you've been feeling overwhelmed lately, this week is the time to step back, reevaluate your priorities and cut out the unnecessary distractions. Spending time with family means increased productivity at work.

Quote of the Day

"'Hallo, Rabbit,' he said, 'is that you?'
'Let's pretend it isn't,' said Rabbit, 'and see what happens.'
–Winnie-the-Pooh

Sports Notice

For anyone interested in joining the 1995 National Champion women's crew, there will be an informational meeting on Monday, Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. in the Mahar Auditorium.

Sports

Sports notice

The UMass Lacrosse Club begins the 1995–96 season (Fall Ball, November Box League, Spring Season) on Monday, Sept. 18. For more information, call Judy Dietel at 545–6353 or leave a message at 545–3815.

Jim Reid returns to Massachusetts

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Take a look around Amherst, and look for Jim Reid's house of 23 years. He does not live there anymore. Check out who is coaching the Massachusetts football team, and Mike Hodges is entering his fourth season as head coach. There is no Reid; a fixture in the system from 1973–1992.

And besides, why talk about Reid around here, a coach who controversially left the Minuteman post in 1992, and has had three different coaching jobs since then?

Well, today, Jim Reid is back in town. Not to visit his family, who resided in Amherst for the three years after he resigned, before moving down to Virginia early this past summer. Reid is now the head coach of the University of Richmond football team, the Minutemen's first opponent of the 1995 season in tomorrow's game at Warren McGuirk Stadium.

Reid is back, and you can bet many of his old faithful supporters will be in attendance. He will not be the talk of town because he was just an Amherst resident, nor because he was just a former UMass coach. Tomorrow afternoon will mark the first time Reid has stepped on the grass of McGuirk Stadium since November 23, 1991.

A time so long ago in the life of Jim Reid.

Promise that couldn't be fulfilled

"I gotta' tell you, I regretted it the second I did it," Reid said. "I loved it there, my family loved it there. Heck, I kept my family there for an additional three years. I still have strong ties with UMass, there's no question."

Reid verbally resigned as head coach at UMass on Jan. 23, 1992, after learning the football budget was being cut by $100,000, and officially tendered his resignation on Feb. 13. The athletic department had decided scholarships which Reid had previously promised incoming recruits would not be honored.

As soon as former UMass athletic director Frank McInerney told him the situation, which was less than two weeks before the National Letter of Intent signing deadline, Reid stood up, and said, "I quit." After 19 years in the UMass football system, Reid walked away from his job.

Three weeks later, Jim Reid was offered an assistant coaching job at Richmond. Less than two weeks after that, Reid accepted the job as Spider defensive coordinator. In a matter of a month, Reid's promising future at UMass went south — to Richmond, Va.

The 1992 and 1993 seasons saw Reid spearhead a defense that many say was chiefly responsible for the dramatic turnaround in Richmond football. During the previous four seasons — that is, pre-Jim Reid — the Spiders were 8–36. With him, Richmond went 7–4 (after going 2–9 in 1991) and 5–6. Not a bad turnaround, and people noticed.

Dan Henning did, too. He took over Tom Coughlin's head coaching post at Boston College and tabbed Reid as his defensive coordinator. Two years started tumultuously with the difficult resignation at a Division I-AA Yankee Conference school in UMass, and transformed into a Division I-A Big East assistant coaching job.

"You talk about being blessed," Reid said.

The first way Reid mentions his Boston College job during the 1994 season was the way anyone else would have — he coached the same B.C. team who upset Notre Dame.

"I sat in my office, and just took it all in. I couldn't believe I was there. It was a-mazing. It was just the way it happened..." Reid said.

The win over the Irish was big time, but Reid treasures his time working under Henning just as much.

"I put him right up there with Dick MacPherson and Bob Pickett as my main influences in football," Reid said, noting two former UMass coaches he worked under. "Dan... he always found time for his players. Some coaches have a tough time remembering all of their names. Everyday, I learned something profound from Henning — treating a player, handling an ego, helping players with a problem. I mean, the guy ought to be a psychologist."

Reid marvels at Henning's talks on the eve of game days.

"His Friday-night talks," Reid said, "would put anyone to shame. They were not mandatory. I'd listen to every word, and I'd bring a pen and pad.

"You know who else was like that to me? Dick MacPherson. You know who else? Bob Pickett."

There are those ties to UMass.

Leave B.C. for Richmond?

Reid's B.C. defense was among the best in the nation,

Turn to REID, page 12

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Jim Reid, who spent 19 years at Massachusetts, six as a head coach, returns to Warren McGuirk stadium tomorrow with his Richmond Spiders to face the Minutemen.

Ripken's feat unbelievable; Mr. Greedy

Amazing.

That just about says it all.

As I watched Cal Ripken make history by breaking Lou Gehrig's "unbreakable" record on Wednesday night, I had chills throughout my body. His feat is absolutely unreal, and should never be broken ever again. With the way players are today, sitting out a game because of an in-grown toenail, Ripken's record should remain unbreakable. But who knows? People said the same thing about Gehrig's record, too.

Around the Horn
with Candice Flemming

The scene at Camden Yards was unbelievable. For 22 minutes and 15 seconds the crowd gave Ripken a standing ovation as his teammates and others got it all on video tape. When he started to jog around the ballpark, shaking as many fans' hands as he could, it reminded me of Yaz in 1983. And the best part about watching it on TV was that throughout the entire 22 minutes and 15 seconds, ESPN's Chris Berman didn't say a word. That made the scene even more special, even more exciting.

In my opinion, Cal Ripken is one of, if not the, classiest people in baseball. To see him so overwhelmed by the ovation he was getting and to see the tears in his eyes was just great. He is what baseball should be.

• Fenway Park is absolutely the best ballpark in the Major Leagues.

Sure, Camden Yards and Jacob's Field are nice, but there is no place like Fenway. Which is why it can never be destroyed. Yes, it is too small. Yes, the seats are old and crummy. Yes, it should be in a place with better parking. But it is the best park to sit down and watch a game.

I had forgotten how incredible it was to watch a game at Fenway (I hadn't been there in a couple of years) until I had the pleasure to see the Red Sox play the California Angels last Sunday. I had seats about four rows from left field. In all my time at Fenway, I've never had seats on the left side of the ballpark, but these had to be some of the best seats

Turn to HORN, page 12

UM to meet Terrapins

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

After capturing its first win of the season Wednesday, (1–0 over New Hampshire), the Massachusetts field hockey team is hungry for more, this time on the road.

The Minutewomen head to College Park, Md., for weekend showdowns with Maryland today and American University on Sunday.

UMass will be hoping for its first win in three tries against the Terrapins. In their last meeting, Maryland eliminated Massachusetts in the quarterfinals of the 1993 NCAA tournament en route to the National Championship.

After that National Title season, Maryland was victimized by graduation and finished a mediocre 10–9–2, but Massachusetts head coach Megan Donnelly expects them to be solid.

"Maryland didn't have a good year last year, but I think they're going to be a very strong team," Donnelly said. "It's going to be a game that could really affect the seasons of the two teams."

Maryland enters the game with a 1–0 record on the season, after a 5–0 drubbing of Delaware. Nadine Bennett had three goals, while Sarah Rosenwinkel added two to secure a shutout for goaltender Alana Eliwatt.

Donnelly said that the Delaware victory isn't a good measuring stick for her to use to judge Maryland.

"We're not real sure about them," Donnelly said. "They scored five goals against Delaware, but I don't

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 12

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Amy Ott and the rest of the Minutewomen field hockey have a tough weekend ahead of them facing Maryland and American University.

Soccer teams to take home field

■ Women to face GW

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

And the rivalry continues...

In a rematch of the last two Atlantic 10 tournament finals, the Massachusetts women's soccer team faces off against the Colonial Women of George Washington today at 5 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field.

The two teams played twice last season and both games were won by UMass, while each time the margin was just one goal. The regular season match at GW was a 1–0 win and the A-10 finals was a hard fought 2–1 victory.

Even though Massachusetts has triumphed the last three times the teams have met, Minutewomen coach Jim Rudy still feels that both teams represent the best of the best in the A-10.

"I don't look at us as the A-10 powerhouse," Rudy said. "I look at us two as the A-10 powerhouses. They have been getting better every year and from what I hear from the scouting reports is that this year, they are coming out better than ever."

Last season GW had the pleasure of having the talented Chemar Smith, Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year, on their side of the ball. Smith led her team in goals and points scored as a freshman, (11 goals, three assists for 25 points) and has been joined upfront by recruit Jane Anderson from Huntington, NY.

"[Anderson] is a big target player and can play with her

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 11

■ Men host newest foes

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

For the third time in this young season, the Massachusetts men's soccer team (2–0–1) will oppose an unfamiliar Atlantic 10 opponent, when the Fordham Rams (2–0) come to Richard F. Garber Field for a 1 p.m. tilt.

The Minutemen rolled over La Salle (4–1) and tied Virginia Tech (1–1) last weekend, and will look to notch a hat trick with a victory on Saturday.

The Rams enter their conference opener on the heels of single–goal home victories over Marist College and Long Island University last weekend in the Bronx. The Rams have not played since Sunday and will be well rested.

Forwards Sal Leanti and Robert Zulelich, who combined for three goals and two assists in the Ram's opening games, spearhead Fordham's attack. UMass coach Sam Koch expects the duo to be the focal point of the Ram's strategy and a good test for his defense.

"[Fordham] should be well rested, well coached and we expect a good game," Koch said. "Closing down the two front–runners will be the key to stopping their offense. Tactically, they go to the two front–runners. They'll attack out of the midfield but the two front–runners are the ones who do most of the goal scoring."

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 11

Who will be next for Tyson?

Matt Vautour

After the Peter McNeely foolishness, there is a fear throughout the boxing industry, that Mike Tyson might be too good. If his fights continue to last such a short period of time, people might stop purchasing the pay–per–view.

In the interest of protecting the integrity of this sacred American Institution, a list of potential opponents for Iron Mike, that you would still shell out the $50 to see is circulating through the innermost boxing circles.

Here is an exclusive peek at this list:

Richard Simmons — Just picture it... Bleeding to the Oldies. Ladies and Gentleman the fight you've all been waiting for. Deal a Meal presents the fight of the century: Iron Mike Tyson versus the Flabbuster Richard Simmons.

Despite the fact that this bout would last less that a minute, admit you would spend whatever they asked to see the expression on Simmons' annoying little face after the first punch.

Janet Reno — In the first fight in over 40 years in Waco, Texas... Reno is one tough woman. It's a wonder she hasn't kicked the hillbilly around Washington. I'll give 12–to–1 odds that Reno will knock Tyson out in two rounds.

Courtney Love — She thought she was aching during that annoying "Doll Parts" song. She has no musical talent and she makes a lot of money with that, so why not try it in the ring.

The Nelson Twins — Better yet the record executive that thought it would be a good idea to let these weenies record another album.

Shaquille O'Neal — He can't act. He can't rap. He can't shoot free throws. Maybe he can box. By sheer size O'Neal would at least stand a chance.

Bill Laimbeer — Rumor has it Johnny Most would rise from the grave for a chance to call this fight.

Hugh Grant — A punch from Tyson might be the only thing that can knock some sense into this buffoon. Let's see, you're dating Elizabeth Hurley and you pay Divine Brown. I'll take "Morons that can't act" for $1000 Alex. You can dub this one "Four Punches and a Funeral."

George Steinbrenner — Every TV in the tri–state area would be tuned to the fight.

Rush Limbaugh — Is Mike Tyson a democrat? Everything Rush has ever said about minorities would come crashing down in a big hurry. If you think Geraldo getting his nose broken by a chair drew the ratings, imagine Limbaugh getting his face broken by Iron Mike.

Susan Smith — Unless she can smuggle in a vehicle into the ring she's in trouble. But at last a punishment that fits the crime.

Nancy Kerrigan — "Ahh my face! My face! Why me?!" she'd yell. Well Nancy because of your bad attitude and over–exposure, half the world would spend big bucks to watch you get your butt kicked.

Don King — This would at last allow this irritating windbag to make a real contribution to boxing. King's only chance to win would be to talk Tyson to death, but it probably won't last long enough.

Barney — I love you. You love me. <BOOM>. The chance to watch a live pummeling of the purple dinosaur might set new records for pay–per–view receipts.

Michael Jackson — There are about 30 little boys whose parents will take care of the entire promotions. Beat Him. Just Beat him.

Shannon Faulkner — She has a lot of free time now, with no school work to worry about. Judging from the shape that she entered the Citadel in, she could definitely be considered a heavyweight. Sounds like a good match, except she'd probably call off the fight due to heat exhaustion after the first week of training.

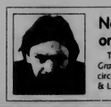
Andrew Bryce — The kid needs to get slapped around a bit.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 4 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 11, 1995

LeDuc leads Minutewomen
Senior Rachel LeDuc scored UMass' only goal of the match in leading the Minutewomen to a 1–0 victory over GW (See Sports, Page 10).

Women's studies gets a new direction
Philosophy professor Ann Ferguson has been named the new director of the women's studies department (See story, page 3).



Not so tykes on not so trikes
Teenage Fanclub's newest album, Grand Prix, fails to place in the winners circle. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 38	HIGH: 75 LOW: 40	HIGH: 75 LOW: 45

Expect it to be sunny with a high near 70 today. Don't forget your jacket though, with light winds throughout the day and lows in the 40s. A light frost is likely on Tuesday morning.

UM Police release sketch of subject

The University of Massachusetts Police Department has released an identi–kit sketch of the suspect in Wednesday night's assault in Southwest.

"The victim in this particular incident did scream," said Phil Cavanaugh, associate director of the campus police department. He said police are hoping someone heard or saw something.

A student was assaulted and thrown to the ground Wednesday night as she walked from her residence hall to Hampshire Dining Hall Wednesday between 10:15 and 10:20. The incident happened shortly after the victim realized she was being following and proceeded down the stairwell near the Dining Hall.

The assailant used some kind of "edged instrument," and the victim received "minor lacerations and abrasions," according to the police log.

Public Safety asks that anyone who recognizes an individual fitting the identi–kit sketch description to please call Public Safety or the Community Disorders Unit immediately.

The suspect is a white male, 5'10", 180 lbs. with "brown scruffy hair," according to the police report. He was wearing a navy blue shirt with a yellow emblem on the chest and jeans or jean shorts.

All information provided to assist police in this investigation will be confidential.

— Amy H. Paradysz

UMass police are currently searching for a suspect in an assault that took place Wednesday evening in Southwest. The suspect is described as a white male, 5' 10", 180 pounds, with scruffy brown hair. Anyone who recognizes an individual fitting the identi–kit sketch description should call Public Safety or the Community Disorders Unit immediately.

ESL schools earn grant money

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

Two local language organizations, the Center for New Americans (CNA) and the International Language Institute (ILI), will benefit from a $4 million increase in the Department of Education's fiscal 1996 budget for adult basic education programs.

However, the Center for New Americans was expecting another $40,560 in grants which had been set aside for them, according to Lynne Weintraub, head of the CNA chapter in Amherst.

"The Department of Education told us we got the $92,399 and that's it," said Weintraub. "But we were earmarked to get the other $40,560 as well."

Most of that $40,560 was to be used to fund a collaboration with the Hampshire Educational Collaborative (HEC).

State Senator Stan Rosenberg (D–Amherst) said he does not know what had happened, but suggested the money had possibly gone to the HEC.

No one from HEC was available for comment.

Aiding new Americans

The Center for New Americans, an organization which offers English as a Second Language (ESL) courses, was given a grant of $92,399 by the Department of Education.

The CNA is a newly formed organization with chapters at the Jones Library in Amherst, the Greenfield Public Library in Greenfield, and the Hampshire Heights Community School in Northampton.

Most of the money from this grant will go towards materials and providing students with assistance for ESL courses, said Weintraub.

The CNA is also authorized to give the Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS) exam, the test immigrants take in order to become citizens, according to Weintraub.

Before becoming the CNA, the three chapters were independent ESL courses, with the one in Amherst teaching resettled Cambodians amongst others, and the other two chapters taught Tibetan immigrants exclusively, Weintraub said.

In becoming the CNA, the three separate groups became eligible for funding that separately they could not have received.

"There has not been, to my knowledge, another program dedicated solely to immigrants in the Amherst area until the CNA," Weintraub said.

Cooperation for Literacy

The International Language Institute, located in Northampton, was granted $57,712 by the Department of Education, an increase of $16,500 over last year's funding.

Most of the money from this grant will go towards creating a multi–media Self Access Center for the ILI. This center will feature computers, audio–tapes, video–tapes, and written materials; all of which will be color–coded to represent various levels of English competency, said Alexis Johnson, Executive Director of ILI.

The money will also be used to help pay for the salary of a monitor — a work–study student from Hampshire College — who will be overseeing the Self Access Center, Johnson said.

"Who knows what will happen to funding," Johnson said. "We want to have something in place for local refugees and immigrants."

The ILI has an intensive English program, and a free ESL program separated into 3 levels. Students may study languages other than English at the center. If an ESL student is a native speaker of that particular language an exchange can be set up, Johnson said.

Johnson added that when an ESL student has a scheduling problem for either the ILI or CNA, the organizations work together to help the students to find a program with times that will suit them.

"We're hoping [the Self Access Center] will be open to people in the CNA as well," Johnson said. "Once we open the Self Access Center up, it will just take off."

Military programs expanding at University

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Despite cutbacks in the beginning of the decade, the U.S. military is making a resurgence, including programs on several Western Massachusetts college campuses.

Lt. Greg Tolmoff, a 1995 University of Massachusetts graduate who now serves as a public relations officer for the UMass branch of the Air Force ROTC, said the orientation held this August for prospective cadets at UMass was a great success.

"[The orientation] is designed to get new students into ROTC, and to show them what to expect from ROTC," he said.

Tolmoff, who started as a cadet in his first year at the University and begins fighter pilot training in March, said that two years after he began the program it was in danger of closing. Since then, enrollment has doubled, said Tolmoff.

One of the primary reasons for the rise in the number of cadets is the greater availability of Air Force ROTC scholarships at present, Tolmoff said.

"We have more money than people [at UMass ROTC]," he said.

For instance, he said there is a cadet at Amherst College receiving a full scholarship to the institution, which at full tuition costs in excess of $26,000.

In addition, that student is also paid the requisite $150 in monthly earnings for cadets.

"We figured out he's making about $150 an hour," Tolmoff said.

"[The orientation] is designed to get new students into ROTC, and to show them what to expect from ROTC."
– Lt. Greg Tolmoff of the UMass branch of ROTC

ROTC at UMass

Thirty–five first–year students attended the week–long orientation, which Tolmoff said was a mixture of recreation and ROTC procedure.

"We just wanted them to see what the Air Force has to offer," he said. "And also we wanted to introduce them to campus life a little bit early."

Included in the week were an introduction to "customs and courtesies," such as marching and saluting, and athletic competitions.

Tolmoff added that there was a healthy representation of women at the orientation — close to half the participants.

"I have not seen any discrimination against females," he said.

Lt. Colonel Glenn Stankiewicz, who runs the UMass branch of the Air Force ROTC, concurred with Tolmoff.

"We are looking for diverse views," he said.

A way of life

As professor of the Aerospace Studies Department, where Air Force ROTC operates, Stankiewicz oversees the cadets and their progress during the year while still teaching his "History of Air Power" course.

"Any student can take my class, not just cadets," he said. "You don't have to be obligated to join the military."

Enlisted since 1978, Stankiewicz said there is still more to serving in the Air Force than just financial gain — there is patriotism.

"You get the opportunity to serve your country as a commissioned officer," he said. "And in doing so you defend the American way of life."

Global leadership course offered

Intensive class will focus on personal qualities & relationships

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Correspondent

In an intensive new course, the nature of leadership is examined by focusing on current concepts of leadership on a global scale.

Offered by the School of Education's Social Justice Program, "Leadership in Changing Times," which was taught for a brief time in the 1980s, has been revived by instructors Dr. Margaret Arsenault, and Katja Hahn–d'Errico, Coordinator of Student Businesses.

The leadership course was discontinued when the former director of student activities — now campus activities — left the University.

The revised version is a three–credit course featuring one weekly lecture, Tuesdays from 2:30 to 5 p.m. in Rm. 239 Chenoweth Laboratory.

Arsenault says that having one long lecture will allow for more in depth discussion and learning.

Students who wish to register for this course must either go to the Campus Activities office or contact one of the instructors.

As the Seventh Annual Leadership Conference took place in August, Arsenault and Hahn–d'Errico said they realized the conference was too limited.

The small leadership workshops and the conference on the whole did not allow for the depth the instructors desired. Thus, they reinvented Leadership in Changing Times.

The instructors feel that the standards of leadership within the U.S. must be explored and possibly changed.

By concentrating on the "inclusive global interconnectedness" of people, this course explores the relationship between leaders and followers. The American hierarchal pyramid will be questioned and compared to new concepts of leadership such as shared leadership and the scientific Chaos theory.

According to the instructors, when the class focuses specifically on leaders, the whole person is examined. In the past only business–like qualities were taken into account.

Hahn–d'Errico said that all leaders "must have connections between their heads and their hearts."

Arsenault agreed, saying that leadership must recognize the whole person and their changes within the needs of their organization.

"Leadership in Changing Times" will help develop a leadership program which will combine academics with experience. Within the course, students will perform self–assessment exercises and take part in several interactive activities. Also, outside lecturers will contribute to the

Turn to LEADERSHIP, page 2

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

The power and class of New England
The UMass Minuteman Marching Band marches on pace towards the Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium to perform at halftime.

Bookshop hosts New Age series

By Joseph R. Fountain
Collegian Correspondent

An Amherst bookstore is the stage for a free lecture series on healing which includes methods from meditation to deep touch.

The "Free Friday Night Lecture" series started one year ago and is the creation of Jeremy Youst, owner of Oasis, the shop where the lectures are held. Most of the lectures are given by Five College area residents.

Future lectures will include such topics as "Self Healing and the Human Energy Field," "Being in the Workplace Without Selling Your Soul" and "Healing Hands."

"We're letting people with special skills come in and offer their services teaching people," Youst said. "In the past we've had lectures on reiki, channeling and acupuncture. This series also allows people to network their skills to the community."

"In the past I've gone to lectures on channeling and the druids," said University of Massachusetts senior Melissa Levangie. "This is a great series and you can learn a lot about a topic that would normally be really hard to research in a regular library."

During the day, Oasis specializes in new age concepts and ideas. Shelves contain books on meditation, self help guides and many other topics that follow the theme of the lecture series.

"It's a bookstore that sells new age religion and health," said Seth Corbett of Northampton. "They have stuff that enlightens your mind. I'd definitely shop there again."

At the most recent lecture on Sept. 8, approximately fifteen people attended an ancient ceremony for the changing of the seasons.

Seated in a circle, each person mentioned something they were glad for and hoping for over the next year. The ceremony was meant to remind people of the days when all humans were planters and harvesters.

Youst conducted the ceremony, a departure from the outside lecturers who usually speak at Oasis.

"This was something special," he said.

Youst said that space in Oasis is limited, making reservations sometimes necessary.

Students organizing bulletin boards

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The bulletin boards in the Campus Center should appear less cluttered this semester due to the efforts of a student group.

At the close of last year, the Campus Center/Student Union Committee approved a measure to reorganize the boards to serve the free advertising needs of the student body in a more accessible fashion.

Matthew Auger, a senior Early Childhood Education major, is the chair of the committee and was integral in the execution of the project.

"We're simply trying to put the right notices in the right area," he said.

Previously, the messages on the board were randomly placed and were not regularly changed even after events had past.

Auger, who first got the idea to revamp the boards from Craft Shop director Susan Bourque (who is currently on maternity leave), said he sought to categorize the flyers, as well as keeping them updated.

In addition, information and FYI boards have been introduced which feature semester and bus schedules.

"Hopefully, we'll have sports schedules soon," Auger said.

Other boards encompass a variety of topics from Five College events to job opportunities, with many flyers appearing in more than one section to enhance their visibility.

"They more than likely will overlap," Auger said. "We deliberately made them overlap."

Although the new divisions are open for use for all students, notices must be placed in the correct sections, and there can be no more than five copies of one notice posted or they will be removed, Auger said.

To help students find the appropriate section or sec–

Turn to BULLETIN BOARDS, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Sept. 11

Special event — Ticket Sale: 21st Annual Multiband Pops, presented by UMass Department of Music and Dance, Mullins Center Box Office.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545-0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Auditions — The Not Ready For Bedtime Players is looking for new members to join the troupe. For details call Health Education at 549-2971, Campus Center Room 168C, 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 12

Documentary — La Operación. Documentary describes U.S. involvement in a mass sterilization campaign in Puerto Rico following World War II. The discussion will include population control as a tool of imperialism, and the U.S. occupation of the Puerto Rican nation. Sponsored by RAIL, the Alliance for Student Power and MIM Campus Center, Room 904, 7 p.m.

GLB Info-Social — The LBGA will hold its first info–social. Activities for the semester will be discussed with a focus on the first LBGA-sponsored dance, to happen later in the week. Campus Center, Room 803, 7 to 9 p.m.

Lecture — Gallery Talk: "Painting the Incorporeal in Nineteenth–Century America: Washington Alston's Saul and the Witch of Endor." Carol Clark, Fine Arts and American Studies, Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Meeting — VIVA Council Meeting. Anyone interested in community service is invited to attend. Campus Center, Room 165–169, 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 13

Panel — "Bosnia and the World: How to Stop the Killing." Frances Crowe, American Friends Service Committee; Michael Klare, Five College Peace and World Securities Studies (PAWSS); and Glenn Ruga, Friends of Bosnia. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Yoga and Meditation Seminar – Meet Dada Akilesh, yogic monk and social activist in a seminar on meditation and the spiritual life. Campus Center, Room 304, 7 p.m.

Fair — Volunteer Fair with 40 agencies recruiting volunteers and answering questions. Campus Center Concourse.

Notices

Heating Oil Savings — the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative could help save money on home heating this winter. Contact the UMass Commuter Resource Center information, 545–1865, 428 Student Union.

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256 8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1– Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co–op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co–operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or call 545–0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Whitcomb 545–0137.

Campus Police Log

Annoying Behavior

Sept. 7
An individual reported being harassed by several persons in Brad Residence Hall.

Sept. 8
There was a racial slur written on the bulletin board belonging to an individual in Washington Residence Hall.

Larceny

Sept. 7
There was a laptop computer reported stolen from Old Chapel.
There was a CB antenna stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 26.

Liquor law violations

Sept. 7
There was alcohol confiscated at Coolidge Residence Hall.
Jeremy T. Bolio, 18, of 224 Old Spofford Rd. Winchester, N.H., was arrested at McNamara Residence Hall for possession of alcohol.

Noise complaint

Sept. 7
There was a complaint of a large party on Sunset Ave. Amherst Police were dispatched.

Sept. 8
There was a complaint made about individuals playing Frisbee between buildings by McNamara Residence Hall.
There was a complaint about individuals yelling between residence halls off Eastman Lane.

Injured Person

Sept. 7
A person with breathing difficulties was checked by Amherst Fire Department. A coach transported him from Stadium Drive to his home.

Sept. 8
An individual reporting neck and back pain was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by the Amherst Fire Department ambulance.

Family offenses / domestics

Sept. 7
A man and woman were having a verbal argument in Kennedy Residence Hall.

bulletin boards

continued from page 1

tions, signs have been placed above each different portion of the board.
Also, outdated flyers will be taken down weekly, and all boards are cleaned of flyers monthly.

Committee members are appointed by the Student Government Association for undergraduate students and the Graduate Student Senate for graduate students.

Auger said the multicultural composition of the committee is one of its best attributes, and added that he encourages those interested to get involved.

leadership

continued from page 1

course, said Hahn–d'Errico.

"Some campus leaders have been invited to speak at lectures in order to share their personal and professional perspectives on leadership and their areas of expertise," she said.

The teachers and students of the course will observe people and their differences in order to challenge the obstacles of contemporary American society. Through multiple perspectives, the course hopes to escape from linear thinking and adapt to the needs of present day America.

Arsenault and Hahn–d'Errico said they hope to combine theory and practice in order to teach their students all aspects of leadership.

Hahn–d'Errico explained that she and Arsenault will be "teachers and learners" through the interchangeable exchange process of thought within the classroom. Both instructors said they are very excited to begin teaching this course.

Attention all Collegian staffers!!

ALL STAFF MEETING Wednesday, September 13 6:30 PM

Elections will be held for Editor in Chief Listen to the candidates before you cast your vote!

Also... PIZZA! And other new information regarding the upcoming semester

BE THERE!

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Aerobics Instructor Training Program
Accredited by the American Council on Exercise, ACE
September 30-November 18 Saturdays, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. & Exam December 2
Preparation for the ACE exam, certificate earned, CPR training
Vicki Davey -ACE certified 16years' teaching experience and Gary Moore - ACE certified, associate professor UMass School of Public Health
For more information, call the UMass Division of Continuing Education, 413-545-2484 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
UMass Continuing Education celebrating 25 years of providing access to adult nontraditinal education

Welcome Back Students!
From the Information Data Bank
[illegible] on the [illegible] Whitmore
545-1555
Hours: 8:30am - 6:00pm Mon - Fri

If We Were Just Any Sorority, We'd Need a Catchy Slogan

RUSH ΣΔΤ

Come See The Difference!
Sept. 11 6:30 - 8:30pm
Sept. 12 6:30 - 8:30pm
Sept. 13 7:30 - 9:30pm
Sept. 14 7:30 - 9:30pm

Hey UMass Faculty & Students!
Get the Morning Paper delivered to Dorms, Offices, and Limited Off-Campus Locations*
50% OFF The Boston Globe

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $33.00	❒ $62.00
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $16.75	❒ $33.25
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $16.25	❒ $28.75

The New York Times

	FALL TERM (9/10-12/17)	FULL YEAR (FALL & 2/4-5/15)
6 DAYS Mon-Fri & Sun	❒ $59.30	❒ $110.70
5 DAYS Mon-Fri	❒ $26.80	❒ $53.20
SUNDAY ONLY	❒ $32.50	❒ $57.50

Subscribe at the Campus Center
call DADS NEWS at 259-1071
or mail to: DADS NEWS, P.O. Box 633, Amherst, MA 01004-0633
*$10.00 Charge for Off Campus delivery

Prof. named as head of women's studies

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Ann Ferguson, a member of the Philosophy Department, has accepted a three year term as the new director of the Women's Studies Department.

"I'm looking forward to doing this job and to developing our resources in a more full way," Ferguson said.

As the new director, Ferguson plans to improve the newly opened student lounge in Bartlett Hall. Ferguson said the lounge is a place for women's studies students to be social and to network for political issues, although it may be used as an educational center since it has a library and a place to watch videos.

"I want to strengthen the part of the program that helps women find their own voices," Ferguson said.

Some of Ferguson's other goals are to reach out to more faculty, to give out and receive information about women's issues and to develop a women's studies graduate program.

Ferguson is known as an activist for women's issues and has participated in the women's studies program here at UMass since it began in 1974.

"I think I got [involved with women's issues] originally because of a sense of outrage against war and racial inequality," Ferguson said. "I got involved with women because women's issues were being ignored in those movements."

Ferguson stresses the importance of political activism in her classes. Women's Studies "came out of a commitment to challenge sexism. It is a program that has it's roots in political activism to fight social injustice," she said.

Community involvement has been an important part of Ferguson's life. She has been politically active since the 1960s and currently involved with Feminist Aid to Central American women, and ARISE, a group that focuses on welfare rights and the rights of poor and minority women.

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4. We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you; free postage for normal delivery.
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Frederick R. Moore, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Program

University Health Services • 549-2671 X244

Gingrich urges Powell to stay with GOP

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Newt Gingrich urged retired Gen. Colin Powell to give up any idea of an independent candidacy, saying Sunday that having a president outside the current party system is "a joke" that could lead to disaster.

Gingrich, in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," also revealed some details of the GOP plan to restore fiscal integrity to Medicare, including a proposal to apply means-testing to couples earning more than $125,000.

Powell, in his new autobiography, says he is comfortable with neither party and that the time may be ripe for the rise of a third party to represent the political center in America. In the book, he makes no commitment to lead such a party.

Gingrich (R-Ga.) strongly urged him against that course. "I think it's frankly in the long run a joke," he said. "This country is a party country. ... There is no magic independence of people who are just able to stand up and magically produce a government."

An independent presidency would be "a disaster for this country," he said.

If Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ran as a Republican, he would immediately become the chief rival to GOP front-runner Sen. Bob Dole, Gingrich said.

Gingrich, like Powell, says he will make no announcement of his own presidential intentions until the end of the year. He has stated that he would take a pass if Powell were to run as a Republican, but in any case is leaning against entering the race. "But I think that there is frankly just enough of a desire for somebody who is aggressive and articulate and willing to lay out boldly where we need to go that I can't quite close the door at this stage," he said.

Gingrich said it's inevitable for there to be some sniping among the declared GOP nominees, but it's important they make sure their political battles don't disrupt the Republican agenda on tax cuts, and welfare and Medicare reform.

"If we allow ourselves to get pulled apart in the next 30 or 40 days, we're going to look like idiots and frankly, we're not going to elect anybody next year to the presidency and we might lose the House and Senate," he said.

Gingrich said the Medicare reform package to be announced by House Republicans this week would maintain the 31.5 percent share seniors must now pay for Medicare Part B costs and impose a means test for senior couples earning $125,000 or more.

Packwood diaries shed light on government

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Packwood wrote his own headline for the behind-the-scenes dealings with lobbyists that helped lead to his downfall: "Republican Fat Cat Buys off Senator with Job to Senator's Wife."

That diary entry, dated Dec. 10, 1990, is part of a rare glimpse into the backroom connections among money, politics and lobbyists that usually are only whispered about on Capitol Hill, if they are mentioned at all.

The Oregon Republican had not slept the night before, worried that his divorce proceedings would have to go to a public trial and the arrangements he had made with lobbyists and political backers to reduce his alimony payments would become known, resulting in headlines like the one he wrote.

The Justice Department earlier this year declined to prosecute Packwood for soliciting jobs for his former wife from the lobbyists.

Yet the diaries provide unusual insights into how lobbyists and business executives sometimes exploit personal connections inside the Capitol to benefit their own interests — and how they reciprocate to keep friendly politicians in power. Excerpts were released last week by the Senate Ethics Committee.

In one blunt entry, Packwood wrote that Ronald Crawford, a lobbyist with the firm F/P Research Associates, was helpful to him in raising money from Washington political action committees "because much of his income is dependent on his relationship with me. He has got a vested interest in my staying in office." In another, Packwood recounted a 1990 dinner conversation with Crawford in which the lobbyist offered to put up $7,500 a year to help support Packwood's wife, Georgie, after their marriage broke up.

"If you're chairman of the Finance Committee, I can probably double that," he quoted Crawford as saying. Packwood, who at the time was a senior minority member of the tax-writing panel, later told the Ethics Committee the remark was meant as a joke.

Packwood's entries underscore that access to the powerful is the commodity that nets lobbyists their six-figure salaries.

Once, he wrote, he let a group of officials from the American Iron and Steel Institute into his office only because Crawford was their lobbyist. Another time, Crawford came to Packwood's office with a prospective client after explaining, "People hear that you're tough to get to, and they know I can get to you," Packwood wrote that he responded, "Well, that's a happy relationship for all of us."

And on Sept. 13, 1989, Packwood recorded: "Ron Crawford was in. He had a special problem involving the transfer of partnership properties ... what its tax consequences are. He said his client was Shell Oil and this was very, very important to him personally. He said, 'I know how much you hate the oil companies.' I said, 'Ron, I still hate the oil companies but I'll do you a favor.'" Crawford, in a deposition before the ethics panel, said he didn't offer Georgie Packwood a job based on any request from the senator, but said he had considered hiring her part-time. He acknowledged that his contacts with Packwood and his former aides were important to his lobbying business.

"A lot of the former staffers are sprinkled throughout the administration," he said. An annual party for Packwood associates at his home "is just an attempt to enhance my own business opportunities through those people, contacts, whatever they might be," Crawford added.

Two of Packwood's job solicitations for his former wife underscored the importance of personal relationships forged when lobbyists begin their careers as congressional aides.

Steven R. Saunders, who represents Japan's Mitsubishi Corp. in Washington, worked for Packwood for four years on Capitol Hill; Tim Lee, owner of an Oregon freight logistics company and a major Packwood fund raiser, once was an intern for Packwood.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WOMEN'S ISSUES?

IF SO, STOP BY OUR MEETING ON MONDAY, SEPT. 11 AT 5 P.M. IN THE NEWSROOM. IF YOU ARE INTERESTED, BUT UNABLE TO MAKE THE MEETING, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN AND ASK FOR EITHER AIMEE OR LAURA.

"Be Unique . . . Go Greek!"
Fall Rush 1995

Alpha Chi Omega
Carolyn Longbotham
38 Nutting Ave.
549-7297
Sept. 7th: 6:30 - 7:30pm
11th: 6:00 - 7:30pm
12th: 7:00 - 8:30pm
13th: 5:30 - 7:00pm
14th: 6:30 - 8:00pm

Alpha Epsilon Phi
Lindsay Samuelsohn
338 Lincoln Ave.
545-2711 (Greek Affairs Office)
Sept. 9th: 12:00 - 4:00pm (Yankee Candle Trip/Trans. Prov@ SW Horseshoe)
11th: 8:00 - 10:00pm
338 Lincoln Ave.
13th: 8:00 - 10:00pm
338 Lincoln Ave.

Chi Omega
Heather Ruest
549-4723
Sept. 6th: 6:00 - 8:00pm
7th: 6:00 - 9:00pm
8th: 5:00 - 7:00pm
(Rain Date: 9th: 5:00 - 7:00pm)
11th: 5:15 - 6:30pm

Delta Zeta
Tammy Sartor
11 Phillips St.
549-3511
Sept. 11th: 7:00 - 9:00pm
12th & 14th: 6:30 - 8:30pm
17th: 4:00pm

Iota Gamma Epsilon
Kristen Keene
406 No. Pleasant St.
549-7845
Sept. 9th & 10th:
3:00 - 5:00pm
11th & 12th:
7:00 - 8:00pm

Kappa Kappa Gamma
Erin Morrison
32 Nutting Ave.
549-2646
Sept. 11th & 12th:
6:00 - 8:00pm
13th: 7:00 - 9:00pm
14th: 5:00-7:30pm

Sigma Delta Tau
Tara Turoczy
409 No. Pleasant St.
549-5415
Sept. 11th & 12th:
6:30 - 8:30pm
13th & 14th:
7:30 - 9:30pm

Sigma Kappa
Antonia Vasilakis
19 Allen St.
549-1627
Sept. 12th: 5:30 - 8:30pm
13th & 14th: 6:00 - 9:00pm
16th: 12:00 - 3:00pm
19th: 6:30 - 9:00pm
20th & 21st: 6:00 - 9:00pm

Sigma Sigma Sigma
Jennifer Roy
Campus Center Rm. 805-809
545-2711 (Greek Affairs)
Sept. 13th, 18th & 26th:
7:00 - 9:00pm

The Panhellenic Welcomes You Back!

Judie's Munchie Madness
Monday - Friday
3 6
1/2 Price Munchie Menu
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

THINGS YOU ALREADY KNOW...
◆ UMass Hoops is Hot!!
◆ Keep your quarters, you'll need them.
◆ Always go where there is free food.
ONE THING YOU DON'T KNOW...
40% of UMass students prefer parties without alcohol.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

Emergency Medical Training
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Classes start September 18, 1995
Call UMass, Continuing Education at 545-0474

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 10am–5pm and Sunday 1pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Thomas F. Sweeny, Jr. Graphics Advisor
Syed Mohammed Ali-Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connor News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Drought? What drought?

Suddenly, the fact that it hasn't rained in New England practically all summer long has become a newsworthy issue. Because my family runs a vegetable farm, we have been constantly and painfully aware of the dryness. My question, though, is why did it take newscasters and the general public so long to realize a problem which should have been noticed two months ago?

The answer to that question lies in the not-so-pretty corner of human nature that is self-involvement. Few people in our society pay any attention to the events happening around them unless they are personally affected by them.

If the problem or issue exists outside the little bubble of concerns which surrounds their families and their property, then it is none of their business, and they'd rather not think about it.

Nicole Cournoyer

In the case of this drought, most people didn't notice how urgent our need for rain was until their lawns were no longer perfect and they weren't allowed to water as much. Before this happened, they considered a sunny beach day the most important thing in the world. God forbid that their weekend vacation plans be disrupted by a shower or two.

Had these people dared to journey beyond their little bubbles, they would have seen those of us whose livelihoods depend on getting some rain. How many people, as they hoped for another good tanning day, considered the homes that could have been lost due to brush fires or the steady lowering of the reservoir and groundwater levels? Or the crops that wilted and shriveled and burned in the scorching sun as farmers watched helplessly?

After two months without rain, we were still watching the anchor people and weather people chat and joke on the news about another "gorgeous weekend" on the way — perfect for going to the Cape. All we could do was shake our heads, mumble "stupid people", watch the sky and pray.

We were lucky. The farm did fairly well despite receiving only one inch of rain all summer. If that one inch hadn't come just in time (mid-July), we would have lost much more than we did.

What people need to realize is that we are all affected by problems like this, no matter how indirectly. We need water now for more than just rejuvenating this year's growth (it's too late for that anyway — the season's almost over) and dampening the grass to reduce the risk of brush fires.

We need the rain to replenish our groundwater and fill our reservoirs so we don't have a water shortage this winter.

Perhaps the only reason that I realized the seriousness and far-reaching effects of this drought is because it is part of my own bubble of concerns. There are so many issues out there that I ignore and consider irrelevant to my life but affect me nonetheless.

I know there are people out there who are concerned about these issues and shake their heads at my ignorance and wonder why I don't wake up. But everyone needs to wake up and step outside themselves every once in a while. Concern means keeping your ears, eyes and heart open.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Taking college for what it's worth

On Saturday afternoon I went to my first UMass football game. It was an experience.

As senior (yahoo!), I want to experience as much as possible in the ten short months I have left. I want to go to a basketball game (men's and women's), streak through Northeast, dye my hair purple, and tailgate at UMass football games.

I went to the game with three international students. We met up with three other seniors who live on my floor who happened to be tailgating. I thought that five bucks to park was a tad ridiculous, but hey, the alumni need to make money somehow.

Marni E. Helfner

Now, imagine me, the person who has a hard time telling the difference between a soccer ball and a volley ball, explaining my minuscule amount of football knowledge. Of course, the football team lost dismally, 7-21, but the marching band was pretty good.

Still, it was a very good game, with great cheerleaders, over-priced food, and of course, bad weather.

The important thing was that I went to a football game at UMass — something I had never done before.

With the little time that I have left this year, I want to accomplish everything I possibly can.

Suddenly, those nine little words started to ring true. You know which ones — the words you hear from your parents on move-in day, at convocation, from your RA, from your Biology 100 professor on the first day of class — the words you find yourself saying on the first day of your senior year. "These are the best four years of your life."

In my case it was actually five and a half, but the numbers aren't what count. This is the time in our lives when we can do anything we like. We still believe we are invincible and our bodies will never fail us. We can drink on a Tuesday afternoon if we like, and not have to worry about being too hung over to go to work the next morning. We can dye our hair three different colors or shave it off completely and not worry about losing our jobs.

We can dis the chancellor, a professor, or an RA and not worry about losing our job/position because of something we said. We can get into a compact car with seven other people and drive twelve hours to spring break. We can do all the wild and crazy things that we couldn't do when we lived at home with our parents and we won't do after we graduate.

We have the opportunity to explore all sorts of classes from women's studies to Freud, from marketing to sheet metal sculpture. This is where we learn who we are and how we learn to think. We become whoever we want to be.

Coming to college is about more than an education. It's about taking risks and accepting the challenges that life offers. Even if it's just going to your first home football game.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Media misinterprets

To The Editor:

I was amused to read the article entitled, "Speaker Targets Chancellor, Republican Party at Conference." (Collegian, Back to School 1995 Edition, September 6th.) The writer chose either to misinterpret Charles Merrill's remarks or else totally misunderstood them. He quotes Merrill as follows: "When it comes to leadership do not look to Chancellor Scott as a role model. He is obsolete as a Polish Cavalry men [sic] or a panda... After all [he] comes from an insignificant island in the Northern Orkneys which is the most important piece of geography in the world and he grew up in a country rotted by socialism."

Merrill's remarks were in fact crafted to convey a subtle message. He was pointing out that, sadly, it is becoming less likely for a child from a remote and humble home (during my childhood my parents earned a maximum of $500 per year) to attend some of the best institutions in the United Kingdom (Edinburgh and Oxford). Only because Scotland at that time was committed to a system of public higher education for all who could benefit, regardless of economic or social background, could a child from an island of 4x2 miles, with a population of 100 people, have the chance for an education and a life better than the daily struggle faced by my parents. Charles Merrill was pointing out that the United Kingdom is now dismantling the social system that made education a right and not a privilege, and that we are in danger of doing the same in this country. He was using irony to warn us that I was obsolete, because those who come after me will not have the same chance. He was not suggesting that this obsolescence is a desirable state!

In these days of sound bites in the press, I suppose it is inevitable that a metaphor will be lost even on those still fortunate enough to gain access to an excellent public higher education at the University of Massachusetts.

David K. Scott
Chancellor

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

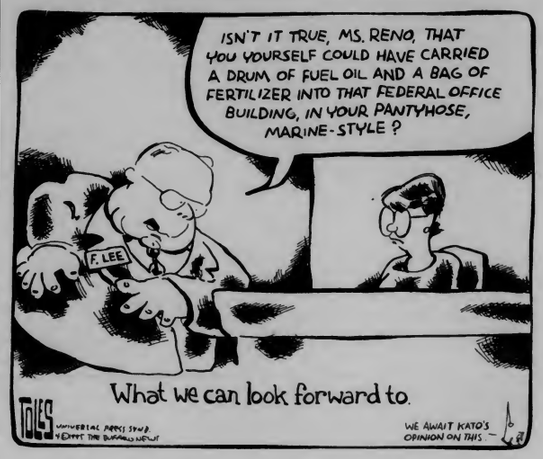
All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page, c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our E-Mail account: letters@oitums.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial



ISN'T IT TRUE, MS. RENO, THAT YOU YOURSELF COULD HAVE CARRIED A DRUM OF FUEL OIL AND A BAG OF FERTILIZER INTO THAT FEDERAL OFFICE BUILDING, IN YOUR PANTYHOSE, MARINE-STYLE ?
F. LEE
What we can look forward to.
TOLES
WE AWAIT KATO'S OPINION ON THIS

It's the short male syndrome

Don't let those tacky license plates that proudly bear the slogan "Short Is Beautiful" fool you — there is absolutely nothing glamorous about being one of the world's vertically challenged.

Yes, I am a short male — a curse that has been bestowed upon me for some unknown reason, and has become my cross to bear for a lifetime. (No one in my family is even close to short — something I did in a previous life?)

Before the word melodramatic can cross your lips, let me give you an example of what I mean. Okay ladies, sit back and make yourselves comfortable. Close your eyes and envision your perfect looking guy. Now I could be wrong but chances are, a 5 foot 6 inch, 130 pound, rather diminutive looking sack of skin and bones wasn't exactly the first thing that popped into your mind — see what I mean?

Matt Audette

Being a short male can, and often is, a very traumatizing thing. It's not so bad when you're younger, for some reason you can sneak by as long as you project what I like to call SMS (Short Man Syndrome).

This is where short males, who obviously feel somewhat inferior due to their height, try to compensate by doing their damndest to prove just how manly they really are. Often this is done by indulging themselves in such macho cliches as lifting weights, driving really fast cars, and tossing back ungodly amounts of beer.

But, alas, there comes a point in almost everyone's life when they know that this charade just isn't going to cut it anymore and a realization is made — you're short, and you're not growing. From this point on the coping begins.

I've watched myself go through this very cycle. Back in my early high school days I constantly tried to prove that I could play basketball. Wearing Spud Webb's face like a badge of courage, I would subject myself to getting my butt whipped on the court by pituitary cases that treated me as some sort of sorry joke.

Then one day I saw the light. After another routine session of having the large orange ball shoved down my throat a revelation came down from the heavens and thankfully enlightened me — I sucked. And to make matters worse, not only would I never slam dunk, but I would forever be hiding from the bully that wanted to use me as a human hackey sack.

I also would constantly be carded at R-rated movies. The front seat of my car would always have to pulled all the way up. And I would never date a 6-foot supermodel.

At first this hit me hard. For an instant, the whole world as I knew it was shattered — how was I, as a man, going to fit into society? How would I ever be treated with any amount of respect? How would I reach the high shelves when I lived on my own? I raised my fist into the air and cursed the very day I was brought into this cruel and unforgiving world!

Well, I'm over all that now. I guess as time went on I became accustomed to being shorter than all my friends, and there always seemed to be some girl who was a lot smaller than I was. Time marched on and slowly but surely I came to accept my height. There are many people in this world that are afflicted with worse problems than my acute case of dinkiness.

But even though I've had this reconciliation with my genes, there are times when I can't help but dream about what it would like to be, gulp, tall. It wouldn't be so bad if we didn't live in a society that is rooted in physical appearances.

I mean, everywhere I turn I am assaulted with pictures, movies and advertisements that contain buffed out dudes succeeding in whatever it is that they're doing. It takes all I've got not to develop an inferiority complex.

Let's face it — this world was not created for short males (or left-handed people either, but that's an entirely different story) and I'm sure that anyone who falls into this category would greatly appreciate any positive comments. Maybe those dumb license plates aren't so bad after all.

Matt Audette is a Collegian staff member.

They always march to greatness

Sit as high up from the 50 yard line as possible ... that's the best place to hear them.

People pour out of the Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium every Saturday at about the same time.

"Is the game over," says a passerby, "who won?"

"No, halftime just finished," replies a patron.

For years, it's what people have been coming to the football games to see, the University of Massachusetts Minuteman Marching Band. They flood in to hear the best band they have ever seen in their life — the Minutemen could be down by 35 at the half, and people would still crowd one-half of the stadium to hear the roar of the band.

Tim White

But why here in western Massachusetts? Why does UMass have a Division IAA football team with a Division IA band?

Most people attribute the "Power and Class of New England" to its Director, George N. Parks, who is going into his 19th season at the helm. But if you ask Parks, he would probably throw the credit right back to the band's approximately 300 members.

Another question comes up: why are there so many members in the first place?

It was the intensity and respect the band gets at UMass that made senior Becky Dimino join the group four years ago.

"In high school, band was looked down upon," says Dimino, who plays trombone. "Then I saw the tapes from here, and [the crowd] was going crazy — everyone liked it so much."

According to Dimino, however, it is not an easy activity to hold — the work involved can sometimes be overwhelming. The most work comes one week before school starts: band camp (affectionately coined Hell Week by some members).

"My first impression was band camp and it was a lot of work," says first-year student Jacey Ahnquist. "6:30 a.m. practice, lunch, practice, dinner, practice until about 11 p.m."

But that didn't take much away from the ensemble for Ahnquist, who says she joined the band because the University was so big, and the band makes it seem smaller.

Another reason the band could be so good is its percussion section.

"I'm glad I'm not in the drumline," Ahnquist jokes. "I don't think they ever sleep."

About ten minutes before halftime, go around to the back of the stadium and watch the drumline warm-up in their half-circle. You might just get a chance to see them all drop and give 50 push-ups for messing up.

"It's a self discipline thing," says Priscilla Mario, a senior in the front ensemble, a section of the drumline. "If we do something wrong we could be doing right, we do push-ups to remind us."

The drumline's main goal seems to be perfection, something the members credit to their instructor, Thomas P. Hannum.

Open any number of several music magazines and you might see Hannum's face, holding a Zildjian cymbal, or promoting a Pearl snare drum. He is renowned as one of the best marching percussion instructors in the country.

"Intense," says junior quad player, Jared Smith, describing Hannum. "You respect Hannum because you know who he is."

Still, the members of the line keep coming back for more, pushing ground and then getting right back up to practice — sometimes until the early hours of the morning.

"I don't know," Smith laughs about why he comes back every year. "I was convinced I didn't want to come back ... but I enjoy playing on this level."

By the way, band members only get two credits for this.

It is not quite clear what makes the ensemble as a whole so good — the horns, the drumline or the color guard (the people with the flags), or why it's out here in western Mass ... but it is.

It's something every UMass student and faculty has to see. (It would be a waste to think of band as the same thing we all saw at high school football games.)

At Saturday's game, it sprinkled on and off, but never quite down poured like it threatened to. Not through the first part of the game, halftime, or second half.

Not even during the post game show the band plays after every football game — a much better version of halftime.

It wasn't until the last note of the traditional "My Way" was played, and the drumline started their cadence, did the skies open up. For some reason it had held out, just long enough.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

~ ART ~

Beatles third on best-paid list

Forbes announces annual list of entertainers & their salaries

By Rachel Beck
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) - The Beatles are back on top ... almost. They haven't cut a new record in 25 years and they lost band member John Lennon to an assassin in 1980, but the band now ranks as the nation's No. 3 best-paid entertainer.

Only director Steven Spielberg and talk-show host Oprah Winfrey surpassed the Beatles in Forbes magazine's ninth annual ranking, released Sunday.

Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, the remaining Beatles, will make an estimated $130 million in 1994 and 1995, the magazine says in its Sept. 25 issue. A worldwide television deal should bring them about $75 million this year on top of album sales.

It's the Beatles first time on Forbes magazine Top 40 highest-paid entertainers list, a survey that combines entertainers' two-year estimated gross earnings to get a more accurate assessment of overall income.

For the second consecutive year, Spielberg reigns as the highest-paid entertainer.

The 47-year-old director, who still is raking in the dough from his box-office megahit "Jurassic Park," will make an estimated $285 million in 1994-95.

But Spielberg's earnings may slow down a bit in the upcoming years. He recently gave up a lucrative profit-sharing deal with Universal Studios to form DreamWorks SKG, a new Hollywood studio with partners David Geffen and Jeffrey Katzenberg.

Winfrey, who in 1993 became the first woman to ever top the list, ranked a distant second behind Spielberg, with a combined two-year take of $146 million.

A number of other pop-music relics who recently went back on tour also made it into the Top 10.

The Rolling Stones came in at No. 4, with a estimated income of $121 million, while the Eagles were fifth with $95 million and Pink Floyd was seventh with $70 million. Barbra Streisand, who last year went on the tour for the first time in nearly three decades, was No. 9, at $63 million.

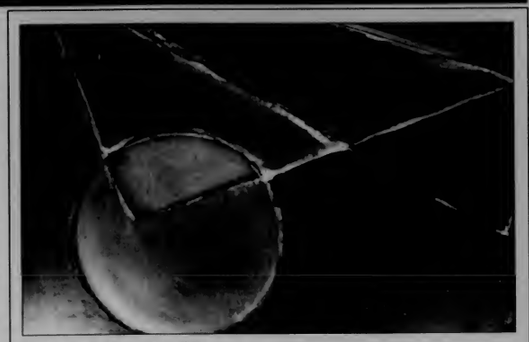
Filling out the Top 10:

- No. 6 magician David Copperfield at $81 million.
- No. 8 Michael Jackson, whose new "HIStory" album has sold about 7 million copies worldwide this year, had 1994-1995 earnings of $67 million.
- No. 10 is the highest-paid actor on the list, Sylvester Stallone, with Universal Studios coughing up $60 million for three of his upcoming action flicks. He moved up from No. 15 last year with a combined 1994-1995 income of $58 million.

Tom Hanks, who won back-to-back Academy Awards in the last two years for his roles in "Philadelphia" and "Forrest Gump," was right behind Stallone in the No. 11 spot, at $52 million.

Other first-time entries in this year's list include comic actor Jim Carrey (No. 21, $39 million), and actress Demi Moore (No. 40, $21 million.)

Among those falling from the ranks: actors Tom Cruise and Eddie Murphy; singers Whitney Houston, Eric Clapton, Rod Stewart and Billy Ray Cyrus; and radio commentator Rush Limbaugh.



Use your imagination ...

Rita Edelman will be exhibiting her collection of large painting, "Reflections of A Bike Trip" at the Jeffery Amherst bookstore. The paintings are a mixture of geometric shapes and the moods garnered during a simple biking trip.

Local artist's work responds to tragedy

By Kathie Scrizzi Driscoll
Associated Press

EASTHAM, Mass. — Artist Joseph Blackburn's most cherished paintings come straight from his heart — the view of the Iwo Jima flag-raising from his own memories of being there; the guardian angel he saw during battle, now given his wife's face.

It was also an emotional response that prompted his most recent oil, a re-creation of the famous photograph of a fire fighter cradling a baby pulled from the day-care center demolished by the bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City last April.

"When I watched the news, this picture kept popping up. When the news was ending, they'd play very sad music and this would keep popping up," he says. "Then I saw it on the cover of a [news] magazine. Finally, I said, 'I'd like to take a crack at this.'"

Blackburn sent his painting this summer to Oklahoma City, where a volunteer with the city's Memorial Task Force gratefully accepted it. According to a spokesman, the painting has been stored for possible inclusion in a future memorial or a museum planned to be built near the site of the former federal building.

Blackburn, a retired commercial artist, also does original work and perhaps is best known on the Cape for painting scenes of the fly traps used by the local mosquito-control program. Besides the fire fighter, however, Blackburn also has done reproductions of religious works and magazine covers.

Two such paintings — "The Good Shepherd" and one of Jesus surrounded by children — hang in the United Methodist Church in Eastham. One reproduction of a National Geographic cover photograph of a Kurdish woman hangs in the Kurdish Library at the Brooklyn Museum in New York. Blackburn's re-creation of another National Geographic cover on American Indians was sent to a New Mexico group for possible inclusion in a museum it is overseeing.

But the Oklahoma City bombing photo touched his heart like few

Turn to BLACKBURN, page 6

Want to write for the fabulous world of Arts &Living?

Then why not attend the new writer's meeting Sept. 14 at 6 p.m. at 113 Campus Center and learn how you can write about music, movies, fashion, concerts and a whole lot more. Questions? Call Tara at 545-1361.

DISCOVER new worlds

IBM PCs Offer the Perfect Combination of Price, Convenience and Performance.

Get the Right Start Call 1-800-4 IBM LOAN (1-800-442-6562) For Special Financing

ThinkPad Notebooks Offer Mobility and Reliability.

IBM and the University Store have special educational pricing on PCs and ThinkPad Notebooks. Call 545-2619 for more details.

IBM.

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

with this coupon

2½¢ copies kinko's the copy center

Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 8½" x 11" copies on 20 lb. white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 15, 1995 at the Kinko's listed below.

AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5010 (Across from the Post Office) Open 24 Hours

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Thursday
September 14, 1995
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With DJ's Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media

Or Would You Rather Be Studying ?

Give the Collegian an international perspective!

Come write for Developing Nations & Multicultural Affairs
113 Campus Center
545-3500

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

Doc Martens will see you now.

ZANNA

~ ALBUM REVIEW ~

COURTESY NITIN VADUKUL

Teenage Fanclub (Raymond McGinley, Paul Quinn, Gerry Love, Norman Blake) released their third album, Grand Prix.

Grand Prix stuck in second gear

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

TEENAGE FANCLUB
Grand Prix
DGC

Scotland is the home of the Loch Ness Monster and many of the finest pop bands of the last decade. Bands like the Pastels, the Shop Assistants and the Vaselines gave hope to many music fans who feared that pop music died the day Brian Wilson left the Beach Boys. Unlike all the metal bands of the last decade, these bands were not out to rock the world with testosterone-filled noise. A simple la-di-da melody was all they needed to get their fans dancing.

In 1995, the Scottish scene is not nearly as vibrant. The Shop Assistants vanished into obscurity, the Vaselines splintered into Eugenius, and the Pastels are searching to recapture their late '80s sound. The most recognizable band from the land of scotch whiskey is now Teenage Fanclub, a band influenced more by Big Star than their Scottish forefathers.

Like any race car driver, Teenage Fanclub has experienced some breathtaking highs and some depressing lows. In 1991 they were at the top of their sport as they released Bandwagonesque, hailed by many as the best album of the year, even ahead of Nirvana's Nevermind. The follow-up, entitled Thirteen, crashed like a racecar hitting the boards. But like any courageous driver the band has returned.

Unfortunately the band's comeback is not an overwhelming success as Grand Prix lacks all the brilliance of Bandwagonesque, which was filled with classic songs such as "Star Sign" and "What You Do For Me." The album is pleasant sounding, but it has as much of a lasting effect as that lecture you slept through. Though it is unmemorable, it is a vast improvement over their last album.

Surely it is difficult for a race car driver to begin their career at the top of the world, because there is little room for improvement. The same is true for bands like Teenage Fanclub.

Bandwagonesque will forever be remembered as their moment of brilliance, while Grand Prix will be looked at as their half-hearted comeback. Rock historians will look back on the Scottish rock scene and see Teenage Fanclub as a mere footnote to the mighty bands who came before them. C

■ Blackburn

continued from page 5

other photos have, and Blackburn felt compelled to capture and preserve that moment.

"I don't think this should be forgotten. I didn't want to let this go slipping by and let the same thing happen," Blackburn says. "This [photo] summed it all up."

While Blackburn was satisfied with how he captured the tender look on the fire fighter's face and was able to add his own touches of smoke and an aura of disaster to the background, it was painting the baby itself that he found the most difficult task.

"When I was painting, I kept finding myself painting the sky, the fire fighter, over here, over here and staying away from the baby," he says. "When I got to her..." Blackburn pauses, and swallows hard. "I just got all choked up." Blackburn believes, however, that he had help.

"I honestly believe, with a lot of paintings I've done, that the Lord was right there beside me. If you just says, 'Do this,' I don't think I could ... but this [painting] just went boonga, boonga, boonga and I went right through it; it took maybe a couple of weeks. Somebody wanted me to do it."

Not all of his work is so serious. Blackburn has done hundreds of cartoons, portraits and set pieces for shows that his daughter, Cynthia Robotham, has worked on in Cape community theaters.

~ REVIEW ~

Roller skating show dazzles at the FAC

Steve Love entertained with daring acrobatics, funky music

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

STEVE LOVE'S NEW YORK EXPRESS ROLLER DANCE COMPANY
Fine Arts Concert Hall
September 7, 1995

Steve Love's New York Express Roller Dance Company skated into the Fine Arts Center Thursday afternoon to help celebrate the 20th anniversary of the FAC. Performing two shows in front of crowds of about 50 people, the three members of the dance company performed spectacular moves on roller skates to music spanning from the 1930s to the 1990s.

Accompanied by clapping from the audience, Steve Love, Juan Tacino and JD Lloyd exhibited daring moves such as somersaults and vaulting over each other.

Dressed in black and oblivious to the steamy hot weather, Love skated a high-energy dance to a popular swing tune. He was followed by Lloyd whose fancy footwork, baton twirling and choreography elicited applause from the audience.

Tacino, a world-class roller skating champion from Malaga, Spain, performed a beautiful routine to music from Disney's Aladdin. He performed spins, spirals and jumps effortlessly and gracefully.

Lloyd returned after a brief intermission, in which Love admonished the crowd to be safe when roller-blading. Lloyd mimed driving a car and after a car crash, Lloyd fell to the ground. When he got to his feet, he was wearing a black and white face mask. His elaborate footwork was accompanied by Desiree's relentless mantra for self-improvement. "You Gotta Be." Finally, Lloyd and Love teamed up for a synchronized routine, and then Love won praise from the audience for demonstrating something close to Michael Jackson's moonwalk.

In an interview after the performance, Love said that he had a great time, it was a pleasure to perform at the University of Massachusetts and he hopes to come back in the future.

~ TELEVISION ~

Thompson discusses a career on the rise

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Lea Thompson is on quite a roll, evidenced by the debut of her promising sitcom and her key part in an intense dramatic television movie — all in the course of four days.

On Thursday, Sept. 21, Thompson's NBC series "Caroline in the City" is set to debut. On Sunday, she stars in the movie "The Unspoken Truth."

"Caroline in the City" has been deemed a likely success, partly because it's an amusing sitcom but mostly because it has fallen heir to the dream slot in all of television — sandwiched between the highly rated "Seinfeld" and "E.R."

"The Unspoken Truth" presents a far different Lea Thompson from the lighthearted Caroline. As is often claimed, the "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies" feature is "based on a true story."

Brianne Rourke (Thompson) lives with her daughter and brutish husband Clay (James Marshall), who is prone to violent rages. After a dispute outside a roadhouse, Clay shoots a man, then browbeats Brianne into confessing she pulled the trigger.

After both are sent to prison, Brianne's sister (Patricia Kalember of "Friends") urges her to tell the truth. As part of her campaign, the sister reveals a surprising family secret.

"I look pretty harrowing, don't I?" the 34-year-old Thompson said with a laugh during a phone interview from Minnesota, where her husband, Howard Deutch, is directing "Grumpier Old Men" with Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau and Ann-Margret.

"When I read the script of 'The Unspoken Truth,' I thought, 'Wow, this looks really hard.' Whenever things look really hard, I get excited about doing them," she said.

"This character has very little self-esteem. She does things that are really stupid, and it was a challenge to find reasons that she did them out of misguided loyalty. It was a challenge to find the dignity in this character and the strength, even if it seemed that she was weak."

Thompson said her real-life counterpart suffered even more outrages than are depicted in the movie. She contemplated meeting the woman, but the director, Peter Werner, dissuaded her.

He said we should create someone new, without trying to copy who the person was and how she looks," she said.

"That's the freedom you get when people don't really know the person. If you were playing someone like, say, Lady Bird Johnson, and everyone knows who she is, then you have to copy them exactly."

"Caroline in the City" is 'the other side of the coin,'" Thompson said, showcasing the lighter touch movie-goers have seen in such films as "Some Kind of Wonderful," "Dennis the Menace," "The Beverly Hillbillies" and the "Back to the Future" trilogy.

The show casts Thompson as a successful cartoonist whose personal life supplies material for her comic strip. Her involvements include the head of a greeting card company (Eric Lutes), the company's gofer (Andy Lauer) and her new colorist (Malcolm Gets).

"I thought I'd hate it, but I actually love the idea of doing a character week in, week out," she said. "I've had wonderful opportunities to do different kinds of characters in my career. I thought doing the same character over and over again would be boring. This project is far from boring."

The series had its origins in a TV movie she did three years ago with Farrah Fawcett called "The Substitute Wife." It was her first network outing, and it attracted the eye of NBC Entertainment President Warren Littlefield. He suggested scouting a series for her. After a year's development, "Caroline in the City" was born.

The show is played before a live audience and four cameras, but Thompson is no stranger to performing before real people.

In her hometown of Minneapolis, she started out as a dancer, appearing in more than 45 ballets. She moved to New York to do theater and continues appearing on the stage when her film schedule — and the responsibility for her two daughters, Madeline, 4 1/2, and Zoey, 8 months — permits.

If the magic time slot on Thursday works its wonders, Thompson could be facing a long run with "Caroline in the City."

Let's get one thing straight...
The Collegian isn't.
Write for GLB Issues
Contact Wendy Darling, 113 Campus Center, 545-1749

Feeling your community is left out by the University? Come down and say so! Write for the Multicultural Affairs desk. Contact Hernán at 545-1851. Express yourself.

The News Department needs writer.
Any students interested in writing for the news section should contact Chris Conner at 545-0719 or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

Cruise Free* On Spring Break!
Connections is looking for outgoing, responsible campus representatives to be group organizers for a fabulous spring break cruise. Just recruit 20 classmates to cruise with hundreds of other college students... and you'll cruise free! We'll supply you with all the tools you need. We'll even come out to your campus, once you have an interested group, show a video of the cruise, and answer everybody's questions. Please call:
CONNECTIONS
1-800-587-6373

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards G.Crumb Posters
Earrings Candles
Rings Bracelets Chains Incense
T-Shirts Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Area Rugs
Socks Leather Sole
Baskets Skirts
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th Fri 9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Women's XC opens with win

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The names and faces have changed, but the end result remained the same, as the Massachusetts women's cross country team opened their 1995 campaign with yet another comfortable victory.

The Minutewomen traveled to Thetford, Vt. on Saturday where they took a five-way meet, with 35 points, leaving New Hampshire (55), Boston University (72), Brown (74) and Maine (107) in their collective wake.

Missing Atlantic 10 Runner of the Year Melissa Langevin, sophomore Rebecca Donaghue stepped up and led the charge for the Minutewomen.

Donaghue, a member of the 1994 All-Conference team, finished in second place in 19:16, trailing only Brown's Kristin Williams who ran the very muddy 5.1 mile course in 19:10.

Donaghue was second or third for the Minutewomen in every race last year. She will have to continue her hard running if Langevin is forced to redshirt due to her injuries. Langevin's redshirt is expected by many.

Senior Jen Waeger of Marlboro and sophomore Cristy Martin of Leicester, also picked up some slack with impressive fourth and seventh place finishes. Waeger finished in 19:35, while Martin crossed the finish line in 19:36.2, just a fraction of a second behind UNH's Therese Gesel.

Katie Greenia ran her first cross country race in nearly a year for UMass after redshirting last year with a knee ailment, and finished solidly in ninth in 20:06. Greenia was consistently second to Langevin her freshman year and will be looked upon to spur the team to several victories.

Kristin Donaldson rounded out the top five for the Minutewomen placing thirteenth overall in 20:23.

The Minutewomen will next race Saturday morning at 11 a.m. when they will face Connecticut and Maine in a tri- meet in Orono. UMass expects UConn to pose a serious threat as the Huskies return from last year a strong team.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

Magid played a solid game at the midfield position, perhaps controlling the center-midfield more with Myers not at 100 percent, nursing a hamstring injury. Still, Myers played her usual aggressive game, and like LeDuc, was slide tackling all over the field.

"We'd be lost without Julie [Magid]. We really would," Rudy said. "She does so many things well simply in the center of the field, even if it's just covering space or marking someone. She does all of that."

Dion made eight saves, including an outstanding diving save off a Maggie Miller shot off a corner.

"We gave it our all. We played with our hearts and we came out with the win."
— Rachel LeDuc

Dion's counterpart, Danielle Dourney, who was tremendous in the A-10 Championship game, was solid again on Friday, making 10 saves.

Freshmen Amanda Thompson and Karin Johnson both drew praise from Rudy for their play.

The Minutewomen, now 2-0, are off until this weekend when they travel to Virginia for two important match-ups.

UMass plays No. 5 William & Mary on Saturday, and then George Mason on Sunday.

"We gave it our all," LeDuc. "We played with our hearts and we came out with the win."

"I like my kids, I'll tell ya, they fight to the end. It's not just fitness, its here," said Rudy, motioning to his heart. "They're big here, very big. It doesn't matter what the game is, they'll fight to the end. Every kid."

■ football

continued from page 10

Saturday marked the return of Campanile after missing a year of action with a knee injury. Campanile was 7-for-10 passing in the first half, but due to the second half slide he ended up completing only 10 of his 24 attempts.

"Vito did some real good things out there at times, and at times he played like a sophomore," Hodges said. "He has great poise and he'll bounce back."

UMass looks to bounce back next Saturday when it faces neighbor Holy Cross. Game time is 1 p.m.

Minutemen Notes

Walter Payton Award candidate and Hula-Bowl invite Ingoglia, added 84 yards rushing to his resume to go along with breaking former Minuteman Garry Pearson's 15-year- old school touchdown record. Pearson had 35 career touchdowns at UMass and Ingoglia obtained his 36th on Saturday.

DAYMON SMITH/ COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen dropped their fourth season-opening loss in five years on Saturday.

■ experiment

continued from page 10

son opening loss to Richmond.

"Obviously, we're not happy with the way things went offensively," said UMass head coach Mike Hodges. "We've got some work to do."

One flaw that stood out — the Minutemen could not punch it into the endzone.

"We can sit there and point fingers and blame someone else, but we have no one else to blame but ourselves," Hodges said.

Eric Oke missed three field goals in three attempts. The Minutemen offense was inside the Richmond 20 six times, and all they could account for was the one score.

Quarterback Vito Campanile was harassed all afternoon by the incoming Richmond defense, especially in the second half. While the offensive line was shaky, Campanile himself had a rough time throwing the ball. On one drive with 4:28 left in the game, on the Minutemen's own 33-yard line, Campanile threw an incomplete pass to a wide-open Darryl Thomas, a pass too short intended for Kevin Bourgoin that was almost picked off, and overthrew one to tight end Eric Henry. Fourth down and 33, and Maclay took the snap for the punt.

"[Vito] hasn't played in a football game for a long, long time, and I think that showed. He did show some poise," Hodges said.

Even the running attack was stuffed on key situations. With the score tied up at seven, two consecutive drives were unsuccessful as All-America Rene Ingoglia (16 carries, 86 yards) had a no gain on third down and four, and a loss of a yard on fourth down and one.

If you want to dissect the offense more so, the play calling was confusing. With :10 left in the first half, the Minutemen had the ball on the Richmond nine yard line. After charging up the field 31 yards in 45 seconds, on second down and four, Oke was called on to kick a field goal. It went wide left from 26 yards out.

And while Richmond scored twice in the second half, not once did the Minutemen go for it on fourth down. Freshman punter Andy Maclay came out on five separate occasions in the second half, twice after Richmond scored 14 fourth quarter points.

It was the first game of the season. Richmond, picked to finish at the bottom of the tough Mid-Atlantic Division, played over their heads.

"Those guys played with as much heart, intensity and love of the game of football that you could ever imagine. They did what they did, and it gives us something to build on," said Richmond head coach Jim Reid.

As for the Minutemen, their offense was relying on a sophomore QB whose last action in a game situation was on Nov. 20, 1993 after missing all of last season with a knee injury. The defensive line has new faces, ones that are young and need gametime experience. Saturday afternoon was a dose of action that unfortunately for UMass, turned out to be a loss.

"I think that we'll hang together, and see what we're made of this week," Hodges said, "because we have another very difficult game this week. We've got to come back and get it done."

Sports Notice

For anyone interested in joining the 1995 National Champion women's crew, there will be an informational meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Mahar Auditorium. For anyone interested in joining the men's crew, there will be an informational meeting Wednesday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 174. For more information on men's crew, call 545-0487. No experience is necessary.

Sports meeting

The Sports staff meeting has been changed to Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center Basement (opposite the ATM machines). Anyone interested in writing for sports is welcome, no experience necessary. For more information, call Candice Flemming, Sports Editor, at 545-1749.

Temporary Help Needed For Large J. CREW Clothing Sale
To be held at the Mullins Center at the University of Massachusetts Oct. 5 - Oct. 8
• Cashiers
• Baggers
• Set Up/Break Down
To Apply, Stop by Our Table
Wednesday, Sept. 13 10:00am - 4:00pm
or Thursday, Sept. 14 10:00am - 1:00pm
at the Mullins Center Rink

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Try 'em - they work!

YOUR AD HERE
545-3500

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirt Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Paid Officials Needed For Flag Football, Soccer, Softball and Ice Hockey
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 13, 14, 15
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 18, 19
Ice Hockey - Sept. 27
Call for times & locations
Still Time To Enter Flag Football, Soccer & Softball
More Info In 215 Boyden, 5-2693/5-0022

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
From 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
• Sunday - 10¢ Potato Skins
• Monday - 10¢ Mozzerella Sticks
• Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
• Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4 lb. Popcorns Shrimp for 99¢
• Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Jumbo Drinks & Drafts
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews
Charlie's tavern since 1978 AMHERST, MASS.
The Place Where Friends Meet
Drink Specials
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99
Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA • 549-5403
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 48" Big Screen T.V. * No Take Out in Food Specials * MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment For Rent
- Auto For Sale
- For Sale
- Found (2 days Free)
- Help Wanted
- Houses For Rent
- Instruction
- Lost
- Motorcycles
- Musicians
- Miscellaneous
- Personals
- Room For Rent
- Room Wanted
- Roommate Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Transportation
- Wanted to Rent
- Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Monday, September 18 ...gallery 1 p.m. - 4 p.m. ...join the gallery and receive a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions. Whole collection fair

AUTO FOR SALE

Mercury Marquis 1984 ...cruise control... Power windows & mirrors 1500 or B.O. Call 549-8881

1995 ...with 4 speed ... Mirage ...05.00 miles ...fine ...$400 or B.O. 584-4046

97 Dodge pickup, RAM/SC power steering ...ding sec. GAP ...$18(413)323-0918

1987 Mazda Wagon ...Legal ...Automatic/sedan/ ...cles used single owner 2950 ...893-4013

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey ...Tryouts will be held ...ckey ...ere. If you're ...ested in playing ...ckey ...ere, you ...make it ...ooking forward ...o seeing ...ou there. No experience necessary! Dentry's ...ion ...nformational meeting Wed. Sept. 20 at 7:00 ...the Campus Center. (Meet outside the Bluewall.) For more info call 549-1891 or 546-0603. See you there!

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau ...ty invite you to our open house tonite from 6:30-8:00. For more information please call Tara at 549-5415.

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling" ...HUH? ...I've found what I'm looking for. ...What are you trying to tell me? ...Reverence, trust, intellectual enlightenment. ...Frank down the hall. ...No! Alliance Christian fellowship committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit-filled fellowship plus tons of fun. Info - Marisol Elizabeth 253-7206

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals ...rate definitely ...253-5742.

Turners Falls 5 rm ...with porch & storage ...an to furnished, ...ll incl. ...UM ...ll bus line. 430 int & Rte. ...Norman 413 863-3295.

FOR SALE

iMusic 100 ...mint ...ext with 5 tapes ...ever used. $30.753-9797

...rry cards, ...ertain ...ckets, plate, ...eenshots, address, ...ip, hub, ...ties. $130 or B.O. 250-2992

Toshiba 20" Stereo will remote TV ...old ...ask for Kip (at) 549-9563.

Macintosh LCII ...4 ...monitor ...20megs Ram, Exc. Condition $950 or offer. Call 499-5733

Matching sofa ...chair ...ottoman $...
Maytag washer $50 549-7077

FOUND

Found Something ...ght at ...ss ...the Collegian

GREEN

22 hours 42 deejays ...000 Xmas ...Rate's legal! Outdoor ...maxitape. Two big ...ments. Skyward lasers. Massive ...ghting displays. Computerized ...Smart. Bars. Clothing and record store ...bazaars. Life ...ize Stone Henge replica. Begins 4 pm ...September 23 and ends (7 pm ...September 24. A Primary/Dem Production. 18+. Call Dan @ 546-0833.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Wish someone ...a happy birthday in the Collegian!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY PENELOPE

HELP WANTED

Want staff ...experienced ...ly. Apply within ...ka-Lin Restaurant 586-7774.

The Amherst Boys and Girl's Club needs workstudy assistants for recreation programs. Open: 2:30 to 5:00 afternoons. ...Mahlon Mackimmie P.O. Box 180, South ...ssfield, Maine 04...

Spring Break '96 ...

...rates to ...

$331.00 ...

Cruise Ships Hiring ...

...September 23 and ends (7 pm ...September 24. A Primary/Dem Production. 18+. Call Dan @ 546-0833.

Drivers, waitresses ...and ...kitchen help ...wanted. APPLICANTS MUST BE 21 OR OLDER. ...PCA ...to make ...bed. Evenings, ...weekends ...shifts ...call 546-0966.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons ...have ...ull ...first ...semester ...of ...ssons. With a patient and ...experienced teacher. Sign up early, limited ...Peter 256-0763.

Performing Arts Division ...Mens group ...ll ...ginning ...introduction to modern theatre ...dance. Registration for group instruction ...held ...5 @ ...1995. Private instruction ...by ...ppointments. We are located in 73 Barton Hall, ...UMass. ...413-545-0515 for ...

MISCELLANEOUS

Looking to sell something ...or simply but place an ad in the classifieds.

MODEM USERS

Call the Playground BBS! 256-8085. Over 4,000 files online. Twenty online games including registered LORD, BRE and Usurper. Food Co-Op and Recipe Bases lots more! Stuff for everyone!

PERSONALS

Send a message ...to a special person!

ROOM WANTED

Prof. seeks ...ousing for room in Apt or home 546-0812

SERVICES

Exotic ...hat design ...airbrushing. 546-1164

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel ...free with Sun Splash Tours. Highest commissions, lowest prices. Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710

LOST

Car Keys ...in the parking garage ...Friday / Hasbrouck / Campus Center area. Keys have a UMass bottle opener attached. If found please contact 256-3046. Thanks!

LOOKING FOR A NEW FRIEND?

Check the Collegian Classifieds daily for listings on pets in the area that are just waiting for you to take them home.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT THIS IS?

Neither do we. But with a Collegian Classified, you could sell it and make some quick cash. With 19,000 students looking at it, someone's bound to want it.

HELP WANTED

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is seeking a responsible student with good typing skills to work in our classifieds department.

Knowledge / experience with Macintosh Computers and Quark XPress' is helpful but not required.

Applicants should contact Marty Pappas or Rosario Navarro in the Collegian Business Office, 113 Campus Center, or call 545-3500

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

GUESS WHAT, DUDE...
WHAT
I GOT ME A CHICK OVER THE SUMMER
YOU GOT A GIRL FRIEND?
NO, I SAID I GOT ME A CHICK... MEET EARL
YOU NEED SERIOUS HELP JAKE
DID YOU HEAR THAT? HE SAID DADDY!
SCHNEIDER

Bruno By C. Baldwin

I JUST SAW FORREST GUMP FOR THE THIRTEENTH TIME TODAY. IT'S SO GREAT.
...AND I'M SURE IF WE ALL WORKED HARD AND THOUGHT LESS ABOUT HOW WE'RE CONSTANTLY BEING MANIPULATED THAT WE'D ALL BECOME MILLIONAIRES AND FIND INNER PEACE.
DON'T BE RIDICULOUS, IT'S A JOYOUS STORY ABOUT LIFE. AND IT'S ZEN, NOT BRAINLESS ZOMBIES.
AND OF COURSE HIS WIFE DIDN'T DIE FOR THE PUNISHMENT OF HER SINFUL LIFE.
...NOW BRUNO...
HER PUMP
THE MOVIE COINCIDENTALLY COMING OUT RIGHT BEFORE THE REPUBLICANS TOOK OVER CONGRESS
I THINK YOU'RE READING TOO MUCH INTO A SIMPLE MOVIE.
IT'S FUNNY HOW THAT SEEMS TO BE HOW EVERYONE RESPONDS.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

JAKE, YOU'VE REALLY DONE IT THIS TIME
YOU CAN'T JUST HAVE SOME DIRTY LITTLE CHICK RUNNIN' AROUND HERE
?
ALLRIGHT BIG GUY! WAY TO GO!!!
SCHNEIDER '95

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold

by Roger & Salem Salloom

I got this friend. He's always falling in love.

He's been answering the personal ads on his computer internet. He sends romantic letters back and forth on the computer all day and all night.

Now, he's in love with a girl in Ohio. He lives in Massachusetts. He has pledged marriage. He's never ever seen her. They won't talk to each other on the phone because they're afraid they'll get spooked and run away if they don't like each other's voices.....wow.

I suppose it could be worse.

All last year he was in love with a girl who turned out to be 3 guys from UCLA.

Close to Home By John McPherson

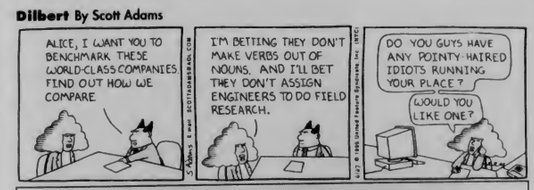
WELCOME TO WILD + WACKO WATERWORLD
"Unfortunately, ma'am, the fire department can't get here for another two hours. However, a gentleman at the top has volunteered to slide down and try to knock you free."

Generation X By Chris Lehman

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WELCOME TO LAS VEGAS...
ROGART! DON'T LET HIM HURT MY BROTHER!
YOUR SOLICITUDE TOUCHES ME, MY DEAR.
BUT THE PAYMENT OF HIS DEBT WOULD TOUCH ME MORE!
AND NOW, NEW YORK!
EVERYTHING'S TOO QUIET! I CAN ALMOST TASTE TROUBLE BREWING!

Dilbert By Scott Adams



ALICE, I WANT YOU TO BENCHMARK THESE WORLD-CLASS COMPANIES FIND OUT HOW WE COMPARE
I'M BETTING THEY DON'T MAKE VERBS OUT OF NOUNS. AND I'LL BET THEY DON'T ASSIGN ENGINEERS TO DO FIELD RESEARCH.
DO YOU GUYS HAVE ANY POINTY HAIRED IDIOTS RUNNING YOUR PLACE?
WOULD YOU LIKE ONE?
SCOTT ADAMS

HEY YOU!

...yeah, you with the pen and paper, and you with the pencil; get over here!

You see this huge gaping hole on the comics page? Well this space could be filled with your comics. If you have some artistic talent and a sense of humor you could be drawing comics for New England's largest college daily. So why are you sitting in class doodling on your notebook? Come on down to the Collegian, Room 113 Campus Center Basement. Leave your name and a sample of your work with the Managing Editor. The next thing you know, this space will be filled with your work instead of wordy fillers. Come on down and get involved!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Hellner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradyz
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Liz Burke
Josh Grey

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
French Dip Sandwich	Pineapple Ham Steak
Chicken Cutlet	Shells in Cheese Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Red Beans
Chicken Cutlet	Shells in Cheese Sauce

LIAR
Jake, Fancy about the fight the Left movement, Jason the cause.
Jake JUST THAT I Find it HARD to BELIEVE that you can hear A DOG WHISTLE, YET YOU can't HEAR the VOICES IN MY HEAD MAYBE I SHOULD GET YOU ONE OF THEM MIRACLE EARS. I TRULY THINK YOU'RE IGNORING MY PSYCHOSIS.

The Collegian Graphics Dept.

is no longer accepting applications for its night graphics positions.

Thank You
to all those that applied for your interest in the Collegian.

113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Quote of the Day

"There is a time for work. And a time for love. That leaves no other time."

–Coco Chanel

Sports notice

The UMass Men's Lacrosse Club begins the 1995-96 season (Fall Ball, November Box League, Spring Season) on Monday, Sept. 18. For more information, call J. Dietel at 545-6353 or leave a message at 545-3815.

Sports

Sports notice

There will be a meeting for all students interested in working for the Media Relations office in the Athletic department tonight at 6 p.m. in 255 Boyden Building. For more information, call 545-2439.

Richmond Spiders upset UMass

Season opener a dissapointment for Minutemen football, weather

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

The reaction going around Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium Saturday after the University of Massachusetts football team lost to Richmond was the same as the reaction to the weather.

Masachusetts	7
Richmond	21

The first half was comfortable and warm, with light occasionally breaking through the clouds. The second half was rainy and miserable.

The Minutemen (0-1) directly reflected the weather as they failed to punch the ball into the end zone several times in the second half, giving up 21 unanswered points and dropping the season opener to the Spiders 21-7.

"[Football's] a pretty simple game. You have to take advantage of opportunities when you get them, and we didn't do that. We didn't make plays when we had to make them," said Minuteman head coach Mike Hodges.

Richmond improved their record to 2-0 in front of a crowd of 8,614. Spiders' skipper Jim Reid, a former coach in the UMass system for 19 years, returned to the sidelines at McGuirk Stadium for the first time since 1993, when he was a Richmond assistant.

The Richmond running game was too powerful for the UMass defense, as the wheels of running back Minovo Rodgers and quarterback Jason Gabrels made a habit of finding holes in the Minuteman defense.

Rodgers and Gabrels each ran for over 100 yards, with 137 and 124 yards, respectively. That marks the first time since the Holy Cross game in 1974 that the Minutemen have allowed two backs to run for 100 yards each. The 247 yards rushing between them left UMass searching for answers.

Entering the second half with the score tied at seven, the Minuteman woes began. With 7:19 remaining in the third quarter, junior kicker Eric Oke missed a field goal attempt from 30 yards, trying to break the deadlock. "Wide-left" echoed throughout the stadium following the third of three attempts on the day, which sailed left on Oke.

UMass started with the ball in the fourth quarter. On second down with the ball placed on the UMass 10-yard line, Spider linebacker Shawn Barber plowed through the Minutemen defensive line and crushed UMass quarterback Vito Campanile. It forced a fumble, which Richmond's Eric Goode picked up and carried into the end zone for a touchdown.

After the turnover, the bottom fell out of the Minutemen game plan. With 10:47 to go in the game, Richmond had possession of the ball on third down at the Minutemen 45-yard line. Gabrels stepped back, ran to the side and proceeded to race down the sideline beating all UMass defenders for the score.

With UMass down by a pair of touchdowns and 4:28 remaining in the game, the Minutemen passing game was called upon — nobody answered. Campanile threw three straight incompletions followed by a punt.

On the next Richmond series of downs, UMass linebacker Mike Dawson nailed Rodgers, forcing him to cough up the ball. Minutemen cornerback Breon Parker recovered the fumble, but to no avail.

UMass threw on first down and Campanile's pass was incomplete. The next down, Campanile was hit for a 23-yard loss which resulted in a fumble recovered by Richmond's Jasmonn Coleman, hence the nail in the coffin.

Despite the lost cause, UMass started the game on fire. The Minutemen defense contained Richmond on the first drive of the game and took possession.

Campanile came out firing, throwing a seven-yard strike to wide receiver Darryl Thomas on first down. On third down, Campanile hit wide receiver Kevin Bourgoin with another pass for a 10-yard pick-up. Fullback Rene Ingoglia and tailback Frank Alessio continued the drive marching the team downfield, taking turns gaining yardage. Ingoglia capped off the impressive drive with a three-yard touchdown scamper.

The Minutemen were unable to muster any more offense on the day, but the team showed signs which show they are capable.

"We obviously have to score more points," Hodges said. "I really thought we would have the capability of doing that. I still believe we have the capability of doing that. But what I believe doesn't really matter until you do it on the football field on Saturday afternoon. And we didn't get it done today."

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Matt Jordan and the rest of his backfield mates couldn't score any touchdowns, except Rene Ingoglia's, as UMass lost 21-7 at McQuirk Stadium on Saturday.

UM experiments in opening game

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

You had a feeling the University of Massachusetts football team was trying different things out on Saturday afternoon while hosting Richmond in its first game of the season.

The first half saw ten pass attempts, a rarity in recent years. The Minutemen were even passing on first down, which has been almost unheard of as of late. They had three different running backs coming out of the backfield, which is not uncommon in the UMass offense, but one of them was not junior Ron Brockington.

They had four guys catching passes. There were new faces, as a Matt Jordan ran the ball, and an Elvis Abellard made the stops on the Minuteman defense. Heck, Rene Ingoglia even passed on one play.

Things were interesting at McGuirk Stadium. The 8,614 in attendance did not have a clue as to what UMass was going to do. However, as the anticipation heightened, there were new things being tested. And like any other experiment, there are always rough drafts, always room for error. The conclusion to the UMass demonstration was a 21-7 loss to the Spiders, the Minutemen's second consecutive sea-

Turn to EXPERIMENT, page 7

Series split by field hockey

After suffering its worst loss in recent memory, a 4-0 loss at Maryland, the Massachusetts field hockey team rebounded with a 3-2 win over American University, as UMass' record remains even at 2-2 for the year.

The Terrapins completely overwhelmed the Minutewomen in the Friday night game. They took over early on as Lynsey McVicker scored on a penalty corner just 3:36 into the game.

Massachusetts	0
Maryland	4

Nadine Bennett would add two more goals in the first half, while Sara Salam added one in the second to complete the pounding.

The four goal deficit equals the worst defeat ever by a Massachusetts squad. Old Dominion beat UMass by the same 4-0 score on Sept. 29, 1990.

The Massachusetts offense, that has struggled so far this season, could only muster one shot against goalie Alna Eliwatt.

* * *

Streya Volla salvaged a split weekend for the Minutewomen, scoring her first goal of the season with just over six minutes to play, giving UMass a 3-2 win over American.

The Eagles opened up the scoring when Stacy Siu-Butt scored her first of two goals to give American a 1-0 lead.

Massachusetts	3
American	2

Kyle Rothenberger tied the game at one with 5:45 remaining in the first half with her second goal of the season.

Rothenberger converted her second tally of the game off of a Kate Putnam pass to give the Minutewomen a 2-1 lead early in the second half.

Siu-Butt tied the game midway through the second half to set the stage for Volla's heroics.

The Minutewomen return to action next weekend when they will battle perennial powerhouses North Carolina and Old Dominion. Both games will be played at Chapel Hill, N.C.

— Matt Vautour

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Kyle Rothenberger netted two goals in the Minutewomen's 3-2 victory over American yesterday.

Minutewomen blank GW

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Looking at Rachel LeDuc, all covered with mud and grass stains after Friday's 1-0 win over George Washington, one would think it was a championship match.

Massachusetts	1
Geo. Washington	0

In fact, the last time the Massachusetts and G women's soccer teams met, it was the Atlantic 10 Championship final match, which the Minutewomen won, 2-1, in a rain-soaked thriller.

But in reality, Friday's match was only the second contest of the year for the Minutewomen (third for G), and UMass, ranked No. 8, came away with the hard-fought victory.

LeDuc played a huge part in the deciding factor with her aggressive play, continually slide tackling all over the field, and her fourth goal of the season.

"It was perfect weather to slide tackle, I mean it was drizzling, so when you have the opportunity ... I took it," LeDuc said.

"It was like a championship match, but that's the way with G. Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "This was a championship level match in terms of commitment, running, speed and fighting power. This is what you see at the end of the year. It felt just like last year [in] the A-10s."

LeDuc scored the game-winner early on in the second half, off a corner kick at the 54:40 mark. Junior Julie Magid served a beautiful ball high in the air that LeDuc jumped up for and headed down into the net for the score. With the goal, LeDuc now has all four Minutewomen goals this year, and leads the team with six points.

"It was a great corner and I just put my head on it," LeDuc said.

Normally on Minutewomen corners, Magid will look for the tall target of Rebecca Myers, as will opposing defenders. So when Magid lofted the ball, the G defenders were covering Myers, thus allowing LeDuc to head it in.

After its goal, UMass let up a little and G almost capitalized getting off numerous shots on UM goalkeeper Danielle Dion. On one play, senior defender Nikki Ahrenholz stopped a potential score when she broke up a pass from Chemar Smith to Jane Anderson and then untimed the ball to the midfield.

"Nikki is a much better player than people give credit for. And I'll give all the credit and that was another one of those times. That [play] was an individual instance where she changed, possibly, the game," Rudy said.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 7

COLLEGIAN FILE

Rachel LeDuc scored her fourth goal of the season in leading UMass to a 1-0 victory over George Washington on Friday at Garber Field.

Men's soccer succumbs to Fordham

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The defending Atlantic 10 Champion UMass men's soccer team is clearly the biggest name on Fordham's schedule.

Saturday at Richard F. Garber Field, the Rams, 6-10 in 1994, upset the Minutemen, 2-1, and sent shock-waves throughout the A-10 in the process.

UMass (2-1-1) played a solid game, but were unable to overtake the Rams (3-0) who notched the game-winner with just 3:59 to play in regulation.

Massachusetts	1
Fordham	2

Fordham played a physical game and were called for 19 fouls in the match, while the sensational play of goalkeeper James Grandinetti helped lead Fordham to victory.

"Losing a game like this is not a good thing," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "My reaction is not a very happy one. We didn't do the things we needed to do. We did not play smart. We're a much better team than what we showed."

Things were not right from the opening whistle for UMass as leading scorer Dave Siljanovski went down, holding his left knee, just 29 seconds into the contest. Fortunately for UMass, Siljanovski remained in the game.

UMass had an excellent scoring opportunity in the eleventh minute as a throw-in by freshman Paul Corcoran was headed by both Mike Butler and Colin Johnson, but Fordham defender Des O'Sullivan was able to deflect the ball out.

Otherwise, much of the opening half was played on the UMass side of the field as Fordham was able to sustain pressure and keep UMass defenders on their heels.

Fordham was led by forwards Sal Leanti and Robert Zuclich, whom had a goal and an assist apiece. The remainder on the Ram side paled in comparison talent-wise, and from the opening whistle Fordham's intention to get the ball to their skilled forwards via though-balls was evident.

As the Minutemen broke into their standard short-passing offense, they bunched more than usual, drawing their midfielders into the cluster. This left often expansive gaps in the UMass defense for the Rams to exploit with a long-ball targeted for either the speedy Leanti or Zuclich.

Fordham broke through for the match's first goal, at the 28:41 mark. Zuclich fed a pass to a streaking Leanti who flicked the ball up and over a sliding UMass goalkeeper Eric Gruber and into the goal.

After a flamboyant celebration by Leanti, UMass played the final 16 minutes of the half with renewed vigor. Yet, the Minutemen could not solve the riddle of Grandinetti who made some incredible saves as the half wore down.

Grandinetti made a pair of fantastic saves on Steve Jones and Scott Regina off of a 35-yard freekick in the 31st minute and a spectacular stop of a freekick with just 15 seconds remaining in the half.

UMass opened the second half with the same pressure, and scored their lone goal on the afternoon just 4:35 into the half. A Butler cornerkick deflected off of Siljanovski and went right to Regina who put the ball between Grandinetti's legs. The goal was the first of freshman Regina's UMass career.

With the tie, UMass still continued its attack as the Minutemen peppered Grandinetti with shots, including an 18-yard rocket off the foot of Siljanovski in the 60th minute.

It appeared that things would take an upswing for the Minutemen after a freekick in the match's 63rd minute. After sliding to make a save on the kick, Grandinetti was clipped in the head by Johnson as he tried to avoid the Fordham keeper. Dazed, Grandinetti had to be helped off the field and left the game, replaced by Mike McSpedon.

McSpedon was shaky on his initial touch, as he wobbled over the endline, giving the Minutemen a cornerkick. UMass was unable to consistently challenge McSpedon though.

Gruber was sharp in the UMass net, making an astounding 67th minute save, from seven yards out, to maintain the tie.

Inside the final seven minutes, Fordham was able to muster one more offensive pressure due to some fouls and miscommunication amongst the Minuteman defenders.

Zuclich was able to break the tie, just inside the 86th minute, as he collected a Leanti pass on the goalline and was able to squeeze a shot between Gruber and the near post, from two yards out, securing a Ram victory.

Volleyball wins one

The Massachusetts volleyball team traveled to Santa Barbara, Calif. this weekend, where they took one of four matches at the UCSB Classic.

UMass defeated Toledo in the opening round on Friday 15-6, 17-15, 15-10. Junior Giza Rivera led the charge for UMass with 12 kills and five blocks while Rachel Sky chipped in 11 kills and 10 digs and Dionne Nash added nine kills and 12 digs.

The Minutewomen fell to No. 18 UC-Santa Barbara in Friday's night cap 10-15, 15-11, 15-5, 15-8. Rivera was a force for UMass, recording 27 kills, the second highest single game total in school history.

Saturday, UMass fell to Utah 15-11, 15-6, 15-11 and later to San Jose State 16-14, 15-17, 15-9, 5-15, 17-15 in a five set thriller. Rivera had 21 kills and 19 digs against the Spartans. Her record of 75 kills in the tournament was the third highest total in the tournament's history.

An extended story on the UCSB Classic will appear in tomorrow's Collegian as will men's water polo results which were not available at press time.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 5 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, September 12, 1995

Paciorek breaks blocking record

Sophomore Michelle Paciorek blocked a record 12 shots at the UCSB tourney this past weekend in California (See Sports, Page 20).

Black Student Union looks to gain support

Newly elected BSU vice president Kola Olosunde talks about the future plans and hopes of the organization (see News, page 3).

Turn the radio up

This week's Trax On Trax Off reviews Garbage's debut, Unrest's greatest hits album and a whole lot more (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Expect it to be sunny with a high in the mid 70s with a nice fall-like breeze. Things will cool down in the evening with a low of 55 with increasing clouds after midnight and on Wednesday.

	Today	Wednesday	Thursday
	HIGH: 75 LOW: 55	HIGH: 75 LOW: 45	HIGH: 78 LOW: 39

Bosnian peace talks resume with new hope

By Barry Schweide
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is sending his chief negotiator back to Europe Thursday to build on an agreement that effectively partitions Bosnia in an effort to end the 40-month war in the former Yugoslav republic.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, who brokered the accord reached last Friday in Geneva, will return to the Swiss city for a meeting with Russian, British, French and German diplomats and then travel to the Balkans for talks with the warring parties.

Holbrooke's assignment was announced after he met with Clinton at the White House. "The president welcomed the progress that has been made to date toward a comprehensive political settlement," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said.

The accord did not end the fighting in Bosnia, but McCurry said it would preserve Bosnia-Herzegovina as a single state and provide "a viable future for all its people."

NATO said the attacks on Bosnian Serb positions would continue, possibly using more U.S. cruise missiles. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said bridges and other installations would be targeted with the aim of destroying the Serbs' will to fight.

Holbrooke met for two hours with Secretary of State Warren Christopher and then saw Clinton after the president returned from a meeting with college students in Illinois.

Clinton's senior foreign policy advisers also met at the White House. Among them were Christopher, Defense Secretary William Perry, national security adviser Anthony Lake and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Holbrooke and Lt. Gen. Wesley Clark, the top Pentagon officer on the negotiating team, participated.

Turn to BOSNIA, page 15

Motion gives Abu-Jamal a second chance

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA, PA — One would think that once an individual is sentenced to the death penalty, they might as well be taken for dead already.

This can never be farther from the truth than in the case of Wesley Cook, better known as Mumia Abu-Jamal, an African-American journalist and writer from Philadelphia.

Abu-Jamal has been sitting on death row since he was convicted for the murder in the first degree of police officer Daniel Faulkner in Philadelphia on December 9, 1981, but this long-awaiting period has surely not been a quiet one.

It took all but one week for the initial trial to end, and as early as July 2, 1982, Abu-Jamal's life had been put in the hands of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Judge Albert Sabo presided over the case then, as he still does today. Sabo is known nation-wide as one of the harshest judicial servers, having sentenced to death 32 people to the current moment —all but two have been people of color.

Abu-Jamal granted a new opportunity

Yesterday Abu-Jamal had another chance, 14 years later, to present his case before Judge Sabo and the public. Judge Sabo granted each team a total of two hours to present their cases. The jury was composed of eight white individuals and one african-american person.

The defense opened up the session with a lengthy yet detailed description of why Abu-Jamal, "a person with soulful humanity" and "dedicated to social justice," as defense attorney Daniel Williams put it, had been denied fair judicial treatment and was in need of a complete new trial.

The defense spent a long time retracing the steps of the original trial in the summer of 1982. The jury, it was argued, had not been given a fair and accurate characterization of Abu-Jamal. The then court-appointed defense lawyer had not been prepared for the trial due primarily to lack of funding and lack of time. In top of this, the prosecutor, Mr. McGill, had the "zeal to win and use his powers ... to advocate the death of a fictional being," Williams contended.

The second main issue tackled by the defense regarded the role of the witnesses. Defense attorney Jonathan Piper argued that one key witness, officer Wakshul, was never allowed to give testimony in the original trial.

Other important witnesses, such as Mr. Chobert, a cab driver, or Cynthia White, a prostitute, were said to have been harassed by the police and coerced into testifying on behalf of the prosecution — allegedly. Chobert, White, along with Mark Scanlan and others, had seen Abu-Jamal shoot officer Faulkner in the face and then saw the former running away.

Additionally, defense lawyer Williams said, Abu-Jamal's "confession" of the crime was a piece of "false, perjurious, dubious, bogus evidence" and that in fact it was a mere fabrication of the prosecution.

Moreover, Williams added "every case is a test of the integrity of the criminal justice system," and thus Judge Sabo was challenged to step up to the occasion and demonstrate that the system in fact still worked.

Defense lawyer Rachel Wolkenstein stated that the court had not helped the defense team at all since the beginning of the trial. By stating that many pieces of evidence were fabricated, misconstrued or even destroyed by the prosecution, Wolkenstein argued that in top of everything the judge himself had not been too helpful.

For example, in pursuing the issue of racial discrimination and injustice against Abu-Jamal, a request for the release of over 600 pages of documentation from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) was denied. Thus, Wolkestein concluded, "the level of misconduct is so great that Mr. Jamal should be granted a new trial."

The fourth defense lawyer, Leonard Weinglass, cited the importance of the issue of race and racism in the process of Abu-Jamal's trial. "Blacks are three to four times more likely to receive the death penalty in Pennsylvania," he said.

The prosecution's argument was cut and dry and was restrained to a process of addressing and discrediting the defense's statement. Prosecutor Burns said that the previous presentation had been "very creative" but far from the evidence as presented in previous proceedings.

All witnesses put into question by the defense were presented as the sole carriers of truth, and thus the only ones who could dictate the outcome of the trial: they had all, in some way or another, coincided in that it was the defendant who had pulled the trigger, taking the life of officer Faulkner.

Burns disagreed with the defense in regards to Abu- Jamal's first lawyer, Anthony Jackson, saying that the latter was qualified and prepared, but that the defendant "was personally in control" of the trial. Allegations of police coercion were denied or downplayed, and for the most part, Burns concentrated in the accreditation of witness testimony. Also, he brought out alleged "bragged" about killing Faulkner.

Jamal's case widely supported

Pennsylvania Governor Thomas Ridge had signed a warrant for Abu-Jamal's execution on June 1, and it was to be carried out last August 17. However, due to an unprecedented show of support, the state faced tremendous pressure at both the national and international level to halt the execution. This was finally granted on August 7.

The forms of pressure exerted, ranged from civilian marches, protests and demonstrations in support of Abu- Jamal, to personal requests for a stay of execution and even for a new trial from organizations such as Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, trade unions, and even at the governmental level, as in the requests of the Congressional Black Caucus or of the European Parliament.

"It is clear that the treatment of evidence and the application of justice in this instance have been at best arbitrary and capricious," wrote Chaka Fattah on behalf of the Congressional Black Caucus. "Even if Mumia Abu-Jamal were guilty, we would deserve to have more solid assurance of that before we put him to death. If he is innocent, to put him to death on the basis of the evidence at hand is to make of us the very murderers against whom we seek relief," Fattah added.

Once yesterday's session was over, defense Attorney Leonard Weinglass spoke of the need for a retrial and promised that "Mumia will testify."

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Hundreds of protesters, including some UMass students and residents, participated in a rally held in Philadelphia in order to help Mumia Abu-Jamal, an African-American journalist and political activist, win his freedom from death row.

Budget cuts could endanger student financial aid

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

President Clinton announced via satellite to college campuses across the nation yesterday that the republican Congress does not have to "cut education to balance the budget."

Clinton's address came in response to the budget resolution being pushed by his Republican opponents in Congress which would cut $10.4 billion dollars from the student financial aid program over the next seven years.

Republicans have targeted funding for student financial aid programs in order to reduce federal spending.

U.S. Rep. John W. Olver (D- First District) was present for the speech and led a discussion on the cuts following the broadcast. He described the cuts as a "deliberate effort to eliminate programs that were adopted under this president for obvious reasons..."

Clinton acknowledged that the threatened cuts are personal and the veiled claim for a balanced budget is too thin.

"In my lifetime, education has never been a partisan issue," Clinton said. "Do not be fooled by the smokescreen of a balanced budget."

Clinton's Direct Student Loan Program saves students time and money by getting the aid to the students faster and more efficiently.

"The direct loan program gets rid of red tape, bypasses banks and middlemen, sends the student loan directly to the school, where the student gets it in a hurry," Clinton said.

The counter-proposals to Clinton's direct loan program being considered by the authorizing and appropriations committees will affect students by eliminating the grace period for all borrowers and eliminating the in-school interest exemption for graduate and professional students. They also might increase the origination fee paid by borrowers and cancel the interest rate cut on the student loans scheduled to take effect in July 1998.

"The Budget Resolution that was adopted earlier this year makes it a good deal harder for our students to get an education," Olver said.

Clinton raised national consciousness while pointing his finger at adversaries, using rhetoric to remind foes that they are ruining the "American Dream" of an education.

"Will your country meet the challenges of the 21st Century, or will we cut off our nose to spite our face, by cutting off our educational aid at a time when we need to invest more in it," Clinton said.

To thunderous applause, the President sympathized with students who, under the old program, spent valuable time processing their loans, something many UMass students may easily relate to.

"This year ... 11,000 students got direct college loans," Clinton said, "and they didn't have to spend so many hours filling out forms or standing and waiting in line at the Bursars office."

Clinton pointed out that in 1980, there was a gap of 36% between those who had jobs with a college degree and those with a high school diploma. Today, that gap has increased to 74%. Clinton believes that there is clearly a need for economic assistance to those who wish to pursue a college degree, who will in turn keep the economy stable and increase income.

According to The Alliance to Save Student Aid, one-half of all full-time students in public colleges need federal student aid. Therefore, cuts in student loans would decrease enrollment. Clinton said that more people going to college means "better jobs, higher income and a stronger America."

"There should never be a disincentive to stay in school," Clinton said.

Among Clinton's programs that are in danger of being cut is the national service organization, Americorps.

Olver described this particular cut as "crib death for national service."

A student present at the viewing criticized the program

Turn to CUTS, page 15

JEFF DI GIOVANNI / COLLEGIAN

Student Trustee for the SGA, Dan Rivera, questioned Chancellor David Scott (pictured second from left) and U.S. Rep. John W. Olver (pictured third from left) on how students will be threatened by proposed legislation.

Internet conflict leaves UM alum without access

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

A 39-year-old University of Massachusetts alum who violated a copyright law found her Internet account terminated on Sept. 4.

Libby Hubbard, who is known in Cyberspace as Doctress Neutopia, recently posted four Clarinet Usenet newsgroup articles on the her newsgroup, alt.society.neutopia.

UMass subscribes to Clarinet news wire, and copyright violations may have caused Clarinet to threaten to revoke service to the University, according to Hubbard.

Duncan Chesley, Director of the Office of Information Technologies (OIT), responded to Clarinet's copyright notice. He contacted Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams who made the ultimate decision to terminate Hubberd's account on Labor Day Weekend.

"UMass gave me no information about Cyberlaw," said Hubbard, who claims she was unaware of the copyright. She says she used Clarinet twice.

"I think this is setting a very dangerous precedent ... if UMass can dictatorially wipe out someone's account," said Hubbard.

Doctress Neutopia

Although she cannot download or read her e-mail, "friends in Cyberspace" have allowed Hubbard to use asylum accounts in Indiana and Washington to post material.

"I think I'm becoming an outlaw in Cyberspace," Hubbard said.

Hubbard says she has been a "radical" on campus for at least ten years. She received a B.A. in Art and Utopia from the University Without Walls, and a M.A. in Future Studies from the School of

Turn to INTERNET, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Sept. 12

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, SC, TV Studio, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schutzel '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Meeting — Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Campus Center 904, 6 p.m.

Documentary — La Operacion, Documentary describes U.S. involvement in a mass sterilization campaign in Puerto Rico following World War II. The discussion will include population control as a tool of imperialism, and the U.S. occupation of the Puerto Rican nation. Sponsored by RAIL, the Alliance for Student Power and MIM. Campus Center, Room 904, 7 p.m.

GLB Info-Social — The LBGA will hold its first info–social. Activities for the semester will be discussed with a focus on the first LBGA sponsored dance, to happen later in the week. Campus Center, Room 803, 7 to 9 p.m.

Lecture — Gallery Talk: "Painting the Incorporeal in Nineteenth-Century America: Washington Alston's Saul and the Witch of Endor." Carol Clark, Fine Arts and American Studies, Amherst College. Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Meeting — Viva Council Meeting. Anyone interested in community service is invited to attend. Campus Center, Room 165–169, 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 13

Theater — Auditions: The King Stag, by Carlo Gozzi, translated and edited by Ellen Kaplan, SC, Theater 14, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, SC, Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater., 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schutzel '96, SC, TV Studio, 7–10 p.m.

Meeting — Korean Student Association's first general meeting. UACC Room, under Worcester D.C., all welcome, 7 p.m.

Panel — "Bosnia and the World: How to Stop the Killing." Frances Crowe, American Friends Service Committee; Michael Klare, Five College Peace and World Securities Studies (PAWSS); and Glenn Ruga, Friends of Bosnia. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Yoga and Meditation Seminar — Meet Dada Akilesh, yogic monk and social activist in a seminar on meditation and the spiritual life. Campus Center, Room 309, 7 p.m.

Fair — Volunteer Fair with 40 agencies recruiting volunteers and answering questions. Campus Center Concourse.

Thursday, Sept. 14

GLBT Lecture — The Return of Stonewall, speaker Lloyd Pratt, 545–4824, free and open to the public, 803 Campus Center, 12–1:30 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schutzel '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The King Stag, by Carlo Gozzi, translated and edited by Ellen Kaplan, SC, Theater 14, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Notices

Heating Oil Savings — the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative could help save money on home heating this winter. Contact the UMass Commuter Resource Center information, 545–1865, 428 Student Union.

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256–8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1 – Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co-op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or call 545-0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545-0137.

Special event — Ticket Sale: 21st Annual Multiband Pops, presented by UMass Department of Music and Dance. Mullins Center Box Office.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intranural Office at 545-0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696–7752

Campus Police Log

Drug Law offenses

Sept. 8

The odor of marijuana was investigated at John Q. Adams Residence Hall.

Sept. 9

There was a report of individuals smoking marijuana by Massachusetts Ave.

The odor of marijuana was investigated at Coolidge Residence Hall.

Jeffrey M. Brodeur, 18, of 20 Dolly Dr., Worcester, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

The odor of marijuana was investigated at Patterson Residence Hall.

Sept. 10

There was a report of an individual smoking marijuana in the Hatch.

Walter H. Ruasch, Jr., 21, of 8 Scott Dr., Manomet, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Harold A. Santiago, 23, of 324 Lincoln Ave., Amherst, was arrested for possesion of a Class D substance.

Liquor law violations

Sept. 8

Ian Bruce Kelley, 20, of 63 Fore Rd., Eliot, Maine, was arrested for possessing and procuring liquor as a minor.

Erik W. Waardenberg, 19, of 9 Tippling Rock Rd., Sutlbury, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

Christopher J. Hughes, 20, of 6 Newton Rd., Acton, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

Sept. 9

An individual on Stadium Dr. was summoned to a show–cause hearing.

Larceny

Sept. 8

There was a wallet, valued at $150, reported stolen from Coolidge Hall.

At the Textbook Annex, a wallet was reported lost/stolen.

There was a clipper extractor power brush used for carpet cleaning stolen from a storage room in the Campus Center. It was valued at $2,500.

Danielle N. Pettway, 19, of 1020 Grand Concourse, Bronx, New York, was arrested for shoplifting at the Textbook Annex by recording a false price value.

Injured Person

Sept. 8

An employee, apparently having a seizure, received a head injury. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by ambulance.

An individual passed out in a bathroom in Grayson Residence Hall. They refused medical treatment.

Sept. 9

Two individuals passed out in chairs outside of a room in Coolidge Residence Hall.

An individual passed out adjacent to Kennedy Residence Hall.

An 18–year–old individual passed out on the 21 floor of Washington Residence Hall — was placed in protective custody.

An individual passed out in a bathroom in Thoreau Hall. She was escorted to her room.

Burglary/Breaking & Entering

Sept. 8

There was a report of an individual breaking into a vehicle on University Drive. A search for the subject proved negative.

There was a wallet and Sega game reported stolen from a room in Gorman Residence Hall.

Accident/property damage

Sept. 8

An individual backed into a dumpster on Kennedy Dr., causing damage to his vehicle.

There was a two vehicle accident on Fearing Street. There were no injuries.

Annoying behavior

Sept. 8

An individual in Lewis Hall reported that threatening messages were left on her erase board.

Two males refused to leave a women's bathroom in Washington Hall.

Sept. 9

There was a report of objects being thrown from the fourth floor of Wheeler Residence Hall.

Assault

Sept. 8

Edward Joseph Johnson, 18, of 353 Main St., Middlefield, Conn., was arrested for domestic assault and battery.

Suspicious person/activity

Sept. 8

Two individuals were reported to be kicking windows in a lounge in John Adams Residence Hall.

Sept. 10

There was a report of individuals throwing chairs around outside of Hamden Residence Hall.

There was a report of individuals removing an item from the lawn of a private resident on McClure St.

Alarm

Sept. 9

A pot, left on a stove, caused smoke, which activated the detector in Chadborne Residence Hall.

There was a dryer fire in a laundry room in Wheeler Residence Hall.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

The Collegian Business Desk is looking for writers.

Anyone interested should come to the Collegian office and talk with Matt Wintzel

No prior experience is necessary

We Stayed Up Nights So You Won't Have To.

Keeping late hours? Cut through calculations and grasp concepts faster. Easy-to-use features. Perfectly matched to your coursework.

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center
545-2619

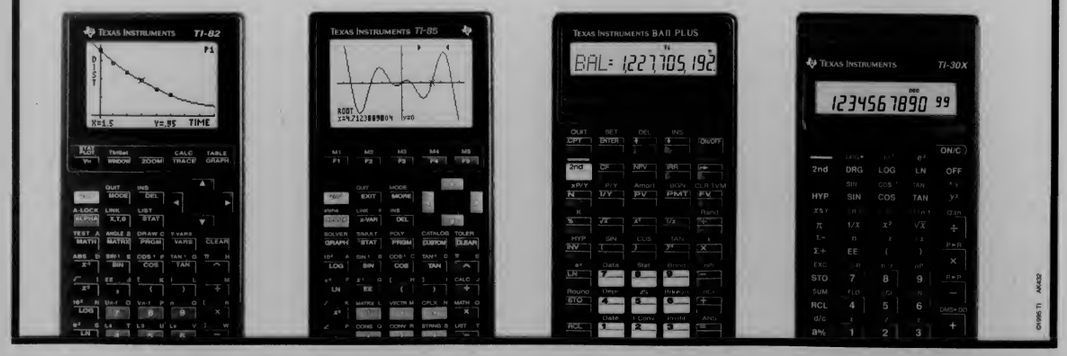
Hours:
Mon-Fri 9 am - 5 pm
Saturday 11 am - 3 pm

TI-82 A powerful, yet easy-to-use tool for drawing graphs, building tables, and performing data analysis. $89.99

TI-85 Our most powerful graphing calculator for advanced math, science, and engineering. $99.99

BA II PLUS™ Combines advanced financial and scientific functions in one easy-to-use calculator $37.99

TI-30X An easy-to-use calculator for general math, algebra, trigonometry, and statistics. $11.99



~ LOCAL NEWS ~

BSU looking to spark interest from campus

NATHAN E. MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Black Student Union Vice President Kola Olosunde, a junior biology major, stands in the BSU office in the Student Union.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The Black Student Union is entering a new era during which they hope to gain more campus recognition, according to incoming Vice-President Kola Olosunde.

Olosunde, a junior biology major, said that the driving force behind the BSU crusade for this school year is the reinvention of the organization.

One of the primary means by which the BSU is trying to spark interest from the campus community is their push to recruit first–year students.

Olosunde said that he and BSU President Daniel Lizana, who is also a junior, realized the need to ensure the stability of their organization for the years to come.

"We're making a big time freshman outreach," Olosunde said. "The BSU isn't getting any younger."

Public outreach

Another goal for the BSU is the erasure of their reputation as a "surreptitious secret society," Olosunde said.

An idea geared toward improving community relations is a proposed BSU–Black Mass Communications Project basketball game that would pit the two major African– American student organizations against each other.

At the event, Olosunde said, pamphlets and other information would be made available as part of the public outreach plan.

"Through that sort of social climate, we could foster more of a social climate in our respective organizations," he said.

Olosunde credited the "National State of the Race" Conference last November in Maryland with inspiring Lizana and him to expand the horizons of the BSU.

"The most important of all the influential people we met there were the other Black Student Unions from other schools," he said of the conferees who represented schools from Cornell University to Brigham Young University.

The conference proved so successful from Olosunde's perspective that although he knows it would be a huge undertaking, he said he would like to have the BSU invite fellow collegiate BSU's for a conference at UMass.

To accomplish such an event, Student Government Association funding would most likely be required, Olosunde said.

"I trust they will remain cooperative," he said. "We are acting in conjunction with their aims and the betterment of the student community."

Hillel/BSU relations

In its first meeting last week the BSU discussed several conferences and speakers that may be of interest in the coming year.

At the top of Olosunde's list is controversial academia Leonard Jeffries, who taught at City College of New York while Olosunde, then a high school senior, was privileged enough to take college courses after completing his graduation requirements early.

The probability of a Hall House protest of Jeffries, who has been labeled as anti–Semitic, is not a consideration unrecognized by Olosunde and the BSU.

In Black/Jewish Relations Committee meetings last semester, the views of African–American and Jewish students were aired in a non–debate format, which Olosunde sees as being vital to helping the communities negotiate in heated situations.

Prof cites students as reason for award

By Tracy Geekie
Collegian Correspondent

The poignant dedication in the textbook written by Professor Fergus M. Clydesdale is a clear indication of the commitment he has made to his students.

In the ten years since the text was first published, many students have read the lines, "To my students/past, present, and future/who not only make it possible,/but make it worthwhile."

Even today, this dedication holds true. Clydesdale said he reveres his students as a motivating factor in his teaching. For this reason, Clydesdale said his students deserve credit for his winning the Carl R. Fellers Award.

At a ceremony this summer in Anaheim, CA, Clydesdale accepted the Carl R. Fellers Award from the Institute of Food Technologists (IFT).

"Any award I've ever received, it's the students who make it possible," he said. "It's a team effort."

The award, named after a former University of Massachusetts Food and Science department head, recognizes Clydesdale for his extensive involvement in educating the public about food science and technology, as well as his contribution to developing U.S. food and nutrition policy.

Clydesdale was nominated by retired professor emeritus, Dr. F.J. Francis. Eligibility is based on an IFT member's dedication to the field and through that member's efforts to bring honor and recognition to the field of Food Science and Technology. There are currently 28,000 IFT members.

Brian Deroover, a second–year graduate student in Food Science, attended the awards convocation. Derouier, who was presenting a research paper, said he felt proud to see Clydesdale win the award.

"When he received it at the annual meeting, it was very prestigious," he said. "[The event] was very well attended."

Clydesdale was presented with a $3,000 check and an engraved plaque for his achievement.

The Carl. R. Fellers Award is the latest addition to Clydesdale's list of accomplishments, which he has amassed into an eight–page resume.

Among his achievements are winning the coveted IFT Nicholas Appert Award, being selected Plenary Speaker at the IFT's 50th Anniversary meeting, and being elected President of Phi Tau Sigma, the National Food Science Honors Society in 1992.

Also, he has more than 600 appearances over the last 22 years, and has published 250 scientific articles and eight books.

In addition to maintaining his position as department head for Food and Science, Clydesdale is also appointed to the Food and Nutrition Board of the Institute of Medicine for the National Academy of Sciences through 1997, and is an acting member of the Food Advisory Committee of the Food and Drug Administration through 1998.

GLB organization reaches out

Coordinator hopes Speaker's Bureau connects with students

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Unlike most people coming to a new job, Jennifer Fasulo knows what to expect from her new position, in this case as coordinator of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Speaker's Bureau at the University of Massachusetts.

"I feel really happy and excited about the position because I've been on the Speaker's Bureau for the last two years," says Fasulo, who is working on a Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration in "Creativity in Political Education."

The GLB Speaker's Bureau was founded ten years ago to educate the local community about gay, lesbian and bisexual people. Coordinated through the Stonewall Center, the Bureau is made up of a group of volunteers — GLB and heterosexual allies — who travel around campus and the local area sharing their individual experiences.

In a typical Speaker's Bureau, a panel of three or four Bureau members appears before a group. Each members then tells a personal story about his or her life as a gay man, lesbian, bisexual, or heterosexual ally.

"I always wanted to do the Speaker's Bureau," says Fasulo, who joined two years ago in order to share her experiences as a lesbian.

Speaking in front of group of strangers is not something Fasulo finds easy, but it is an action with great personal significance.

"I think about my own experience when I was in college my first year," she says. "I didn't have any exposure to anything gay or lesbian."

Reaching those in need

According to Fasulo, many college students come to the University either knowing they are gay, lesbian or bisexual or questioning their sexual orientation. For these students, hearing the words of a Bureau member may provide valuable information, role models, and connections to the local GLB community.

Fasulo also considers the Bureau to be a primary tool for reaching heterosexual students who may never have met gay, lesbian or bisexual people or who have questions about GLB issues. She sees the Bureau working to "break down some of the distance between straight and queer students and answer questions."

"I think that despite the fact that we have the [Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance] and the Stonewall Center, there's still a real issue of invisibility for gay students," says Fasulo. "There becomes this ghettoization of GLB people because it's not safe to be out in the general campus scene.

Story–telling helps to stop this ghettoization, Fasulo says, noting that the Bureau is "not preaching about issues or talking in abstract terms," but rather presenting first–person accounts of gay, lesbian and bisexual life.

"According to Fasulo, many college students come to the University either knowing they are gay, lesbian or bisexual or questioning their sexual orientation. For these students, hearing the words of a Bureau member may provide valuable information, role models and connections to the local GLB community."

After the personal stories have come to a close, the Bureau switches to a question and answer session. Members answer these questions based on their personal experience and try to avoid speaking on behalf of the entire gay, lesbian, bisexual community, says Fasulo.

Students or local community members who would like to join the Speaker's Bureau are encouraged to contact the UMass Stonewall Center, formerly the Program for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Concerns.

After attending a three–hour training session, new members are expected to attend monthly meetings and schedule their Bureau appearances in advance. The next member training session is September 19, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Stonewall Center.

Classroom instructors, resident assistants, or community group leaders who would like to have the Bureau come and visit are also asked to contact the Stonewall Center.

■ Copyright issues at center of dispute

INTERNET, continued from page 1

Education. This past February, she completed a doctorate in Education. She describes herself as an unemployed poet, scholar and educator.

Doctress Neutopia had a guest Internet account, but was not officially affiliated with the University. Chesley said that guest accounts are a "way for faculty to have collaborators who are not necessarily on payroll."

According to Newsweek, Nov. 28, 1994, Hubbard was using her research account to start an Internet religion from her e–mail account. She was electronically distributing her doctoral dissertation "Gaia, The Planetary Religion: The Sacred Marriage of Art and Science."

Hubbard said she took her Internet alias from John Lennon and Yoko Ono's "Mindgames," which uses the word "nutopia." To avoid the word "nut" in "nutopia," Hubbard added the letter "e."

The crime

On Sept. 2, when Chesley wrote to Hubbard through an asylum account he sent her Clarinet's copyright notice which he said "appears frequently at the bottom of Clarinet articles."

When contacted for this article, Chesley said that about "one in ten" articles have some sort of warning.

"On the particular notice I am reading, I don't see a copyright notice either," said Chesley. "But you don't put a copyright notice on every page of a book."

The articles were about the women's conferences in China.

"By posting the article, all I thought I was doing was spreading the word about the conference for the good of the world," Hubbard wrote in a letter to Clarinet.

"Stupd me was under the impression that Clarinet was public domain and that anarchy ruled the Internet," she wrote to Clarinet. "Now that I have reached the Powers of the Internet, I realized that information "does not want to be free" and that teachers do not have the right to distribution [sic] articles from Clarinet even for educational purposes."

"Now I feel like weeping," she wrote in another piece of e–mail, "not so much for my account–but for our global oppression."

"By going up against the Copyright Law, I was going up against the Capitalist system," wrote Hubbard in an e–mail letter to Glen Stegner, an OIT programmer.

"We posted a notice for her so that it was clear that it wasn't just accidental," said Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams.

Williams says the administration offered to transfer Hubbard's files if she was to get a commercial account. The Doctress says OIT has given her three weeks to transfer the information.

THANG YU / COLLEGIAN

Doctress Neutopia, recently kicked off the Internet by the University, poses in a campus computer lab.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
100 Free Comic bags with any new subcription
FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS GET UP TO 20% OFF NEW COMICS
Inner Sanctum Comics

Inner Sanctum Comics & Games
178 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-0147

Best in the Valley!

Voted #1 Coffee in the Valley!
103 North Pleasant Street • Amherst

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1582

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager James P. Gainley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Daymon Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Thomas F. Sweeny, Jr Graphics Advisor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Herman Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connor News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Justice came too late

On Thursday, Sept. 7, the decision became final. As the Boston Globe worded it on the front page of their Friday edition, "in a choked and barely audible voice, Oregon Senator Bob Packwood faced the reality of his impending expulsion and told his colleagues on the Senate floor yesterday that he would leave office after having served for 26 years."

In attempting to formulate an intelligent response to this long-overdue decision, all I can bring myself to say is: It is about time.

The New York Times reported that the committee of Kentucky Republican Senator McConnell had been investigating the Packwood case for 33 months.

For almost three years? How about three years too many.

To be accused of any form of sexual harassment and sexual misconduct deserves immediate, serious attention and investigation.

Although the Senate Ethics Committee recognized that this case deserved attention, the investigation was lost somewhere during this three year period. As Washington reinforced its stereotype of being corrupt and crooked, 17 women, maybe more, wondered if justice would ever be served.

To be accused of any form of sexual harassment and sexual misconduct deserves immediate, serious attention and investigation.

Laura Schmidt

The Boston Herald printed part of the testimony of Julie Williamson, a woman who at one time worked in Packwood's Oregon office. It read: "Senator Packwood caught me and I was trying to get away and to kick him in the shins. He stood on my feet, grabbed my ponytail and pulled my head back so he could kiss me."

When he was first confronted with testimony such as this, Packwood weakly attempted to save himself by making such remarks as "those were merely stolen kisses."

The last time I checked, a "stolen kiss" was an innocent display of affection which both parties involved agreed upon. But, Williamson's testimony clearly displayed that she definitely was not a willing participant in Packwood's idea of fun and harmless play.

Is this any way for a senator to behave?

Granted these excerpts from his diaries were the former senator's private words about his actions, but these private thoughts, were far from the way a senator, it seems, should behave.

The Boston Herald also published an August, 1990 diary entry of Packwood's. This entry involved one of his staff workers. Packwood wrote, "she does well, but is happily married, and as I've often said, happy housewives don't change the world."

So, if this "happy housewife" had been single, thus accepting Packwood's advances, she would have, as Packwood put it "changed the world?"

I don't think so.

It is difficult for me to comprehend that this case took approximately three years to arrive at some kind of concrete decision. Nevertheless, I felt relieved to have finally discovered that a representative of the United States Senate, a representative of America, and of other citizens, behaved in such an unprofessional manner.

It isn't so ironic after all that Senator Packwood, during his 27-year career, represented everything America swore it would never tolerate.

The doctor in "Forrest Gump" said it best when he told Forrest that his back was "as crooked as a Politician."

For anyone who hasn't seen the movie for some reason, the main character's back was so crooked he needed leg braces to straighten it.

All the leg braces in the world would probably still never be able to straighten the crooked world of Washington.

Laura Schmidt is a Collegian staff member

UMass's leadership crisis

When Michael Hooker began his term as President of UMass in 1992, he made a commitment to stay for at least 10 years so he could "lead the University into the 21 century, and restore its reputation as a world class institution of higher learning." Now after only three years, he has broken his pledge and left to become the chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His departure means that for the fourth time in five years, UMass is looking for a new president to advocate the needs of the five campus system to legislators and elected leaders on Beacon Hill.

UMass is now the second most expensive public University in the country, and inaccessible to many of the poor, working and middle class families it is supposed to serve.

Ted Chambers

The fate of the last few UMass presidents can be summed up in a parable. In this story the president is "Sir Galahad Ph.D.," the champion of hundreds of thousands of citizens, who are struggling to improve their lives with the assistance of public higher education. One day our knight leaves the the comfort of his plush office at 18 Tremont Street, and sets out on a daring quest for treasure to enrich his impoverished kingdom. During the course of his journey, he faces many difficult challenges, but eventually he reaches his destination: the Fortress of Darkness (also known as the State House).

Standing before the drawbridge that leads into the fortress, our hero can see piles of treasure sitting unguarded just inside the open doors on the other side. All he needs to do, or so he thinks, is rush across the drawbridge, grab a few bags of loot and be off. But alas, our champion must overcome one last challenge. The moat that surrounds the castle is actually a bottomless pit, which represents the cavernous intellectual divide that separates academia from politics in the state of Massachusetts. The drawbridge that spans it will support our hero only if he can heed the warning that is posted on a sign in front of it which reads: "Only humble men may pass If you believe in your heart that you are smarter than everyone else, the bridge will crumble beneath your feet."

Unable to take this warning to heart, Sir Galahad, Ph.D. rushes boldly forward and plummets into the abyss of Massachusetts politics, leaving the University and the thousands of families its serves without a voice on Beacon Hill.

Over the last few months supporters of Senate President William Bulger have lobbied the UMass Board of Trustees to appoint him as Michael Hooker's permanent successor. Whether or not they will appoint him is unclear at this point, but the fact that the possibility is being seriously considered underscores an important point. Despite the best efforts of the last few UMass Presidents, the University still lacks high profile status that other state universities, such as Berkeley or the University of Michigan, enjoy with the citizens and elected leaders of their respective states.

Though this is true for a number of reasons, the University itself is partially to blame for this problem. In the search for the last three Presidents, the Board of Trustees has not emphasized political experience and temperament as criteria for selecting finalists for the position. Instead the debate has centered around picking someone with world-class academic credentials, which they believe are important if UMass hopes to maintain its strong academic reputation. As a result, they have picked academics who have made virtually no impact on the state legislature. Which comes as no surprise considering that few academics manage to acquire the skills and temperament necessary to survive the rigors of Massachusetts politics during their tenure as faculty or administrators.

On the surface, it would seem that Michael Hooker had rewritten this story. After all, the University received substantial increases in funding from the state legislature during his brief stay. But scores of students, parents, faculty and alumni who have lobbied aggressively for UMass in recent years know that, if anything, our new found support on Beacon Hill has happened in spite of Michael Hooker, not because of him. During his tenure he has consistently antagonized legislators, many of whom view him as arrogant and condescending. His attitude and Ph.D. in philosophy have earned him the nickname "Philosopher King."

UMass is now the second most expensive public University in the country, and inaccessible to many of the poor, working and middle class families it is supposed to serve. If the Board of Trustees is genuinely concerned with reversing this trend, they should keep in mind that Massachusetts is the "Big Leagues" when it comes to state politics. If "world class" academic credentials are their No. 1 criteria then the next President will be doomed to fail. To succeed he will have to be the academic equivalent of Bo Jackson, capable of competing in two distinctly different professions simultaneously.

Regardless of whether Bill Bulger applies for the position, the Board of Trustees should forego the list of traditional candidates, the professional academic/administrators who will use the position as a stepping stone to advance their own careers. Instead they should find someone firmly committed to the mission of public higher education, who also has the political skills to make UMass a world-class University that is accessible to every citizen of Massachusetts.

Ted Chambers is a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance.

If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oitums.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

NOT-SO-WELL-REGULATED MiLiTiA
THE GOVERNMENT KNEW YEARS AGO A TRUCK BOMB WOULD EXPLODE ON THAT STREET AND DELIBERATELY BUILT A FEDERAL OFFICE BUILDING ADJACENT TO IT TO INTERFERE WITH THE EXPLOSION...
Fertilizer
IDEAS
SHORT WAVE
Theory #2743
TOILS
...AND THIS MAY GET ME A SPOT ON THE OJ DEFENSE TEAM

Still trying to quit

I returned to school this semester with a rather lofty goal in mind, and no I don't mean getting a 4.0. While a 4.0 sure would be nice, I have decided to set that dream aside and first conquer my nasty smoking habit.

I told myself all summer long that I was going to quit before school started. Well that didn't happen and now I'm a little angry with myself. So the time has arrived to break through the cloud of smoke and drop this habit for good.

Quitting smoking, for anyone who has never tried this shoe on, is no tiptoe through the tulips. There's always someone else around who smokes and all it takes is one whiff of Philip Morris' finest and you'll be begging for a drag, if not a whole cigarette.

Andrew Trodden

Then there's no longer the after dinner cigarette, it has gone the way of the dinosaur. Now we have the after dinner nic fit. Oh! What a joyous ride this is. Throughout the duration of a nic fit I personally become about as fidgety as a six-year old doing a stunning rendition of the pee pee dance. The only difference here lies with the fact that the dryness of my shorts does not depend on how good at fidgeting I am.

I find that the best way to get through a nic fit is by utilizing one of man's simple inventions, a nice juicy piece of gum. I figure if I pop a piece of gum in my mouth and chew it until it reaches the consistency of cardboard then I've just knocked at least an hour or two off of quitting time.

I don't consider this a full-proof plan though, considering I usually end up caving in and going on a scavenger hunt with one goal in mind, to find, and thoroughly smoke a cigarette.

When that cigarette is all you're going to have for at least the next few hours you make sure there's not a speck of tobacco left on the end of that extinguished nub. If there is any left, well then hell, go ahead and re-light that baby. Come on, let's be honest here, we all know in a late night nic fit we've dug through an ashtray looking for that butt that ten hours ago we put out with a quarter inch of pure happiness left.

Disgusting? Yes, very much so.

Let's quickly take a look at some of the drawbacks to smoking. There's lung cancer, heart disease, high blood pressure, yellow teeth and the hole burned in your wallet from buying a pack a day. Then there's the carbon monoxide which, if I'm not mistaken, is one of the ingredients in automobile exhaust.

So there you have it, next time you're in dire need of a cigarette just wrap your lips around the tailpipe of a car and take a few deep breaths, that ought to take the edge off a little.

Now since we've bolstered the case for the negatives it seems only fair that we give the benefits a shot to have their say. Let's see there's... hmm... well, does anybody else hear those crickets?

There are no benefits, case closed.

Now I know all you Marlboro smokers will say you can get free stuff from Marlboro miles. Well, I haven't seen a lung transplant or chemotherapy anywhere on that list of goodies yet, which probably just means that your free stuff has a good chance of outlasting you.

I know, I know, "hello kettle, this is pot, you're black." Yes, I too have driven the numerous miles of Marlboro country, and what did it get me? Well... it sure did get me a nice watch, and a fine leather wallet, but that's beside the point.

What smoking got me was lungs full of smoke, yellow teeth, hair and clothes that reek of smoke, and a bank account that has gone south for the winter. However, I am quite certain what time it is, yippee.

A friend of mine once said, "kissing someone who smokes is like licking an ashtray." Yowza! I never quite looked at it that way before, but to be thought of as a human ashtray sure does put it in a different perspective. The thought of actually pressing my tongue to an ashtray and licking it is quite revolting, to say the least. I'm getting a case of the willies just thinking about that horrific act. Here's to my friend for pointing out that simile and making it that much easier for me to think of reasons why I should quit, other than the numerous health benefits of course.

Smoking is an addiction, there is no doubt about that. It is unfortunately a very unhealthy addiction. I feel that I do not get any major benefits out of smoking and therefore it is really time to stop completely.

I have been trying my hand at quitting for about a week now, with the occasional nic fit cave in, of course. I have certainly made great progress compared to the smokefest I had this summer. I would be willing to wager that I no longer am a human ashtray. Unfortunately, thanks to my quitting method, I am now the human gumball machine, and yes I do know where I can put that quarter.

Andrew Trodden is Collegian columnist.

Anonymous heroes

I've always dreamed of being a hero, the one who scoops up a child from the street just in time to avoid the speeding van. I've always wished I could be present when a skater falls through thin ice, so that I might be the one who jumps in and saves the day. I've always wanted to be the home run hitter, answering the cheers of thousands of adoring fans. You know, like Mickey Mantle.

Mark McGrath

Mickey Mantle was a hero to a whole generation of baseball fans. He had it all, power, speed and charisma. He was greatness personified, and it was only through his tragic story that I became aware of another type of hero.

When Mickey became ill this past summer, it was revealed that only a liver transplant would save his life. He was in such poor shape that it was no longer functional. Before long, a suitable donor was found and Mickey received a new liver and a new life. We all know that his new life wasn't a long one, but it had a shot and had his cancer not spread, he could still be with us right now.

Somewhere in that story was hidden a hero, and he wasn't a baseball player, or maybe he was. The thing about this hero is that we don't know anything about him, save for the fact that his liver kept our traditional hero alive and that his heart, lungs, pancreas and kidneys are keeping others alive all over the country. Often forgotten in stories like this are the real heroes, the ones who make extra life possible. They give of themselves, literally, so that others can live through their death. They are heroes in the true meaning of the word.

Last March in Arkansas, a 15-year-old boy named Christopher Colin was hit by a car and died shortly afterwards. His organs, though, are still functional and keeping six other people alive. That alone would make Christopher a hero, but his contribution was more than that. Doctors transplanted his cornea into the eye of a woman who had been blind for 13 years. That woman regained her sight and was able to see her children grown for the first time, all of them except Christopher, who by his death had given his mother the precious gift of sight.

There are 20,000 patients in this country who are waiting desperately for organs. The demand is so high when compared to supply that only a small percentage get the transplants they need.

People have reservations about donating organs because on the outside there doesn't seem to be any reward. Since the National Transplantation Act was passed in 1984, all buying and selling of organs is completely illegal. An organ donation must be just that, a donation. Otherwise, I have reason to believe we as students would be single-kidneyed, having sold our other to pay for our education.

The kidney, which was the first organ to be transplanted with much success is the only organ which may be given by a live donor. This is possible because the body, equipped with a pair, only needs one to survive. In most cases when a live donor is used, the recipient is a family member in need of a good match. I'd truly admire a live donor who'd give a kidney to a complete stranger, but wouldn't recommend doing that.

To be a donor you must be between the ages of six months and 65 years. You must have died at the hospital and from a cause not directly related to the organ in question. If, when you die, you have a signed organ donor card on your person, the doctor may have organs removed immediately upon pronunciation of death.

Otherwise, the doctors must obtain permission from your immediate family, which tends to take some time, precious in a situation where dying organs are concerned. That's why it's important for you to have an organ donor card. Every year in this country countless organs are wasted because doctors can't take necessary steps quickly. In Europe, there is a principle called presumed consent. Only in cases where the deceased has proof of disapproval must the family be asked for permission. This tends to give doctors more time and more organs to work with.

In the past few years, transplantation has made great strides. Hearts, livers and kidneys are transplanted with a success rate of about 85 percent each. Even so, there is still a great demand and donors will always be heroes.

A whole generation of baseball fans had a hero in Mickey Mantle. As his story unfolded, I realized how confused much of society, myself included was in our notion of heroes. Being a hero isn't a matter of chance or destiny. It's a matter of choice, and as was proven to us by an anonymous donor, it doesn't take a lot to be one.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

~ MUSIC ~

Put listening cap on for this week's new releases

Debut from Liquorice is sweet, Unrest relives greatest hits & latest from Garbage stinks

LIQUORICE
Listening Cap
4AD

Indie rock heaven on a little shiny disc! Featuring members of Tsunami, Ida and His Name Is Alive, Liquorice is a mere side-project for its busy members. But you would never know as this disc has some of the most well crafted, intricate and beautiful pop songs of the year.

Several years ago Jenny Toomey and Dan Littleton recorded together off and on and named the band Slack, probably after their laid back attitude. Since then Toomey has gone on to fame with her bands Tsunami and Grenadine, while Littleton has been keeping busy with his own band, Ida.

Last year they reunited to record as Liquorice with the assistance of Trey Many of His Name Is Alive on drums. Their sound is less raw than their days as Slack, but they make up for it with stunningly beautiful melodies that are so rare these days.

At times the band crosses into the easy listening genre, which is not surprising if you have heard Littleton's work with Ida. "Breaking the Ice," the only song that Littleton sings lead vocals, would sound perfect on any Adult Alternative radio station.

Toomey sings lead vocals on all the other songs and unlike in Tsunami we can actually hear her voice. The highlight of the album is the band's cover of Franklin Bruno's "Keeping the Weekend Free" which features an amazing duet between Toomey and Littleton.

Unfortunately, Liquorice is only a one time side project but this album sheds new light on the talent of two of indie rock's most gifted performers. Let's hope Toomey and Littleton decide to record again soon. A- (Mike Burke)

UNREST
B.P.M.
Teenbeat/Matador Records

Should be R.I.P., since this posthumous "greatest hits" collection is more of nostalgic look back at Unrest's talent for writing minimalistic, yet catchy pop songs than anything else.

TRAX ON TRAX OFF

Although a collection like this seems more like a nod to ex-Unrest guitarist/singer Mark Robinson's ego (now the leader of Air Miami), B.P.M. more than does its job in securing the band's place in the annals of pop history.

Most of the songs here have already appeared somewhere along the line in Unrest's history, but collected here for the first time (and many of the tracks have been remixed) the songs shine even brighter than before.

Hits such as "Cath Carroll" and "Imperial" have been remixed beyond recognition, while other tracks such as "June" and "So So Sick" appear in either normal or acoustic form. But the real treat here is the bouncy, '60s-ish nuggets "When It All Comes Down," Bavarian Mods" and "New London!" that are so joyously infectious that you can't help but wish that Robinson and Co. headed further in this direction.

Whether the band is actually worthy of this greatest hits treatment or not is still up in the air, but B.P.M. is still probably the finest release that Unrest has put out — all hits, no extraneous garbage. A- (Matt Audette)

COURTESY LIQUORICE

Listening Cap

JENNIFER TRYNIN
Cockamamie
Warner Brothers

The Boston area rock scene has produced yet another new artist to boast about. The new release from solo artist Jennifer Trynin, Cockamamie, is a solid major label debut from an artist who has earned the recognition she is starting to receive. The beauty is that Trynin holds simply struts a rough yet delicate edge of guitar oriented rock.

Pop at times, ground-breaking alternative at others,

turn to RELEASES page 7

Fall book list features new titles, best–selling authors

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

New books out this fall include novels by best–selling author Sue Grafton, folk–singer Judy Collins, a posthumous work by Albert Camus and even a sequel to Forrest Gump.

Sue Grafton's latest, L Is For Lawless, stars detective Kinsey Milhone. Kinsey begins what's supposed to be an easy week and then turns into a chilling adventure with Kinsey trapped with an ex–con, a desperate pregnant woman, a pistol–packing psychopath and a baseball bat wielding octogenarian! As usual, Kinsey survives using her wit, cunning and courage.

Grafton has authored 12 books in the Kinsey Milhone series and has sold over 14.5 million books in the U.S. alone. She plans on writing more books in the series until she reaches the letter 'Z' which, according to her publisher will take until the year 2015.

On January 4, 1960, Albert Camus, the great French novelist and winner of the Nobel Prize in Literature, was killed in a tragic automobile accident. Discovered in the wreckage at the time was a handwritten manuscript that Camus intended to turn into his own version of War And Peace. Following Camus' death, his family withheld publication, fearing harsh criticism from Camus's enemies. Thirty–four years later, the book was finally published in France under the title, The First Man, to extraordinary acclaim and the novel sold over 300,000 copies. The book is now published in the U.S. by Camus' longtime publisher, Alfred A. Knof, and in 27 other countries around the world.

Booklist calls the publishing of The First Man, "A genuine literary event. The distinctive rhythm of Camus' language is here, as is his deep understanding of life. It provides a beautiful testament to the human capacity to learn and to rejoice in life in spite of the circumstances of one's birth."

The 50th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima took place this past August. In a new and stunning book from Alfred A. Knopf, author Gar Alperovitz reveals The Decision To Use The Atomic Bomb. According to Alperovitz, who spent five years investigating the incident, President Harry S. Truman was fully aware that Japan was seeking peace at the time he ordered the 1945 bombing. Other information revealed in the book includes an all-out effort by several top Navy officials (most probably including Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal) to end the war without using the bomb. Also, the book demonstrates in detail that Hiroshima and Nagasaki were not targeted because of their military or industrial importance, but rather to make a huge psychological impact by destroying large number of civilians. Alperovitz puts holes in the traditional story told over the last five decades that the only way to end the war was to use the atomic bomb. Written meticulously and well-researched, the book sheds light on a decision that changed the lives of millions of people forever.

Judy Collins' debut novel, Shameless, takes readers inside the world of music industry through rock photojournalist Catherine Saint. Catherine is at the peak of her career; her own fame sometimes eclipses that of her young rock subject. Her life is smooth, steady, comfortable; the secrets of years past and the pain that accompanied them are neatly buried. She is still haunted by vivid dreams and still struggles with the memories of a former psychiatrist who torments her. Her glamorous lifestyle keeps her busy and fulfilled, but Catherine's life is suddenly shattered when her new assistant is viciously attacked and she realizes someone is trying to kill her. The menacing forces in her life begin to close in, leaving her with no alternative

Turn to BOOKS, page 7

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

Literary auction draws in writers, autographs, cash

By Martha Waggoner
Associated Press

The librarian of Congress emeritus contributed a bow tie. Humor columnist Dave Barry sent anti-gas medicine. And a few authors even chipped in with autographed books for an auction celebrating the 10th anniversary of The Writers' Workshop.

The Sept. 16 event at the Radisson Hotel in Asheville, N.C., is billed as "the most amazing literary auction ever."

It will include books from the popular (Scott Turow, who sent an autographed copy of Presumed Innocent) to the seriously literary (John Barth, who sent a 1967 copy of The Sot-Weed Factor) to the irreverent (Barry, who sent a copy of A Guide to Boys and Beano Drops, an anti-gas medicine).

Workshop volunteer Bett Sanders sent letters to 237 authors asking for an autographed book and a personal item. "I was a little embarrassed to ask that," says Sanders, a psychologist in real life.

She wrote to her favorite authors, then asked friends for their recommendations. She even wrote to the reclusive J.D. Salinger, author of Catcher in the Rye.

"I thought, what the heck?" Sanders says. "I'll give him something to get angry about."

Needless to say, he hasn't responded. Surprisingly, John Updike did. He sent paperback copies of Of the Farm and The Centaur. Each contains an inscription "To some good friend of The Writers' Workshop."

Karen Tager, president of the workshop, says she was surprised to hear from Updike. "He just never is around," she says. "He's just a recluse."

She thinks one reason for the good response is the organization's simple approach, including Sanders' one-page letter.

"People are intrigued ... because we're a small, independent organization, and some writers find that interesting," she says.

"They've been to huge things where people just throw money at them, but they get put through the wringer."

The Writers' Workshop, based in Asheville, has about 1,000 members. Most are from the southeastern United States, but some are from the rest of the country and abroad.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

Your entryway into the University and the future

- Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
- Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
- Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
- Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register now for Fall classes.

Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: continued@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

EVERYONE WILL GIVE YOU THEIR TWO CENTS WORTH, BUT WILL THAT BE ENOUGH TO RETIRE ON?

Today there seems to be an investment expert or financial advisor almost everywhere you turn. But just how qualified are all these experts?

Peace of mind about your future comes from solid planning. From investments and services designed and managed with your needs and retirement security specifically in mind. The kind of investments and services TIAA-CREF has been providing for more than 75 years.

WE'LL HELP YOU BUILD A REWARDING RETIREMENT.

Our counselors are trained retirement professionals who have only you and your future in mind. So you're treated as the unique person you are, with special needs and concerns about retirement. And that makes for an understanding, comfortable relationship.

With TIAA-CREF, you have plenty of choice and flexibility in building your retirement nest egg – from TIAA's guaranteed traditional annuity to the investment opportunities of CREF's seven variable annuity accounts. And we're nonprofit, so our expense charges are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries* That means more of your money is where it should be – working for you.

TIAA-CREF is now the largest private pension system in the world, based on assets under management – managing more than $145 billion in assets for more than one and a half million people throughout the nation.

TIAA-CREF: THE CHOICE THAT MAKES SENSE.

It's tough to wade through all the "advice" to find a reliable pension plan provider. But as a member of the education and research community, your best choice is simple: TIAA-CREF. Because when it comes to helping you prepare for retirement, our annuities will add up to more than spare change.

For more information about how TIAA-CREF can help you prepare for the future, call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1995 (Upper Medium Grade). Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper Directory Analytical Data, 1995 (Quarterly). TIAA-CREF rankings are determined by TIAA-CREF individual and institutional investors.

©1995 The Trustees of Columbia University in the City of New York/College Retirement Equities Fund

Lasts longer than most diets.

Longer than some relationships.

Longer than any check from home.

Soft & Dri® Solid anti-perspirant is powerful protection against odor and wetness in a time-release formula that lasts and lasts and lasts.

The most important thing you put on.

■ releases

continued from page 5

Cockamamie rejects any notion of sounding like grunge, punk, pseudo-'80s or any other new form of catchy pop. Instead, this album pushes beyond all those traps into a realm of new and undiscovered boundaries.

Trynin has been around for a while, at 31 she isn't a rookie in the music world. But this is her debut major label album, so like many debut solo albums, it is deep and vividly real. At times influences of Joni Mitchell can be heard, while at other times an energy and sweetness that rivals local rockers Letters to Cleo.

Trynin's way looks for refreshment and liberation. She adds a new slice to not only the alternative rock scene, but to all the new intriguing female solo artists. Sometimes there's nothing better than just sitting down and listening to a sensitive and warm woman belt her blues away. This album is filled with deep feelings based on personal experience.

"Better than Nothing," was the widely successful summer single that propelled Trynin into the mainstream's attention. The song's simplicity is the archetype that Trynin uses to bring her rock to the forefront.

Distorted guitar chords puts the passion into the fire. Slinging the songs through with hard-edged guitar effectively cross-cuts the pain and emotion felt with every delicate verse. Pouring out of this cross section is a true spirited lively display of music. An impressive release. B+ (Rob Stevens)

GARBAGE
Garbage
Almo Sounds/Geffen Records

Sure this band has Nevermind and Siamese Dream producer Butch Vig on drums and it seems that every review written about this quartet's debut has talked about him being in the band. But despite the layered production that will undoubtedly make a live reproduction virtually impossible, Garbage has hidden some genuinely good hooks beneath all the samples and vocal loops.

Ex-Angelfish singer Shirley Manson provides the vocals, but ultimately, they blend with the other loops and guitar to dig their way into your psyche and practically force you to groove.

Groove is just what songs like "Queer" and "Stroke of Luck" do, combining what can only be described as dance party drum sounds with a more mellow My Bloody Valentine guitar layering.

"Supervixen," "Only Happy When It Rains" and the first single, "Vow" have the noise factor one would expect if you put two experienced sound engineers (Vig and guitarist Steve Marker) in a room and let them produce themselves silly, but also have the guitar licks to back them up.

With 11 tracks, however, there is always the chance for some missteps. "As Heaven Is Wide" actually boasts techno- drums, a Pumpkins-esque growly bass, vocal reverb effects and different pitched telephone rings in its résumé, while throughout the entire disc, the drums rarely sound like drums.

COURTESY CAREACE

Garbage

Whether or not this band can progress to achieve popularity on the basis of its music and not on Vig's name remains to be seen, but for now Garbage is a release with some promise. C+ (Mike MacLean)

ELEVEN
Thunk
Hollywood Records

Eleven's notoriety has generally been due to drummer Jack Irons' past time with the Red Hot Chili Peppers and ongoing affinity with Seattle megastars Pearl Jam. Now with Irons officially gone to Pearl Jam, the focus of Eleven is on the music.

On Thunk, the band's third album, Natasha Shneider and Alain Johannes re-establish their musical partnership while expanding their pop quirkiness to greater depths.

Beatle-esque melodies, Shneider's organ accompaniment, Johannes' jaded guitar work and their duets are still the dominating ingredients yet they have substantially toughened up from their previous efforts.

"Nature Wants to Kill Me" and "Kneeling on One Knee," for instance, have an underlying power that never loses the cerebral musicality the band is known for, while "Coming Down" and "Damned" take would-be ballads into more epic proportions.

Irons is still prominent on the album, making more of an impression than ever, as Matt Cameron does worthy as a temp, Soundgarden-izing four songs.

At times, Thunk gets close to being arena rock but it has enough emotion and progressive sense to break away from such a generalization. B- (Wayken Shaw)

COURTESY RANDEE ST. NICHOLAS

Eleven's latest album Thunk brings the group back to the basics.

~P.A.D. ~

Performing Arts Division opens season

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Performing Arts Division begins its season with a music and poetry reading on Friday, September 15 at 12 p.m. at the Old Chapel. The event will feature poet Frederick Tillis and guitarist Peter Orphanos in the Seminar Room.

Tillis, Associate Chancellor of the University of Massachusetts and director of the Fine Arts Center, is a widely known composer and saxophonist. He is also the author of five book books of poetry. His poems, according to The Small Press Book Review "are universal expressions and images of the themes, aspirations and ideas relating to life."

Celebration, humor, trials and tribulations are themes that mark the mood of his newest publication, Harlem Echoes.

Orphanos, a faculty member in the Performing Arts Division, is an accomplished composer also. His music blends together traditional and contemporary aspects of music and explores the full resonance and beauty of the guitar.

On Saturday, September 16, the PAD presents New England storyteller John Porcino at the Jones Library, located on Amity Street in Amherst. There will be a morning workshop for adults from 9:30 a.m. - 11:00 a.m. and a performance for both children and adults will be presented at 1:30 p.m.

Porcino, who performs extensively along the east coast, tells his stories with humor and often accompanies the tales with singing and music. Porcino most recently appeared at the Barbados storytelling festival.

On Monday, September 18, Melissa Terban will share her experiences as an intern at NBC News in New York, WBEX News in Boston and the Film and Television Museum in New York. The free event will take place at the Old Chapel in the Seminar Room.

The PAD will continue to hold walk-in registration until September 22 at 75 Bartlett Hall.

Both of the Old Chapel events are free and open to the public. A donation is suggest for the story-telling show. $10 adults, $5 seniors and children free when accompanied by adult. For more information about the events and Fall Music, Theater, and Dance instruction or registration, contact PAD at 75 Bartlett Hall or at 545-0515.

Words & Pictures Museum preserves comic book art, fantasy illustrations

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Words & Pictures Museum of Fine Sequential Art in Northampton is the only institution on the East Coast dedicated solely to the preservation, interpretation and presentation of contemporary comic book art and fantasy illustration.

Located on 140 Main Street, the museum contains every genre popular to sequential art from the '70s to the present. Sequential art weaves words and pictures into a unified story. A predecessor to movies and videos, sequential art first appeared on the walls of caves and medieval paintings, daily newspapers, comic books and graphic novels. All artwork in the museum is original and are on permanent loan from the over 7,000 piece-collection of Kevin Eastman, co-creator of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

The museum's exterior is interesting in itself. Purchased in August of 1993, the facade now features ten windows adorned by gargoyle like guardians and silhouetted images of popular comic book characters. Perching atop the building is an 8-foot gargoyle (yet to be named), a sentinel of the building.

Inside, the highly popular walk through time entrance hall features two new additions: a Mayan hallway and the Birth of American Comics. A full capacity elevator whisks visitors to a different world on each level of the museum. The second floor, themed as a back alleyway and city facade is perfect for children to create their own works of art or to enjoy a book from the library.

The top floor of the Museum displays presentations from the permanent collection which numbers over 10,000 pieces. The diversity of the Museum collection can best be seen on this floor. Satirical underground comic strips hang alongside works by the legendary greats, including Kirby and Severin as well as contemporary favorites like Miller, Sienkiewicz and Pratt. This unique collection of art is displayed in a setting straight from the age of innocence.

Visiting the museum can be an interactive experience. Founded in 1992 by Eastman, visitors can become comic book artists themselves or sample the latest comic books and graphic novels. In a promotional brochure for the museum, Eastman says, "What the comics medium has given me, through the success of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, is the opportunity to open the Words and Pictures Museum to help the rest of the world understand and respect the art form I have loved all my life."

The Museum will feature an exhibit by artist and writer Frank Miller until October 7. The display will feature pages from Dare Devil, Electra: Assassin, Batman: Dark Knight.

The Museum is open from 12 p.m. - 5 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday, 12 p.m. - 9 p.m. Thursday, 12 p.m. - 6 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $3.00 adults, $2.00 students & seniors, children 18 & under are $1. For more information, contact the Museum at 586-8545.

■ books

continued from page 5

but to offer herself up as bait for a killer on the prowl.

The book, published by Pocket Books, also features a new CD, recorded especially by Collins for the book. While writing, Collins was inspired to transform her fiction into music and lyrics for a new album; and at points the music inspired new directions for the novel.

Collins is also the author of two previous nonfiction books, Trust Your Heart and Amazing Grace.

Another Pocket Books Hardcover book released in late August features America's favorite idiot, Forrest Gump. In Gump & Co by Winston Groom, readers are brought back to the lovable simplicity of Forrest Gump's world.

The novel picks up Gump's life ten years later. Mama Gump has passed away, as well has Forrest's true love, Jenny Curran, leaving Forrest the single parent of a young son. Instead of effecting changes in the '60s, now Gump and son are taking on the '80s and '90s with a vengeance. Somehow, you just know that Forrest is responsible for the fall of the Berlin Wall, the Iran-Contra scandal, Ivan Boesky and of course, the creation of "New Coke."

Previous Gump-inspired books have spent a total of 34 weeks on the New York Times Bestseller List.

Campus Paperback Bestsellers top three books for the month of September are The Alienist, from author Caleb Carr (Bantam, $6.99), The Hot Zone, by Richard Preston (Anchor/Doubleday, $6.99) and Tom Clancy's Debt of Honor (Berkley, $7.50). Other books include best-selling authors, John Grisham, Maeve Binchy and Carol Shields, as well as the non-fiction Apollo 13 by astronaut Jim Lovell and Jeffrey Kluger.

PETE'S DRIVE-IN
Route 9 Hadley
On the Rail Trail
ADVOCATE BEST of the PIONEER VALLEY READERS' POLL 1995 FAMOUS FOR OUR
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
1/4 POUNDERS

WORKSTUDY & NONWORKSTUDY JOBS

- After School Child Care Worker
- Arts Management/Theater
- Building Supervisors
- Clerical Assistants (workstudy only)
- Volleyball Officials/Supervisor
- Water Safety Instructors
- Youth Basketball Officials/Supervisors
- Adult Basketball Supervisor & Scorekeepers
- Pee-Wee Tennis Instructor

Application Deadline: September 15, 1995

Apply at:
Human Resources Dept.
Town of Amherst
70 Boltwood Walk
Bangs Community Center
Amherst, MA 01002

TOWN OF AMHERST
LSSE Leisure Services and Supplemental Education

Surprise your folks.

When you stay awake in class, you tend to learn more. (Unless you have an uncanny talent of learning through osmosis.) So don't let fatigue get in the way of your A, Revive with Vivarin®. One tablet has the same amount of caffeine as about two cups of coffee. And it's just as safe. Hey, anything is possible, if you're up for it.

VIVARIN

Revive with Vivarin®.

©1995 SB SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare
Use only as directed

How to make the world a cooler place.

Choose the powerful stick that fights off odor and wetness all day. Six fragrances, one goal: maximum protection. Or get powerful Right Guard protection in a crystal clear gel. Leaves no messy residue or flaky white stuff. So clear, it protects invisibly.

Right Guard®
Right there when you need it.

©1995 The Gillette Company

Come see the many sides of Sears

SEARS

Back to School SALE

10% off
all regular prices throughout the store with your student ID!

ALL calculators ON SALE!
Through September 16

Packard Bell
2099.99
Sears low price Monitor extra
75 MHz Pentium multimedia mini-tower-Windows 95 ready! Has 8 MB RAM, 1.6 GB hard drive, quad speed CD-ROM drive with full-motion video playback includes over $600 in software brother

299.99 Through September 16
Save $50
Brother word processor has an easy-to-read 14-in. monitor and 3.5-in., 1.44 MB MS-DOS compatible disk drive. Dictionary/thesaurus.

Panasonic

43025 (Mfr. # CT-20R12)
249.99 Sears low price
Panasonic 20-in. TV features the Panablack system for improved contrast and color. Bilingual menus, channel captioning and programmable remote.

A Sears exclusive!

44735 (Mfr. # SRV13005)
299.99 Sears low price
13-in. TV and VCR combo, perfect for the dorm! Features auto clock set, on-screen programming, alarm and front A/V inputs. 1-year/8-event timer.

A. 22308 (Mfr. #BMHG32)
Your choice: CD players!
99.99 Each Sears low price
A. CD boom box with AM/FM/cassette, back lit display and detachable speakers
B. Discman CD player with rechargeable battery and headphones
C. CD boom box with remote control
D. CD boom box with AM/FM/cassette
B. 23719 (Mfr. #D143) C. 22047 (Mfr. #UFD130) D. 22013 (Mfr. #CSD-EE110)

*See below for important credit details. TV screen sizes measured diagonally; reception simulated.

Kenmore

93174
99.99 Through Sept. 30
Save $20
1.7 cu. ft. compact refrigerator–adjustable cold control, interior shelf and door shelf for storage flexibility.

Kenmore

95332
159.99 Through Sept. 30
Save $10
2.5 cu. ft. compact refrigerator–adjustable cold control, sliding shelves and tall bottle door storage.

SHARP

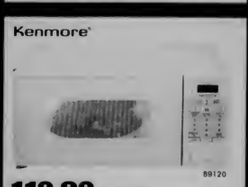
90615 (Mfr. #CD-C454)
199.99 Sears low price
Sharp tabletop stereo features a 3-disc CD changer and full logic dual cassette deck
FREE pocket organizer with purchase–see store for details

aiwa

90415 (Mfr. #NSX-V20)
299.99 Sears low price
Hi-fi tabletop stereo with 3-disc CD changer, dual cassette deck, remote control and 3-way speakers
FREE headphones (#94015) with purchase–see store for details

EUREKA

37710 (Mfr. #9735AT)
99.99 Sears low price
Eureka Boss Plus upright vac has a 10-amp motor and convenient on-board attachments. Micron air filtration, double brushes and brushed edge clean.

Kenmore


89120
119.99 Sears low price
575-watt microwave oven features quick on, popcorn key. Compact size is ideal for dorm rooms and apartments!

AT&T

24031 (Mfr. #4315)
58.88 While quantities last
Special purchase!
AT&T 4315 cordless phone. Compander Circuitry for static free sound and 10-channel transmission.

Save 10% on ALL home fashions!
Includes bed, bath, personal care appliances, small kitchen appliances and ready-to-assemble furniture
Savings off regular prices through September 29.
R58706X10

Each of these advertised items is readily available for sale as advertised. Most larger items inventoried in warehouses. Allow reasonable time for delivery.

YOU CAN COUNT ON SEARS FOR SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK

SEARS BRAND CENTRAL PRICING PLEDGE: We'll meet or beat the competition's current advertised price on the identical item. Bring the competition's current ad to any of our retail stores. Offer applies to current merchandise in our retail stores. Excludes clearance, closeouts and catalogs. Items at most larger stores or by special order at smaller stores. Outlet stores excluded. Reductions from regular prices unless otherwise stated. Items not described as reduced or as special purchases are at reg. price. Special purchases are not reduced, and are limited in quantity. Prices do not include delivery, unless specified. Installation available on many products; see store for details. Environmental surcharges extra. We try to have adequate stock of advertised items. When out of stocks occur, you have a choice: 1) a "raincheck," or 2) a substitute item of the same percentage discount if the item was reduced, or 3) an equal or better item at the advertised price if the item was not reduced. Excludes limited offers, special orders and items not normally at your Sears. IMPORTANT CREDIT DETAILS: Sales tax, delivery or installation not included in monthly payments shown. Actual monthly payment can vary depending on your account balance. $400 minimum purchase required to open a SearsCharge PLUS account. ©1995 Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Use your Sears Card, with few monthly payments.
SEARS

Dexter's not his usual self.

You suspect the salsa.

So you call Dr. Nusblatt, your family vet back home.

The call is cheap.

(Too bad about the consultation fee.)

Sign up for AT&T True Savings® and save 25% to Anybody, Anytime, Anywhere in the USA.

Life can be complicated. AT&T True Savings is simple. Just spend $10 a month on long distance and we'll subtract 25% off your AT&T bill.* Spend $50 a month, get 30% off. Guaranteed. This special offer ends soon, so you've got to call 1 800 TRUE-ATT to enroll by September 15. No fees. No lists. And no circles. That's Your True Choice.℠ AT&T.

AT&T
Your True Choice

*Certain exclusions apply. Available in most areas.

©1995 AT&T

~ CONCERTS ~

New Wave star to sing jazz in NoHo

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Fifteen years ago Deborah Harry and her band Blondie were one of the most popular "alternative" bands of the day. With hits like "The Tide Is High" and "Heart of Glass" Blondie were at the head of the new wave revolution.

Over the past year there has been a revival in new wave and not surprisingly there has been a resurge in Blondie's popularity. Just this past summer, Deborah Harry released an album of new remixes of previously released songs.

Tonight at the Iron Horse Music Hall, Harry will share the stage with the Jazz Passengers, a band led by Roy Nathanson and Curtis Fowlkes. Formed in 1987, the Jazz Passengers have risen from being an obscure ensemble performing at the Knitting Factory in New York to being an internationally known band.

Nineteen ninety-one saw the release of their best received work was Deep In A Dream Of You. Nathanson discussed the work saying, "It was a really satisfying production. It was sort of the culmination of that monologuing-with-music thing we had been doing, and it really got me thinking about incorporating more of this performance stuff into the Passengers [sound]."

Tonight's performance should be filled with interesting performances, mixing bits of theater with jazz music.

Their most recent album Jazz Passengers In Love features an all star cast including guest vocalists such as Freddy Johnston and Jeff Buckley. Last June, the Jazz Passengers shared the stage with both Elvis Costello and Deborah Harry. Although Costello won't be in attendance tonight, the show should be an enjoyable mix between Harry's new wave greatness and the Jazz Passengers cutting edge stage performance.

Deborah Harry and the Jazz Passengers perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall tonight for two shows at 7 and 10 p.m. Call the club at 584-0610 for more details.

COURTESY JAY BLAKESBERG

The Jazz Passengers and ex-Blondie lead singer Debbie Harry will play the Iron Horse this weekend.

"CPW" looks at the Big Apple

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Behold "Central Park West," starring Mariel Hemingway, which premieres Wednesday on CBS. Here, finally, is a television series that gets New York right. Manhattanites, anyway.

After all, every single one of us, as "CPW" demonstrates, is gainfully employed in publishing, law or on Wall Street. We are buff, beautiful and mostly under 35. We always, always wear black.

And when we're trying to seduce somebody else's mate, we might be heard to purr, "God, I love this city! It makes you feel anything can happen, anytime, anywhere ... with anyone."

You bet your Zagat's Guide!

It's not a moment too soon for viewers to know the truth about New York City, which increasingly is the capital of prime time. Just a couple of years ago, 13 network dramas and sitcoms were set here. This fall, no fewer than 13 brand-new Big Apple series join a dozen returnees including "Mad About You," "Seinfeld," "Friends" and "NYPD Blue."

Of course, most shows laying claim to New York roots establish their New York-ness with an exterior shot of some local building, only to retire to a Hollywood soundstage from where the rest of the show unfolds.

This season there are four welcome exceptions to this masquerade. Shows filmed entirely in New York include "Law & Order," "New York Undercover" and, premiering later this month, the Mary Tyler Moore newspaper drama "New York News."

But most notable is "Central Park West," airing at 9 p.m. EDT. Created by Darren Star, it should do for this metropolis what his "Melrose Place" did for apartment liv-

Turn to CPW, page 14

COURTESY IMKE LASS

Letters To Cleo will make an appearance at Pearl Street to promote their latest release Wholesale Meats and Fish.

Pigtail popstars are back again

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

Sure to put a little sunshine on the most stubborn fit of depression, Letters to Cleo bring their brand of bubblegum pop to Pearl Street in Northampton tomorrow night.

While most are only familiar with the Melrose Place soundtrack as the band's claim to fame, Letters to Cleo have developed a fervid following in Boston for some time since their most recent incarnation in 1990.

Started in 1988 under the moniker Rebecca Lula, things evolved when guitarist Greg McKenna asked his cousin Kay Hanley to sing backup. As Hanley's promise became evident, she quickly took over as lead vocalist. The band was subsequently rounded out with Michael Eisenstein (guitar), Scott Riebling (bass) and Stacy Jones (drums).

Once their name was adopted (from Hanley's childhood penpal) the band has had a nosebleed rise to popularity. First signed to Boston-based CherryDisc Records, the band released Aurora Gory Alice in '93, only to be re-issued by Giant Records. It was the inclusion of the song "Here and Now" on the Melrose Place soundtrack though that drove the band to national attention.

Now with their sophomore album, Wholesale Meats and Fish just released, Letters to Cleo are out to dispel any talk of being a one-hit wonder. From the sound of things, the band shouldn't worry.

Letters to Cleo and Big Dish play Pearl Street in Northampton tomorrow night. 18+ Show starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance and are available at Tix Unlimited, For the Record and The Northampton Box Office.

News Desk Wants Writers!

The Collegian News Desk is always looking for interested writers to show off their talents.
Come to the Collegian Office, 113 Campus Center Basement. See News Editor Chris Conner.

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
Get Off Your Rear!! and Hightail it over to El Acuña!

because we're now open Wednesday, Thursday, Friday & Saturday until 1:00am, Featuring a New Late night Menu

Open Daily at 11:30am
Monday: Gone to the Running of the Bulls Down the Alley (Behind Antonios)
253-4040

ANNOUNCEMENT

Two Graduate School Internships

The two individuals will be responsible for:

- Preparation of a comprehensive Graduate Student Survey
- Expansion of a mentoring program for incoming graduate students
- Development and submission of articles about graduate education, graduate students and graduate activities, and
- Development of projects related to graduate education, research, and policy

Experience Required

The individual must be a full time graduate student with an excellent academic record. The individual must have appropriate knowledge and experience to assume responsibilities outlined in job description. The individual must be sensitive to issues facing today's graduate students at a major research university and should exhibit a demonstrated willingness to work with the graduate student senate. Good writing skills are essential.

How to Apply

Submit your resume, two letters of recommendation (one must be from current full time faculty at UMass and the other must be from either another full time UMass faculty member of UMass administrator), and a two page letter maximum describing your unique qualifications for the position and why you should be selected (over two pages will be eliminated).

DEADLINE: September 29, 1995 by 5:00pm. Submit ALL materials to the Graduate School, 514 Goodell. LATE OR INCOMPLETE MATERIALS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED OR REVIEWED. IT IS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE APPLICANT TO MAKE SURE THAT THE APPLICATION IS COMPLETE BY THE DEADLINE.

AMOUNT: $8500 with tuition waiver, from November 5, 1995 to August 31, 1996.
SUBMIT: Charlena Seymour, Graduate Dean, 514 Goodell.

Mental Health Groups – Fall 1995

Food and Feelings:
A Group for Women Experiencing Eating Problems... Monday, 3:30-5pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families.....Monday, 3:30-5pm

Improving Self-Esteem, Building Self-Confidence.....Tuesday, 3:45-5pm

Women's Group:
Graduate Students & Professional Women.....Tuesday, 12:45-2:15pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families (group conducted in Spanish)
Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfunctionales.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Marijuana and Mental Health.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

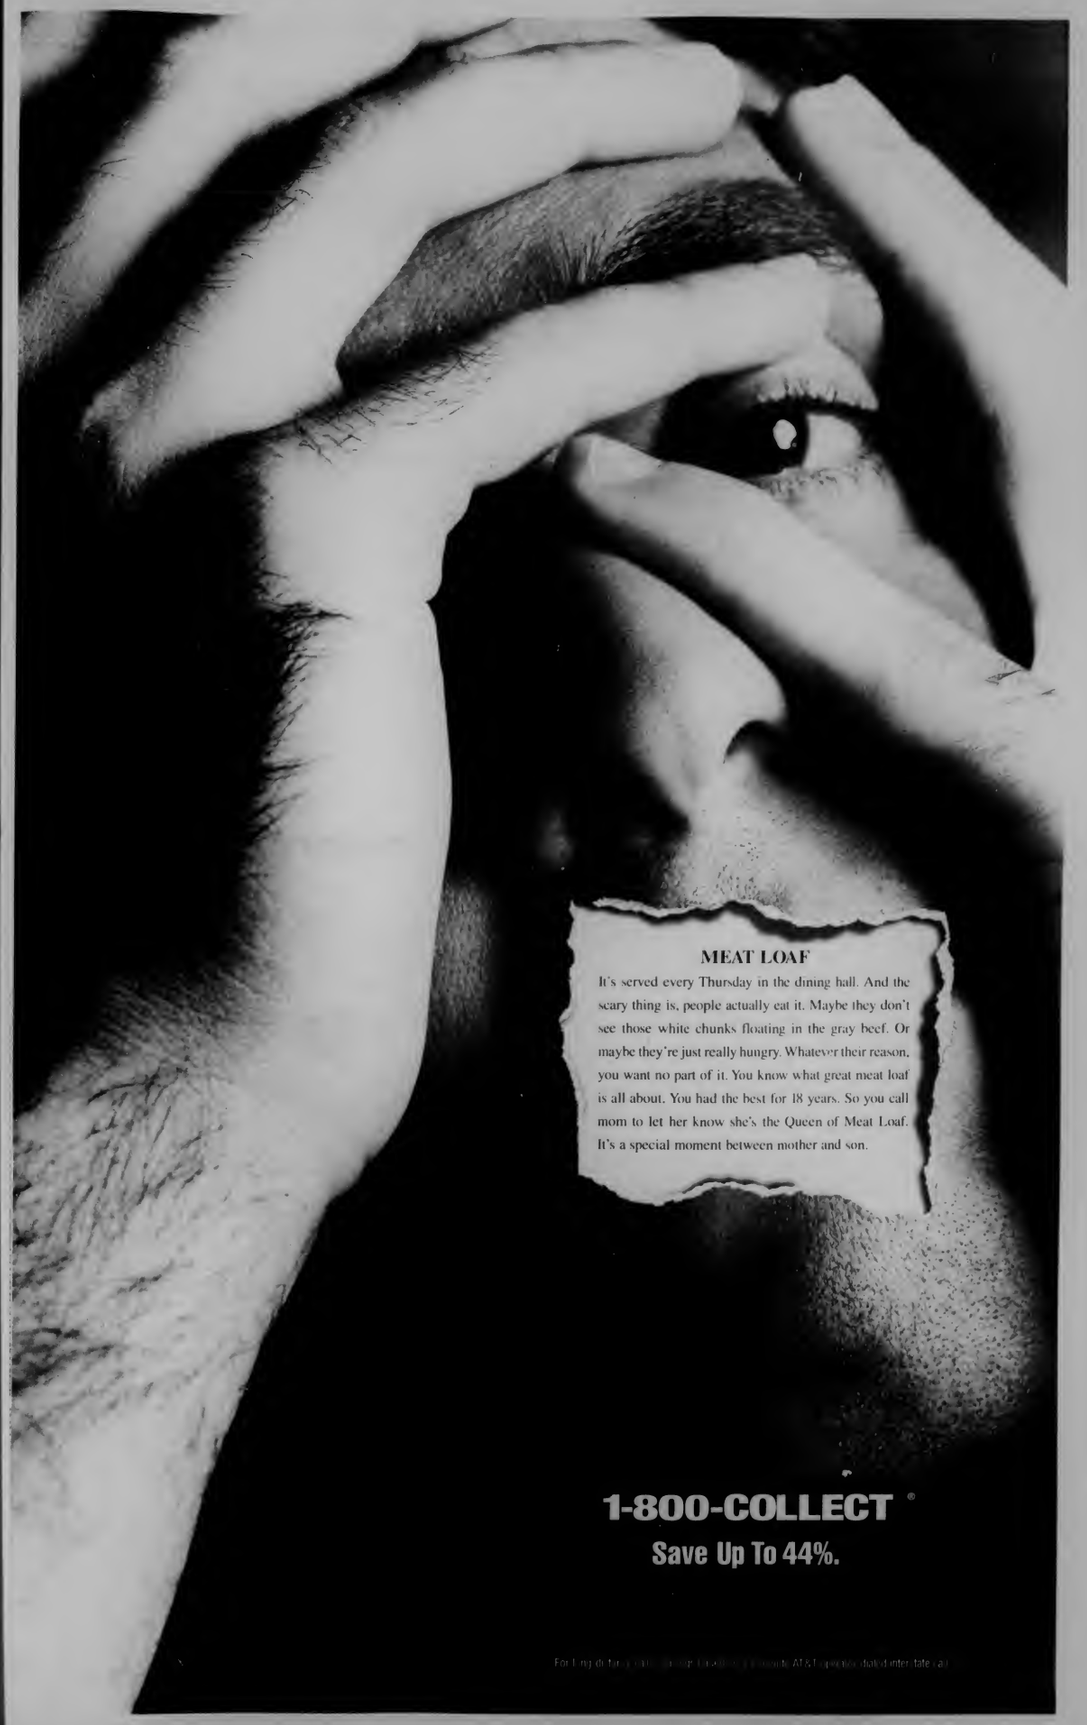
Lesbian, Gay and Bi-Sexual Support Group.....Thursday, 3:45 - 5pm

Groups will begin in early mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview. Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 12" Hills North, Monday - Friday 8:00am - 5:00pm.

SUPERIOR PIZZERIA
New! ITEMS
Real Italian Food at its BEST!
Now Featuring
Cannoli & Italian Pastries and Cheesburg Grinders
Wednesday Special
Calzones $3.25
• Tortellini Dinners • Chocolate Pizza
• Chicken Pizza • Sicilian Pizza

$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza	$2.25 OFF Any Large 2 Item Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza	$1.65 OFF Any Large Pizza
$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza	$2.00 OFF Any Large 1 Item Pizza

one coupon per order • coupon cannot be combined with other offers
17 Montague Rd. Amherst 549-0626
Free Delivery 7 days 11:30am - 2am



MEAT LOAF
It's served every Thursday in the dining hall. And the scary thing is, people actually eat it. Maybe they don't see those white chunks floating in the gray beef. Or maybe they're just really hungry. Whatever their reason, you want no part of it. You know what great meat loaf is all about. You had the best for 18 years. So you call mom to let her know she's the Queen of Meat Loaf. It's a special moment between mother and son.
1-800-COLLECT ®
Save Up To 44%.

~ MOVIES ~

Designer documentary hardly fashionable

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

UNZIPPED
Directed by Douglas Keeve with Isaac Mizrahi, Linda Evangelista, Naomi Campbell Playing at Academy of Music

COURTESY CALVIN KLEIN

Kate Moss is just one of the many stars/supermodels in Unzipped.

Eskimo-inspired faux fur and supermodels galore traipse down the runway in Douglas Keeve's not-so-candid documentary about fashion mogul Isaac Mizrahi.

Unzipped was supposed to be a close look into the colorful life of one of today's top fashion designers. In actuality, this documentary was about as vibrant as the black and white film it was recorded on.

The movie chronicles the year-long development and production of Mizrahi's 1995 line, beginning with the designer trudging down a snowy New York City alley, reading the horrible reviews his 1994 show had just received. A depressing tone is set for what is supposed to be a "hilarious" movie.

Mizrahi's challenge is not unique. He, like every other artist in the business, is trying to bring an original, critic- pleasing and stylish creation to the runway. The fashion industry is ruthless, and the stress upon Mizrahi to succeed is about the only strong message portrayed in this movie.

Mizrahi could be the most exciting man alive for all we know, but it is up to director Keeve to show us by carefully selecting what gets cut and what gets printed out of the 365–days worth of footage. That is the essence of a documentary — putting a cohesive story together out of raw nothing.

COURTESY MARIE CLAIRE

Cindy Crawford

Keeve utterly fails in putting together a flowing plot. One minute Mizrahi is discussing his childhood with his mother, and the next he is signing with Eartha Kitt. We hear incessant ranting about inspirations for his designs, which mainly take the form of old movies, such as Nanook of the North. When Mizrahi himself tells stories about how much he loves Mary Tyler Moore or fur pants he is funny, but he talks at such a rapid pace in his Stuart Smalley-esque voice it is hard to discern the humor.

A sprinkling of famous, and beautiful, faces keep things interesting, but opinions of supermodels may change after viewing them Unzipped. A strange sequence where Keeve uses color with Kate Moss in a purple sweater shows her as extremely moody and mean. Cindy Crawford frets over her makeup and Naomi Campbell is more worried about removing her belly button-ring than the thousands of dollars she makes per show.

Linda Evangelista (and these models are not acting) has a personality that would drive you out of the theater if the movie didn't do it already. She whines, she complains, she wants special treatment. You want to smack the ever transforming-tressed supermodel across her million dollar face.

For a documentary about Mizrahi, the man and the designer, we learn nothing personal about him, nor anything intrinsic to his trade. Unzipped is just a rambling story full of useless details that, no matter how you dress them up, are not fashionable, funny or entertaining. D

THE TIE THAT BINDS
Directed by Wesley Strick with Moira Kelly, Darryl Hannah
Playing at Mtn. Farms Four

The Tie that Binds is yet another example of how made- for-TV movie plots continue to make their way onto the big screen when producers find enough money and barely adequate star power.

Moira Kelly (looking barely old enough to be graduated from college, as with her last role in With Honors) plays the mother who, for some reason the film makes only obscure references to, cannot have a baby. She and her husband decide to adopt a little girl so they can have a family to fill their dream house with. This little girl, named Janie (the best actress in the film), comes to them with a world full of problems the young parents are not equipped to handle.

Janie's parents, played by Darryl Hannah and Keith Carradine, are of the serial killer sort, resembling Natural Born Killers' Mickey and Mallory Knox, except not nearly as frightening. Sure they burglarize then photograph their murder victims, and expose their child to some horrible stuff, but to a desensitized audience, their crimes are not graphic enough to be convincing — and neither is the acting.

The notions are all disturbing, but not frightening in the least. Director Strick (Cape Fear) really disappoints as he softens the blows that could have punched up this movie enough to make audiences care, or perhaps get scared for this little girl. Every event is predictable, right down to the all too convenient ending.

The Tie that Binds is a boring attempt at suspense, a weak try at horror and a bland effort at tearjerking. The murder, kidnapping and child abuse have all been done before, and it is safe to say you have seen this movie before. D–

COURTESY IN STYLE

Linda Evangelista

Billboard's top video list shows Outbreak on top

Weekly charts for the nation's most popular videos as they appear in next week's issue of Billboard magazine. Reprinted with permission:

VIDEO RENTALS
Copyright 1995, Billboard Publications Inc.
1. Outbreak, (Warner)
2. Just Cause, (Warner)
3. Boys on the Side, (Warner)
4. Nobody's Fool, (Paramount)
5. The Brady Bunch Movie, (Paramount)
6. The Quick and the Dead, (Columbia TriStar)
7. Dumb and Dumber, (New Line)
8. Disclosure, (Warner)
9. Higher Learning, (Columbia TriStar)
10. Nell, (Fox)
11. I.Q., (Paramount)
12. Star Trek Generations, (Paramount)
13. Circle of Friends, (HBO)
14. Houseguest, (Hollywood Pictures)
15. Billy Madison, (MCA-Universal)
16. Murder in the First, (Warner)
17. Man of the House, (Disney)
18. Immortal Beloved, (Columbia TriStar)
19. In the Mouth of Madness, (New Line)
20. Candyman: Farewell to the Flesh, (PolyGram)

VIDEO RENTALS

VIDEO SALES
Copyright 1995, Billboard Publications Inc.
1. Playboy: The Best of Pamela Anderson, (Playboy)
2. The Swan Princess, (Turner)
3. The Pebble and the Penguin, (MGM-UA)
4. Fortest Gump, (Paramount)
5. Pink Floyd: Pulse, (Columbia)
6. Playboy: Real Couples, Sex in Dangerous Places, (Playboy)
7. Playboy: The Girls of Radio, (Playboy)
8. The Lion King, (Disney)
9. Playboy: Wet & Wild Hot Holidays, (Playboy)
10. Disney's Sing Along Songs: Pocahontas, (Disney)
11. The Crow, (Miramax)
12. Absolutely Fabulous Series 1, Part 1, (BBC)
13. Michael Jackson: Video Greatest Hits-History, (Epic)
14. Mortal Kombat - The Animated Video, (New Line)
15. Born to Be Wild, (Warner)
16. Barney: Making New Friends, (Barney)
17. Star Wars Trilogy, (Fox)
18. Playboy. The Girls of Hawaiian Tropic, (Playboy)
19. The Jerky Boys: Don't Hang Up, (MTV)
20. Absolutely Fabulous Series

Your Ad Could Be Here
Collegian Advertising
545-3500

■ CPW

continued from page 12

ing and his "Beverly Hills, 90210" did for the ZIP code: Give 'em a little sizzle.

Let others tar New York as filthy and sinister, as the city that never sleeps— and looks it.

Darren Star's Manhattan has no bad neighborhoods or random violence or homelessness. Rather, it's a party where the revelers bring their own: the sins they commit against each other. No need to beware of strangers. Here, the danger is betrayal by your closest intimates. That, and not looking fabulous.

Who couldn't love such a city, or the man who served it up to viewers?

"I have a real passion for New York, and that's where this show started from," says Star, whose name, good looks and just-under-the-wire age of 34 could qualify him as one of his own creations.

"Up to now, TV shows have looked at New York City through the lens of crime and grit," he says, "not as the most vibrant, architecturally beautiful city in the world. We wanted to capture some of that beauty ... The challenge I set for myself was to do a show that took place" — he pauses meaningfully — "in New York."

And after that, Darren? Just add sex, Armani and revenge? He laughs. "I gotta say, I wish it was that simple."

Never accuse a Star-created series of simplicity.

Just to get you started, Stephanie Wells (played by Hemingway) has come from Seattle to be editor of trendy Communique magazine under its ruthless publisher (Ron Leibman), who is married to a cut-down-in-his-prime politician's glamorous widow (Lauren Hutton), whose daughter is Communique's bad-girl columnist (Madchen Amick), who's out to get Stephanie.

That's just for starters.

Along the way, "CPW" does Manhattan proud: In the premiere episode, Central Park, Times Square, the Lincoln Center fountain and the Grand Central Terminal main concourse (site of a gala fundraiser) could hardly look more appealing.

Other "CPW" scenes are shot on specially constructed sets as lavish as the town they help depict.

For instance, installed a few floors above Star's office are Communique's sprawling, splendid quarters, in whose conference room Stephanie is about to be sniped at by her boss.

For the recent filming of this scene from episode five, Leibman is already in place at the head of the conference table, laden with platters of brie and kiwi fruit.

Then, fresh from Makeup, Hemingway presents herself as the cast and crew whoops with approval: For the first time, she is costumed in a black Donna Karan power suit.

Stephanie's transition from Seattle mauve is now complete. But when, oh when, will she learn to watch her back?

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

Emergency Medical Training
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Classes start September 18, 1995
Call UMass, Continuing Education at 545-0474

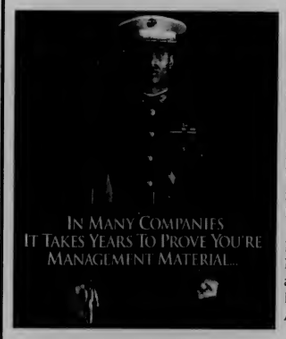
Slip on. Zip up. Knock out.

ZANA
Amherst
William Town
Bratleboro

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Sept. 22
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Campus Activities Office
Student Union or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

Club Communication
First Meeting
Machmer 417
Tuesday, Sept. 12 at 6:00pm
All New Members Welcome!

HOW WAS YOUR SUMMER VACATION?



If you didn't get everything out of last summer that you wanted, if you didn't take steps to secure your path for your future, if you didn't challenge yourself to the fullest . . .
Then you probably should consider this opportunity.
Here's a six-week summer job that gives college credits, provides room and board, pays $1700, and leads to a job offer for a full-time MANAGEMENT POSITION after college.
It's called the Platoon Leaders Class, it's how the Marine Corps selects its officers and pilots, and it's open to FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, AND JUNIORS.
We are accepting a limited number of applicants for the summer of 1996.
SEE CAPT. PETERS ON SEPT. 13 AND 14 BETWEEN 10:00AM AND 2:00PM IN THE NEWMAN CENTER CAFETERIA.
For more information on opportunities offered by
MARINE OFFICER PROGRAMS
Call Captain Peters or master Sergeant Zahn
1-800-255-8762

UM students join in the cause of Abu–Jamal

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

Student activism and involvement in campus and off– campus politics is something that the University of Massachusetts became well known for during the '60s and '70s.

One such student advocacy group, the Students for a Democratic Society, experienced a split and branched off into several different organizations. One of these was the Progressive Student Network, which in 1979 became known as the Radical Student Union (RSU).

It was the Radical Student Union that decided last Thursday evening, during the weekly meeting, that the group's support for social justice had to be taken off campus. The decision was then made to send a delegation to Philadelphia to participate in on-going protests against the death sentence of Black journalist, writer and political activist Mumia Abu–Jamal.

The attention that this case has drawn to the struggle for social equality and racial freedom has compelled the RSU to focus its current efforts on helping Abu–Jamal's cause, said RSU member Kenneth Miller.

"Political power through unity," said Miller, is what the RSU is seeking, and "the bigger we are, the more [power] we are going to have," he added.

The delegation consisted of Miller, Lenchner, Gould, Cullen Nawalkowsky (RSU member from Hampshire College), Phil Copland (RSU supporter) and Jeanine Maland (Graduate Employee Organization member and long–time Abu–Jamal supporter).

One of the reasons for this participation, according to Miller, is that "Mumia's case has brought out many important issues of the criminal justice system" that must be reconsidered if this system contends to remain fair and equal to all.

"All the oppressive factors are connected," adds Nawalkowsky, saying that "from the FBI, to city officials, to the police, to the judicial system, everything is indicted." Abu–Jamal's trial has, in this manner, opened up the cover which has hitherto hidden this interrelation of political corruption, Nawalkowsky indicates.

Currently with a membership of 34 people, the RSU is run democratically and does not have a hierarchy in its leadership, Lenchner said. Miller adds that the group is "always struggling with the process of democracy because our needs are always changing."

Some key paths that the organization takes in order to empower students are: staging demonstrations, protests, rallies, etc.; sponsorship of alternative media sources; coalition building with other student groups.

Amy Gould, current RSU member, said that she joined the group because she "wanted to be involved in non-mainstream politics." Indeed, she left her position as Student Senator in the Student Government Association in order to join the RSU ranks, for the latter task "requires a lot more organizational skills [and] teaches you how to function as a group."

By participating in protesting against this corruption in Abu–Jamal's case, Miller contends, the RSU is confronting corruption in all cases at the same time.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Leonard I. Weinglass, one of the defence attorneys for Mumia Abu–Jamal, talks at a press conference about the motion for retrial outside Philadelphia's Criminal Justice Center which opened for the first time yesterday.

■ cuts

continued from page 1

for being "Clinton's poster child" and unaccessible to students. He claimed that he had never seen any advertisement to apply. However, information on the program is available on campus.

Student Trustee to the Student Government Association Dan Rivera said that the new system is excellent.

"The cynicism is unfortunate because the information is out there."

Rivera pointed out that Congress allocated more money to the Pentagon than was requested and thought it unfair that they were now trying to cut funding for education.

"We need reality checking for people voting for the cuts," Olver said.

Olver encouraged students across the country to write to their congressmen.

"The votes need to be changed," Olver said. "Only constituents can drive the way they vote."

■ Bosnia

continued from page 1

"It's clear — very clear — what the Bosnian Serbs have to do to turn this process around and turn it towards peace," Burns said. "They have got to comply with the very strongly felt desires of the international community that the terrorism that they have inflicted upon Sarajevo stop."

The bombing followed a Serb rocket attack on Sarajevo's main downtown market. It aims at forcing the withdrawal of Serb heavy weapons to at least 12 1/2 miles beyond the Bosnian capital while weakening Serb anti-aircraft and other military capability.

The sustained NATO bombardment, however, has put pressure on Russian President Boris Yeltsin from his political opponents. Parliament urged him over the weekend to consider ending Russia's cooperation with NATO and to lift U.N. sanctions against Serbia unilaterally.

University policy bans lit candles from dorms

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Although devised to help ensure student safety, a revised University policy could have some students up in arms.

Lit candles and incense are now prohibited in the residence halls, including for religious reasons.

Michael Gilbert, the acting director of housing services, said the changes were made to "deal with some health and safety issues, and to insure students' property is as safe as possible."

He added that there were three or four serious fires in residence halls last year due to unsupervised flames.

According to Barbara Pitoniak, a spokesperson for the University, "a lot of research went into the policy, including surveying other schools. A number of other institutions prohibit lit candles."

The policy becomes controversial because various groups, including Jews, Catholics and Native Americans among others, may want to use lit candles as part of a religious or cultural ceremony.

"We do understand there are a number of religious orders and groups that observe different practices with candles," said Gilbert. "We knew some students may see this as an abridgement of their rights, but we see safety as primary."

Gilbert added that the issue of prohibiting lit candles for religious issues was discussed extensively while determining the new restrictions but that they decided they should not be allowed.

He said three or four fires last year were blamed on candles lit for religious reasons. "We're often told that," he continued. "Whether it is true or not."

Francis Lavelle, the director of the Newman Center, said he agreed with the new policy.

"I think [lighting candles] is dangerous," he continued. "Years ago, it was not unusual for Catholic churches to have racks of votive candles. It has all but disappeared now, because insurance companies that carry our liability put their foot down ... in a dormitory you have to be conscious and sensitive to the other people living there and the danger [lit candles] can cause."

Gilbert also added that Housing was very open to feedback on the new policy. "The policy changes occurred late in Spring semester, so I do expect students will want to discuss these items with us."

He said students would get a chance to discuss the new policies in front of the Residential Advisory Committees that will be formed within several weeks.

"We're open to a full and fair discussion about it," Gilbert added.

The Collegian Business Desk is looking for writers.
Writer
Anyone interested should come to the Collegian office and talk with Matt Wurtzel.
No prior experience is necessary.

ATTENTION COLLEGIAN STAFF!
ANDATO
Staff Mee
First of the Year
EDNESDA
TEMBER
Candidates Night & Election for Editor-in-Cheif
Pizza!

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
From 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
• Sunday - 10¢ Potato Skins
• Monday - 10¢ Mozzerella Sticks
• Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
• Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4 lb. Popcorns Shrimp for 99¢
• Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Jumbo Drinks & Drafts
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews
Charlies tavern AMHERST, MASS. since 1978
The Place Where Friends Meet
Drink Specials
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99
Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA • 549-5403
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 48" Big Screen T.V. * No Take Out in Food Specials * MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

Sox drop fourth straight

BALTIMORE (AP) — Harold Baines homered in a five-run eighth inning, and the Baltimore Orioles extended the Boston Red Sox's losing streak to a season-high four games with a 10-7 comeback victory Monday night.

Mike Greenwell hit two homers and Jose Canseco and Mo Vaughn also homered for the Red Sox, who had taken a 7-5 lead in the top of the eighth.

Bret Barberie reached on an error and Curtis Goodwin hit an RBI double to get the Orioles within a run. Bubby Bonilla tied it with a single and Cal Ripken gave Baltimore the lead with a sacrifice fly before Baines hit a two-run homer off Stan Belinda.

Mike Greenwell

Mark Lee (2-0) got the win and Doug Jones worked the ninth for this 22nd save. Roger Clemens, bidding to win his fifth straight start, walked seven and allowed six hits in 5-plus innings. The seven walks tied his career high, a feat he's done four times, the last time July 18, 1989.

Clemens was in position to take his first loss since Aug. 2 and Baltimore starter Mike Mussina was poised to become the majors' first 17-game winner until Boston overcame a 5-4 deficit with three runs in the eighth.

With one out, Canseco hit his 24th homer of the year and 300th of his career to tie it. Greenwell followed by driving a 1-0 pitch from Jesse Orosco into the center-field seats, his first two-homer game of the season and fifth of his career.

A run-scoring single by Luis Alicea made it 7-5.

Boston went up 2-0 in the first. John Valentin singled and Vaughn drove Mussina's next pitch an estimated 441 feet for his second homer in two games and 35th of the year.

Baltimore tied it in the third, taking advantage of three walks to score their first runs off Clemens this season in 17 innings. Goodwin singled in a run and Ripken drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk.

Greenwell led off the fourth with his 11th homer, but Baltimore took a 4-3 lead in its half of the inning. After Clemens issued two two-out walks, Brady Anderson blooped an RBI single to center that Troy O'Leary misplayed, allowing another run to score.

The Red Sox pulled even in the fifth when Canseco hit a two-out double and scored on a single by Greenwell. Baltimore went ahead 5-4 with an unearned run in the sixth.

Yankees 4, Indians 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jack McDowell pitched a four-hitter for his second shutout of the season Monday night, beating the Cleveland Indians for the third time in as many tries as the New York Yankees won 4-0.

The Yankees have won five straight and 11 of 13, putting themselves squarely in contention for the AL wild-card spot. They started the night trailing wild-card leader Seattle by a half-game; the Mariners played host to Minnesota later.

The Indians, blanked for just the third time this year, saw their 14-game home winning streak end. It was the longest home winning streak in the AL this year.

McDowell (14-10) struck out eight and walked four in his eighth complete game of the year. In his last eight starts, he is 6-2 with a 1.71 ERA, five complete games and two shutouts. He has had a decision in each of his last 21 starts, including his 3-0 mark against the Indians.

Dennis Martinez (10-5) pitched well but dropped to 2-14 lifetime against the Yankees. He gave up three runs and five hits in seven innings, walking three and striking out two. He last beat New York in 1982 when he was with Baltimore.

The Yankees scored a run in the third on Bernie Williams' RBI single. They added two in the sixth on a double by Williams, an RBI single by Darryl Strawberry, a single by Dion James and Don Mattingly's sacrifice fly, which was caught by Kenny Lofton racing toward the fence in center.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2, 10 innings

TORONTO (AP) — Travis Fryman led off the 10th inning with a homer Monday night to give the Detroit Tigers a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays, their third straight win after losing the opener of the four-game series.

Fryman hit a 2-2 pitch from Jimmy Rogers (2-4) into the first row of seats in left, making a winner of Mike Christopher (3-0). Christopher pitched a scoreless eighth and ninth, then allowed a leadoff double in the 10th to pinch-hitter Shawn Green. Brian Bohanon came on and retired three straight hitters, the last two on strikeouts, for his first career save.

Toronto's Joe Carter led off the sixth with his second homer of the game to tie it 2-2. It was his 34th career multi-homer game and fourth this year. He led off the second with his 23rd homer of the season to cut Detroit's lead to 2-1.

Tigers starter C.J. Nitkowski only pitched one inning, leaving with a bruised right thigh after Paul Molitor's inning-ending come-backer hit him on the leg.

Fryman and Cecil Fielder hit consecutive doubles with two outs in the first for Detroit. Steve Rodriguez hit a two-out double and scored on John Flaherty's single in the second to make it 2-0. Toronto starter Paul Menhart went five innings and gave up two runs and five hits, walking three and striking out five. He left the game because he had a migraine headache and experienced blurred vision when warming up before the sixth.

Pirates 7, Padres 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Al Martin had three hits and the Pittsburgh Pirates took advantage of Andy Ashby's wildness to beat the San Diego Padres 7-5 Monday night, ending a five-game losing streak.

Ashby (9-10) lost his fourth consecutive decision as the Padres lost their fourth straight game and continue to fade in the wild-card race. Ashby gave up six runs, four earned, on five hits. He walked five, hit a batter and threw two wild pitches that allowed runs to score.

The Padres pounded Pirates starter Denny Neagle for nine hits in the first four innings and scored four runs. Tony Gwynn, who had been 1-for-16 against Neagle, hit an RBI double in the first.

Ken Caminiti broke a 1-for-22 streak with a run-scoring single in the three-run first. Jon Lieber (3-7) got the win with 2 1-3 innings of scoreless relief.

Expos 5, Mets 0

MONTREAL (AP) — Pedro Martinez threw a four-hitter and the Montreal Expos averted a four-game sweep with a 5-0 victory over the New York Mets on Monday night.

Martinez (13-8) allowed two singles in the first inning and another in the fourth. He retired 11 straight before Joe Orsulak singled with one out in the eighth. The right-hander struck out six and walked three for his second complete game and shutout of the season.

Rondell White went 3-for-4 to lead Montreal's 13-hit attack. The victory was the Expos' seventh in their last 25 games at Olympic Stadium.

Cubs 12, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin Foster threw a five-hitter over seven innings Monday night and also had a two-run double and a run-scoring single to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 12-1 victory over Los Angeles, ending the Dodgers' three-game winning streak.

Mark Grace hit three doubles, increasing his National League-leading total to 46, to help snap the Cubs' four-game losing streak.

Foster (10-10) lost a shutout when Delino DeShields hit his eighth home run leading off the seventh. The 26-year-old right-hander walked one and struck out four. Ismael Valdes (11-11) gave up seven hits over 3 1-3 innings, walking two and striking out four, in his fourth straight loss.

Reds 2, Marlins 1, 11 innings

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jerome Walton's single with two out in the bottom of the 11th inning lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 2-1 victory Monday night over the Florida Marlins.

Cincinnati won for only the fourth time in 12 games, snapping a four-game losing streak against the Marlins.

Cardinals 13, Giants 4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ray Lankford and Brian Jordan each homered and drove in three runs and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 13-4 Monday night.

The Giants entered the game 5 1/2 games out of first place in the National League West and a wild-card spot. They had won nine of 12. The Cardinals have won four in a row.

The Cardinals broke the game open with a season-high six runs in the second off Giants starter Jaime Brewington (4-3).

***

In other games, Minnesota was at Seattle (10:05 p.m. start), Chicago was at California (10:05 p.m.) and Atlanta and Colorado were tied at 4, after 11 innings (as of press time).

Both sides claiming victory, in NBA

By Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — What happens after the result of the NBA players' decertification vote is announced could turn on who wins and by how much.

Votes in the election to determine whether the Player's Association will be disbanded were to be counted publicly by National Labor Relations Board officials this afternoon.

Both the union leadership and the group backing decertification, led by Michael Jordan and Patrick Ewing, were confident of victory.

The losers are likely to challenge the election results, erecting legal roadblocks that could delay the opening of training camp to Oct. 6 and drag on past Nov. 3, when the season is scheduled to start.

In balloting on Aug. 30 and Sept. 7, players cast their votes in large numbers, the heavy turnout believed to benefit the union. A vote for retaining the union also is considered a vote for a proposed labor agreement, as many players said they cast reluctantly. If the union wins the election, 21 of the league's 27 player representatives must still formally ratify the new deal Wednesday at a meeting in Chicago.

On Monday, Jeffrey Kessler, the lawyer representing Jordan, Ewing and other players in the decertification drive, sent a letter to union chief Simon Gourdine, saying his group is concerned Wednesday's meeting and possible vote "will be another rush to judgment that tries to avoid, instead of respect, the wishes of a majority of players."

"This would break the promise the union made ... that all players would get a chance to vote on any proposed deal," Kessler wrote.

Gourdine said the union's constitution provided for a ratification vote only by the player reps.

"We do not consider this at all to be a rush to judgment," he said. "The proposed collective bargaining agreement has been in the hands of the players since shortly after Aug. 8. We think there has been ample opportunity for all of the players to have full and frank discussion of all of the terms of the proposed agreement."

The margin of the victory could well determine how the player reps vote. In June, they killed a proposed agreement by tabling a vote.

However, union leaders have said they expect the deal to be ratified this time. That would clear the way for team owners to approve the agreement at a scheduled Sept. 18 meeting and lift the lockout begun July 1.

"Our expectation is if the union has a clear victory in the voting next week, we will ask the owners to ratify it and end the lockout," NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said. "The fact that challenges may be pending is something we'll have to take a look at."

After casting his vote last week, Jordan didn't seem inclined to continue his fight for dissolving the union if the players vote against it.

"If (decertification) doesn't carry, then the players have spoken their minds, and that's all I ask," Jordan said. "If the majority of players choose to accept this deal, I'm with them. I'm with the majority — as long as two years down the road they can live with the repercussions of what this deal is going to give them."

Jordan and Ewing have been the most vocal proponents of decertification, arguing that players can get a more favorable labor agreement by dissolving the union and pursuing an antitrust lawsuit against the league.

Despite Jordan's conciliatory words, one agent says Kessler and other agents are certain to dispute the election results if decertification fails. Keith Glass, who represents 13 current NBA players, resigned last week from the agents' group pushing for decertification, saying he was fed up with the propaganda coming from all three sides in the dispute.

"I don't think the group I just resigned from will go quietly into the night," Glass said. "They're going to do anything they can to overturn the vote."

If the union gets thrown out, it or the NBA will probably challenge the election, triggering an NLRB investigation. The NLRB is already probing the league's unfair labor practice complaint against the agents' group.

Sacramento All-Star Mitch Richmond also has filed a labor complaint with the NLRB against the NBA. He's hoping his complaint, that the league used the threat of a long lockout to coerce players into voting for the union, can overturn the election results.

Green Bay squeek by Chicago Bears

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Green Bay Packers' first half was an offensive masterpiece. Short passes, medium ones and a 99-yarder from Brett Favre to Robert Brooks that built leads of 21-0 and 24-7.

The second half, however, was a great escape.

The Chicago Bears, using a key interception and a blocked punt, not only got back in the game — they threatened to win it.

"Your heart is beating, you're worried, you're scared. But, geez, we held on," Favre said after the Packers survived for a 27-24 victory Monday night. "We did a lot of things. They came back strong. We knew that 21-0 was not going to hold it."

Green Bay's defense came to the rescue. The Bears, trailing 27-21, were at the 2-yard line and ready to take the lead but were forced to kick a field goal. Then with two minutes left, Reggie White forced a fumble by Bears quarterback Erik Kramer and Wayne Simmons recovered to save the victory.

"It was very difficult and very rewarding at the same time," said Packers coach Mike Holmgren. "I have never seen so many bad things happen in such a short time."

Green Bay, which won both games with the Bears last season by a combined 73-9 score, appeared on the way to another lopsided victory.

But a fourth-quarter interception by Donnell Woolford, who'd been burned on the 99-yarder, and a blocked punt by Anthony Marshall, giving the Bears the ball at the 2-yard line, put Chicago in position to win.

After the Packers twice stopped Rashaan Salaam from the 2-yard line, Kramer lofted a pass in the corner to Jeff Graham, who caught the ball out of bounds.

"It was a real intense moment," White said. "We knew they would give Rashaan the ball and we made the plays to stop them."

Kevin Butler's 20-yard field goal then made it 27-24 with just more than nine minutes remaining.

Favre was ready to put the game away. He hit Mark Chmura for a 26-yarder and connected on a 19-yarder to Edgar Bennett. Dorsey Levens then carried 21 yards to the Bears' 12. But Green Bay couldn't get in the end zone and this time a fumbled snap on a field goal attempt gave the Bears another chance.

But White sacked Kramer and forced a fumble and Simmons recovered at the Bears' 22 and the Packers ran out the clock, sending Chicago (1-1) to its eighth straight Monday night loss — five at home.

"I wasn't worried that we didn't get any points," Favre said. "We kept the ball for a while, got it out of our end, and Reggie makes his play and we win."

The Bears got close in the second half when Jim Flanigan, a defensive tackle whose father played linebacker for the Packers from 1967-70, caught a 2-yard touchdown pass from Kramer in the closing seconds of the third quarter to make it 27-14.

Favre, who was intercepted three times last week, threw his fifth of the night Woolford stepped in front of Brooks and returned 15 yards to the Packers 8-yard line. From there, Salaam rammed into the end zone to pull the Bears to 27-21 with 11:57 to go.

Green Bay scored on its first two possessions behind Favre's passing, Bennett's running and the play of Brooks to take a 14-0 lead.

On the third possession, just when it appeared Chicago had the Packers pinned deep, they jolted the Bears with the eighth 99-yard touchdown pass in NFL history and first since last season when San Diego's Stan Humphries connected with Tony Martin.

The play came with 10:08 remaining in the first half and made it 21-0.

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

107 SUNDERLAND ROAD
T, MASSACHUSETTS 01002-10
549-5840 549-

We have carpeting to fit your dorm!
$40-60

Your Ad Could Be Here
Collegian Advertising

Rush ΚΚΓ
Kappa Picnic
Wednesday, September 13
5:00-7:00 p.m.
Check this spot out tomorrow for more information
Any questions- contact Tara Myers
Telephone: 549-2646

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

PHI SIGMA KAPPA
Open Rush
TONIGHT through Thursday 7 - 9pm
Stop by 510 No. Pleasant St. Next to Fine Arts Center or call Chris at 549-7087
Break On Through . . . To The Other Side!

It's Back To School Time!
10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.
Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/16/95
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS
MIDAS
Mufflers • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

AEROBICS
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

Temporary Help Needed For Large
J. CREW
Clothing Sale
To be held at the Mullins Center at the University of Massachusetts Oct. 3 - Oct. 8
• Cashiers
• Baggers
• Set Up/Break Down
To Apply, Stop by Our Table
Wednesday, Sept. 13 10:00am - 4:00pm
or Thursday, Sept. 14 10:00am - 1:00pm
at the Mullins Center Rink

Reid

continued from page 20

and intensity. He told us how he loved those kids. He said how important the win was for his players. He commended his player's efforts, he praised the opposition. He shared his feelings.

"See you gotta' understand ... football, to me, is more than what you just saw on the field," Reid said in a softer voice. "I know every one of their classes, I know every one of their mothers and fathers, their sisters and brothers. And they have a problem, they come to me, and I want that. We're reaching out, and trying to make sure they reach their potential socially, academically as men, as well as football players.

"You see, when you lose, you hurt. Not because you put all that time in, that's our job, but because you hurt for them. When you win, you're pumped up. Not because ... ah [expletive], they'll fire me in two years, and everybody will forget about me down there. But ... I'm happy for them. I saw them fall down during preseason, getting hurt, and I'm thinking, 'hey, I'm not so sure if this is working.' Now ask me. They'll be able to take that lesson for the rest of their lives."

I approached him after the interview, and introduced myself. He grabbed my head with both of his hands, and kissed me on the cheek, saying that he loved guys who went to UMass. I walked out of there, and a writer for another newspaper said with a laugh, "Not many people can say they've been kissed by Jim Reid."

But I wasn't surprised, I mean, I didn't expect a kiss from the man. But the passion he has for the kids he coaches, for the game of football as he knows it, is something that is not exclusive to a mere sport or a particular person. And, despite meeting him just once and talking to him only twice, there was a lasting impression made on me by one Jim Reid.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

baseball

continued from page 20

• Anyone who saw how horribly LA third baseman Mike Busch, a former replacement player, has been treated by Brett Butler and the rest of the Dodgers, had to be happy to see that Busch has hit two homers in his last two games. Sunday, his pinch-hit dinger tied a game against Pittsburgh.

You have to wonder how long a club battling for a post- season spot can continue to harass a player who is contributing to their success.

• Speaking of the Dodgers/Rockies, how 'bout the fact that neither Kevin Tapani or Bret Saberhagen has done anything to help their new teams win.

• The Yankees have already said they will try to lower payroll next year. This almost definitely means ditching the Chicken Man, Wade Boggs and Tony Fernandez in favor of youngsters Russ Davis and Derek Jeter.

Tim Wakefield

However, if the Yankees say goodbye to first baseman Don Mattingly, it should be by Mattingly's choice. Donny Baseball is the last great Yankee, and as much as New England baseball fans may hate him, he has personified class throughout his career. For owner George Steinbrennar to simply drop the Yankee captain would be a disgrace, yet typical of him.

• How 'bout the Mets? After ditching over price has-beens Bobby Bonilla and Saberhagen, and going with a team of youngsters, baseball at Shea is fun again. With a future pitching staff of Bill Pulsipher, Jason Isringhausen and highly touted prospect Paul Wilson, the Mets will soon be the better New York team.

• The Minnesota Twins continuc to be the worst team in either league. Maybe if Kirby Puckett can play shortstop and second base every day, as well as third, catcher, and pitch, too, they might stand a chance next year.

• Wondering why fans of the NFL's 49ers are starting to cheer even harder for the San Francisco Giants? If the Giants, currently five and-a-half back in the NL wild card race, can make the playoffs, Deion Sanders will have to postpone his Dallas Cowboy debut a little longer.

• The Atlanta Braves continue to roll in the NL East, and while Ohio fans talk about an All-Buckeye State World Series between the Reds and Indians, an All-Indian series of Cleveland and Atlanta seems more likely. Boy, would those nickname protesters have a ball with that one.

Brian Perillo is a Collegian columnist.

Sports meeting

The Sports staff meeting has been changed to Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center Basement (opposite the ATM machines). Anyone interested in writing for sports is welcome, no experience necessary. For more information, call Candice Flemming, Sports Editor, at 545-1749.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

WRITE FOR DEVELOPING NATIONS!
CONTACT SYED MOHAMMED ALI-RAZA
113 CAMPUS CENTER
545-1851

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players
Wednesday - September 13
6:30pm
Campus Center Rm 168C
For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Servcies and ask for Sall y 549-2671 Ext. 181.

THE BAYBANK STUDENT VALUE PACKAGE®
IT'S ALL YOU NEED -
checking, savings, credit, the BayBank Card and more - at a low package price with no minimum balance requirement! The Student Value Package™ comes with:
■ BayBank Student Value Checking® plus a companion Savings Account
■ The BayBank Card for unlimited BayBank X-Press 24® transactions†
■ BayBank X-Press Check® to pay for purchases anywhere MasterCard® is accepted
■ A BayBank Visa® or MasterCard with a credit line of $300 or more
■ Reserve Credit overdraft protection with no annual fee
■ CheckView® with no monthly fee
Open your Student Value Package today! Visit our Amherst office at 78 East Pleasant Street, or call 1-800-BAY-FAST® anytime.
CHECK US OUT ON THE WEB AT http://www.BayBank.com LIVE in September
BayBank®
† To get the BayBank Student Value Package, you must provide proof of current student status. Credit products are for qualified applicants who are 18 or older.
‡ Other fees, such as transactions at X-Press 24 CASH® machines, non-BayBank ATMs, and designated point-of-sale terminals, are additional.
Member FDIC Equal Opportunity Lender

NFL

continued from page 20

touchdown. Davis was just as much of a factor in that game because when they threw away from Deion, they threw at Davis, and he was more than competent.

Free safety Merton Hanks intercepted three passes total in the two games played against Dallas during the year and was a starting selection to the Pro Bowl.

Strong safety Tim McDonald has scored two touchdowns on interceptions so far this season. Sanders had three TD's total last season.

San Francisco GM Carmen Policy summed up his team's feelings on the loss of Sanders. "May you succeed personally and may your team fail."

• Maybe all you need is a change in scenery? The team formerly known as the Los Angeles Rams has risen from the ashes from the banks of the Mississippi and is off to a 2-0 start.

Now I realize as many as eight other teams could open the season that way, but for a team that hadn't won back to back games since early in the 1991 season, it's a pretty good start. It should continue one more week as they face the expansion Carolina Panthers Sunday before they take on Chicago. I hope St. Louis fans enjoy it while it lasts.

• Speaking of moving teams and having success, maybe the simple change of their team's city name could produce winners.

After the first two weeks of the regular season, the two franchises that left Los Angeles are a perfect 4-0. The Rams and the Oakland Raiders seems to have acquired a taste for their new home's cooking. New York should take a lesson from them.

The Jets and the Giants are both 0-2 and have had similar seasons so far. Both got blown out in Week One, blew two touchdown leads in the fourth quarter, and fell in overtime in week two.

The New York quick fix? Just change the NY to NJ. They play in the Meadowlands which is across the Hudson anyway. There would be no moving expenses and players wouldn't have to uproot their families.

Their merchandise sales would go up as well because the nation's largest media would have to buy all new accessories for the new team.

If not a change in city names, how about a change in names of head coaches? They should find another Shula sibling, as the father and son tandem of Don and Dave are a perfect 4-0 to start off the season.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

men's soccer

continued from page 20

today to put a "W" on the board.

"I think they know what they have to do in order to keep the team up," Koch said. "I think they have to face the responsibility of why they didn't play well and make sure they have sorted that out before they step on the field tomorrow."

There is much to be expected from the entire team after the effort put forth in their last performance, but Koch is more concerned about getting his team back to basics and covering the whole field.

"I am looking for a better overall team performance, and having support on both the offensive and defensive ends of the field."

* * *

Minutemen notes: UMass forward Dave Siljanovski was named the Atlantic 10 men's soccer Player of the Week for the week ending Sept. 11.

Siljanovski in two games scored two goals and had two assists for a total of six points during the week.

In the 4-1 victory over Maine on Wednesday, he tallied two goals, including the game-winner, as well as an assist. He also assisted on the lone goal in UMass' loss to Fordham on Saturday.

water polo

continued from page 20

Pool Notes: UMass opened their 1995 campaign with four games Sept. 2 and 3 at the Labor Day Invitational tournament held at Annapolis, MD. The Minutemen went 3- 1 in their season opener, with wins over Bucknell, George Washington and Richmond. Its only loss was to arch rival Navy, who defeated UMass 9-7.

"Losing 9-7 to Navy the first weekend of the season was not that disappointing, because the transition during the first couple games is difficult," Yarworth said.

Stahl had an impressive debut, leading the Minutemen in scoring with 11 goals and six assists.

Senior Alex Mujica has carried the brunt of the load in net for Massachusetts with 11 quarters played and has a team low 6.55 goals per game. Junior Paul Engin has also been busy in goal, playing 7.5 quarters, while allowing an average of only eight GPG. Junior Jeff Lee and freshman Dane Teruya have also seen time at the goaltender position.

volleyball

continued from page 20

record, Kenny emphasizes how important her squad's performance was. The casual observer may not take note that the field was comprised of such Top 10 teams as Long Beach, Florida and Michigan State as well as nationally ranked notables UCSB, University of Southern Florida, San Jose State and Utah.

"The respect we've gotten from going to the UCSB Tournament is incredible. When you have Top 20 coaches coming up to players and the team as a whole telling them they can play anybody, it really boosts the program," Kenny said.

The Minutewoffien entered the tournament 3-0 coming off a three-game sweep of the Spalding Invitational at Hofstra University in Hempstead, NY, Sept. 1-2.

Leading the Minutewomen in the three game sweep was Rivcra with 12 kills and five blocks. Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky recorded 11 kills and 10 digs while junior outside hitter Dionne Nash totalled nine kills and 12 digs. The Minutewomen are now preparing for their next tournament, the home opener UMass Invitational, in the Curry Hicks Cage, Sept. 15-16.

ARE YOU AN ARTS & SCIENCES MAJOR OR PRE-MAJOR?
Come to the new Arts & Sciences Undergraduate Deans and Records Office!
We have reorganized to provide you with one-stop services for your special needs.
If you have questions about
• meeting graduation requirements...
• academic policies or procedures...
• completing your foreign language requirement...
• moving from pre-major to major status...
...PLEASE SEE US!
Location: E-24 Machmer
Phone: 545-2192
Hours: 8:30am-4:30pm weekdays

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS
Basketball/ Volleyball Court
FREE TO MEMBERS
Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes
Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmills • Life Cycle • Nordic Track
Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!
Group Discounts Get Your Friends Together And Save $$$
JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES
317 RUSSELL ST. • ROUTE 9
HADLEY
586-0633

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Help Wanted
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Motorcycles
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Monday, September 18 University wide try-it-a-thon 4-6pm. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions. While supplies last.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The sisters of Sigma Kappa sorority we're yelo to attend open Rush Tues 5:30-8:30 and Wed Thur 6:00-9:00pm No questions in order call 256-5887

AUTO FOR SALE

Mercury Marquis 1984 104 miles Runs excellent Power windows & doors 150 or B.O. Call 549 888

1995 Ian 4 speed Mitsubishi Mirage 189.00 miles, runs fine $400 or B.O 584-4866.

87 Dodge pickup, RAMSO power steering, long bed, CAP 118K $1918 (413)772-1978

1987 Honda Wagon 5 spd Accasetteeice serviced single owner 79no 253-4013

Students! 1979 VW Rabbit for sale Excellent shape only well great for students 74,000 miles Fun cars! $1000.00 or BO Jenn @ 413 774-7024

BOXING LESSONS

With retired pro Sparring Bags pro 585-0796

DEADHEAD SKIERS!

195cm Olin "Dark Star" Shaped Skis for sale Brand new! Paid $440.00 but will accept 80 for these collectors items KEEP JERRY ALIVE!! Jenn @ 4-3-774-7024 (not only at shows)

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling." Ours is "true young what I mean by it" What are we trying to tell me? Relevance Trust Heroes Total enlightenment Track down the hall? Neil Alliance Christian Fellowship committed to discipleship outreach and sport filled fellowship Join this or that! Info Mark or Elizabeth 253-7136

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9422

Furnished/Unfurnished apartments Various locations in Easthampton 1 bedroom townhouses Call ITO at 256-1855 Available immediately

Turners Falls 5 rm with porch & storage can be furnished 20 min to UM on Rte 63 Call Mr & Mrs Gillett No Pets 863-2038

FOR SALE

Brother word processor 2200 Includes manual spell check dual microspacing with spreadsheets 3 years old $250 call Justin 549-4884

IMusic 100 stiff cover, text and 13 tapes Only $30 Call 549-4884

Sony cassette player, plastic ear phones, adapter, cap, dual mini $130 or B.O. 253-7777

Three dorm-size fridges two from mid-Medium size $30.00 call now 549-4842

Toshiba 20" Stereo with remote 2x speaker, great for 549-8903

Macintach LC3 with Ram, two Cassettes $950 or best offer 498-0781

Matching sofa and loveseat $100 Maytag washer $50 549-7437

Teddy 1000SL Computer with Mon & soft MS DOS come Alaims 300 or BO call 5-1945

GREEN

22 hours. 42 dawgys 1000 acres Totally legal outdoor mississippi Two big pop stores Several tasters Massive lighting displays Concessions Smart Bars Tanning and record store bareans Life size Stone Henge replica Begins 4 pm September 23 and ends 7 pm September 24 A Primary Dim Production 18+ Call Blaine @ 546-0693

HAPPY BIRTHDAY PENELOPE

I love U!

HELP WANTED

Want staff-experienced only Apply within Kaleo Restaurant 546-7774

The Amherst Boy's and Girl's Club needs workstudy assistants for recreation programs Open 2:30 to 5:00 afternoons and 6:00 to 9:00 evenings Workers schedule on time available $5.25 per hour UM Scholarship hour of club at 390 Main St Contact Richard Brim 253-7261

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $1000s monthly Word Travel Seasonal & full time positions No exp necessary For Info call 1-206 634-0468 Ext C500

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206 545-4804 Ext N50011

Jobs for the environment Campaign with MassPirg to save our polluted rivers Flexible schedule $50 $75 / Day Call Terri 256-5434

Typesetter/Designer 1/2 time with MAC equipment typeset Drive and BW color scanner, Quark Express program need ed for spiritual publication Experience Ed real design sense Send resume by 10/01 to Miracles Magazine P.O Box 181 South Deerfield, MA 01373

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop congress from wrecking vital anti-pollution laws Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule- $8-$8/hr Can lead to summer job, career opportunity 584-9800

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted KRETE RESTAURANT 586-8755

PCA for male quad Evenings, overnights and weekends 7.85/hr Call 546-0966

Get paid for taking a test needed: education students planning to teach Spanish or wish to speak Spanish Tests will be held September 28, 29, and 30 at UMass Campus Center Payment up to $155.00 One to two days Space is limited You must preregister by September 20 For more info call Denise Cook or Nancy Hahn at 256-0444, M-F, 8:30-4:30 National Fashionism Systems

Drivers wanted $6.12 hr call Delivery Express 549-0077

Mois Torah reader needed Housing and salary Congregation Rodphey Sholom, Holyoke 534-5267

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits With e patient and supportive teacher Sign up early, limited schedule Call Peter 253-9283

MODEM USERS

Call the Playground BBS! 256-8083 Over 4,000 files online Twenty online games including registered LORD, BRE and Usurper Food Co-Op and Recipe Bases lots more! Stuff for everyone!

PERSONALS

To my next door neighbor Happy 19th!!! :-) Sigma love, DLC

Lee Warner drop your shorts & bend over Mr Baker Friend J Feech

SERVICES

Exotic nail design airbrushing 546-1794

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel Free w/ Sun Splash Tours Highest commissions, lowest prices Campus reps wanted! Sail Jamaica, Bahamas Florida 1 800 426 7710

WANTED

Students to join health club as group to save money call Molly 256 6438

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

HELP WANTED

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is seeking a responsible student with good typing skills to work in our classifieds department.

Knowledge / experience with Macintosh Computers and Quark XPress© is helpful but not required.

Applicants should contact Marty Pappas or Rosario Navarro in the Collegian Business Office, 113 Campus Center, or call 545-3500

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily collegiate newspaper!

Mandatory Collegian Staff Meeting

Wednesday, September 13
6:30 – 8:00pm

Also featuring:
Candidate's Night and Elections for Editor-in-Chief

Pizza will be served!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOU MAY STOP NOW, GONDO. LEST MISS STEWART THINKS US UNFRIENDLY!
ONCE YOU'VE PAID YOUR BROTHER'S GAMBLING DEBT, WE'LL FORGET THIS TAWDRY INCIDENT.
I CAN'T! I HAVEN'T THE MONEY!
I BELIEVE YOU, BUT GONDO MAY NOT!

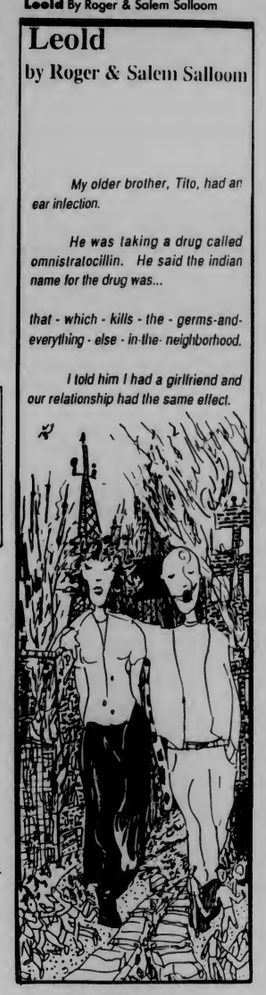
Generation X By Chris Lehman

LET'S SEE... IF I PASS BY GOODELL, OR IS IT HERTER?
MAYBE IF I TURN LEFT AT DRAPER...
AHA!! IT'S OFFICIAL!
WHAT'S OFFICIAL?
I OFFICIALLY DON'T KNOW WHERE THE HELL I AM.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

AS YOU REQUESTED, I BENCHMARKED OUR COMPANY AGAINST FIVE WORLD-CLASS COMPANIES
THE COMPARISONS ARE IRRELEVANT BECAUSE WE'RE IN DIFFERENT INDUSTRIES. BUT THAT DIDN'T STOP ME
WHY CAN THEY MAKE A POTATO CHIP IN ONE SECOND BUT IT TAKES US MONTHS TO DEVELOP SOFTWARE?
I THINK THEY OIL THE CHIPS

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



Leold
by Roger & Salem Salloom
My older brother, Tito, had an ear infection.
He was taking a drug called omnistralocillin. He said the indian name for the drug was... that - which - kills - the - germs-and-everything - else - in-the- neighborhood.
I told him I had a girlfriend and our relationship had the same effect.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DOGBERT THE CONSULTANT
ONE WAY TO LOOK AT YOUR PROBLEM IS THAT NOBODY LIKES YOUR PRODUCTS
BUT I DON'T KNOW HOW TO FIX THAT. SO I RECOMMEND FORMING INTERNAL BUSINESS UNITS TO BICKER WITH EACH OTHER WHY WOULD YOU RECOMMEND THAT?
WELL, I'D BE LYING IF I SAID I LIKED YOU.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

HEY, MOOSE... I WORK ED OUT ALL NIGHT!
CHECK OUT THIS NEW PHYSIQUE
YOU DIDN'T WORK OUT ALL SUMMER. I SAW YOU IN YESTERDAY'S COMIC. SCHNEIDER BIG OH YEAH

Business As Usual By Bill Porter

CREW, THIS IS CLERVOY! CREW 6 REQUESTING BACK UP. WE NEED SOME HELP ON THE VOLLEYBALL COURT CLERVOY OUT!
WE'RE ON OUR WAY!
ARE WE GETTING HALF ENOUGH GUYS TO PLAY?
YEH, CREW 14 IS COMING NOW

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Joey By Joey

YOU KNOW AS SOON AS YOU STICK YOUR HEAD OUT THE WINDOW, YOUR HAT WILL BLOW OFF... AND I'M NOT GOING BACK TO GET IT THIS TIME!
IDLE THREAT OR NOT, SKIPPER WASN'T TAKING ANY CHANCES WITH HIS NEW FEDORA.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs That You've Gotten On The Wrong PVTA Bus

10. After several hours you notice you're in downtown Phoenix.
9. Your driver is a squirrel.
8. No license plate.
7. Driver greets each passenger with maniacal laughter.
6. Front windshield caked with blood.
5. Onboard computer running Windows '95.
4. Driver keeps complaining about drained dylithium crystals.
3. Gun-toting maniac keeps pacing the aisle mumbling "take the bus ... forget the fuss ..."
2. Rollerbladers seem paralyzed with fear when it approaches.
1. No seats.

Collegian Classifieds, we have a whole page to fill!

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES
March 21-April 20
An idea that may seem crazy just might have some value. Discuss it with someone who knows more than you, then, let fly! Your creativity could be a gold mine this week.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A big expense may be looming. A strong, carefully thought-out savings program will ease any financial worries if you don't already have such a program, now is the time to start—it's not too late

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Staying on course will help you reach a romantic goal. If you feel as though you have too much work to do, consider rearranging your schedule. The change of pace could be all the refreshment you need.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Expanding your thinking to include the unexpected pays off big this week. A team effort to reach a working compromise means you won't miss a small detail—projects you attempt come out flawlessly.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Pay close attention to money this week, especially if it's not your own. The stakes may be higher than you think. Accepting someone's trust this week has long standing repercussions

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A fast-changing circumstance may have your head spinning. If you step back and ask advice from an old and trusted friend, you'll be much better equipped to handle things

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
A domestic dispute may escalate without proper attention. If you've been neglectful of a mate or significant other, consider a show of TLC. Broaching this problem will open the door for you to set new goals together

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Forgetting your homework could cost you big this week, as a higher up may be watching closely. Accept a new challenge if it's offered but don't toot your own horn too loudly—that could backfire

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Your attention to detail is in demand this week as many friends and acquaintances ask you for help and advice. Remember that less is more at least where advice is concerned and you'll do well

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Although a criticism may have you feeling a bit down, cheer up! A chance for you to really shine is closer than you think. A mean spirited person will be most chagrined just to see you happy

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
You may be feeling hungry for information this week. Satisfy the urge as well as you can, but resist the temptation to immediately share what you've learned. Others may not have your burning interest

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A trip out of town leads to big things—take steps to ensure that you don't lose any progress that you make, particularly in the professional arena. Take time out this weekend for an adventure

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacClean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reilly
Production Supervisor ..... Greg Iafrate
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson, Mark Mitchell, Amy Paradysz, Katheryn Garcia

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Pepperoni Pizza	Stir Fry Beef & Veggies
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Chicken Cacciatore
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
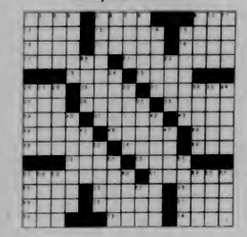
Cheese Pizza	Garden Sandwich
Garden Chili	Chicken Cacciatore

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



Quote of the Day

"The great pleasure of a dog is that you may make a fool of yourself with him and not only will he not scold you, he will make a fool of himself too."

–Samuel Butler

Sports Notice

For anyone interested in joining the men's crew, there will be an informational meeting Wednesday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 174. For more information on men's crew, call 545-0487. No experience is necessary.

Sports

UM looks to rebound vs. Siena

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Resilience is often a characteristic of a champion.

If the Massachusetts men's soccer team (2-1-1) would like to repeat as Atlantic 10 champions, it must display its resiliency today at 7 p.m. at Sizer Park in Chicopee against Siena, as they try and rebound from Saturday's disappointing 2-1 loss to Fordham.

On the schedule, the opponent for today's match says Siena, but Minuteman coach Sam Koch seems to feel that the real advisary will actually be UMass itself.

"We're not even worried about them. We are worried about how we have to play," Koch said. "We are not playing well and we have to refocus on how we play well. Siena is not even a concern."

The Minutemen, who are accustomed to a short passing game with quick touches, were unusually bunched together and were unable to cash in when their opportunities came to them.

Koch offered what he would try to do in practice in an attempt to return to UMass' winning ways.

"We are going to go back to one and two touches. Just doing the extras, making sure we are in good supporting position and making sure we are switching the field," Koch explained. "We must make sure we are taking good shots and making good shot selections."

Shots were in abundance against Fordham, but goals were hard to come by. The Minutemen ran into a hot goaltender as well as not being able to convert on a couple of occasions, and must turn those scoring opportunities into goals at a higher rate.

"Our objective is to create as many good chances as we can in a game. We didn't do that on Saturday. We must verbally communicate a lot better then we did and make sure people stay within their roles."

The team was visibly deflated at the loss to Fordham, and must find it within themselves to not let a loss like that happen again.

"I know they are not happy with themselves and they shouldn't be. They know the job that they didn't do and I'm sure they'll be ready," Koch said.

"I wouldn't want to be Siena tomorrow."

As demoralizing as a loss to a team that won just six games a year ago could be, Koch feels his squad is aware enough to know what needs to be different

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

The men's soccer team looks to rebound from Saturday's loss to Fordham today against Siena.

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 17

Jim Reid leaves a lasting impression

"Andrew, a Jim Reid called from the University of Richmond. Call him back and tell his secretary to get him out of a meeting," said a fellow Collegian writer as I entered the office.

Get him out of a meeting? Tell his secretary to leave whatever he is doing, and get him to talk to me, Andrew Bryce, measly ol' college newspaper writer? Never before, in my three-plus years writing for the paper have I ever been told by a coach to get him out of a meeting.

Andrew Bryce

Then again, I've rarely dealt with a coach like Jim Reid.

I didn't know much about Reid. I knew the basics — he was a coach of the Massachusetts football team for 19 years, the head coach from 1986 to 1991. He quit the Minuteman coaching post after learning that the scholarships he had promised players had been cut out of the budget.

I also learned that everybody loved him, simply because of the fact that everybody liked to talk about him. From the woman who works in an office on campus, to former students, to those in the athletic department, Jim Reid came up in conversation after learning that he and his Richmond Spiders were coming to town last Saturday.

I called him when I got a chance, and got him right out of that meeting he was in. Reid answered the phone cheerfully, and talked to me for a bit.

"Ask me anything, I'll give you some snappy answers," Reid said.

And for the next 25 minutes, Jim Reid and I talked about his past, his present and his future. I didn't ask him questions, and try to squeeze answers from him. He didn't give generic answers just to please a stinking media person.

I spoke with him. We had a talk. I may as well have been at a coffee shop, talking to a friend I had known for years. It wasn't a usual phone interview, where there can be a sense of uncasiness. Not with Jim Reid.

If I could, I would write out the entire discussion we had. Because when I got off the phone, the other sportswriters in the office saw me. They saw the smile on my face. They also heard me try to explain how pleasing it was to talk to a man like Jim Reid.

He made me feel like I was something special. He didn't seem to talk down to me, like other coaches have done in the past. He was speaking as if he was actually interested in what I was talking about. I didn't feel I had any stupid questions because it wasn't possible. Not with Jim Reid.

The phone conversation ended when Reid wanted to meet me. He told me to come after his private practice on Friday, or, if I could, to meet him at the hotel the team stayed at. The team was having dinner, and he asked me if I wanted to meet him there.

I didn't go, but I did see him after his team's 21-7 upset win over UMass. He was pumping his fist and jumping around. And as the reporters faced him after the game, Jim Reid spoke. He fought the tears as he spoke about how his players played with much heart

Turn to REID, page 17

Water polo beats Spiders, Blue Jays

By Teri Klein
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts water polo team extended its record to 6-1 this weekend at the Cambridge Invitational. The Minutemen went 2-0, posting victories over Richmond and John Hopkins in the event which was co-hosted by Harvard and M.I.T.

After struggling against Richmond in its first game of the Invitational, Massachusetts was able to come away with a 16-14 win over the Spiders. Luis Limardo led the way in scoring for the Minutemen with six goals and three assists.

Led by six more goals from Limardo, the Minutemen were at their best in their decisive 26-6 defeat of John Hopkins, which pleased UMass coach Russ Yarworth.

"At the John Hopkins game, we finally came out and played how we are capable of playing, and really dominated the game," Yarworth said.

Despite starting off the season with a strong record, Yarworth feels his team is still in the defining process.

"We really haven't clicked yet. That is a little bit of a function of having a new group this year," Yarworth said. "It is the first time in a couple years that we had to change our tactics and it's taking a little while to get it together."

Yarworth has started a different line-up every game in an attempt to find an identity and a cohesive combination.

According to Limardo, one of the major differences in this year's team is their ability to score.

"I think we are a better team than last year. Last year, only two or three people could score goals," Limardo said. "This year, there are a lot of people who can score and play both offense and defense."

With the loss of Javier Gonzalez, the Minutemen are looking for a spread-out offense, that will also incorporate some talented freshmen.

In addition to leadership, senior captain John Luviano has been an offensive contributor with nine goals and 11 assists. Freshman Brian Stahl has stepped up for the Minutemen along with Gabriel Marrero, two top recruits who are showing signs of promise.

Turn to WATER POLO, page 17

V-ball gains respect at tourney

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team took their show on the road this weekend competing in the Santa Barbara Tournament in Santa Barbara, Calif. They returned with mixed results going 1-3 on the trip, but have more experience to show for it.

In the first west coast match, UMass coach Bonnie Kenny's squad disposed of the University of Toledo in three games 15-6, 17-5, and 15-10. The win improved UMass' record to 4-0 while the Rockets fell to 2-5. This was the squads only win, as they returned to Amherst with a 1-3 record for the tournament, 4-3 on the season.

The second match saw UMass post its first loss of the season, losing to No. 14 nationally ranked and host UCal Santa Barbara, in four games 10-15, 15-11, 15-3 and 15-8. Rivera was on fire with 27 kills, the second-highest single match total in the four-year history of the UCSB tournament.

"We were in every game, never really out of the match despite playing in front of a tough home crowd," Kenny said.

In the third match, the Minutewomen fell to nationally ranked Utah in three games 15-11, 15-6 and 15-11. Rivera led UMass with 15 kills while sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan tallied a team-high 11 digs in addition to nine kills.

"We played very flat, not prepared to play and totally unemotional," Kenny said.

In the final match of the tournament, UMass fell to San Jose State in a five-game battle with scores of 14-16, 17-15, 9-15, 15-5 and 15-17.

"On paper we killed them. The effort was there and the match could have gone either way," Kenny said.

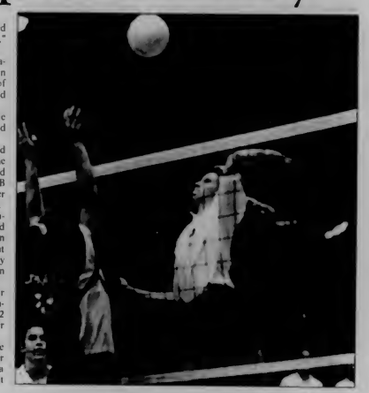
Once again, Rivera led the squad with 21 kills and 19 digs finishing the tournament with 75 kills, the third highest total in the UCSB Tournament history, thus earning her a spot on the All-Tournament Team.

"When your playing in a tournament where people have never heard of UMass, it's incredible that you can get someone on an All-Tournament team. I don't think there's anybody out there that wouldn't want her on their team," Kenny said.

Sophomore middle blocker Michelle Paciorek led UMass defensively with a school record of 12 blocks for the match, and tied her personal best of 12 kills.

"This is the first time Michelle played against this type of high caliber team. I think she has really turned a corner from last year and was a great force at the net," Kenny said.

While the casual observer may not be impressed with the 1-3 tournament



COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Michelle Paciorek played well at the UCSB tourney this past weekend setting a school record of 12 blocks.

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 17

Dodgers, Rockies still battling for first

Brian Perillo on Baseball

The baseball season is winding down, and for the first time in baseball history, a majority of teams in each league are still thinking post-season.

There are only about 20 games left, and with the new wild card system in place, most teams still have a shot at a playoff berth.

The only legitimate battle for a division crown still going on is in the National League West, where neither the Dodgers or Rockies are pulling away. The Angels post All-Star break slide has made the AL West interesting, but the majority of baseball excitement during the cool September days will come from the wild card races.

• In the American League, the Yankees, whose hired gun David Cone is looking unbeatable, and Seattle, with their powerful lineup, seem to be the frontrunners. Kansas City and Texas, right at .500, are still in it, but don't look to have enough.

• In the National League, the favorite is the runner-up in the NL West, with Houston and a healthy Jeff Bagwell also in the hunt.

• Speaking of the wild card, I must mention how ridiculous it is that if the Yankees make the post-season, they would play slumping California in the first round. Division champion Boston, on the other hand, would have to match up with Cleveland and the best record in baseball.

Roger Clemens

Excuse me, but shouldn't there be a reward for the team that actually won the division, not the other way around?

• Despite the fact that the Red Sox ran into a brick wall in the Bronx last weekend, they are still right on track in the AL East and will be going to the playoffs for the first time since 1990.

The big debate seems to be who the Sox should start in the playoffs. Manager Kevin Kennedy has said he will go with a three man rotation, at least in the first round.

1. Roger Clemens, back in the form that made him a three-time Cy Young award winner, gets this vote for Game One. Clemens, both physically and mentally, is the Sox' ace. He has also been the only consistent winner on the staff over the last month.

2. Tim Wakefield, whose knuckleball is probably the biggest reason the Sox have run away with the division, is unbeatable when he has control of his knuckler. If not, as we have seen over his last few starts, he gets rocked.

Wakefield can still be a very positive contributor to the staff, and, unless Game Two is in the dead air of the Kingdome, should get the nod. However, Kennedy has to learn not to stick with him too long. Boston's bullpen is deep, especially if lefty starter Rheal Cormier winds up there for the playoffs, and should be used before the Sox get in too much of a hole.

3. Eric Hanson, thus far a 13-game winner, is next. The righty has also been inconsistent, but has pitched most of this season without his best pitch, the curveball.

Depending on the situation, the Sox could go with Cormier in Game Four, or send Clemens on three days rest if they face elimination. Lefty Zane Smith, who couldn't last two innings against my intramural softball team, gets bypassed in the post-season.

Turn to BASEBALL, page 17

Deion Sanders shows no loyalty

Justin Smith on the NFL

The ink is dry and now the saying, "Everything's big in Texas" includes Deion Sanders' paycheck, not to mention his ego.

Sanders' comment during press day before the Super Bowl was "Deion Sanders is doing things this year that he won't be doing next year. Deion is playing for $1 million dollars this year, and that can't support my lifestyle, and Deion's lifestyle is not going to change."

Now he has a five-year, $30 million dollar contract, including a $13 million dollar signing bonus to support his lifestyle.

Deion's prime job was to neutralize either Alvin Harper or Michael Irvin when the Niners met Dallas in the Conference Championship game. Now in the 'D' of Big D, he will be one-on-one with the best receiver ever to step on a NFL gridiron, Jerry Rice.

Dallas owner Jerry Jones usually gets what he wants. He said he would sign Sanders. He restructured his team's payroll around getting him. Now he has him. Anyone outside the city of Dallas hopefully now realizes that Deion is so full of himself, that you truly can't root for him and America's team.

Loyalty in modern sports today usually doesn't outweigh one's checkbook, but more than the money is the fact that Deion can say he is the main reason for each of his team's successes. His ego could balloon even more by being able to boast he was guarding the Golden Gate when the Niners dethroned the Cowboys and when he went to Dallas, the Cowboys were able to ride into the sunset once again.

Deion isn't above it.

Jones and Sanders is a match made in Hades, as Dallas should be headed to Sun Devil Stadium in January. The only question surrounding Prime Time is how long will he remain in the baseball city where he abandoned his former football team?

On paper, they are the team with the most talent and should be favored over San Francisco, and the rest of the league, to win their fifth Lombardi Trophy. But what will the ramifications be?

His break the bank salary will hurt in resigning other members of this team, and could ultimately be the demise of the Cowboys, just as the Herschel Walker deal was the reason for the rejuvenation of Dallas.

Russell Maryland was "asked" to restructure his deal in order to accommodate the addition of Sanders and Maryland was not obliging. Don't expect to see Maryland in Texas next season.

Jerry Rice was not a happy man after his game Sunday as everyone asked about the superstar who has jumped ship. The mild-mannered superstar exploded upon being asked what the loss of Deion does to his team.

The outraged Rice pointed to the rest of the secondary, saying they don't get the credit they deserve. He has a very good point.

The opening minutes of the 1995 NFC Championship Game saw Eric Davis, not Sanders, intercepting an Aikman pass and running it back for a

Turn to NFL, page 17

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 6 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, September 13, 1995

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Hey you...

Jen Flaherty, a junior Spanish major, recruits students to sign a petition for the State to stop financial aid cuts.

Soccer rebounds in Chicopee
UMass men's soccer coach Sam Koch's troops rebounded to trounce the Sienna Saints last night (See Sports, page 12).

UMass prof helps turn the tide
Professor Rutherford H. Platt headed a national committee on flood control in California's American River Basin (See News, page 3).

Spin the bottle
Juliana Hatfield will be touring in support of her album Only Everything. She'll hit the Happy Valley this Thursday (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Break out the rain gear this morning because showers are likely with a chance for thunder this afternoon. Chances of rain in the evening as the mercury falls to about 65.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 65	HIGH: 75 LOW: 65	HIGH: 70 LOW: 60

19-year-old to run for Springfield mayor

By Robert Dunn
Collegian Staff

Every political campaign has its dark horse candidate, but what makes the one in the Springfield mayor's race unusual is that she only became eligible to vote last year.

Nineteen-year-old Chelan Jenkins has thrown her hat in the ring to become the next mayor of Springfield in the hope to unseat current mayor, Robert Markel.

Jenkins is a lifelong Springfield resident who attended Commerce High School, but received her GED through the Springfield Urban League.

Because of her age, Jenkins has found herself the target of some ageism during the campaign.

"[Politicians] will say, 'She has no political experience, or she's nineteen, she doesn't know how to run a campaign'," she said.

She feels that her lack of formal political experience is an advantage rather than a hinderance.

"I definitely think it's an advantage," said Jenkins. "One reason people have voter apathy and don't vote now is because of the current system."

Political procedure

Jenkins' first step on the road to City Hall was to actually get onto the ballot, a relatively simple process, according to the Springfield Election Commission.

All that is needed is to fill out the necessary nomination paperwork and then o collect at least 500 certified signatures.

After the signatures are collected and certified by the election commission, the candidate is officially on the ballot.

Once on the ballot, the candidate needs money to run any serious campaign, an area in which Jenkins is troubled.

Jenkins said that the money that she has raised so far has been from private donations, but that amount is the least so far of the five candidates running.

According to the Massachusetts Campaign and Finance Office, as of August 31st Jenkins' campaign has raised only $1,397, while Mayor Markel's re-election campaign has raised $44,381.

Jenkins quickly dismissed any notion that her campaign is designed to just draw publicity or spotlight a particular issue.

"We fully intend to win," she said.

Inspired to run

Jenkins' main inspiration to run for mayor came after the Ben Schoolfield killing in Springfield.

"Benjamin's death was probably my greatest inspiration to run," Jenkins said.

According to Jenkins, Schoolfield was shot by a Springfield police offi-

Turn to MAYOR, page 2

Women's shelter needs support

Volunteers needed to help continue its many vital services

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Women's shelters across the country are a vital source of survival for women who suffer from domestic violence, but shelters rely heavily on volunteers for their survival. The Womanshelter Companeras is no exception.

The staff of Womanshelter Companeras is looking for volunteers.

"We provide a safe shelter for women who are fleeing abusive situations," said Edie Jennings-Wigfall, the volunteer coordinator for the shelter.

Volunteers and interns are needed to do many jobs. Some of which include helping to organize special events, researching new resources for the shelter and fundraising.

"In order to provide quality services to the communities that we serve, we need volunteers. Volunteers make our programs work and they also keep us connected with the community," Jennings-Wigfall said.

Since the shelter's opening in 1980, the volunteer program, the services provided by the staff and the shelter have expanded. Originally, the volunteers and interns answered the 24 hour emergency hotline, now they participate in all the services offered, Jennings-Wigfall said.

In addition to answering the hotline, volunteers and interns provide legal advocacy for women seeking restraining orders, advocate for women who need housing and welfare, facilitate a weekly support group, help educate teenagers in the Teen Dating Violence Awareness Program, and participate in the Community Education Program.

"Interns do more than volunteers," Jennings-Wigfall said, "They become unpaid staff people, do more of the administrative work and work directly with the paid staff."

Training for volunteers and interns begins September 22. "We have a very intense training program," Jennings-Wigfall said, "It begins Friday evening and ends Sunday afternoon."

All volunteers and interns are educated about the roots of battering and the myths surrounding violence against women. They are taught how to give clients and callers the help and information they need. They also learn to give emergency first aid.

Volunteers and interns who participate in the Teen Dating Violence Awareness Program, the Community Education Program and the Legal Emergency Assistance Program receive further training.

Jennings-Wigfall stressed the importance of having positive male role models. Male volunteers are welcome to help with the Teen Dating Violence Awareness Program, the Community Education Program and with research development. Men cannot participate in other volunteer and intern opportunities, because women may not feel comfortable dealing with a man while they are leaving an abusive situation, she said.

Womanshelter Companeras has a confidential location. Anyone interested in volunteering or interning can call 538-9717 and ask for the Volunteer Coordinator to set up a meeting. Training sessions will take place in Holyoke.

"It is a very rewarding experience," Jennings-Wigfall said, "A woman is killed because of domestic violence every 12 days in Massachusetts. When you are helping a woman out at the shelter, you know you are saving a life.

Outdated computers cause trouble; housing office addressing problem

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Both Housing Services and the Bursar's Office are still recovering from last week's overspill of students who had inadvertently been withdrawn from housing.

According to Assistant Housing Director Gerald Quarles, 240 students were displaced into either the Campus Center Hotel, or dormitory swing spaces or out-of-service rooms.

Paul Page, vice-chancellor for Administration and Finance, attributed the error to the outdated computer system currently being used by the Bursar's and other connected offices in the Whitmore Administration Building.

The "batch" system, which can take up to two days to process student information, is also the primary cause of the mishap from the perspective of University Controller and Director of Finance Michael Sullivan.

"It's a 1970s system," he said. "The system needs modernizing and updating."

The old system

Sullivan said that after the simultaneous retirement of longtime bursar Robert Mischel and assistant bursar Katherine Fisk, there were few left at the University, including recently resigned Bursar Karen Shelley who knew how to manipulate the complex software as did the two departing staff members.

"Bob [Mischol] retired, Bob had grown up with the system," Sullivan said. "And unfortunately, it was very difficult for Karen [Shelley]."

Despite allegations that Shelley had not deposited bill payments from students on the Aug. 11 due date, Sullivan said that the deposits were not late.

"[Shelley] and I have to sit down and look at where she can be most of use to me," Sullivan said of Shelley's new position...

Shelley, who left her post on August 31, has since taken on "special projects within the Financial Services Area," a press release said, where she will work under Sullivan.

"[Shelley] and I have to sit down and look at where she can be most of use to me," Sullivan said of Shelley's new position, which he describes not as a demotion, but as a "lateral transfer."

According to Sullivan, Shelley, who is on vacation through Monday, neither handed in a letter of resignation, nor did she give a reason for her desire to step down.

Shelley's former position is now held by Assistant Bursar Gloria Smigielski, who will act as Bursar until the University hires a replacement, a task that will hopefully be completed by spring, according to the press release.

To remedy the computer situation, Sullivan suggested installing an "on-line real-time" system in lieu of the older one.

The system favored by Sullivan would enable any data entered by office employees to be registered almost immediately, virtually ensuring that student information would be consistently updated.

Housing changes

Acting Housing Director Michael Gilbert said his office is also looking to bring in a new computer system, and with it, a new outlook.

"I don't think we can over-rely on other agencies to track our own information," Gilbert said, referring to the fact that the Bursar's office computer is the lead unit in the information relay.

In the meanwhile, however, Housing Services is most concerned with the placement of the 240 students, some of which have been housed appropriately, and all of whom should be accommodated relatively soon, Gilbert said.

Gilbert said this year's total of 265 "no-show" students at the dormitories should mean that several spaces are available, and will be filled in the next week.

JEFF DIGIOVANNA/COLLEGIAN

One "mudslide" on the rocks, please

Construction workers on campus help fix pipes at UMass that need attention.

News of Abu-Jamal is long-awaited

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Following a major rally yesterday, Black students and faculty at the University of Massachusetts reacted to the possibility that an imprisoned Black journalist may receive a retrial.

Controversy has been at the center of the case of Mumia Abu-Jamal, the Philadelphia journalist who is thought by many to have been wrongly accused of the murder of police officer Daniel Faulkner on December 9, 1981.

Due to his membership in the Black Panther Party in the 1960s, and his outspoken writing, Abu-Jamal is also thought by many to have been framed for the homicide, which landed him on death row after an enigmatic trial.

Yesterday afternoon, the defense for the convicted was granted a motion for retrial.

Daniel Lizana, President of the Black Student Union, first learned of the case as a high school student in Springfield through a visitor to his school discussing the strange circumstances, and has followed Abu-Jamal's plight since.

"It seems as though [the authorities] wanted to show him as an example," Lizana said. "That's why things took so long to get rolling."

Lizana admitted he was surprised to learn of yesterday's events, but said he knew there would be some action eventually.

"All the while, [the case] was building momentum," he said. "That's religious support. That's commitment."

Afro-American Studies Professor Michael Thelwell said that the case has even larger ramifications than just those pertaining to Abu-Jamal.

"It's a victory for American justice," he said. "And for the American judicial process which is faced with well-deserved skepticism right now."

Lizana agreed with Thelwell, saying the alleged mistrial which sent Abu-Jamal to prison might become less likely in the future.

"When someone's on death row, that's usually pretty much it," he said. "The precedent there was that [Abu-Jamal] was gone."

However, the retrial is not even a certainty yet, and even if the case is retried, Thelwell said that a few necessary factors will have to be in place for Abu-Jamal to have a chance at freedom.

"We can't predict the outcome of the trial will be," he said. "But as long as the brother has due process, full and adequate representation, and is seen to receive a fair trial, which was clearly not the case the first time, then it's a clear victory for the justice of the system."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Sept. 13

Theater — Auditions: The King Stag, by Carlo Gozzi, translated and edited by Ellen Kaplan, SC. Theatre 14, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, SC, Hallic Flanagan Studio Theatre, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schutzel '96, SC, TV Studio, 7–10 p.m.

Meeting — Korean Student Association's first general meeting, UACC Room, under Worcester D.C., all welcome, 7 p.m.

Panel — "Bosnia and the World: How to Stop the Killing." Frances Crowe, American Friends Service Committee; Michael Klare, Five College Peace and World Securities Studies (PAWSS); and Glenn Ruga, Friends of Bosnia. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Yoga and Meditation Seminar — Meet Dada Akilesh, yogi monk and social activist in a seminar on meditation and the spiritual life. Campus Center, Room 309, 7 p.m.

Fair — Volunteer Fair with 40 agencies recruiting volunteers and answering questions. Campus Center Concourse.

Thursday, Sept. 14

GLBT Lecture — The Return of Stonewall, speaker Lloyd Pratt, 545–4824, free and open to the public, 803 Campus Center, 12–1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League (RAIL), Cape Cod Lounge, 2 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schutzel '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The King Stag, by Carlo Gozzi, translated and edited by Ellen Kaplan, SC. Theatre 14, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 15

Meeting — TimeOut Student Fellowship, games, contemporary worship, and speaker Elizabeth Bachrach–Tan on "Promises." sponsored by the Alliance Christian Fellowship, for info call Mark at 253–0361 or Elizabeth at 253–7206. Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Community — Pre–Shabbat Yoga, 549–1710, Hillel House, 4:30 p.m.

Community — The Shabbos Experience, a celebration of the Shabbos, food, prayer, songs, and stories, all welcome, 549–4094, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Community — Shabbat services, dinner following service, $4 for students, $6.50 for non–students, 549–1710, Hillel House, 6 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Film — Women's Center Movie Marathon, includes Thelma and Louise, free, Merrill, AC, 7:30 p.m.

Sports — Boston Bruins Black and White Game, intrasquad scrimmage, tickets $15.50 and $10.50, $2 off for children and UMass students, call Mullins Center Box Office at 545–3001, 7 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, by Furipides, directed by Sarah Sherman, FAC, 6 p.m.

Notices

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256–8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1 – Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co-op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co–operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or call 545–0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545–0137.

Special event — Ticket Sale: 21st Annual Multiband Pops, presented by UMass Department of Music and Dance. Mullins Center Box Office.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545–0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696–7752.

Volunteers Needed — The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee needs student volunteers to ring the bells in Old Chapel. Will teach and train anyone with reasonable musical ability. Call Ken Samonds at 545–1077 for more information.

Support Group — Rebecca Reid will lead a support group for single people over 30 Sunday nights, 7:30–9 p.m., low fee, single, divorced, widowed, all sexual orientations welcome.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256–8482.

Campus Police Log

Accident

Sept. 11

There was a minor two–vehicle accident on Presidents Drive.

Injured Person

Sept. 11

An individual who was having a seizure in Thompson Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Larceny

Sept. 11

There was a bicycle stolen from a rack by Mackimmie Residence Hall.

There was a book bag stolen from John Q. Adams Residence Hall.

There was a bicycle stolen from a rack by Emerson Residence Hall.

There was a parking decal stolen from a vehicle in Lot 29.

There was a bicycle stolen from a rack by Melville Residence Hall.

Alice Ping Li, 23, of 56 Oakland St., Brighton, was arrested for shoplifting after recording a false value at the Textbook Annex.

Drug law offenses

Sept. 11

The odor of marijuana was investigated at John Adams Residence Hall.

Noise complaint

Sept. 11

There was a report of loud drums being played at Smith memorial garden by Van Meter Residence Hall.

Alarm

Sept. 11

Burnt food in the Lewis Residence Hall kitchen set off an alarm.

Health/Safety hazard

Sept. 11

There was a report of an open manhole near Cance Residence Hall. The cover was located and replaced.

Annoying behavior

Sept. 12

There was a report of a dispute between roommates in Cashin Residence Hall.

There was a report of individuals yelling obscenities at Johnson Residence Hall.

■ mayor

continued from page 1

cer after being pulled over in an allegedly stolen van, which was later found not to have been stolen.

Jenkins said she felt that the entire episode was dealt with poorly.

"The whole incident was just swept under the rug," she said.

Jenkins said she blames the mayor directly for his apparent indifference, an attitude which may have touched off many rallies and protests in the Springfield area earlier this year.

According to Jenkins, there have been no formal polls taken by any objective source. The ones that are available have been put together by the candidates' respective campaign offices.

Jenkins target constituency is the young voter. She said that her best experiences so far on this campaign have been her opportunities to work with young people.

"Young people are thirty percent of the population, but one hundred percent of the future," she said.

Want to write for the fabulous world of

Arts & Living?

Than why not attend the new writer's meeting
Sept. 14 at 6 p.m. at 113 Campus Center and learn how you can write about music, movies, fashion, concerts and a whole lot more. Not enough incentive? You even get free pizza!
Questions? Call Tara at 545–1361.

Photographers Needed!

Got a camera? Want experience in photojournalism?

Contact Daymion Smith
113 Campus Center
545-1701

ATTENTION COLLEGIAN STAFF!

MA[illegible]

All Staff Meeting

(First of the Year)

TONIGHT!

[illegible]NESDAY, SEPTEMBER [illegible]

6:30 - 8:00PM

[illegible]RE? THE COMMONW[illegible]

Candidates Night & Election for Editor-in-Cheif

Pizza!

Dairy farm moving to Hadley

Change means better teaching, lower costs and travel time

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts college of Food and Natural Resources will close its dairy farm in South Deerfield and move to the Hadley Farm. For students and faculty, the move means lower costs and improved teaching methods.

Robert Helgesen, Dean of the College, said in a recent press release that the move is the most logical solution to better meet the needs of students during a time of budget cuts.

"The move to Hadley Farm," Helgesen said, "will improve our undergraduate teaching program and make our livestock operation more cost efficient during a time of limited resources."

The University has operated the South Deerfield dairy as a research and educational center since the mid–70's.

Helgesen attributes the need for a more efficient facility to the increased enrollment in the veterinary and animal science programs. The new facility will have upgraded technology to aid in the teaching process and make access to the University livestock easier for students.

The new facility will have the capacity to hold 30 milking cows, as well as the newest in milking and barn equipment. There will also be a meeting room and intensive care unit, along with a farm shop and space for feed and equipment storage.

"With the new facility, we are confident that we are positioning ourselves very well to serve the future needs of our students and the Massachusetts dairy industry," Helgesen said.

Animal science students at the University are pleased with the move because it means a shorter commute and better resources.

"If they're going to expand, we'll have easier access and it will be easier to teach. It's a good thing," junior animal science major Matt Skowron said. "Hadley is much closer and I'd rather spend more time in the classroom than on the bus."

Sophomore animal science major Veronica Waller agreed with Skowron.

"It takes less time moving around and more time learning," Waller said.

Skowron and Waller both said that they were glad to see that the animal science department was not forgotten as the University expands.

"UMass started out as an agricultural school," Skowron said.

"I'm glad to see that animal science is not being lost," Waller said.

The new and improved dairy operation will save $125,000 in costs and will operate within the bounds of the budget, Helgesen said.

Helgesen expects the center to be in full service by the start of the 1996–97 academic year.

Survey exposes Springfield health woes

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Six students from the University of Massachusetts School of Health and five high school students from Springfield interviewed 974 people from the North End of the city over the summer to obtain in–depth health data on residents.

The study reveals that 22 percent of the 279 households interviewed were not able to get health care at the time of need during the last year. Of those 61 homes, 61 percent have public insurance. Still, 41 percent said cost was a factor, and 14 percent blame language difficulties.

"Many of our findings are preventable," said M. Idali Torres, assistant professor of public health and coordinator of the North End Community Health Assessment Project. She believes that community support for health education programs is needed in order to make health prevention a priority in Springfield.

For two months, UMass students and Springfield youths worked in teams to interview residents, which was a way to encourage Hispanic youth to consider health careers and to provide them with related skills, according to Torres. Two of the Springfield students working on the project are now students at UMass.

Thirty–eight percent of individuals surveyed described their health as fair, while 35 percent say they have "poor health." Twenty–seven percent said they were in "good health."

"The percentage of residents who described their health as fair or poor is much, much higher than the national average," said Torres.

The following are others of the findings of the survey:

- For adults aged 19–54, after back pain and other muscular or skeletal conditions, the most common problems are high blood pressure and other cardiovascular conditions, Nervios — a nervous condition characterized by hysteria, uncontrollable crying or seizure–like symptoms — and other mental health problems.
- The most common problems for pre–school and school– age children (5–18 years), asthma and other respiratory problems, as well as illness–es related to ear, nose and throat.
- Ten percent of all Springfield households have no insurance. Seventeen percent have private insurance; 7 percent have a combination of public and private insurance; and 66 percent have Medicare or Medicaid. In the 90 percent of households that have some sort of insurance, 18 percent report that at least one family member is not covered.

Those surveyed were asked about a variety of subjects, including how they obtain health care, what they consider to be "the most pressing community problems," as well as questions related to language and culture.

The goal of the study was to obtain information that will be used to plan future services offered by community–based organizations, according to Torres.

"It is my hope that the University will be supportive of this type of project," said Torres.

"It meets the needs of the faculty and the students to obtain opportunities for training and research, and the needs of the community to have data available for planning purposes and policy development," Torres said.

Land in question as Bosnian settlement approaches

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) - As U.S. diplomats arrive to try to build on last week's breakthrough accord on ending the war in Bosnia, the warring sides are staking out land they want in a final settlement.

For the Muslim-led government, that means snatching bits of Serb-held land. For the Serb rebels, it means defying NATO's airstrikes to maintain their hold on Sarajevo.

The maneuvering threatens to turn the glimmer of hope seen Friday in Geneva - where the combatants agreed on a general plan to partition Bosnia - into yet another disappointment in the 3 1/2-year-old war.

NATO jets pounded Serb positions again Tuesday, trying to force them to remove heavy artillery from around the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo.

Meanwhile, government forces are also attacking. They reported the capture Monday of land providing better access to the northern city of Tuzla, and an advance on Serb-held Ipje in central Bosnia, land they could expect to have in any eventual peace deal. A Western military source, speaking Tuesday on condition of anonymity, said the Bosnian army and its Croat allies were on the offensive on three fronts.

Serbs, equally aware of the importance of holding territory as they sit down to strike a deal, refuse to withdraw some 300 big guns from around Sarajevo, even if it means absorbing more punishment from NATO.

For them, having a piece of Sarajevo when the war ends is a top priority, and gun emplacements over the city emphasize that point. A TV report from Serb-held Banja Luka on Monday declared that the more land Serbs can hold, the better the chances they can keep more than the 49 percent of Bosnia on offer in a U.S. peace plan. The Bosnian Serb military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, also insists pulling the weapons would leave Serbs around Sarajevo vulnerable to government attack.

When he arrives Wednesday in Belgrade, Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke will be confronted with Serb demands to rein in NATO.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic complained that the NATO attacks could destroy Washington's peace initiative.

That is a change from the optimism of last Friday. In an accord brokered by Holbrooke, Muslims, Croats and Serbs agreed to split Bosnia roughly in half between the Serbs and a Muslim-Croat federation, while keeping it formally united as one country. All sides recognize that the key man on the Serb side is no longer Karadzic, but Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who has gained the power to negotiate for the Bosnian Serbs.

UM professor chairs flood committee

By Gayle Dougherty
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts professor recently chaired a national committee on flood control measures in California's American River Basin.

Rutherford H. Platt, a professor of geography and planning law, headed the Committee on Flood Control Alternatives for the Water Science and Technology Board of the National Research Council.

The committee is proposing alternatives to traditional flood control measures like dams and levees because urban developers cannot always rely on them, Platt said.

To minimalize losses, the committee recommends taking great care in erecting buildings and prohibiting construction of homes in the floodplains, he said.

"If the Mississippi River flooding in 1993 has taught us anything it's that we cannot depend on dams and levees to protect urban development against the ravages of flooding," Platt said. "We must deal with flood hazards by other measures such as limiting development in floodplains or improving flood insurance."

The committee, which has been meeting for the past two years, evaluated a range of flood control measures developed by the United States Army Corps of Engineers for the American River Basin. The basin encompasses the state capital of Sacramento.

"We've proposed building dams upstream, expanding levees and floodwarning systems downstream and limiting development in the floodplains [as flood management alternatives]," Platt said.

Since the Gold Rush days of the 1850's, Sacramento has been battling to protect itself from flooding, even as it has continued to expand within the floodplain. Many of the city's 1.4 million residents live behind levees along the American River.

New flood control developments are being planned for the Natomas Basin, a 55,000–acre expanse ringed by levees across the river from downtown Sacramento. One flood control measure is using Auburn Dam as a "dry dam," Platt said.

"This is controversial because it is damaging to canyons and vegetation," he said. "I'd like to see most of the floodplains reserved for recreation and farming."

In July, the committee submitted a report of its recommendations to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, who will consider them in requesting funding from Congress.

The report reviews flood control planning measures in the American Basin watershed and examines broader issues of the nation's approach to flood risk management. It also provides detailed comments on environmental issues, risk methodology and flood risk management behind levees.

The committee will also publish the report as a book by the National Academy Press.

The News Department needs writers.

Any students interested in writing for the news section should contact Chris Conner at 545–0719 or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

DO YOU WANT TO WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES?

IF SO, COME TO OUR MEETING ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11TH AT 5:00P.M. IN THE COLLEGIAN NEWSROOM.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED AND CANNOT ATTEND THE MEETING, STOP BY THE COLLEGIAN AND TALK TO AIMEE OR LAURA.

Last Chance Don't Miss Out!!!

RUSH ΚΚΓ
Final Rush Party!!
Wednesday, September 13
5 - 7pm
Kappa Picnic
Dinner at 6:00pm
32 Nutting Ave.
549-2646
Questions? Contact Tara Myers

Q:
A: Blair Cutting & Smith INSURANCE
7 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8541
For all of your auto insurance needs.

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players

Wednesday - September 13
6:30pm
Campus Center Rm 168C

For more information call the Health Education Division of the University Health Servcies and ask for Sall y 549-2671 Ext. 181.

ANNOUNCEMENT
Two Graduate School Internships

The two individuals will be responsible for:
- Preparation of a comprehensive Graduate Student Survey
- Expansion of a mentoring program for incoming graduate students
- Development and submission of articles about graduate education, graduate students and graduate activities, and
- Development of projects related to graduate education, research, and policy

Experience Required

The individual must be a full time graduate student with an excellent academic record. The individual must have appropriate knowledge and experience to assume responsibilities outlined in job description. The individual must be sensitive to issues facing today's graduate students at a major research university and should exhibit a demonstrated willingness to work with the graduate student senate. Good writing skills are essential.

How to Apply

Submit your resume, two letters of recommendation (one must be from current full time faculty at UMass and the other must be from either another full time UMass faculty member of UMass administrator), and a two page letter maximum describing your unique qualifications for the position and why you should be selected (over two pages will be eliminated).

DEADLINE: September 29, 1995 by 5:00pm. Submit ALL materials to the Graduate School, 514 Goodell. LATE OR INCOMPLETE MATERIALS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED OR REVIEWED. IT IS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE APPLICANT TO MAKE SURE THAT THE APPLICATION IS COMPLETE BY THE DEADLINE.

AMOUNT: $8500 with tuition waiver, from November 5, 1995 to August 31, 1996.
SUBMIT: Charlena Seymour, Graduate Dean, 514 Goodell.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Mari Wurtzel Business Editor Thomas F. Sweeny, Jr. Graphics Advisor
Syed Mohammed Ali-Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinions Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemauche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connect News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

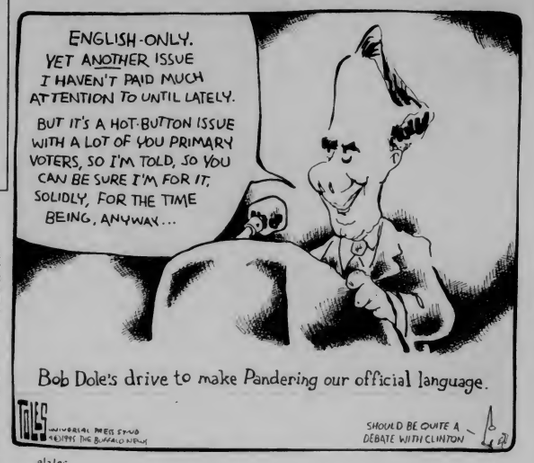
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January, 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial



ENGLISH-ONLY. YET ANOTHER ISSUE I HAVEN'T PAID MUCH ATTENTION TO UNTIL LATELY.
BUT IT'S A HOT-BUTTON ISSUE WITH A LOT OF YOU PRIMARY VOTERS, SO I'M TOLD, SO YOU CAN BE SURE I'M FOR IT, SOLIDLY, FOR THE TIME BEING, ANYWAY...
Bob Dole's drive to make Pandering our official language.
TOLES IMPERIAL MEGA SPUD KEEPS THE BLAKELY AFLOAT
SHOULD BE QUITE A DEBATE WITH CLINTON
9/7/95

Record companies are selling out

Yet another war is being waged by the political elite against the music industry. Since the days of Ozzie biting off bat's heads and Tipper leading crusades against satanic messages on backward vinyl, certain segments of our society have persisted with their efforts to silence what they consider recording jurists.

Seems every few years or so a new branch of music is specifically targeted. Whether it be hip hop or heavy metal, the song remains the same. The government appoints special interest groups to espouse the same, tired arguments. The industry who once fostered and reaped the financial benefits of their consumer-targeted trend turn their backs on it and create a cheesier form of the music. If Bon Jovi and White Lion were born from heavy metal's roots, what's to become of hip hop—a Vanilla Ice explosion?

If Time Warner's not willing to go a couple of rounds with political forces trying to squash one of its biggest sellers, it's not likely anyone else will

Tara Ruelle

The approach of music company execs and major recording labels in the past has been to lose the bad reputation with the government by detaching themselves from the "evil" form of music that once enjoyed much commercial success.

Right now the music industry, specifically the biggest record company in the world, Time Warner Co., has sucked all the money out of hip hop it possibly could have, but dropped it like a bad habit when they felt the imminent threat of financial boycott in the works.

It is no coincidence that in response to some extra attention by government watchdogs, including presidential hopeful Bob Dole, Time Warner has decided to sell off its shares in Interscope Records. Interscope is a subsidiary which almost exclusively handles hip hop artists.

This particular label has produced tremendous commercial successes, including Dr. Dre and Snoop Doggy Dog. The behavior of the music industry's leading corporate power reminds me of the saying, "biting the hand that feeds you." The industry seems to be readying itself to exploit newer, improved groups, which frighiens me most.

For brief historical reference on the subject, let's look back to another shaky period in music history. The early eighties spawned the long haired, loud, guitar screeching antics of heavy metal groups. Characteristically, the music industry exhausted its supply of Motley Crues and Ozzy Osbournes. They seemed to be scared off by the likes of the P.M.R.C., with the publicity this group garnered from its loud spokesperson, now second lady, Tipper Gore.

Heavy metal pretty much just fell off the map. A couple of years later the long haired, spandex wearing men reappeared with much sappier lyrics and few social axes to grind. This was a sad time for music, a time when songs like "Cherry Pie," and groups like Winger, reigned supreme.

If history should repeat itself in this fashion it will get ugly. Heavy metal is all but extinct now, thanks to limited, if any, marketing targeted at this listening audience. I don't think hip hop will face the same demise, but will take a beating if its own support system continues to suppress the music in the market. Visions of heavy marketing thrown the way of Marky Mark and the Funky Bunch or Gerrardo concern me.

If Time Warner is not willing to go a couple of rounds with political forces trying to squash one of its biggest sellers, it's not likely anyone else will.

Realizing forces inside as well as outside the music industry are to blame for the demise of "a favorite music" should give consumers a wake up call. It should teach us to not only "fight the power" of groups that try to censor what we hear, but to distrust the music industry that tries to sell us Gerrardo over Dr. Dre, or Bon Jovi over Nine Inch Nails.

We are the ones who blow our money on this crap, so think a bit more before you pick up that copy of "Whitesnake's Greatest hits" album at your local music store.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Bombing in Bosnia is symbolic

Despite the obvious pleasure it provides to Americans, the current campaign of bombing against Bosnian Serbs is a symbolic, largely meaningless action in a war that, at least for now, is basically over.

Still, a measure of satisfaction is justifiable in Western hearts, since the cherished goal of butchering Yugoslavia into ethno-national states is now complete.

During the late 1980's, as the Cold War order in Europe was disintegrating, the United States and NATO were finally able to exact a long awaited vengeance against Yugoslavia, against which there were three major complaints.

It had been neutral in the Cold War, and Americans always insisted that "if you're not with us, you're against us." It had joined the Third World in charting an independent path, working with states such as India, Egypt, and Indonesia to form the Non-Aligned Movement.

Hussein Ibish

But perhaps the greatest sin of "the former Yugoslavia" in Western eyes, was the multi-ethnic, multi-cultural nature of the state. Under the wise leadership of Marshal Josip Broz Tito, Yugoslavia had demonstrated that a model of nationalism based on socialist ideals and shared histories could succeed in Europe. Clearly this nationalism-beyond- ethnicity stood as an affront to the fierce ethnic nationalism of cheuvinist societies such as France, Britain, Germany and the other Western European states, and a United States founded and run on the principles of racial inequality and ethnic cleansing.

The West determined to reshape the Balkans in its own image, ensuring a brutal war of partition featuring ethnic cleansing to get the various south-Slavic groups into ethnically homogenous zones, resembling the "racially pure" Western European states or white American suburbs.

To that end, the West took every opportunity to create and support ethnic nationalist groups in Yugoslavia, encourage separatism and chauvinism at every stage, promote secession, and de-legitimize the multi-ethnic Yugoslav identity that so many cherished.

Germany, in particular, had a clear interest in extending its influence southward into the Germanophile states of Slovenia and Croatia, which would essentially create a cordon sanitaire of German influence across the length of Mittel-europa, from Hamburg to Dubrovnik.

The rest of Europe and the United States also agreed to the premature and mischievous recognition of the Slovene, Croat and Bosnian secessions. The war of partition in Yugoslavia was ensured by the predictable reluctance of any group to endure minority status in the new chauvinistic ethno-nationalist states.

Five years and oceans of blood later, the grisly task is complete. At the last burst of murderous ethnic cleansing, this time of at least 300,000 Serbs in Krajina, Western satisfaction was all the greater since it was the first major offensive by the new American proxy state: Croatia.

The original idea that a Muslim-dominated Bosnia could serve as the main U.S. proxy in the Balkans was abandoned after the extent of its weakness became apparent. Instead, the Croat army has been rapidly built into a major force, notwithstanding the supposed arms embargo.

In fact, the Croat army is currently "advised" by a group of 15 "retired" senior U.S. military officers, including a general who is the former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency (D.I.A.). They are nominal employees of a defense "consulting" company based near Langley, Virginia, an obvious C.I.A. front.

The current situation on the ground is one which appears to be acceptable to most of the dominant forces in the region. Only subordinate groups such as the Krajina Serbs and the Bosnian Muslims have completely lost out. The Muslims, having suffered a great deal at the hands of Serbs and Croats, have been forced by the United States into an uneasy subordinate relationship with Croatia, which controls their access to western aid and arms, as well as their coastline.

The dominant groups are, at least temporarily, satisfied. Only a small set of unresolved issues such as Eastern Slavonia and Vukovar, which Croatia would like to regain, constitute the few immediate flash points to a broader war.

While unsatisfied ambitions and partial solutions make for a clearly unstable long term future, for now the settlement of the conflict in Bosnia seems to be mostly a question of formalizing the status-quo. This is why the current bombs and Tomahawk missiles are so irrelevant, designed primarily to restore ethno-nationalist pride in the Western powers that have been humiliated by the Bosnian Serbs.

The Yugoslav dream is dead, replaced by the nightmare of ethnic partition.

The war is over- the West has won.

Hussein Ibish is a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts.

Policy keeps students locked in

While students live in lounges and hotel rooms because the University of Massachusetts lacks rooms, the administration continues an inappropriate policy which forces sophomores to live on campus against their will.

A few months ago I was a 21-year-old sophomore, and today I am a few months older but a junior who has the opportunity to live off campus. Despite those long three months, I am not more mature.

Matthew Wurtzel

Others juniors say the same thing. My house mate also said he does not think he is significantly more mature today than he was a few months ago.

The University also forces freshmen to live on campus in their first year, but I can understand the policy. As a first year student, the newcomers to the University need time to become accustomed to their new surroundings. Living on campus is definitely the most appropriate way.

However, after two semesters on campus many students are well acquainted with the University and have had plenty of time to become contributing members of the community.

During my freshman year I was a disc jockey on WOCH cable radio. When I was a sophomore, I become a staff member at the Collegian. However, I probably would have eventually joined the Collegian staff whether I lived on campus or not, because as a Journalism major it seemed naturral.

I have also seen friends progress in similar manners and become contributing members in the community during their freshman year, and become well established as sophomores.

Another reason the University forces sophomores to live on campus is social reasons. The University believes students need more time meeting people, and the place to meet them is on campus.

However, the majority of my friends remain to be the people I met as a freshman. As a matter of fact, three of my four house mates were friends of mine since freshman year.

Last year I desperately wanted out of the dormitories because the buildings were noisy, the people inconsiderate, and the food was terrible.

When I tried to study in the evenings, it was too noisy to pay attention to my work. I was often kept awake at early hours of the morning when I had morning classes. The dormitory halls and bathrooms were always a mess. However, as a sophomore I was not able to move off campus.

The house I live in is quieter, and if it is dirty it is our fault rather then some stranger who may visit the dormitories and not care. Basically, if there are any problems, we caused it rather then some thoughtless outsider.

For some people another year in the dormitories is appropriate, and for others all their time at the University may be best spent living on campus. However, a broad and general rule which limits freedoms such as the one which is currently in place, is wrong.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Space invaders are space violators

It took me ten days to get up the guts to drive downtown Amherst after the students came back last fall. Our annual migration of mostly healthy young people bearing mattresses balanced precariously atop over-stuffed cars remains a spectacle to behold. And it's quite the contrast from the relative steady hum of summer when so few pedestrians wander aimlessly across your vehicle's path.

I drive a large fully handicapped-equipped van that requires the equivalent of two parking spots to enable me to park and get out safely. Another name for it is a "lift van." In order to get out of the van, I exit the right side door onto a platform lift that extends four feet out the right side. Once on the ground, I need another four feet to get off the lift and turn my wheelchair.

Debra H. Waldron

Hence the need for two eight-foot parking space side-by-side ... one for my van, and one for me to get in and out of it. I know all of us face a problem in general when it comes to the issue of parking, but for those of us who drive life-vans, it is particularly challenging.

It is a journey with a prerequisite — the need to plan ahead. Is there a properly designated "double" lift van spot, or just regular "single" handicapped parking spots? Is parking difficult in general? If there are no HP spots, will I find two eight foot spots together that I can park in diagonally? Is the parking lot on level ground? (Are we having fun yet?)

HP lift spots are really easy to find at local supermarkets, much to the understandable envy of others on a blistering hot day. Logically, they are near the entrances, well-marked with diagonal lines in the zone that the lift lowers into, and have signs with the wheelchair logo visible at five feet. But these spots aren't as easy to find elsewhere.

So, back to my story of daring to drive into Amherst with my lift van last fall. What happened? I headed for one of my previously reliable five HP parking spots behind CVS. No such luck. My jaw literally dropped when I saw that every single space was occupied by cars with no HP placards or plates. I couldn't not be angry.

Legally and practically speaking, that HP stands for handicapped parking, which is supposed to ensure the bearer of a placard or plate will travel the shortest distance from their vehicle to wherever they are going. Personally and emotionally speaking, if you park there, even if it's "just this once," I can't. Think of it. I pull up to CVS expecting to maybe find another vehicle with a placard or plate, but instead I find five illegally parked cars?

Contrary to what some may think, people with disabilities do have lives. To go through the above and end up with an able-bodied person parked in a HP spot is infuriating. I think I can safely speak for all HP placard/plate-carriers when I say that we run the gamut of responses. What can happen, you wonder? Well, this time I carefully parked behind three of the five cars illegally parked behind CVS. (I thought of going in to do my errand, leaving a note on my van that read, "I'll only be a minute." I have the required chutzpa, but I'm not stupid.) I stayed in the van and gave each of the drivers an "awareness course" when they returned, whether they liked it or not. Ah, the desire for justice prevails.

Another satisfying and informative yet unsympathetic response is to slap on one of the yellow stickers that can only removed with a razor. Some messages are innocent enough, yet difficult to remove. One says, "This space is reserved for people with HP placards and asses. Which one are you?" Kind of makes one think after scratching three of them off at once. That happened to some sorry sucker who parked his classy painted racing car diagonally across a 16' spot meant for a lift van.

Effective now, anyone can call the police since they are authorized to ticket and tow whether the car in violation is on private or public property. And the minimum fine has been raised to $100.

One last thing. Special plates or placards for individuals with disabilities require appropriate documentation of eligibility. The award determination is based on medical justification of one having a sufficient disability, and temporary ones can be obtained at the local town hall. Getting a permanent placard or plate requires documentation of your permanent disability from a doctor plus paying a fee to the Registry of Motor Vehicles in Boston. So, anyone who is eligible to park in an HP spot probably, genuinely needs it.

I told all this so you could understand the law and why we have it. If you don't have an HP placard or plate, it means you don't need it. Count your blessing and pay attention, for if you have an HP placard or plate, it means you need it. They don't give them away lightly. Please respect this, and don't take our parking spaces lightly.

Debra H. Waldron is an Amherst resident.

Letters to the Editor

RSO initiative misinterpreted

To the editor:

In Matt Vautour's piece "Notes from the campus center basement," Collegian's Sept. 8 issue, he refuses to acknowledge the importance of the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition's success in passing a student initiative declaring all marijuana laws null and void on campus. As the national news media realized in 1993, the fact that we engaged countless numbers of Americans in spirited debate about this often one-sided issue should alone suffice to verify the effectiveness of our signature-obtaining drive.

Unlike Mr. Vautour we do believe that cannabis will be re-legalized, with the assistance of organizations such as ours which actively disseminate information concerning the unjust war on this most-valuable plant. As indicated by numerous national polls, an overwhelming majority of Americans already believe that sick citizens should be allowed to use marijuana medicinally, and farmers should be allowed to grow non-THC hemp for industrial purposes. As our efforts at public education continue, we hope to eliminate marijuana-related lung cancer comments such as Vautour's. For anyone who has taken even a cursory look at the medical literature available would see that there is no correlation between even heavy marijuana usage and increased cancer risk of any kind — unlike with tobacco.

As Mr. Vautour insinuates, marijuana can be easily procured in and around this campus — as well as in practically any country in the world. What he fails to realize, however, is that millions of Americans should not have to put their lives at stake to be able to exercise what should be their constitutionally-granted civil liberties: namely, the right to use cannabis for medicinal, industrial, or recreational uses.

John Lanzerotta
Secretary of the UMass
Cannabis Reform Coalition

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oltvms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

~ PREVIEWS ~

Juliana Hatfield will play at Pearl Street this Thursday night.

COURTESY ALISON DYER

Hatfield to play the Valley

Only Everything* gives ex-Blake Baby singer reason to tour

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Come to Pearl Street this Thursday night and let the sugary sweet tunes of Juliana Hatfield lull you into a sense of pure pop consciousness.

Touring in support of her third album Only Everything, the Mammoth Record artist went into the studio solo and produced what she feels is her best album yet. In an recent press release, Hatfield describes that this record as utter perfection.

"This record felt like a gift," Hatfield said. "Everything fell into place. It seemed like the record was just handed to me as a payoff for all the creative frustration I've had. After eight years of waiting, it finally happened. Here, this is what you wanted to achieve. Oh, finally."

The former lead singer of the Blake Babies broke away from the popular trio in 1993 where she created "Become What You Are" with her group The Juliana Hatfield Three. The most popular track off the album was "My Sister." Hatfield hit it big again with "Spin The Bottle" off the Reality Bites soundtrack.

Hatfield adds new emotion and depth to her latest and it shows in the lyrics and change in guitar playing.

"I realize now I'm the master of my guitar," Hatfield said. "I have to make it work for me. That's the attitude. There's no reason for me to be afraid of my guitar, because it wants to be told what to do. That's what it's there for."

Hatfield also made her acting debut when guest starring as an angel in an episode of the now cancelled "My-So-Called- Life." She also contributed a song to the "My-So-Called- Life" sound track. Ironically enough, Claire Danes starred as an angel in the Soul Asylum video for "Just Like Anyone."

Hatfield wrote, recorded and played on her latest album and believes that it "just felt like the right thing to do."

Juliana Hatfield will play the Pearl Street Stage Thurs. at 7 p.m. Tickets are $8 adv. For more information and tickets call 586-8686 or the Pearl Street info-line at 584-7771

Russell returns to Iron Horse Hall

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Musician Leon Russell will take the stage at the Iron Horse tonight for two evening performances. This rock/soul/blues man has been in the industry for over 30 years and has worked with groups like the Beach Boys, The Birds and famous solo artists like Frank Sinatra and Barbara Streisand.

Russell first made it big in the early '70s and has been one of Los Angeles top sessionmen working with the likes of Phil Spector, playing piano and guitar. In 1968 he worked with Marc Benno on Asylum Choir which became a critically acclaimed album. A year later he signed on with Delaney & Bonnie and played on their album Accept No Substitute. He also got the opportunity to tour Europe with Eric Clapton and George Harrison who signed onto the tour later.

Nineteen sixty-nine was also the year the musician created the Shelter label with Denny Cordell, which signed on backing bands for Joe Cocker's Mad Dogs And Englishmen tour. He later went on to release his own album which featured famed musicians like Steve Winwood, Bill Wyman, Eric Clapton and George Harrison.

In 1971 he got the opportunity to tour with the Rolling stones and then decided to pursue a solo career with albums like Carny (1976), Hand Wilson's Back (1973) and Stop All That Jazz (1974). He stopped recording in 1981.

However, it was Bruce Hornsby that brought Russell back to the studio when he named Russell as his mentor in an interview. He then went on to record a CD with Russell, bringing him back to the music industry. His latest album is entitled Anything Can Happen.

Leon Russell will play at the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tickets are $20. for more information call the Iron Horse at 584-0610.

Leon Russell comes to the Iron Horse to play a mix of rock, blues and jazz.

COURTESY BRAD DAVIS

Doc Martens will see you now.

ZANNA
Amherst
Williamstown
Brattleboro

WORKSTUDY & NONWORKSTUDY JOBS

- After School Child Care Worker
- Arts Management/Theater
- Building Supervisors
- Clerical Assistants (workstudy only)
- Volleyball Officials/Supervisor
- Water Safety Instructors
- Youth Basketball Officials/Supervisors
- Adult Basketball Supervisor & Scorekeepers
- Pee-Wee Tennis Instructor

Application Deadline: September 15, 1995

Apply at:
Human Resources Dept.
Town of Amherst
70 Boltwood Walk
Bangs Community Center
Amherst, MA 01002

TOWN OF AMHERST
LSSE
Leisure Services and Supplemental Education

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638

Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!

Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)

One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

Mental Health Groups – Fall 1995

Food and Feelings:
A Group for Women Experiencing Eating Problems... Monday, 3:30-5pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families.....Monday, 3:30-5pm

Improving Self-Esteem, Building Self-Confidence.....Tuesday, 3:45-5pm

Women's Group:
Graduate Students & Professional Women.....Tuesday, 12:45-2:15pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families (group conducted in Spanish)
Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfunctionales.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Marijuana and Mental Health.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Lesbian, Gay and Bi-Sexual Support Group.....Thursday, 3:45 - 5pm

Groups will begin in early mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview. Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, Monday - Friday 8:00am - 5:00pm.

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
Bring Your Spare Change & A Smile!
From 9 p.m. - 12 midnight!
- Sunday - 10¢ Potato Skins
- Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
- Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
- Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4 lb. Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
- Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets

Jumbo Drinks & Drafts
Over 40 different Beers including 20 microbrews

Drink Specials
Bud or Bud Light "Big Boy" 16 oz. Bottles $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99

Charlie's tavern since 1978
AMHERST, MASS.

The Place Where Friends Meet

Open 11am - 1am 7 days a week Kitchen open till midnight
1 Pray St. (behind Bank of Western Mass.), Amherst, MA • 549-5403
Game Room with 2 pool tables Giant 48" Big Screen T.V. * No Take Out in Food Specials * MC/VISA/AMEX Accepted

~ TRAVEL ~

Hiking mountain; challenging oneself

Tara MK Connelly

NORTH CONWAY, NH — By 3 a.m., it was light enough to make out the faint glow of the rocks that surrounded me. Silence was broken only by the melodic crashing of a nearby and unseen cascade created by the last remnants of melting snow and ice that clung to the ravine walls.

I was almost at the top of Tuckerman's Ravine — almost, but not quite. The vast sides of the surrounding landmass loomed before and behind. Always up, but never over.

We had started to climb Mt. Washington at 1 a.m. Aided by three flashlights and a prayer for good weather, we began to ascend the peak in a balmy 70 degree heat. It was now 50 and a cool wind had started to blow. For every 1,000 ft. we'd pass, five degrees were dropped. By the time we would reach the summit it would barely clear 50.

One mile up, our merry trio consisting of my sister, best friend Sean and myself, collapsed on a "bridge" (as if a few boards and some cement constituted such a structure.) This was Sean's brainchild, he was the experienced hiker. We cursed him repeatedly (my sister sent him to hell quite a few times) as we stumbled over unseen rocks trying to keep up with his 6-foot plus frame.

Now the two of us guzzled large quantities of Gatorade and scarfed down dried lumps of granola we had pilfered from a far off Chrissy's. Mmm, nutrients! Later they'd feel like lead weights, our stomachs heaving in protest as we scrambled across the uneven terrain. Below us the rush of water filled in the void that the darkness provided.

We had turned off our flashlights to conserve the batteries during these "breaks," periodically checking the sky for impending clouds that could spell h-y-p-o-t-h-e-r-m-i-a. It didn't matter, we were so sweaty, dirty and generally wilted that death seemed welcoming. You ever notice how pain is exaggerated into gigantic proportions when the body is fatigued? Always up and never over.

The night was clear and still. We had paused after passing the emergency shelter because we thought we had seen lights following us. Rangers warning of a storm? Fellow nut cases — ah hikers like us? Over active imagination?

The faint traces of the Milky Way could be seen hovering among the dense canopy of stars — millions of miles away, but yet bright enough to touch. The ground had gotten rocky, steeper, "more challenging." Oaths were exchanged, groans pierced the rapidly cooling air and muscles protested under multiple layers of clothing that had earlier been shed like a second skin.

"Why are we here?" "Who's idea was this anyway?" and my personal favorite, "Just let me die."

If the darkest hour is before dawn then we were soon sitting right in the middle of it. The ravine had created a bowl type effect lined with boulders and jagged cliffs that ended sharply at the top with a horizon full of shimmering stars. If Hayden Planetarium in Boston looked half this beautiful no one would want to leave. Looking below, we could make out the shadowed tree line dotted with moss, rocks and the slowly melting snow.

Massive cairns marked the way out of the ravine. The sky line was blushing — darkness lifted, signs were heard. The vast wasteland of rocks spotted with immature shrubs and trees stretched before us, taunting us, guiding us, egging us on an upward. We were racing against time — against light for the coveted glimpse of the sun rising from the summit 6,000 ft. above sea level.

At the summit a ranger ambled over to where we sat sprawling and told us we should have taken

Turn to MT. WASHINGTON page 7

~ ALBUM REVIEW ~

Mega Teenbeat box set features label artists

Eggs, Unrest, Tuscadero singles complied together for fans on Wakefield collection

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Wakefield: The Teenbeat Story
Teenbeat Records

Ten years ago, Mark Robinson released a compilation cassette on his own label entitled Teenbeat. He made 20 copies and sold them to his friends at Wakefield High School and now the cassette is a collector's item valued at over $100! Why? Since 1985, Teenbeat Records has been one of the most consistent and dependable labels in the independent music world, releasing over 150 records. Wakefield: The Teenbeat Story is a four CD box set offering a comprehensive look at the past and present of Robinson's label.

Disc One, entitled A Teenbeat Sampler, contains 17 songs by almost all the current bands on the label. Last year this CD was released as a precursor to the box set, so many Teenbeat fans may already own a copy. Not surprisingly, Versus is the standout band on this disc. Their song, "Know Nothing" continues their long streak of never releasing a mediocre song. Other highlights include new tracks by Air Miami and Tuscadero.

Hai Communist Tan! is the title of the second disc in the box set and it is being co-released in Japan by the label 100 Guitar Mania. It serves as an introduction to Teenbeat for the Japanese audience. Almost all of these songs are appearing on CD for the first time after appearing on 7-inch singles. Air Miami's killer track "Airplane Rider" is sure to grab everyone attention, as will Barbara Manning's sung "I Love You 1,000 Ways." Also note worthy are tracks by Grenadine, Cath Carrolll and Eggs.

The next two discs are the most essential as they contain loads of songs that have been out of print for years. Disc three opens with arguably, the two best Teenbeat bands, Versus and Unrest. Versus opens it up with their rocking tune "Big Head On", then Unrest keeps the energy flowing with the catchy "So Sick." Among the old rarities included are tracks by Mark E. Superstar and Scaley Andrew.

The final disc February 23rd, 1985 is entitled after Teenbeat's birthday on which Robinson released his first cassette. Two tracks from that tape appear here by Thirsty Boys and Jungle George & The Plague. While not the best material on the disc, it is nice to hear what the original Teenbeat sound was. Unrest contributes three songs here including "Capezio Bowler" a forgotten classic. Bratmobile covers Blur's "There's No Other Way" while Clarence performs two great songs. Most of these songs have never been readily available and would be near impossible to find, also very expensive.

Perhaps the biggest drawback to this compilation is its rarity. Only 600 box sets were pressed so they are hard to come by, but are worth seeking out. You will never have a chance to hear many of these songs again. Plus the CDs come in an interesting cardboard box and are individually numbered. The linear notes to the CDs are written by Mark Robinson, Bridget Cross, and Phil Krauth, all ex-members of Unrest and essential members of the Teenbeat family. And finally a booklet listing a complete Teenbeat discography is included.

As with most box sets, Wakefield: The Teenbeat Story is filled with both great songs and some ones that should have been forgotten. But it is a worthy document of the great success that Teenbeat has had. With current bands like Versus, Tuscadero, Eggs, Blast Off Country Style, Air Miami and Grenadine, Teenbeat is still one of the best independent labels around. (A-)

Wakefield
COURTESY TEENBEAT

Wakefield
COURTESY TEENBEAT

Collegian Classifieds!
Got something to sell? Got a message to send? We can help.
545-3500

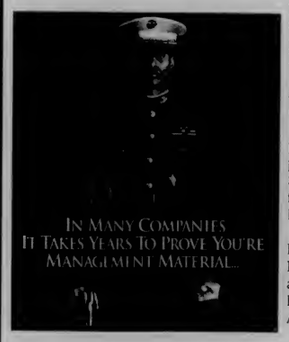
HELP WANTED

Drivers Needed to Deliver the UMass Collegian on Campus

Must Have a Car

Stop in at the Collegian Office in the basement of the Campus Center or Call 545-3500 and ask for Ryan or Earl

HOW WAS YOUR SUMMER VACATION?



If you didn't get everything out of last summer that you wanted, if you didn't take steps to secure your path for your future, if you didn't challenge yourself to the fullest . . .

Then you probably should consider this opportunity.

Here's a six-week summer job that gives college credits, provides room and board, pays $1700, and leads to a job offer for a full-time MANAGEMENT POSITION after college.

It's called the Platoon Leaders Class, it's how the Marine Corps selects its officers and pilots, and it's open to FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, AND JUNIORS.

We are accepting a limited number of applicants for the summer of 1996.

SEE CAPT. PETERS ON SEPT. 13 AND 14 BETWEEN 10:00AM AND 2:00PM IN THE NEWMAN CENTER CAFETERIA.

For more information on opportunities offered by
MARINE OFFICER PROGRAMS
Call Captain Peters or master Sergeant Zahn
1-800-255-8762

■ mt. washington

continued from page 6

the road. "The road!" we scoffed as if another dirty four letter word had suddenly been invented.

"Well, five people have died on the mountain this winter, some at night," he finished. I remember my friend had warned me that there was a possibility I could be "seriously hurt." Thank you but no, and anyway we all had a reason for doing this. Everyone has a reason for doing something stupid and reckless and what better motivation than the words "can't, shouldn't" and "dangerous?" And what sweeter satisfaction can, "I told you I could" bring?

The sun reared its crimson eye turning the sky into a melange of roses, peaches and lavender while black clouds dissipated under the suns heady rays. The top, the towers, the summit and greeting the day on the highest peak on the East Coast. I felt great — I felt like I was in a Nike ad. Packs were thrown down, wary heads were raised to the first light and vows never, ever to do it again were uttered.

It wasn't Everest or K2 or even the Rockies (not everyone can play touch football on them you know). But for that brief moment it didn't matter. The pain, the curses uttered under bated breath were blown away ... we even forgot to hate Sean. We had done it and that's all that mattered.

It's nice to take a break from civilization, to roam free amongst nature. It really makes you think, reorganize and realize that sometimes it's okay to pit yourself against something unpredictable and stronger than yourself without feeling inferior or scared — just respectful and in awe.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian staff member.

Betty Crocker to change old image

By Suzanne Ziegler
Associated Press

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Betty Crocker, the white bread-and-mayonnaise symbol of middle America, is getting a multi-ethnic makeover.

General Mills Inc. said Monday it will select photos of 75 women — to celebrate Betty Crocker's 75th birthday - and digitally "morph" them into a new Betty.

Chances are, she won't be the fair-skinned, blue-eyed homemaker whose image has appeared on and off over the years on cookbooks, cake and brownie mixes and Hamburger Helper.

"I guess they want to put some fire under her tail," said Lehman Brothers analyst Caroline Levy. I think it's a great idea to revitalize the brand."

The new face, to be unveiled in February, will be the eighth Betty Crocker since the fictional character was created in 1921.

Small changes were made over the years - she smiles in the 1955 portrait and wears a pearl choker in '65 but she always remains prim and proper. The latest incarnation, in 1986, wears a red business suit and bow tie.

University of Minnesota marketing professor Akshay Rao said the idea reflects the increasing percentage of minorities in the nation.

"The face of the nation is going to be very different than it was 20 years ago," he said. "If they can identify with the person on the brand better because it looks like them, this is a wise thing to do."

Quaker Oats Co. has given periodic makeovers to Aunt Jemima, who has slimmed down and become more sophisticated-looking over the years.

General Mills is asking Betty wannabes to send in their photos along with an essay on how they embody the company ideal of family and community spirit, creativity and interest in cooking. Winners will be chosen on the basis of the best essays.

What if an aspiring Betty happens to have a nose ring, cheek tattoo or lime green mohawk?

"I have no idea what the judges will do, but I don't think there will be a significant number of fringe winners that will affect Betty looking mainstream," General Mills spokesman Barry Wegener said.

And what about a male version of Betty? Such applications will be read, but "we are looking for women," project manager Cindy Guettler said.

Toni Green, director of marketing for the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, wasn't all that impressed with the campaign.

"If I am going to buy cake mix, it doesn't matter if she is white," said Green, who is black. "I think sometimes they overthink these things, and I think there are more pressing issues in the world than trying to get a more politically correct woman."

In the cake mix aisle at a grocery store in Minneapolis, Joan Mensinger said she never gave a second thought to the packaging.

"I only care if it's a good cake mix," Mensinger said. "Part of me thinks it's silly. The other says they don't have a choice. You offend someone no matter what you do."

Boston Red Sox continue slide, fall to the Baltimore Orioles 6-5

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE (AP) - The Boston Red Sox hit three homers, then ended up losing their fifth straight game on a single that barely made it out of the infield.

The Orioles overcame two home runs by Mo Vaughn and another by Mike Greenwell and extended Boston's season-high losing streak with a 6-5 victory Tuesday night.

With two outs in the Baltimore seventh, Harold Baines hit a pinch-hit double off Joseph Hudson (0-1). Mark Smith then blooped a single to center, scoring Baines with the go-ahead run.

One day earlier, the Red Sox hit four homers in a 10-7 loss to Baltimore.

"It seems like they've been scoring all their runs on homers, but we're coming up with the clutch hits," Smith said. "It's nice that we could keep up with them without hitting homers."

Hudson, who took his first loss in the majors, said, "It was a good pitch - the ball just didn't go my way. Sometimes a guy's got a little more luck on his side, and that was the case with him tonight."

The bottom two batters in the Baltimore lineup inflicted the most damage. No. 8 hitter Smith had two RBIs, including the tie-breaking single in the seventh, and Bret Barberie also drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a bases-loaded walk.

"That's the frustrating part," Boston manager Kevin Kennedy said. "They hit some balls inside the line, they've hit some balls that have fallen. ... That's the mystery of baseball."

Vaughn has four multi-homer games this season and nine in his career. He has four in three games and 37 for the season. Greenwell hit his 13th homer to tie the game in the seventh, but the lead didn't last long.

"We've been down five straight games and coming back, but we've got to put a zero up there when we score," Kennedy said.

Mike Hartley (1-0) got the last out in the seventh, and Jesse Orosco got the final four outs for his second save.

The loss reduced Boston's lead over the New York Yankees to 10 1/2 games in the AL East.

"I don't think there's a sense of urgency, like things are slipping away from us," Vaughn said. "All we need is one win and we'll be fine."

Down 5-2, Boston used its favorite weapon - the home run - to pull even in the seventh. Vaughn hit his second homer of the night with one out and Jose Canseco followed with a single, chasing starter Kevin Brown.

Mark Lee came in, and Greenwell hit the reliever's first pitch over the right-field scoreboard, his third homer in two nights. Lee was 13-for-13 holding the lead or tie and had retired the first batter he faced in 25 of 28 appearances.

The Orioles went up 3-0 in the second. Two walks and a single loaded the bases for Smith, who popped an RBI single to left. Barberie followed with a sacrifice fly before Curtis Goodwin drove in a run with an infield hit.

Boston closed to 3-2 in the third when Vaughn homered after a walk to John Valentin. Baltimore loaded the bases in the bottom of the inning to chase Rheal Cormier before Zane Smith, making his first relief appearance of the season, forced in a run by walking Barberie.

Brady Anderson doubled and scored on a single by Rafael Palmeiro to put Baltimore up 5-2 in the fourth.

Boston loaded the bases with two outs in the sixth, but Brown retired Lee Tinsley on a grounder to short.

Notes: Smith last worked out of the bullpen on July 9, 1994 with Pittsburgh. Of his last 155 major-league appearances, 150 have been as a starter. ... Goodwin had two hits, giving him consecutive multi-hit games for the first time since July 8-9. ... Cormier lasted 2 1-3 Innings, his shortest stint of the season. ... Canseco extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

Sports meeting

The Sports staff meeting has been changed to Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center Basement (opposite the ATM machines). Anyone interested in writing for sports is welcome, no experience necessary. For more information, call Candice Flemming, sports editor, at 545-1749.

Sports Notice

For anyone interested in joining the men's crew, there will be an informational meeting Wednesday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 174. For more information on men's crew, call 545-0487. No experience is necessary.

AIM HIGH

The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective

Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.

We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.

The only obligation you have is 4 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.

Call us at 545-2437 for more details.

AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

Emergency Medical Training

by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.

Classes start September 18, 1995

Call UMass, Continuing Education at 545-0474

Temporary Help Needed For Large
J. CREW
Clothing Sale
To be held at the Mullins Center at the University of Massachusetts Oct. 3 - Oct. 8

• Cashiers
• Baggers
• Set Up/Break Down

To Apply, Stop by Our Table
Wednesday, Sept. 13 10:00am - 4:00pm
or Thursday, Sept. 14 10:00am - 1:00pm
at the Mullins Center Rink

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0060

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Thursday
September 14, 1995
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
Munson D. Lincoln Campus Center 25th Anniversary
Or Would You Rather Be Studying ?

HARVEY KEITEL JOHN TURTURRO DELROY LINDO

A SPIKE LEE JOINT CLOCKERS

UNIVERSAL PICTURES PRESENTS A 40 ACRES AND A MULE FILMWORKS PRODUCTION A SPIKE LEE JOINT "CLOCKERS" MEKHI PHIFER ISAIAH WASHINGTON KEITH DAVID PEE WEE LOVE ORIGINAL MUSIC TERENCE BLANCHARD CO-PRODUCER RICHARD PRICE EXECUTIVE PRODUCERS ROSALIE SWEDLIN MONTY ROSS BASED ON THE BOOK BY RICHARD PRICE SCREENPLAY BY RICHARD PRICE AND SPIKE LEE PRODUCED BY MARTIN SCORSESE SPIKE LEE JON KILIK DIRECTED BY SPIKE LEE A UNIVERSAL RELEASE

R RESTRICTED

OPENS WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 13TH
AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU

The Best Way To Save Money On Stuff (Other Than Borrowing Your Roommate's). Roommates tend to get a little weird when you borrow their stuff. (They're funny like that.) Better to get yourself a MasterCard® card. Then you could use it to buy the things you really want. And with these College MasterValues® coupons, you'll save up to 40%. And until you get your own place, it's the smartest thing you can do. Roommates are weird enough as it is. MasterCard. It's more than a credit card. It's smart money.™

JCPenney Optical Center
50% OFF ANY EYEGLASS FRAME
Save 50% on absolutely every eyeglass frame plus...bonus discount of $20 on our best lenses. Sale includes any eyeglass frame in stock when you purchase a complete pair of eyeglasses and use your MasterCard® Card. Lens discount applies to our best lenses. See optician for details. Coupon required.
Offer and coupon valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card. Surrender coupon at time of purchase. Coupon has no cash value and may not be combined with any coupon, discount, Value Right package or vision care plan. Limit one coupon per purchase. See optician for details. Void where prohibited.

TWEEDS
SAVE $10 ON WOMEN'S APPAREL
Simplicity, comfort and style... that's Tweeds. Save on all Tweeds clothing and accessories. Call 1-800-999-7997 and receive a FREE catalog with our latest styles. Place your order and save $10 on any purchase of $50 or more when you use your MasterCard® Card and mention the COLLEGE MasterValues® offer #C3WA.
Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when the COLLEGE MasterValues® offer #C3WA is mentioned. Offer void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted. Coupon may not be combined with any other coupon or discount. Shipping and handling are extra. Limit one discount per purchase.

ARTCARVED College Jewelry
SAVE UP TO $140
Your college ring, from ArtCarved, is a keepsake you'll always treasure. Save $35 on 10K gold, $70 on 14K gold or $140 on 18K gold. Call 1-800-952-7002 for more details. Mention offer #9501.
Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when offer #9501 is mentioned. Coupon may not be combined with any other coupon or discount. Shipping and handling are extra. Limit one discount per purchase. Some restrictions apply. Void where prohibited.

CAMELOT MUSIC
Save $3 Off A CD
Here's music to your ears... save $3 on one regularly priced Compact Disc at $6.99 or more when you use your MasterCard® Card. Limit two $3 discounts per coupon, per purchase. Limit one $3 discount per box set purchase. Offer Not Valid Without This Coupon. COUPON #336
Offer and coupon valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card. Surrender coupon at time of purchase. Coupon has no cash redemption value. Offer void where prohibited, taxed or restricted. Coupon may not be combined with any other discount. Discount not to exceed $6 per coupon. Coupon not valid on sale merchandise.

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.
49% OFF A SPECIAL 12-WEEK SUBSCRIPTION
Invest in your future and stay on top of current developments with The Wall Street Journal. For a limited time only, use your MasterCard® Card and pay just $23 for a 12-week subscription to the nation's leading business publication. To take advantage of this special offer, call 1-800-348-3555 and please refer to source key 75NY.
Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when source key 75NY is mentioned. Limit one subscription discount per person. Void where prohibited.

TIME WARNER Viewer's Edge
GET ONE VIDEO FREE WHEN YOU BUY THREE
Video values just for you! Enjoy a full selection of top-quality videos at discount prices. All videos are priced at $9.95 or less and are 100% satisfaction guaranteed. Act now and get one video FREE when you buy three and use your MasterCard® Card. Call 1-800-551-0262 for your FREE catalog and ask for the COLLEGE MasterValues® offer #1081-5999.
Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when the COLLEGE MasterValues® offer #1081-5999 is mentioned. Offer may not be combined with any other offer or discount. Offer valid for U.S. residents only. Void where prohibited.

BOX OF FIRE COLUMBIA
SAVE 25%
Save 25% off the regular price of the Acrosmith collection, featuring all the original Columbia albums. BOX OF FIRE includes a previously-unreleased, 5-track bonus disc of Aero-rarities and hard-to-find gems including "Subway", "Circle Jerk" and more! Order now and get 12 CDs for $89.99. Call 1-800-322-3412 and ask for the COLLEGE MasterValues® Offer.
Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when the COLLEGE MasterValues® offer is mentioned. Offer may not be combined with any other discount. Shipping and handling $3.95 per purchase. Limit one discount per purchase. Sales tax applicable. Void where prohibited.

herman's SPORTING GOODS
SAVE 20%
Run into Herman's and save. Take 20% off your next purchase of regular priced merchandise when you use your MasterCard® Card. Find everything you need at Herman's... We Are Sports.® Offer excludes certain merchandise. Coupon Required.
Offer and coupon valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card. Surrender coupon at time of purchase. Offer excludes CrossWalk Plus, Cardio-Glide, all golf balls, select pro clubs, select Prince, Wilson, Head, Pro-Kennex and Ektelon rackets, select Nike and Reebok Prestige product, Fila, Teva, Converse L.J., Asics 2000 and RollerBlade footwear, Evan Dornoon merchandise, hunting and fishing licenses, equipment services, home delivery and gift certificates. Offer may not be combined with any other discount or promotions. Limit one coupon per purchase. Coupon valid at any Herman's location. SPC #65. Void where prohibited.

WORDEXPRESS for Windows
SAVE 40% ON WINDOWS WORD PROCESSOR
WordExpress makes it easy to create great looking reports, term papers, essays and more. Top of the line feature set, fast and easy to use. Includes professionally designed Resume Templates. Only $29.95 when you use your MasterCard® Card and mention offer WXO-MC. To order, call 1-800-998-4555. Visit Us On The World Wide Web at http://delta.com/microv/home Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when offer WXO-MC is mentioned. Shipping and handling are additional. Limit one discount per purchase. Void where prohibited.

JOIN AND SAVE $45
Join for only $15, instead of the regular $60 annual membership. Then enjoy FREE lift tickets and savings up to 50% on lift tickets, resort lodging and dining, etc., at top resorts East and West. A great gift for skiers/snowboarders. Call 1-800-800-2SKI (2754) to join or for details and specials in your favorite areas and mention offer #15MCSKI. Plus look for us on the internet at URL http://www.skicard.com/skicard Offer valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card and when the #15MCSKI is mentioned. Details on skier discounts listed in '95-'96 Savings Guide included with each membership. Hours: Mon-Fri 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mtn time. Void where prohibited.

ONE HOUR MOTOPHOTO
50% OFF FILM PROCESSING
Hold on to the good times and your money, too. Take 50% off the regular price of processing and printing on the first set of prints at MotoPhoto, when you use your MasterCard® Card. Call 1-800-733-6686 for the location nearest you. Limit 1. Offer Not Valid Without This Coupon.
Offer and coupon valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Cash redemption value 1/20¢. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card. Surrender coupon at time of purchase. Limit one coupon per purchase. Cannot be combined with any other offers or discounts. MotoPhoto Club Members are entitled to take 10% off the coupon price. Offer valid on C-41 process, 35 mm film, and standard size prints only. Offer valid at participating stores only. Void where prohibited.

THE SHARPER IMAGE®
SAVE 15% ON YOUR NEXT PURCHASE OF $75 OR MORE
Shopping is easy at America's premier specialty retailer of gift, fitness, recreational, travel, apparel and more. Save 15% on a purchase of $75 or more when you shop at any of our 75 store locations or by mail order. Call 1-800-344-4444, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, to find the store nearest you or for a FREE catalog.
Coupon Required. Offer and coupon valid 8/15/95 to 12/31/95. Offer valid only on purchases using a MasterCard® Card. There are a limited number of items to which this offer does not apply. May not be combined with Frequent Buyers® Program, Price Matching Policy, previous purchases, or other discounts or promotions. Not valid on purchase of gift certificates or on previous purchases. The discount is applicable to, and the maximum purchase based on, current item handling prices only, and excludes tax, shipping and tax on shipping. Void where prohibited. POS:CODE-T

NBA settlement imminent

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Labor peace appeared likely in the NBA after players rejected by a nearly 2-to-1 margin the effort to eliminate their union.

"I would hope the player reps look at that and ratify the agreement," union head Simon Gourdine said after the votes were counted Tuesday at the National Labor Relations Board.

Player representatives are to meet in Chicago on Wednesday and vote on a six-year collective bargaining agreement. NBA commissioner David Stern predicted owners will approve the contract by next Monday at the latest and lift the lockout imposed July 1. If the deal is approved, training camps would open as scheduled on Oct. 6 and the season would begin on time on Nov. 3. Since the lockout, teams were barred from negotiating player contracts. Among the 421 eligible voters, 226 voted to keep the union and 134 voted to decertify. The pro-union forces, which were supported by Stern and got 63 percent of the ballots, said the vote was tantamount to a referendum on the labor agreement.

"I don't think there is a significant group out there any more that is against this deal," Stern said.

Daniel Silverman, the NLRB's New York regional director, said the results will not be official until Sept. 19. The losing side may file objections to the way the vote was conducted. The NLRB would then take four to six weeks to determine whether the objections are valid.

"Of course, I'm disappointed by the vote," said Jeffrey Kessler, the lawyer for players seeking to decertify the union. "I still believe this is a terrible vote for the players and they will regret it for a long time."

Kessler's group, which includes Michael Jordan and Patrick Ewing, will decide this week whether to challenge the election. The overwhelming vote may cause the group to give up the fight, which began June 21.

"A lot of the players got intimidated by the threat of the owners that the season was going to end," Kessler said. "The strategy the NBA carried out was effective."

Stern denied the NBA had coerced players to support the union. "This is a perfectly legal lockout," he said. "We did nothing that is wrong."

The dissidents think players could get a better deal by dissolving the union and fighting the NBA in court. The group filed an antitrust suit in Minneapolis on June 28, but appellate courts have ruled players can't proceed with antitrust cases if they are unionized.

Phillips kicked off Nebraska football

By Dave Zelio
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — After his sophomore season, Nebraska running back Lawrence Phillips was asked what it would take to get him out of a football game.

"It would have to be a situation where I can't walk," he answered. "Or a situation where I might die."

Neither was the case with the stunning announcement by Nebraska coach Tom Osborne that Phillips, a junior Heisman Trophy contender who had rushed for 359 yards and seven touchdowns in the first two games this year, had been kicked off the team.

Phillips, 20, was charged with third-degree assault, trespassing and destruction of property in the attack on an ex-girlfriend early Sunday. Police say he climbed into a third-floor apartment, assaulted Katherine McEwen, a 20-year-old sophomore on the women's basketball team. Police said she has left Nebraska for her own protection.

Phillips has pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charges. Osborne swiftly reached his own verdict.

"Lawrence and I have agreed on what happened and there's no question - I wouldn't call it a beating - but he certainly did inflict some damage to the young lady," Osborne said. "She was dragged down some stairs and there were some injuries."

Although Osborne may yet change his mind and reinstate Phillips on the team, the coach clearly is unhappy with the I-back after two previous brushes with the law in Lincoln.

The assault allegation was a disturbing reminder of Phillips' past problems with controlling his temper. There were fistfights at a California group home where he lived for part of his high school career. His freshman debut at Nebraska was delayed by a one-game suspension for fighting with a teammate.

Still, longtime friends were shocked at news of the arrest. "He's a very gentle person, very soft-spoken and low-key," said Barbara Thomas, who runs the Tina Mac Group Home in West Covina, Calif., where Phillips lived before coming to Nebraska. "I wonder what happened."

Friends said Phillips may have been under too much pressure because of highly publicized run-ins with police and an NCAA investigation.

"He's in a different setting back there," Ms. Thomas said. "He hasn't been exposed to what he's seeing right now. He comes back home and he's comfortable. You have to know how to fit in sometimes. I didn't teach him that or help him. He didn't learn how to do that."

Sports Notice
UMass dance team auditions
There will be tryouts for the UMass Dance team Sunday, September 17th 3:00 p.m. on the 19th floor of John Adams Dorm. If you have any questions please call Jessi at 253-1794.

■ Brown

continued from page 12

The Seattle Mariners or the New York Yankees are most likely to be the AL wild-card team. I am a Boston Red Sox fan, therefore I would like to see the Yankees sit this post- season out, but they are on the bubble.

The Mariners are a team that deserves to be in post -season. They have struggled in the rainy city since they joined the league 1977. They have done nothing, zero, zip, zilch. Probably the most insignificant American league franchise over the last decade, finally has a good team. They have great hitters in Ken Griffey Jr., and Jay Buhner, along with Edgar and Tino Martinez. The Seattle pitching staff is solid with Randy Johnson, Andy Benes, and Chris Bosio. It would be great for baseball if a small-market team such as Seattle could emerge as a World Series contender.

The National League West's leading candidates are the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Colorado Rockies. Colorado, a team who just joined the league three years ago, has a shot at bringing a crown to the Rocky Mountains. They could be the fastest team to win the crown after joining the league through expansion. Ultimately, a potentially great piece to the baseball history books.

•How about the television programming? We get to watch a whole new series of baseball in October. Turn off 90210 and tune into the baseball game. Unless the Yankees make post-season, because they are more ridiculous than the Fox Network prize show. (Sorry all you Yankees fans, but I must take at least one shot at Steinbrenner's clan in my column.)

•The wild-card aspect to the playoffs gets more cities involved in baseball. Eight North American cities will take part in post-season baseball, doubling the former amount. That creates more fan feedback and attention and more press for America's game.

•Finally, NHL Hockey and NBA Basketball have 16 playoff teams and NFL Football has six wild-card teams. Those playoffs take forever to complete, yet fans still watch every game as if it were the final game. Why not baseball? Adding one round is not a big deal.

Concluding to all the Perillusists, I mean purists, who think the wild-card dilutes the baseball playoffs, I have to say that times change, get over it.

Mike Brown is a Collegian columnist.

■ Perillo

continued from page 12

Let's go one step further. By the complicated rules which govern the wild card (these, by the way, are harder to understand than the Morrill Hoot plan), the Yanks would get home field advantage over the Sox if they met up in the second round.

Obviously, it is all about money, and personally I don't agree with the Major League Baseball hierarchy that thinks another round of playoffs will generate tons more interest in baseball. As a fan, I am more interested in a close pennant race. Who could forget Atlanta and San Francisco battling to the final day in 1993? Or the (in)famous one game playoff in 1978 between the Yanks and Red Sox?

These great races have all but been eliminated by the new format. Now, a pennant race loser doesn't have to put it all on the line. What fun would it have been if San Fran could have just said, "It doesn't matter, we've got the wild card. We'll get another chance in the playoffs."

I have no problems with dividing the two leagues into three divisions, but there are several better ways to run the playoff system.

If an extra playoff tier is really necessary, then how 'bout handing a bye to the division winner with the best record? That way, only the three division champs make the post season, and the team with the best regular season record gets a reward.

The other two winners could go at it in a best of five, with the victor moving on to face the team with the bye.

If we must have a wild card system, can it at least work logically? It would just be too easy to have the wild card team play the division winner with the best record while the other two champs square off.

And here's another novel idea. The team with the better record could get home field advantage! Wow, how do I think of these things?

The wild card has tainted our national pastime. Brownie may not agree now, but I wonder what he'll be saying if the Yanks are heading to the series, and the Red Sox are shaking their heads, wondering where it all went wrong.

Brian Perillo is a Collegian columnist.

Pittsburgh defense is under attack

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH (AP) Greg Lloyd said it first - very loudly and very emphatically - and coach Bill Cowher agrees: Nobody, not even NFL officials, will disrupt the way the Pittsburgh Steelers play defense.

Adjust to the NFL's newly strengthened rules to protect the quarterback? Maybe. But alter the blitzing, attacking style that got the Steelers to the AFC title game last season?

"No, no, no, no - we overcome it," Cowher said Tuesday, displaying the same emotional passion he normally reserves for the sidelines. "If we get a penalty, they get a first down and we just line up and try to stop them three more downs. But we will NOT change the way we play football."

The Steelers cannot worry that officials, subconsciously or not, might be overly protective Monday of Dolphins star Dan Marino, according to Lloyd.

The intriguing matchup of the AFC's best offense (Miami) against its best defense (Pittsburgh) is already being promoted as a possible preview of the AFC championship game.

"Dan Marino?" Cowher said, his eyes widening and brightening at the very mention of the name. "I don't think so. I think the officials are too professional for that."

Regardless, the Steelers clearly have found it difficult to tone down their aggressiveness to fit the expanded rules designed to protect quarterbacks.

Tied for the NFL lead in penalties (19) with the Lions and Jets, the Steelers drew eight defensive penalties in the second half Sunday in Houston. One was a roughing the passer call on Lloyd, who was fined $12,000 for a preseason hit on the Packers' Brett Favre. The fine and penalty hardly seem to have stifled Lloyd's attack-first style, just as Cowher hope they wouldn't.

"I will try to knock (Marino) into next week," Lloyd said. "If the officials want to call a penalty, so be it. Are we going to go after Marino? What do you think? We are not going to play passive defense.

"(The league) shows all those super hits of guys getting knocked around and knocked out of bounds and hit and spinning in the air. They show that to the fans before the game. As soon as we do that, they throw a flag. That's very hypocritical. Until they get their act together, they can't say anything to me ... nothing they say to me or any fine they levy on me."

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm, Monday-Friday, (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

Mike's Westview
Wed. Nite Raffle Nite
This Week Raffling Off 10 of our New Mike's Tee Shirts $150 of Mike's Mad Money
DRINK SPECIALS 16 OZ. DRAFT BUD ICE 65¢
16 OZ. DRINK OF THE WEEK GRAPE CRUSH $1.25
Don't Forget Thursday Nite Party Nite
Free Appetizer 9:30 pm - 10:30 pm

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

PAWSS
THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES presents:
"BOSNIA AND THE WORLD: HOW TO STOP THE KILLING"
A PANEL DISCUSSION WITH:
FRANCES CROWE
American Friends Service Committee
MICHAEL KLARE
Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies
GLENN RUGA
Friends of Bosnia
Wednesday, September 13th
7:30 PM
Converse Hall, Amherst College
This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For information please e-mail PAWSS at 545-5510

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Help Wanted
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Motorcycles
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Learn to play bridge free Thurs 7-9 p.m., 8 weeks Free book, lessons, t.shirt. Beginning Thurs., Sept. 21 in Flint Lab Room 011

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The sisters of Sigma Kappa cordially invite you to attend open Rush Tues 5:30-8:30, and Wed-Thur 6:00-9:00pm for questions or a ride call 256-6887

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau will be offering hours today tonight from 7:30-9:30 p.m. for further information please call Tara at 549-5415

AUTO FOR SALE

Mazda 626, 1985 Excellent condition car, some $2500 must sell! Call 549-1839

Mercury Marquis, 1984, 70K miles Runs excellent! Power windows & doors 1500 or B.O. Call 549-8881

1985 tan 4 speed m.t.sub-sh. Mirage 189,00 miles runs fine $400 or B.O. 584-6556

'87 Dodge pickup, RAM50, power steering, long bed, CAP, 118K, $1918 (413)772-1918

1987 Honda Wagon 5 spd AC, cassette/radio/ serviced single owner 2950 253-4017

Students! 1979 VW Rabbit for sale Excellent shape, runs well, great for students 150,000 miles Fun car!! $1000.00 or BO Jenn @ 413-774-7024

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey Ever wanted to play hockey? Here's your chance. Join our growing club team. No experience necessary! Come to our informational meeting Wed. Sept. 13 at 7pm in the Campus Center. Meet outside the Bluewall. For more info call 549-1881 or 549-0603. See you there!

BOXING LESSONS

With retired pro Biaita Burgos 549-5252

DEADHEAD SKIERS!

195cm Olin "Dark Star" Grateful Dead skis for sale Brand new! Paid $440.00 but will accept B/O for these collector's items. KEEP JERRY ALIVE!! John @ 413-774-7024 (not long distance)

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling." "Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking for." "What are you trying to tell me?" "Relevance, trust, intense! mutual enlightenment..." "Frank down the hall!" "No! Alliance Christian Fellowship committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info: Mark or Elizabeth 253-7206

ENTERTAINMENT

Having Hellawean bash on 10/27 or 10/28? Get a huge house? Want a spooky bnd? You need us!!! and we!!! needs you! call Jack at 367-9696

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

Furnished/Unfurnished apartments for rent. Sunderland, on bus route 2 bedroom townhouses. Call (10 a.m. 256-1975. Available immediately.

Turners Falls 5 rm with porch & storage can be furnished 20 min to UM On bus line 430 1st & 4last & units Norman 413-863-2275

FOR SALE

Brother word processor 2200 includes manual, spellcheck disk has framing and spreadsheets, 3 years old $250 Call Justin 546-4484

(Music 100) split cover text and 3 tapes never used $30 253-7777

Sony car disc/man. Shock plate, ear phones adapters disc, dual illum $130 or B.O. 253-7777

Three dorm-size fridges two small ones, one medium one $75.00 call Luke 549-4517

Toshiba 20" Stereo w. remote 3yr old ask for sgo call 549-8563

Macintosh LCI w/14" monitor, 20megs Ram Exc. Condition $950 or offer Call 498-5733

Matching sofa chair ottoman $100 Maytag washer $50 549-1777

Tandy 1000SL Computer with Mon & Sift MS DOS comp Ausme 300 or BO call 6-0140

GREEN

22 hours 42 days/yrs 1000 acres Totally legal. Outdoor mainstage. Two big pop tents. Skywards lasers. Massive lighting displays. Concessions. Smart Bars. Clothing and record store bazaars. Life size Stone Henge replica. Begins 4 p.m. September 23 and ends 7 p.m. September 24. A Primary/Ohm Production. 18+. Call Ohm @ 546-9803.

HELP WANTED

Word staff-experienced only. Apply within Ka-Do Restaurant 586-7774.

The Amherst Boy's and Girl's Club needs workstudy assistants for recreation programs. Open 2:30 to 5:00 afternoons, 7:00 to 9:00 evenings. Workers schedule as time available. $5.75 per hour. UM buses stop in front of club at 390 Main St. Contact Richard Brin 253-3261

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $700/+/month. World Travel. Seasonal & full time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 Ext C500

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal & full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N 5001.

Jobs for the environment. Campaigning with MassPirg to save our polluted rivers. Flexible schedule $50-$75 / Day. Call Tim 256-0434.

Typesetter/Designer /2 time with MAC equipment, sysquest Drive and BW color scanner. Quark Express program need ed for spiritual publication. Experience Ed real design sense. Send resume by 10/01 to Miracles Magazine P.O. Box 181 South Deerfield, MA 01373.

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop congress from wrecking vital antipollution laws. Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule. $6.88/hr. Can lead to summer job, career opportunity. 584-9830.

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted. KRETE RESTAURANT 586-8255.

PCA for make quad. Evenings, overnights and weekends 7.85/hr Call 546-0666.

Get paid for taking a test needed. education students planning to teach Spanish or able to speak Spanish. Tests will be held September 28, 29, and 30 at UMass Campus Center. Payment up to $155.00. One to two days. Space is limited. You must preregister by September 20. For more info call Denise Cook or Nancy Hahn at 256-0444 M-F 8:30-4:30. National Evaluation Systems.

Drivers wanted $8-12 hr. call Delivery Express 549-0077.

Male Torah reader needed. Housing and salary. Congregation Rodphey Sholom. Holyoke 534-5263.

Spring break '96 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach.

$331.00. Sell 72 funny college t-shirts, profit $231.00. Risk free. Choose from 27 designs, or design own. Free catalog 1-800-700-4877.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits. With a patient and supportive teacher. Sign up early, limited schedule. Call Peter 253-5283.

MODEM USERS

Call the Playground BBS! 256-6085. Over 4,000 files online. Twenty online games including registered L.O.R.D., B.R.E. and Usurper. Feed Co.Op and Recipe Bases, lots more! Stuff for everyone!

PERSONALS

To my next door neighbor Happy 21st!!! -- Sigma level, DCC

Lee Wasner drop your shorts & send over Mr. Baton French F. Flench.

CASHIN STAFF: Get psyched for a great year, only the best is yet to come.

To the cute guy in the Whitmore snackbar: I was surprised to find you working there, but it was a pleasant surprise. I have dreams of you and me and lunch sandwiches. Respond here if you feel the same.

Your secret admirer

To the best staff in the whole world welcome to Collegian Graphics!

POSTER GIVEAWAY

Monday, September 18, University Gallery, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions. While supplies last.

ROOM WANTED

Prof male. Looking for room in apt or home. 546-0617.

SERVICES

Exotic hair design airbrushing. 546-1754.

Experienced babysitter available, non-smoker, lots of references. 549-0612.

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel free with Sun Splash Tours. Highest commissions, lowest prices. Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710.

WANTED

Students to join health club as group to save money call Misty 256-6439.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New job opportunities arise. Do not give up your present position before investigating these prospects thoroughly. A relationship's future depends on how diplomatically you handle sensitive matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let an expensive hobby put a dent in your savings. A pet could play a role in brightening your social life. Joint endeavors at work will indirectly benefit romance or family life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go with the flow of rapidly-shifting events; rich rewards will follow. Travel in pursuit of knowledge or to settle a legal matter. A parent-child conflict can be ironed out. Offer a sympathetic ear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Opinionated remarks can have unfortunate repercussions. Stay on your toes! Be diplomatic if someone asks your preferences. Taking family members into your own confidence is an excellent idea.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An emotional confrontation will not hinder a relationship's growth if you are honest. Go through channels when pursuing a job assignment or loan. Be receptive to workplace changes and new technology. Update your skills.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept. 22): Spruce up your wardrobe if job-hunting. Courage helps you surmount a barrier. Look closely and you will find hidden benefits in a project that has gone sour. Think twice about changing your residence.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct. 22): You popularity is on the rise, helping you move up in business. Reach out to people who can help you keep everything under control. Be logical and clear when giving instructions. Set specific goals for subordinates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Joint financial affairs may be a bit complicated. A candid conversation will help clear up a misunderstanding. Children need a steady but gentle hand. Turn your back on negative people. Give yourself a fresh start.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone you met a year ago re-enters your life. Travel and new friends add up to an enjoyable autumn. Parties play an important role in your social plans. Do not ignore a legal commitment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Partnerships are in the spotlight. Let loved ones carry the ball for you socially. Dealing with the practical side of a family arrangement will require patience. Set aside time to catch up on your personal pleasures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could start the day with some misgivings about a friendship. Refuse to become agitated when things do not run smoothly. A volatile situation will quiet down by tonight. If shoptalk proves boring, change the subject!

PISCIES (Feb. 19-March 20): Today's events give you a chance to put your best foot forward. Promote family ties while softpedaling your involvement in controversial activities. Give your mate or partner's ideas a fair hearing. Keep spending down.

Mandatory Collegian Staff Meeting

TONIGHT!

6:30 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.

Also featuring:

Candidate's Night and Elections for Editor-In-Chief

Pizza will be served

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Latticework frame
8 Spells
15 Self —
16 Spread from a center
17 Wood or sea —
18 Touring
19 Half of a Samoan port
20 Whether —
22 Dill herb
23 NASA gp.
24 "The Raven" poet's monogram
25 Wind dir.
26 Greek stoic
28 Lariats
30 Peer of Norwegian legend
31 Mansions
33 Edits
35 Prop for Peete
36 Feel poorly
37 Court of —
41 Poseidon's spear
45 College sports gp.
46 Betelnuts
48 Affirm
49 DDE's command
50 Youngster
51 Lamb's mother
52 Word with turtle or goose
54 Entertainer Lotte
56 Wave, in Venice
57 Jackie of TV
59 Stirred to action
61 Component
62 — arts
63 Role in "Aida"
64 Braced framework

DOWN

1 1956 Lancaster film
2 Changes the title
3 Smart and sophisticated
4 VIP's transport
5 Native of Indochina
6 "— uncertain terms"
7 Music boxes?
8 Para add-on
9 Rave
10 Ohio college town
11 Talbot of the old movies
12 Partner of 57 Across and others
13 Steven, in France
14 Musical groups
21 Siesta
27 Author Joyce Carol
28 Movie wheels
29 Chars
30 Hayworth film
32 Afternoon social
34 Seven, in old Rome
37 He gets even 38 Kneecap
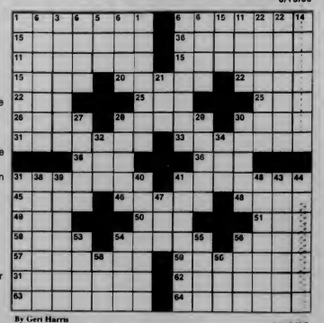
39 Advance
40 Old movies
41 Goodly sum of cash, for short
42 — up: equalizes
43 Roosevelt's program
44 Foot lever
47 Hied
53 Hindu love god
54 Eagle or Ranger
55 Sandarac tree
56 Baseball trio
58 Future cleric's sch.
60 Oslo coin

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	A	L	M		A	W	E	D		S	E	R	F	S
A	S	I	A		S	A	N	E		C	L	A	R	A
R	E	N	D		T	R	I	M		A	I	M	E	R
T	A	K	E	H	I	M	D	O	W	N	A	P	E	G
		A	I	R			T	O	T	S
R	E	E	F	S		T	I	N	Y		F	A	B
A	D	J	U	S	T		H	O	D		I	L	I	E
I	D	E	S		O	P	I	N	E		N	A	O	A
S	A	C	S		P	I	N		R	I	S	K	E	D
E	S	T		C	H	A	S			D	E	E	D	S
			C	H	A	N			T	E	R
T	A	K	E	I	T	O	R	L	E	A	V	E	I	T
A	M	E	N	D		L	O	O	P		I	G	O	R
L	A	P	S	E		A	S	T	I		C	O	N	E
E	S	T	E	S		S	A	I	D		E	S	S	E

6/13/95



By Geri Harris
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

6/13/95

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

OTHER KIDS' GAMES ARE ALL SUCH A BORE! THEYRE GOTTA HAVE RULES AND THEY GOTTA KEEP SCORE! CALVINBALL IS BETTER BY FAR! IT'S NEVER THE SAME! IT'S ALWAYS BIZARRE! YOU DON'T NEED A TEAM OR A REFEREE! YOU KNOW THAT IT'S GREAT 'CAUSE IT'S NAMED AFTER ME! IF YOU WANNA...
UH, FEEL FREE TO HARMONIZE WITH HOBBES ON THE RUMMA TUM TUMS
THIS WAS A MISTAKE

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I'VE GOT THE CALVINBALL! EVERYBODY ELSE HAS TO GO IN SLOW MOTION NOW!
WAIT A MINUTE CALVIN I DUNT.
YOU HAVE TO TALK IN SLOW MOTION TOO LIIIKE THIISSS
IIIISSS GAAAME MAAAKES NOOOO SENNNSE! IT'SSSS AASSS IFFFF YOURRRRE MAAAKINNNGGG IIIIIT UUUUP AAAS YOUUU GOOO HOBBES! SHE STUMBLED INTO THE PERIMETER OF WISDOM! RUN!!
OH.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

ROGSART, I NEED TIME TO GET THE MONEY!
COME NOW, YOU'RE AN ACTRESS, A STAR! YOU'RE LOADED!
BUT I HAVEN'T HAD A ROLE IN OVER A YEAR!
THAT'S TOO BAD--FOR YOUR BROTHER!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DOGBERT THE CONSULTANT
WE TOOK YOUR ADVICE AND FORMED BUSINESS UNITS WITHIN THE COMPANY
NOW WE SPEND ALL OF OUR TIME FIGHTING WITH EACH OTHER ABOUT WHO DOES WHAT WHAT EXACTLY DID YOU MEAN WHEN YOU SAID IT WOULD "GUARANTEE FUTURE BUSINESS"?
OH LOOK- MY CONTRACT JUST EXPIRED

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WE'RE GOING TO FOLLOW THE ADVICE OF THE DOGBERT CONSULTING COMPANY AND FORM "BATTLIN' BUSINESS UNITS."
WE'LL SPEND MOST OF OUR TIME CROSS-CHARGING AND UNDERMINING THE OTHER BBUS
A LITTLE COMPETITION IS HEALTHY
WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T TICK OFF THE JANITORIAL BDU

Generation X By Chris Lehman

HEY! DO YOU KNOW WHAT TIME IT IS?
I DON'T KNOW ENGLISH.
I SAID, "WHAT TIME IS IT?"
I DON'T KNOW ENGLISH.
FOR THE LAST TIME, "WHAT TIME IS IT?!!"
I CAN HEAR, BUT I DON'T KNOW ENGLISH!!
(Okay okay...)

Close to Home By John McPherson

"According to the instructions, we can't drive faster than 3 mph or have a total passenger weight over 150 pounds while the spare is being used."

Close to Home By John McPherson

MR. CLEGNER'S MOOD AS OF: 9:45 MONDAY
• MELLOW
• FLAKEY
• MR. HAPPY
• DEMONIC • CARING
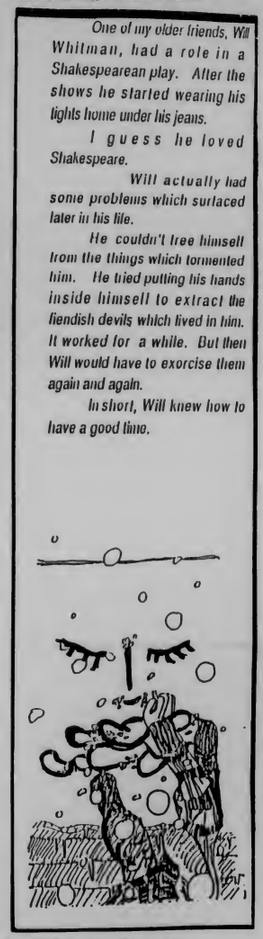
• MOROSE
• HOMICIDAL
• PARANOID
• COMATOSE
• HYPER
COMMENTS: Throw overhead projector at Ted Austin for wearing an "ugly tie." Not a good day to be left with a project. Avoid eye contact.
T. CLEGNER SENIOR VICE-PRES.

The Biggest Hat of All By Jordan Yaruss

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



One of my older friends, Will Whitman, had a role in a Shakespearean play. After the shows he started wearing his tights home under his jeans.

I guess he loved Shakespeare.

Will actually had some problems which surfaced later in his life.

He couldn't free himself from the things which tormented him. He tried putting his hands inside himself to extract the fiendish devils which lived in him. It worked for a while. But then Will would have to exorcise them again and again.

In short, Will knew how to have a good time.

Joey By Joey

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Mark Mitchell
Production ..... Andrew Bryce
Kathryn Gracia

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Fish Crunchies	Chicken Breast Sand.
Sloppy Joe	Baked Ziti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Fish Crunchies	Rice and Beans
Veggie Sloppy Joe	Baked Ziti

Quote of the Day

"Fletch, you can't run the ad and not run the story..."

–Frank
Fletch (1985)

"

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest college daily newspaper.

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

ATTENTION COLLEGIAN STAFF:

If you cannot attend the staff meeting this evening, please contact your editor or supervisor for further information. There will be voting for the Editor-in-Chief position after the meeting and tomorrow in the business office.

The Collegian Graphics Dept. is no longer accepting applications for night graphics positions.

Congratulations to our new staff
&
Thanks to everyone who applied!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Sports

UM men's soccer gets back on track, dumps Siena

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

CHICOPEE — After a stunning upset loss at the hands of Fordham last Saturday, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team had to regain the form that won it last season's Atlantic 10 Conference championship.

Despite missing Karsten Bremke for the third consecutive game and with Dave Siljanovski suffering from injuries, the Minutemen (3-1-0) regained their usual form last night, beating Siena 3-1 before 274 at Szot Park in Chicopee.

Massachusetts	3
Siena	1

Scott Regina, Brad Miller and Brad Kurowski tallied for UMass as the Minutemen handed Siena its second loss.

"After Saturday's game we needed a 'W' and even more importantly we needed to play well," UMass coach Sam Koch said. "The first half we played very well, but we have to keep on improving. In the second half at times we didn't play well and we can't expect to be real successful. This was a positive move in the right direction but we've still got a ways to go."

The Saints controlled play early on. A talented crop of speedy Siena forwards utilized some great individual moves to create some quality scoring opportunities.

Siena would register the match's first tally at the 9:36 mark, as David Glock fired a shot past UMass goalkeeper Eric Gruber and into the top right corner.

For the next eighty-plus minutes the Minutemen controlled the play. UMass was more open in its one-touch passing than they were against Fordham and on a few occasions Mike Butler was able to use the open space to create offensive opportunities.

Siljanovski, the A-10's Player of the Week, suffered a contusion just above his right knee in practice on Monday and did not enter the game until the 20th minute. Siljanovski still played his usual fiery game and wasted no time in adding to his team scoring lead.

After helping, along with Colin Johnson, set up an excellent scoring chance for Paul Glezerman, Siljanovski assisted on UMass' first goal of the evening at the 26:46 mark.

Siljanovski sent a pass to Johnson at the 18. Johnson was stopped with his back to the goal by a Siena defender after receiving the ball but sent a pass to the outside to a charging Regina who beat Siena goalkeeper Brian Monranari low for the second goal of his freshman campaign.

Just four minutes later, Regina would have his bid for a second goal thwarted when a powerful shot deflected off the far post after beating a sliding Monranari.

Maintaining the pressure, the Minutemen posted their second goal of the match just under seven minutes from the half. Defender Bennie Sheally, standing ten yards inside the midfield stripe on the far side of the field, launched a precise pass to Miller, who was at the corner of the penalty area on the near side of the field.

Sheally's mind-boggling sixty yard pass landed right at Miller's feet. The Longmeadow native rifled a shot past Monranari for the third goal of his career, made extra- special by it coming before a home-town crowd.

"It felt great to get a goal tonight," Miller said. "I've been working on playing hard defense first but try to come through on offense. Shealy gave me a great ball from the outside and everything worked out well. It was great having the youngsters here screaming."

Miller was not alone in feeling that playing at Szot Park, thirty minutes south of Amherst, benefited the Minutemen.

"I think [playing in Chicopee] is exactly what we needed," Koch said. "We needed to get away from campus to be more focused. I think that certainly helped us, and this is a great place to play too."

UMass survived a scare in the 54th minute after a Siena freekick. Glock snuck behind the Minuteman defensive wall, fifteen yards from the goal, and took a gentile pass from Tom Sewell, catching most of the UMass defense by surprise. Defender Joe Jacobson made a spectacular play as he broke free from the wall to block, and clear Glock's shot.

Siljanovski recorded his second assist, in the 73rd minute, as he sent a freekick from the side of the penalty area to the head of Kurowski for his first career goal.

"There are a lot of people that can score," Koch commented. "Siljanovski is doing an excellent job for us, but there are other people who can put the ball in the back of net. It's great to see it happen."

UMass' defense held Siena for the final sixteen minutes as the few shots Siena could muster were mostly off target. Gruber was able to turn away the Saints' sole serious scoring bid with a spectacular save on a Sewell header two and a half minutes from full-time.

The Minutemen will face a powerful Xavier squad Friday evening in Cincinnati.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The UMass mens' soccer team ran over Siena College 3-2 last night at Szot Park in Chicopee.

Women's tennis opens on road

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Noelle Orsini and the rest of the UMass womens' tennis squad, takes aim at Hartford today in their opening match of the Fall season.

By Jay Warner
Collegian Correspondent

With only one week to prepare for Wednesday's opening match with Hartford, Massachusetts women's tennis coach Judy Dixon is hesitant to give an outlook on the season just yet.

Coming off a 7-5 campaign in 1994, Dixon felt that the main concern for this year's team was to improve their doubles play. After losing four matches by one single point, due mainly to the lack of strength in doubles, Dixon sought to recruit players who were good athletes with doubles ability.

What she found was Marie Christine Caron and Jackie Braunstein, both acquired primarily for their success as doubles players.

"Most high school players do not enter college with much knowledge of doubles and a lot of times these double matches are the ones that determine the outcome," Dixon said.

She feels that Caron and Braunstein, also the No. 5 singles player, will give UMass the strength it needs in doubles play.

Liesl Sitton returns in her senior year as the No. 1 singles player, as well as a member of the No. 1 doubles pair. Dixon feels that Sitton, a co-captain, is "the finest women's tennis player UMass has ever had".

Sophomore Noelle Orsini returns as the No. 2 singles player, hoping to improve on last season, in which Dixon felt maturity and experience were her difficulties. Junior Liz Durant returns as a co-captain and No. 3 singles player, with winning New England's as her long term goal. Durant will also team up with Caron to form the teams No. 2 doubles team.

> "Most high school players do not enter college with much knowledge of doubles and a lot of times these double matches are the ones that determine the outcome."
> – Judy Dixon
> women's tennis coach

Returning sophomore Caroline Steele is the No. 4 singles player, who Dixon feels added intensity and consistency during the off-season in the backcourt are aspects of her game that need improvement. More important than her singles status is her contribution as the No. 1 doubles pairing with Sitton, whom Dixon feels forms "one of the finest doubles team in New England."

Rounding out their lineup is Jackie Braunstein, as a No. 5 singles player and No. 2 doubles team alongside Orsini, and Lana Gorodetskaya as the No. 6 singles player.

This year's schedule starts out with a number of matches in September that are against very competitive teams, but against which UMass is capable of winning.

From October on, they face difficult squads which either make or break their season, with New England just around the corner.

With five of the eight members of last year's team being freshman, Dixon felt that inexperience played a major role in several matches. She hopes that with the five returning sophomores as well as the leadership of Sitton and Durant, they will be able to pull out the close matches that slipped out of reach last season.

The team has set a goal of 15 wins and Dixon knows the talent is there. The question is whether it can improve its doubles game and display the experience that it takes to pull out close ones.

The wild–card face off: play or fold

■ Extra playoff rounds add more excitement

■ New system cools off the fans' pennant fever

BRIAN PERILLO
ON THE WILD CARD DEBATE
MIKE BROWN

Enter the age of expansion.

The Major League baseball season, the pennant race, the divisional championships, and the battle to win the World series, is the chronological order which baseball fans follow each season, in anticipation for the winner of the Fall Classic.

Last season, the strike hit the world of baseball mania and left a piece of myself and many others missing. I watched Monday night football, disappointed in Major League Baseball, wishing the two minute warning was the bottom of the ninth.

Baseball returned this year and I was back on the bandwagon faster than a Roger Clemens fastball. I read about and watched the dramatic decrease in ballpark attendance, and the lack of fan support for America's national pastime. I could not believe the grudge perennial baseball fanatics were holding against the players.

Personally, I think the grudge held against the players was an excuse because their favorite or home team couldn't beat the Bad News Bears. For example, take a city with a team like the Minnesota Twins or the Toronto Blue Jays. Each of those cities were fortunate enough to be blessed with a World Series Champion in the '90s. The fact that they stink sends fans looking for excuses. I don't want to hear it.

In 1993 expansion hit the bigs and in 1994, the American and National Leagues played some musical chairs. The Florida Marlins and the Colorado Rockies entered the National League, forcing a realignment of the divisions. Each League added a Central Division, and according to geographic location, teams shifted to the division best suited for travelling.

Now we have leagues with three divisional winners. So how do you organize the playoffs? Easy, add a wild-card team in each league to make it even. That is the best idea for the following reasons:

• With expansion, MLB had to add a third division to each league. In order to retain and create new exciting divisional rivalries, a five team division is more interesting than a seven team division. Adding that wild-card team makes it an even four teams per league, in the playoffs.

•How can you have a League Championship series with three teams? It is not right to give the team with the best record a bye. Divisions are better than others from year to year, so the record may not be an accurate assessment of the team's talent.

•Another possibility might be to take the two best records of the three divisional winners. What a drag that would be. For instance, the California Angels have a five game lead in the AL West, however the Cleveland Indians (Central winners), and Boston Red Sox (likely East winners), both have better records.

If you are an Angels fan, would it be fair to say, "I'm an Angels fan, and they won the AL West pennant, but that doesn't mean squat because they do not have a shot at the World Series"? I would be peeved.

• Baseball is a game of streaks and players are changing teams like Deion Sanders changes sports teams. Some teams start off very slow, but after a few key acquisitions and the development of players, a team rises as a power to be reckoned with.

Turn to BROWN, page 9

Ahhh...the good old days.

Major League Baseball still had a commissioner, Wade Boggs was still cheered in New England and teams still had to win something to get to the post season.

Yes, before the "Age of the Wild card" came upon us, it actually required a record over .500 to get to the playoffs.

Now, before I get carried away with this thing, let me just say that I am not bashing the new wild card system because I am not one of those "baseball purists." I have no problem seeing veterans like Eddie Murray or Chili Davis get a few years worth of hacks in as a designated hitter. I also happen to be one of the only people that thinks the expansion Tampa Bay Devil Rays have a pretty catchy nickname.

No, I am not a purist. But I am against the wild card. Why? Simply because the system makes no sense, whatsoever.

Let me start by throwing out a few facts.

First, Major League Baseball plays a 162 game season. 162 games! That amount is twice hockey or basketball, and ten times the NFL!

Over that many games, two things happen.

The best team in each division emerges as a regular season champion. There is no arguing the fact that in 162 games, the deepest, most talented ballclubs wind up at the top.

The teams with a few good players, or a couple decent pitchers, may win some games, but will not last over an entire season.

Why, then, give these average teams a shot to win it all? Babe Ruth would be turning over in his grave.

Brownie might say that the better teams should then prove it in the playoffs, but in baseball, more than every other sport, any team can beat any other team on a given day. Even the best clubs lose fifty games a year.

This is fine, and it is part of the mystique of the game when an underdog team can knock off a powerhouse. Don't forget, until this year, all teams involved in the playoffs were already champions, and had proven themselves over a full season.

However, it is absolutely ridiculous that a team like Kansas City, trailing the Cleveland Indians by 25 and a half games could match up with the Tribe for the right to go to the World Series.

Let's see, didn't the Indians already prove they were just a little better than the Royals this year? Yet here they are one or two bad games away from being eliminated by a club they finished over two dozen games ahead of? Ridiculous!

Under this system, any team with a couple of good pitchers and a decent lineup could go all the way. For example, let's talk about the New York Yankees. The Bronx Bombers have two All-Star pitchers in David Cone and Jack McDowell, but after that their pitching staff looks like the personification of mediocrity.

However, in a first round series, the Yanks could start either Cone or McDowell in four of the five games. With a pitching staff like that, the pinstripers suddenly go from an inconsistent farce, to a post season force.

Now, let's say the Yankees do win this new thing called the wild card. By some higher-up's stroke of brilliance, the Yanks would play California, while the East champion Red Sox match up against Cleveland.

What a reward for winning the division! The Sox face the best team in baseball, while the second place club from their own division draws a faltering Angels squad.

Turn to PERILLO, page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 7 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, September 14, 1995

Just the FACs please
The Fine Arts Center is celebrating its 20th Anniversary and the Collegian was able to find out all about the year- long celebration (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Substance abuse help
Students with alcohol problems can find on-campus help through the Residential Educational Alcohol Program (See story, page 2).

Campanile looks to rebound
Quarterback Vito Campanile hopes for a better performance against Holy Cross on Saturday (See Sports, Page 16).

Extended Forecast
Expect continued cloudiness and rain throughout the rest of the week with some possible relief this weekend. The sun will show up just in time for the football game on Saturday.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 68	HIGH: 73 LOW: 60	HIGH: 70 LOW: 45

US Embassy bombed in Moscow

By Serge Shargorodsky
Associated Press

MOSCOW — A masked attacker fired a rocket-propelled grenade that pierced the thick brick wall of the U.S. Embassy and exploded in an empty office Wednesday. No one was injured in the daring mid-afternoon attack that came at a time of rising anti-American sentiment.

There was no claim of responsibility and officials said there was no clear link to growing Russian criticism of NATO airstrikes on Bosnian Serbs. Russian and U.S. spokesmen insisted the attack was an isolated incident.

"It's the act of a lone maniac," said a senior Russian security official at the scene, speaking on condition of anonymity. The grenade was fired at 4:25 p.m. from the opposite side of the busy Garden Ring road, crossing 12 lanes of rush-hour traffic. It punched through the facade of the mustard-and-white 10-story building on the sixth floor, sending thick smoke swirling. The blast broke two windows and gouged out brick and plaster, leaving a hole and scorching the wall.

There were no reports of arrests, but the Interfax news agency quoted security officials as saying they had a composite sketch of the attacker, a tall, young man in jeans.

Embassy spokesman Richard Hoagland called the attack "an isolated act" and said it "will have no impact on the Russian-American relations."

In Washington, the State Department said President Clinton was briefed on the attack, which came just a day after the Kremlin accused NATO of genocide against the Bosnian Serbs. Russia's historic allies.

It also came on the eve of a visit to Moscow by Deputy Secretary Strobe Talbott, charged with trying to heal the widening rift between Washington and Moscow.

Hoagland said the grenade exploded inside a large photocopying machine, which absorbed most of the shock. The small room was empty at the time, he said.

"There were no warning calls," Hoagland said. "As of now, no one has claimed responsibility."

A spent grenade launcher, a black ski mask and a glove were found across the ring road, Hoagland said. Police said the launcher was lying inside an archway leading to a tree-covered courtyard that may have been the escape route. Some Russian media reports said the attacker escaped in a waiting car.

Glass, shrapnel and what looked like the rocket-propelled grenade's tail littered the pavement outside the embassy.

"Most likely it was an anti-tank grenade," said Moscow Civil Defense commander Col. Ivan Chigogidze.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said someone was using the copy machine five minutes before the explosion.

"They could have been killed," he said.

Interior Ministry commandos, police and embassy guards cordoned off the area. The embassy's Marine guards, armed with automatic rifles and machine guns, stood guard. Bomb-sniffing police dogs were also on the scene.

All but essential personnel were evacuated, but the modern annex behind the embassy's main building remained open.

Rush-hour traffic continued to crawl along the broad boulevard in front of the embassy as crowds of onlookers gathered on sidewalks. One elderly woman asked police officers if she, too, was in danger.

Amherst addresses free speech rights at heated town meeting

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

First Amendment issues, committee appointments, school funding and town financial resources were among the many duties which the Town of Amherst Select Board tackled during their meeting this past Monday from 6 to 9 p.m.

Freedom of speech

There have long been banners seen in the center of Amherst, the current banner reading "Trash Into Treasure," advertising a furniture sale.

Lately, however, the banners have become a source of increasing controversy, and it may soon come down to a hearing as to whether or not the banners will continue to fly overhead in Amherst Center.

According to a town law, these banners are not allowed to contain commercial, political or religious statements, or statements of position on any issue.

Any of these types of messages can easily be used if they are turned into an announcement for an event, said Hill Boss, one of the five members of the Amherst select board.

Amongst the banners arousing the greatest public outcry was the one which announced the New Testament Church's "Jesus is Risen" mass, Boss said.

"I think it's a healthy example of free speech," said Jack Gravell, a pastor from the Amherst area New Testament Church.

Boss, who received numerous phone calls from Jewish constituents, stresses that he has not taken a position against the banner.

"It was simply an effort on my part to see if there was a consensus in town to change the policies," Boss said. "I would like to see the select board develop a position through the community."

A motion to bring the issue to a public issue was rejected.

"Some people find the banners confusing because they attribute them to the town," said Carolyn Holstein, a select board member.

Tony Curt, a resident of the Amherst area, said he appreciates the steps the board is taking, but he also said that he doesn't like the idea of banning the banner.

There used to be a "Secret Santa" on the UMass campus, but a lot of kids complained that it was too much a symbol of Christianity and it was eliminated, Curt said. He added that a similar fate befell the Christmas tree at the Jones Library when someone complained.

"Amherst, with UMass, should not be an antiseptic town," Curt said. "I've seen a lot of banners that got my skin going, but it would be a lot worse if they weren't there to do that."

Other banners which have received complaints have been those sponsored by both the Pro-Life and Pro-Choice movements, Boss said.

"Don't banners reflect and animate the thought of the community?" said Mary McDonald, a Northampton pro-life advocate. "This is the kind of 'clutter' that keeps us free."

She added she believes people don't suffer from editorials, and described life without the banner as being "so dull, and so oppressive."

"She's rather articulate, but she didn't get it," Boss said. "No one on the select board was attempting to censor pro- life messages."

The issue over the banners was not resolved, no further action was announced.

Financial Problems

The Town of Amherst Regional School is just one of many financial burdens which the Town of Amherst must deal with in the years to come.

Other projects which must be accounted for include the construction of a new town hall and, further down the line, a new elementary school.

To help meet with the costs of these projects, a revised version of the ten percent financial plan was presented to the Select Board on Monday.

"It's an excellent plan," Boss said. "It will in fact plan for the future, instead of just for today like we usually do."

The basic idea of the plan is to take ten percent of the towns budget, which would have been used anyway, and place it in a reserve fund which will provide the city with financial security in the years to come.

"If the town didn't use this money, other groups would press for it and it would be hard to say no," Boss said.

The proposed plan will force the city to forego growth, but will maintain the most pressing needs, said Bryan C. Harvey, the Chairman of the Select Board.

The plan was passed by a unanimous vote.

Another financial problem which indirectly faces Amherst is the lack of funding for the Amherst regional school.

"Under the new state educational reformat, the minimum amount each town has to come up in order to reach the state requirement has been redefined," Boss said.

Shutesbury is among the towns which sends students to the school, and under the redefinition the town is required to pay an extra $73,000 along with the money it had already allocated to the school, Boss said.

He added that Shutesbury must now pass a new budget to come up with the money that the state is requiring them to pay.

Due to the fact that the town has only a population of around 2,000, this additional payment could have a tremendous impact on that towns taxpayers.

No action was taken on this issue, although funds from the ten percent plan could possibly go towards these financial areas as well.

Commissioner named

A vacancy in the Housing

Turn to AMHERST, page 11

Termites torment Hatch, force bar to close

JEFF DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

The Hatch is undergoing renovations following a termite infestation.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Early in August, while moving the portable stage that usually rests at the back of the Hatch, a University of Massachusetts employee's foot plunged through the wooden floorboards of the eatery.

After investigation from the University Physical Plant, Environmental Health and Safety, and an exterminator, the source of the problem was found — termites.

As a result, the portion of the Hatch infested with the insects, which had collected in the out-of-service bowling alley lanes under the boards, has been closed off by a temporary wall since the August discovery.

The bowling alley had been closed for the past 25 years, and was responsible for the elevation in the back of the Hatch.

Roberta Potter, the Director of Campus Center Food Services, said that because only the Hatch Bar area was constructed from wood, the rest of the eating establishment was left unscathed.

"The good news is that the damage is just limited to that part of the Hatch," Potter said.

Hatch Bar closed

Yet, the damage was extensive enough to require the gutting of the entire back, including the Hatch Bar and seating space, neither of which Potter said should greatly impact upon the University community.

"The only real decrease in sales will be from the Hatch Bar," she said. "But the bar was one of our least-used spaces certainly."

Potter described the bar as having a "devoted and loyal following," albeit a small one.

Student employees have received mixed responses regarding the absence of the Hatch Bar.

"I haven't gotten a lot of comments," said Student Supervisor Eric Douglas, a senior Anthropology major. "I haven't got a lot of negative response."

Other students have been curious as to why the bar has disappeared.

"They come over and ask where the Hatch Bar is," said senior psychology major Liz Richmond, who works at a register. "I just send them up to the Top of the Campus (TOC) and tell them it's a better view anyway."

Potter, too, said she hopes students will use the TOC bar as a substitute this year, but also indicated the situation was not dire to business.

"If we had to pick one space to lose for a while, that would be the space," Potter said. "Not to say I'm glad it's gone."

Turn to HATCH, page 11

Repairs needed at New Africa House

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

A single fan, eight inches in diameter, serves as the ventilation for a New Africa House room 12 by 14 feet in area in which the ceiling is coated with soot from congested air.

Despite repeated requests for repairs to his workshop, most importantly the fan, Professor Dorrance Hill said he has not been obliged by the University of Massachusetts administration.

Last February, Hill said he was promised University officials that he would receive a replacement for the badly ailing fan, which Hill said begins to squeak and become overworked minutes into its use.

Hill has already had to cancel one of his two welding sections because of the ventilation difficulties, which he said to his knowledge does not pose a serious threat to the health of students.

"I have one section of welding now," he said. "And because of the vent, every now and then, we stop class to let the air out."

A new fan design which Hill said he gladly accepted was offered to him shortly after the administrative visit last semester, during which Chancellor David K. Scott, his fellow administrators and Environmental Health and Safety representatives surveyed the entire building.

That design was described by Hill as having "robot-like arms" which ran from a larger external fan to the two work stations inside the workshop.

According to Hill, the long-awaited equipment was supposed to be installed over the course of the summer, but never was.

"[The administration] should have come and said

Turn to NEW AFRICA HOUSE, page 3

Holocaust survivors seeking restitution

By Paul Ames
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States, appealing for quick action to help the few remaining Holocaust survivors, joined Jewish groups Wednesday in appealing to Eastern European nations to return property seized during Nazi occupation.

"One of the first priorities is to see that income can be given to these survivors so they can live their remaining lives in some degree of grace, without poverty," said U.S. envoy Stuart Eizenstat.

He spoke at a meeting organized by the World Jewish Restitution Organization.

Hungary and Romania have signed agreements that should open the way to a return of Jewish property, said Eizenstat, U.S. ambassador to the European Union (EU). He said the United States is trying to convince other governments to follow suit.

Since the collapse of the Soviet Bloc, Jewish groups have been lobbying to recover property and buildings such as synagogues, schools and hospitals confiscated by the Nazis and later taken over by Communist regimes.

They also want millions of dollars placed in Swiss bank accounts by Jews killed in the Nazi genocide, and money stolen by the Nazis and placed in secret Swiss accounts.

Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, was scheduled to fly to Switzerland on Thursday for talks with government and banking officials.

He said Tuesday's announcement that the Swiss Bankers Association will instigate new measures to search for missing tens of millions of dollars in its members' vaults was a "good first step."

The efforts to secure a return of the property have received firm backing from the United States.

Jewish leaders want to see similar support from the 15-nation EU which has considerable leverage with central European nations, many of which seek EU membership by the end of the decade.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Sept. 14

GLBT Lecture — The Return of Stonewall, speaker Lloyd Pratt, 545-4824, free and open to the public, 803 Campus Center, 12-1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League (RAIL), Cape Cod Lounge, 2 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The Bald Soprano, by Eugene Ionesco, translated by Donald M. Allen, directed by Laura Schurzel '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: The King Stag, by Carlo Gozzi, translated and edited by Ellen Kaplan, SC, Theatre 14, 7–10 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Whirligig, by Mac Wellman, directed by Shaleece Haas '96, FAC, 7–10 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 15

LBGA Dance — The first dance of the year, free, the Bluewall, 9 p.m. – 1 a.m.

Meeting — TimeOut Student Fellowship, games, contemporary worship and speaker Elizabeth Bachrach Tan on "Promises," sponsored by the Alliance Christian Fellowship, for info call Mark at 253-0361 or Elizabeth at 253-7206, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Community — Pre-Shabbat Yoga, 549-1710, Hillel House, 4:30 p.m.

Community — The Shabbos Experience, a celebration of the Shabbos, food, prayer, songs and stories, all welcome, 549-4094, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Community — Shabbat services, dinner following service, $4 for students, $6.50 for non-students, 549-1710, Hillel House, 6 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Film — Women's Center Movie Marathon, includes Thelma and Louise, free, Merrill, AC, 7:30 p.m.

Sports — Boston Bruins Black and White Game, intrasquad scrimmage, tickets $15.50 and $10.50, $2 off for children and UMass students, call Mullins Center Box Office at 545-3001, 7 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, by Euripides, directed by Sarah Sherman, FAC, 6 p.m.

Saturday Sept. 16

Community — Shabbos Morning Services, with traditional meal to follow, all welcome, 549-4094, 10 a.m.

Community — Torah Study, 549-1710, Hillel House, 10 a.m.

Community — Solar Observing, Amherst Town Common, 1 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Special Event — Celebration of the Divine Liturgy of St. John Chrysostan, Eastern Orthodox Tradition, officiated by Father Michael of St. George Cathedral, followed by brunch, for information call 585-3686, free, Chapin Chapel, AC, 10 a.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, by Euripides, directed by Sarah Sherman, Theatre Building, SC, 3–6 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 17

Community — Dance, with the music of the '60s, '70s, and '80s, $2, free with Hillel Activity Card, 549-1710, Hillel House, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Music — Winds in Concert- the Massachusetts Wind Orchestra, Malcolm W. Rowell, director, works by Hidemith, Wilson, Sullivan, Downs, Leeman and Fillmore, donation, John M. Greene Hall, SC, 3 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, directed by Sarah Sherman, Emily Dickinson Hall, HC, 3–6 p.m.

Notices

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256-8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1 – Oct. 31, Mon-Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co-op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC). Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m or call 545-0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STDs and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545-0137.

Special event — Ticket Sale: 21st Annual Multiband Pops, presented by UMass Department of Music and Dance. Mullins Center Box Office.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a three credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545-0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696-7752

Volunteers Needed — The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee needs student volunteers to ring the bells in Old Chapel. Will teach and train anyone with reasonable musical ability. Call Ken Samonds at 545-1077 for more information.

Support Group — Rebecca Reid will lead a support group for single people over 30 Sunday nights, 7:30–9 p.m., low fee, single, divorced, widowed, all sexual orientations welcome.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256- 8482.

There are two options:
You can read what other people write,
or
You can write what other people read.
Your call.

News Desk
New writer's meeting
Friday 4:00 at the Collegian
113 Campus Center Basement
Contact Chris at 5–4794 for more info.

REAP offers service for substance abusers

By David LaFontana
Collegian Correspondent

Many students treat drinking as if they are going to class, and as a result soon find themselves drinking too much.

For students who feel they need help, the University offers The Residential Education Alcohol Program (REAP), located on the fifth floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

The program is designed to educate and counsel students about drug and alcohol abuse, and also provides information concerning sexually-transmitted diseases.

For students living in the dorms, REAP tries to give a stern helping hand as a penalty for being caught with alcohol. If a Residential Assistant (RA) catches a student drinking, that individual may have to pay $50 and spend nine hours meeting with counselors.

The Program's director, Sandra Whitcomb, said she is eager to show there is much more offered by REAP.

"Our goal is to help the students, not punish them," she said.

The program works to help the students realize that college drinking can lead to serious health risks later in life.

"It is true that binge drinking is common for college students," Whitcomb said. "In this environment, it seems like everybody is drinking a lot, and many outgrow it."

Whitcomb defined "binge" drinking as consuming more than five drinks at one time.

"What many students believe is that, after working all week, drinking heavily only on the weekends is setting a precedent for yourself," she said. "By doing this, students are teaching themselves learned patterns of relaxation."

The student who can drink all weekend and still work during the week may find trouble later in life, according to Whitcomb.

"In the minds of these students, there is no reason to change their habits," she said. "They have no problem functioning, but the alcohol will catch up to them."

Whitcomb said she believes the best way to deal with the students is not to preach to them. She said she wants it made clear that the program works best when the students' individual problems are addressed.

If a student requires further counselling, the program can assist in finding further assistance.

Whitcomb said REAP is not only concerned with keeping students healthy, but also with keeping the student in school.

According to the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information (NCADI), the heaviest drinkers obtain the lowest grades, and as many as one third of students reported missing classes and/or performing poorly on tests due to alcohol and drugs.

Correction

In yesterday's news section of the Collegian, the article on Philadelphia journalist Mumia Abu-Jamal incorrectly implied that he has been granted a new trial. Abu-Jamal has not been granted a new trial, but is currently fighting for a re-trial.
The Collegian regrets the error.

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together New England's largest college daily newspaper.
When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

HELP WANTED

Drivers Needed to Deliver the UMass Collegian on Campus

Must Have a Car

Stop in at the Collegian Office in the basement of the Campus Center or Call 545-3500 and ask for Ryan or Earl

get the Inside Track on admissions

Overcome these admissions hurdles:
• Applications
• Entrance Exams
• Essays/Interviews

Business School Rep.
Business School

Western New England Law School
Asst. Dean & Director of Admissions
Law School

Learn how to:
• Organize the admission process
• Choose the right school for you
• Ace your interview
• Get a higher test score
• Write a winning personal statement
• Find financial aid

Free Seminars!
Grad School
Med School

SPACE IS LIMITED!
Call Today to Reserve Your Seat
1 - 800 - KAP - TEST
KAPLAN

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

Rainy days are here to stay
A University student dodged the much needed rainfall yesterday morning.

Spud virus back after 150 years

Eastern America being attacked by new strain of fungus

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The fungus that killed the Irish potato and one million Irish people more than 150 years ago is back with a vengeance. However, this time it is attacking potato crops on this side of the Atlantic.

Potatoes were the prime food source for Irish peasants in the 1800's and responsible for the population increase from 4.5 million in 1800 when it was introduced to 8 million by 1845. The peasants were eating eight to 14 pounds a day up until the famine, according to Gail Schumann, Professor of Plant Pathology and Northern president of the American Phytopathological Society.

The fungus is important to study for two reasons, said Schumann. Besides being news again, it is historical as well as scientific.

"It's an interesting story because it has a social aspect as well as a historical one," Schumann said.

She acknowledged the potato was vital for the Irish people's existence in 1845 and the English were in a position to help but didn't.

"Potatoes are a really important food supply," Schumann said. "A single potato has a whole day's worth of Vitamin C. There was always food during the famine but it became political."

Schumann explained that food was still being exported out of Ireland to pay the English landlords while the famine was killing the Irish people. The fungus had damaged the potatoes but the grain crops were left untouched and still flourished.

The Irish people depended on the potatoes while they sold the grain to their English landlords. Therefore when the blight struck, they were forced to starve in order to pay back their indifferent rulers. This further divided the English from the Irish, and contributes to the struggle that persists today.

Schumann also pointed out that this was the first time the disease was proven to be a fungus, 15 years before Pasteur's germ theory.

Contrary to popular belief, the original famine was not caused by a drought. The disease festered in very wet and rainy conditions, traditionally Irish weather.

Consequently, Irish scientists were unaware that the cause of the crop failure was due to a fungus. Originally, they believed that the rotting of the plants caused the disease. We now know that the rotting was caused by the fungus itself.

The Irish farmers were left helpless as they watched their potato plants rot and blamed themselves for the punishment obviously sent from God.

The Irish are currently experiencing an unusually dry period, with no rainfall for the last few months. The original famine of 1845 began as a dry season as well, and was followed by rainy weather and cool temperatures, providing incubating conditions for the thriving disease.

The fungus that is ravaging crops today is a new strain of the one that destroyed the Irish crops in 1845, called Phytophthora infestans, or "plant destroyer."

"The Irish potato fungus originated in South America, in the Andes," Schumann said. "The new strain is from Mexico, [and] it's much worse."

America has not been spared. The parts of the country now being attacked by the new strain are New York and Pennsylvania, according to Schumann.

"People [there] have experienced 100 percent losses," Schumann said. "Here, we had a drought in August so we didn't have to worry ... people ought to think about where their food comes from."

Schumann said China is currently the largest potato producer in the world. She worries that if the potato crops continue to die, imports will become expensive and poor people will suffer the most.

"As a world we must learn to diversify our crops," Schumann said. "This is something scientists have been saying for years, but the message doesn't seem to be getting through."

■ New Africa House

continued from page 1

what they could do and by when," he said. "Is that so hard for a University of this size?"

At this point, Hill said he has become inured to the reluctance of the University to aid his cause, an example being the water-weakened floorboards beside a drain which he said never worked, and frequently overflows.

However, Hill said the drain is the least of his worries.

"It's the ventilation that bothers me," he said. "I don't care about the rest of the stuff."

Hill said some of his students are ready to come to his defense, even offering to "picket or do whatever they have to do."

Yet, Hill said his patience has worn thinner each time his requests go ignored.

"[The repairs] are something before I go," he said. "How many more years can I get out of teaching?"

Collegian Classifieds They Work!
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Mental Health Groups – Fall 1995

Food and Feelings:
A Group for Women Experiencing Eating Problems... Monday, 3:30-5pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families.....Monday, 3:30-5pm

Improving Self-Esteem, Building Self-Confidence.....Tuesday, 3:45-5pm

Women's Group:
Graduate Students & Professional Women.....Tuesday, 12:45-2:15pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families (group conducted in Spanish)
Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfunctionales.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Marijuana and Mental Health.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Lesbian, Gay and Bi-Sexual Support Group.....Thursday, 3:45 - 5pm

Groups will begin in early mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview. Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, Monday - Friday 8:00am - 5:00pm.

THE LAUNDRY CLUB
The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!
8am - 11pm • 7 days
Last Wash 9:30pm
• Coin Operated Washers and Dryers
• State of the Art Machines
• Snack Bar
• Big Screen T.V.
• Pool Table and Video Games
• Senior Citizen Discount

COUPON
$1.00 OFF Any Size Washer
Limit 1 Coupon Per Visit
Expires October 15, 1995

COUPON
$2.00 OFF Drop Off Service
Wash, Dry and Fold
12 lbs. minimum
Limit 1 Coupon Per Visit
Expires October 15, 1995

Dry Cleaning
6 University Drive - Next to Victory - Amherst (413) 549-2640

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT DEADLINE
Friday, Sept. 22
Grants for:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs

PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS

Applications, guidance & information: Campus Activities Office Student Union or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday- Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Masterdard accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

SERVING THE VALLEY & COLLEGES FOR OVER 35 YEARS!

HARPOON 24-12 oz. bottles $16.99 + dep.	SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bottles $18.49 + dep.	RED WOLF 24-12 oz. cans $13.49 + dep.	ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. bottles $13.49 + dep.	BUD & LT. 24-16 oz. bottles $13.49 + dep.	BUD LT 30 pks. $14.49 dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.	BUSH & LT. 24-12 oz. bar bottles $9.49 + dep.	GOLDEN ANNIV. 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	KEYSTONE 24-12 oz. cans $8.49 + dep.	BUSCH & LT 30 pk $10.99 + dep.	FRATS! 584:8174 FOR PRICE QUOTE
KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD ICE "5.5" $36.99 + DEP.		ICEHOUSE & RED DOG KEG $39.99 + dep.	MICHELOB & LT. & DK. KEG $39.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT. KEG $32.99 + dep.	BUD & LT. KEG $39.99 + dep.
GO UMASS FOOTBALL!	GOLDSCHLAGER $13.99 750 ml	JOSE CUERVO TEQUILA $10.99 750 ml	JIM BEAM $7.99 750 ml	VODKA $8.99 1.75L	ICE TEA NEW ENGLAND TEA CO. $4.49 750 ml

ICE!
10 lbs. $1.29
50 lbs. $5.99
100 lbs. $9.99
blocks 10 lbs. .. $1.50

WE DELIVER!
"OFF CAMPUS - UMASS"
584:8174
Sale Thru 9/21/95.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gantley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Damien Smith Photography Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Candice Fleming Sports Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Position Vacant Staff Artist
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.E. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

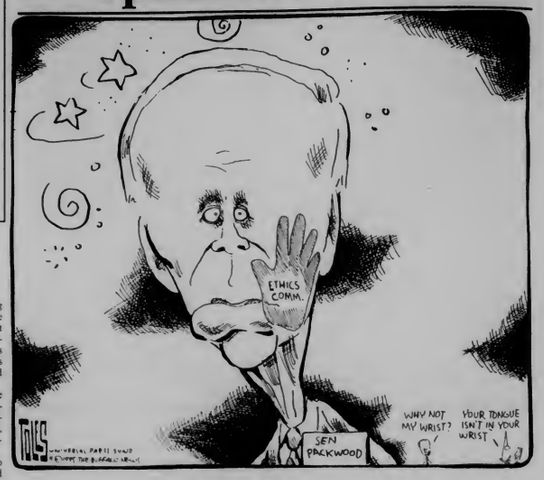
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial



All men are not created equal

Evan Young

This semester I finish the last of my General Education requirements. I figured I'd take an easy class, and since it had to have a behavioral science designation, I chose Political Science 101. Sounds unstimulating enough, right? How much thinking would I really be doing surrounded by at least a hundred freshman who have little to no idea what college classes are like, let alone appreciate the slim workload of an intro class?

But, alas, I was fooled. I went to the class on Monday, and I actually ended up using my brain. I tripped upon an idea that I thought I would never hear in a classroom.

All men are not created equal.

When I heard the teacher say that, I was amazed. It seems like something I had been taught to believe all my life had been turned upside down. But it made sense — of course all men are not created equal. If we were, we would all be clones of one another. I would look, and think, and act just like every other student on campus. Everyone has their differences. I'm taller than some, shorter than others. I'm smarter than some, dumber than others.

So, we are not really equal, but Jefferson didn't mean for us to take it in such a literal sense. In fact he even goes on to say what he probably really means is that all humans have certain rights to certain things (life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, for example), and are all equal in that sense.

So, all men really aren't created equal, but all men are equal according to the basic rights we all have.

Now, I could go off on a long and nasty diatribe about how Jefferson owned slaves and didn't really follow his own writings in practice, and about how the only people who were really equal back then were white males in the middle and upper classes, and about how women had no power at all, and were only good wives to the men. But I won't, because we've all heard it before and no matter how much bitching we do about the past evils of the white man it won't change history. So I'll just skip over all of that.

You see, because of Political Science 101, I have started thinking in new directions. If all men aren't really equal, then all men shouldn't be allowed those wonderful self- evident rights that Jefferson preached. In other words, if I'm better than you, I should have more rights, thus, more perks than you. Examples:

Anyone with an I.Q. less than 100 should pay more to see movies than anyone with an I.Q. of more than 100. We should all carry around special I.Q. cards, just so the people at the ticket window would know how much to charge. This doesn't not only apply to movies, but everything else that people pay for.

Good basketball players should be allowed to play basketball at any time during the day, and if crappy basketball players are on the court, they should immediately stop and spectate.

Good students should pay nothing for books. The higher your GPA, the less you pay for textbooks. If you get a 4.0, your books are free. Good students should also get into any class they want. Particularly bad students should be sent into the army and then overseas to fight our wars.

Good drivers should be given nice cars and be allowed to drive anywhere, on or off any road. Bad drivers should not be given cars at all, but they should get old crappy tricycles.

Ugly guys would not be allowed to have good-looking girlfriends, and vice versa. Nor would dorky guys be allowed to have cool girlfriends. In fact, only guys just like me and my friends would be allowed to have girlfriends at all.

Finally, at age 17, everyone should be given a drunk test. We should all have to drink a six pack on our 17th birthdays, and whoever acts like a drunken tool should never be allowed to touch alcohol again. We should give these tools all of the marijuana to smoke, and make them smoke every day until their brains turn black. They should also have to listen to Phish all day.

Not everyone has been created equal. We all have our gifts of intelligence, physique and other things that set us apart. Since we are all different, different rights and allowances should be provided for us by the government. All men are equal, but some are more equal than others.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Learning the qualities of being a leader

Lisa Chiu

Five days. Five days filled with events, instruction and lifelong lessons. The annual Student Leadership Conference, this year being number seven, proved to be so much more than what the program booklet described it to be. Its primary goal was "to provide [the student leader] with the opportunities to get to know each other," and to get "a better idea of how the University functions and thus facilitating an easier path through the maze."

OK, I'll admit it, I was among the 118 illustrious student leaders that attended this twisted event exactly one week before the rest of the school got here. What did we do? Well, students from various Registered Student Organizations (RSO) and Agencies signed on to learn from workshops about nifty little things like facilitating meetings, time management, signature responsibility, etc.

They may have been ordinary coeds before the event, but they left as 'Student Leaders.' Superheros beware.

But there was definitely more than just workshops going on. We got to hear from $5 million man himself, Coach Cal, as he spoke on leadership. Hey, he even gave us all free T- shirts. If you happen to see anyone around campus with a big letter Y on the front of their shirts, stop and shake their hand, they just might be your student leader.

We got to go to Riverside Park, we partied every night, we learned how to meringue, and for some, to do tequila shots. In fact, the week was almost like a summer camp, how people met each other. In true summer camp fashion, we ended this junket with a great big semi-formal bash. The men and women looked gorgeous, the food, which Campus Center catering did, as well as all the meals that week, was delicious. The event was rightfully called, "The Big Dinner."

In the eyes of most everyone in attendance, it was great. Those five days became an excellent example of the power of psychology. Students were given a great big mental promotion. They may have been ordinary coeds before the event, but they left as "Student Leaders." Superheros beware.

Dan Rivera's speech at "The Big Dinner" began with a list of historical student-led movements such as the Civil Rights Movement, Kent State, The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Council, Tiannamen Square and many more. He said the students involved in these movements were our peers. Wait a second, our peers? In one minute, 118 UMass students from RSO's and Agencies became synonymous with movements from which people sacrificed everything for what they believed in, movements from which people were willing to and did risk their lives for. Movements which they believed in so much, that they died for them.

Here we were, made to believe that we were a part of similar movements. Rivera's speech ended with the same listing of movements, this time intermingled with names of various students present at the dinner. His final words were, "know that you are in great company."

So by learning about signature responsibility, and by going to Riverside park, we managed to be company to the pain and sacrifice of world historical movements.

As if we have done anything remotely comparable to what those great leaders in history have done.

We, a fraction of the student population at UMass were a part of an event that taught us how to become young bureaucrats. At "The Big Dinner," students were put together at tables with administrators, faculty and staff. The crowd before dinner consisted of young students who dropped names, exchanged telephone numbers and discussed various issues of campus politics — everyone was working the room. If fact it was almost as if the dinner was the debut, the coming-out ball, to introduce the campus higher-ups to us young debutantes. At dinner we showed them just how much we learned in those five days to become exactly like them.

The Student Leadership Conference taught us how to play the game, granted that's one way to get what you want, but we weren't even given a choice. We may have learned how to plan events and schedule buildings but we also learned the fine art of compromise, otherwise known as selling out. We learned how to do and operate exactly as our University does and operates, with the same insider-wins, outsider- looses mentality. We learned how to pull the right strings to get what we wanted, and most importantly we learned how to isolate ourselves from the people we were trying to represent, if even for a little while. I'll tell you that there were times, like Riverside Park for example, that I didn't even think about what organization I belonged to and represented.

Throughout the conference I was bombarded with sayings like, "Come on, you're a student leader, you can do it!" There was constant reinforcement of this attitude. Everywhere we went we were reminded of how much of a Student Leader we were.

I don't know exactly were the money came from to fund this event, but you can bet that in the end 17,000 undergraduates paid for a five-day, money-no-object, extravaganza for 118 individuals, er, 1 mean Student Leaders.

Somewhere along the way we forgot the qualities we believed made us student leaders were present in everyone else in the University and in the world. There are students that would never have attended such a conference because they can't afford the time or the money to get involved. Success in graduating and diligence in Academics are what makes them leaders. There are individuals that would never be called students, let alone leaders. They are the young men and women that can't and probably never can afford to even attend our University, but each day they are contributing to their families and to their communities.

Somewhere along the way, we forgot that real power comes not from who you know, but from knowing what it is you're fighting for. If we can't be real and candid when we are 19 years old and in college, when the hell are we going to be? We have our whole lives to sell out to bureaucracy, why now, when what we have to say is so genuine? Why now, when we're honest?

Lisa Chiu is a Collegian columnist.

Taking a stand on domestic violence

Matt Vautour

It had all the makings of an all too familiar story. The star athlete abuses his wife or girlfriend, spends a few days on the news and then resumes his playing career while the domestic violence is shoved under the rug.

Nebraska running back Lawrence Phillips appeared to have it all. He was the top returning player on the defending National Champion Cornhuskers and was treated like a virtual god on campus. His path to the Heisman and eventually the NFL appeared to be pretty clear ones. He must have believed there was nothing in the way of him getting what he wanted.

So early Sunday morning, less than 24 hours after the No. 2 nationally-ranked Cornhuskers, led by Phillips' four touchdowns, drubbed Michigan State, the star runner was arrested for a assaulting a woman.

Under the all-encompassing phrase "assault," while Phillips' crime seems bad, it doesn't give the true depiction of what he did.

According to police, Phillips climbed into the house through a third-floor window, grabbed his ex-girlfriend and dragged her down a flight of stairs, before on-lookers finally restrained him.

While the scene is an ugly one, it sadly no longer frightens us.

Phillips probably assumed that he, like so many others, would be let off, because "Hey, he's Lawrence Phillips."

Not this time. Finally someone took a stand.

Nebraska coach Tom Osbourne pulled the ultimate in rarities in college sports. He put doing the right thing ahead of doing the winning thing.

"We have told all our players that abusive behavior such as this will not be tolerated." Osbourne said in a press conference.

Osbourne's step is a ground-breaking one.

George Washington University decided Richie Parker's basketball abilities outweighed the fact that he was a convicted rapist. The Colonials continued to recruit Parker until pressure from alumni and faculty finally caused them to back off.

Closer to home, guard-strapped John Calipari encouraged Andre Burks to return to UMass despite his domestic violence arrest.

Tom Osbourne bucked a trend. Now if only the rest of the NCAA, and the pro leagues as well, would follow suit.

Women-beaters are a worse scar on sports than drug abusers could ever be. Drug-addiction is a disease and the abuser is the only victim.

In domestic violence cases, these men who routinely spar off against 300-pound behemoths are taking out their anger on women.

The time is now for the NCAA and the four major professional sports leagues to adopt severe sweeping penalties to deter their athletes from even considering domestic abuse.

The first time a player is convicted of domestic violence should merit a one-year suspension. For the professional athlete, that would be a year without pay, and for the collegiate athlete, a loss of a scholarship.

If that doesn't deter them, a second offense would result in banishment. While that may sound severe, it is justifiable when you consider the severity of the pain and fear their victims have endured. The threat of having their athletic careers taken away from them would be frightening enough to scare a lot of potential battercrs off.

This would be a tough pill to swallow for any of the leagues if it means losing their star players, but being a great athlete pales by comparison in importance to just being a good person.

While Osbourne may not hold a trophy high this season, he will be able to hold his head high. He did the right thing.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

Losing the right to destiny

Patrick Belizaire

We all lose. We lose games, we lose money and, of course, loved ones. Growing up black you learn to lose, you learn to lose friends, especially. Every particular time and space freezes forever, at the point in which you hear the news of a friend's death or even someone you knew.

The time I walked into the convenience store freezes in my mind, and the time I was sitting in front of the community gym, and most recently and so many times before, in the black barber's chair.

The black barber's chair is the New York Times of the black community and the Larry King of local news: it brings laughter, gossip, debates, anger, pain, despair and too often tears — tears that could not come easy when the words so carelessly spilled out of the barber's mouth. "Yeah! he was killed this morning at 4:00 am."

That day I paid no mind because those words often reverberated in this vicinity, then I heard "yeah, he was sure to go pro, and was about to go back to Cleveland State." At that moment, my heart sank, like one who is in a roller coaster and the ascension to the very top has arrived, and boom you drop, your heart in your throat, and you just hope for the best.

I opened my mouth and it came out, "who got killed at 4:00 a.m. this morning?"

"Jamal Jackson. Killed 4:00 a.m. this morning." The barber said the words with pity, yet with inevitability, as well. I got a sick feeling in my stomach, and all that could come out of my mouth was, "oh man, that's f'd up." And it was.

I could not think of anything else except for the feeling of being cheated that was so apparent in all of me. Like someone who had been looking forward to a trip and left early to catch the only bus to get there, and just as they arrived the bus had pulled off and they missed the whole trip. There is no other alternative but to go home.

My trip was to see someone I knew, someone I had watched and that I had talked to, go on to make it to the top — ultimately playing in the NBA.

Jamal was shooting straight for the top, sure to be drafted to the NBA, but he had his life snuffed right from him. Someone cheated him out of his dream, cheated his mother and father out of their dream, as well as the rest of his friends and family.

"Every man gotta right to decide his own destiny and in this judgement there is no partiality." The words of Bob Marley came to me as I thought about the theft of a life and Jamal's destiny. I thought about it, "could I kill someone if I was mad enough?" I would like to say no, but then again I have been mad enough to kill.

I pondered once again. No, I could not, because I always step back and re-evaluate the situation.

That is the difference between those who are sane and insane, those who respect life and those who don't. I know that I am not the latter of either.

I watched the news and I saw the brother who turned himself in. He made a statement that disgusted me. "I loved Jamal, too." I cannot understand his audacity in saying this. I wanted to ask him how he could say that when he took the one thing that no one, not even his mother who gave it to him, can take — his life. He went and decided his destiny. I was angry, and hated him.

As I cooled down and thought about the young man's predicament, I realized that not just one life has been lost, but rather two lives. One is gone from this life, but the other is gone from this society, into a world of limbo and insanity. For every brother that loses his mortality to another, the other looses his sanity to the white system of destruction.

I do not know when this is all going to stop — this madness that is cating our souls and imprisoning our sanity. I do not know if it will ever stop. But what I do know is I am fortunate. I am fortunate to be alive, fortunate to be on the path that I chose, and fortunate to be the decision-maker of my own destiny.

Patrick Belizaire is Collegian columnist.

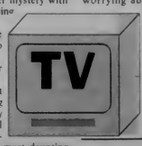
Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.
Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday September 14, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 7

New TV show centers on court

By Niko Kapsambelis
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Producer Steven Bochco's latest legal salvo, "Murder One," is an astute murder mystery with crisp writing, a solid premise and compelling actors.



Most people who have seen the pilot like it, including the executives at ABC, who ponied up for 23 episodes in advance.

So why is the perennial Emmy winner nervous?

Maybe it's the uneasy knowledge that after a three-week honeymoon beginning Sept. 19, at 10 p.m., a time slot currently owned by Bochco's highly successful drama "NYPD Blue," "Murder One" is diving headlong into what is arguably TV's most daunting niche: Thursday nights at 10 p.m., where NBC's "ER" is entering its sophomore year already a runaway hit.

"Historically, I've never really worried over the stuff I can't control," Bochco said. "I've got my hands full just worrying about what I can control. But I'm feeling uncharacteristically anxious about this one."

"Murder One" is a show that will require a savvy audience with a long attention span. It has a plot that follows a single murder case — from the defense point of view — over an entire season, keeping the audience (and the lead defense lawyer, played by Daniel Benzali) in the dark about the defendant's guilt or innocence.

By contrast, "ER" is an adrenaline-boost

Turn to TV page 10

20 Years F.A.C.

"the fine arts center celebrates 20 years of art, theater, concerts, ballet and sheer entertainment"

Taking a look at the upcoming season's events

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Fine Arts Center celebrates its 20th season this year with many new and exciting events. Promotional items such as special logos, note cards, mugs, t-shirts and new artwork prints highlight the celebration.

In a statement relating to the anniversary, FAC director Dr. Fred Tillis says, "For me, it is a time for reflection and review of the philosophy, purpose and meaning of the arts in the lives of all the people who are served or touched in some way by the many activities of the Fine Arts Center."

According to Shawn Farley, director of marketing, the FAC will present "a new vision and it'll be interesting." The FAC coordinates events at the Hampden Gallery, Bowker Auditorium, University Gallery as well as the theaters and recital halls within the FAC itself.

Major facilities include the Concert Hall, the Rand and Curtain Theaters, Bezanson Recital Hall, the University Art Gallery as well as classrooms, practice rooms and Faculty office.

Upcoming events

The Broadway musical, Crazy For You, will be one of the first events featured at the Concert Hall this season. The tribute to Gershwin's music has won several Tony awards and will definitely be a treat.

Among the events coming to the FAC will be Chesapeake, a band that has created its own style called newgrass, a combination of country, folk and bluegrass. The band "represents a new departure" from the usual classical-style artists usually presented by the Center according to Farley. She said emerging artists such as Christian McBride, Alison Brown and Nicholas Payton would be featured this year.

Another event that will prove to be exciting is the upcoming Guitar Summit, showcasing some of the greatest talents on guitar. The combination of jazz, classical, folk blues and rock styles should be interesting.

More on the jazzy side, Cassandra Wilson, who will perform at Bowker Auditorium in November, expands the traditional jazz repertoire by offering unique and heartfelt interpretations from other genres including blues, folk and rock.

A performance worth getting excited over is the return of the Ballet Nacional De Caracas, returning to Amherst and the FAC by popular demand. Two years ago, the ballet company brought a cheering audience to its feet and the FAC immediately asked

Turn to F.A.C. page 10

Interview with center's programming director

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Another addition has been made to the Fine Arts Center amidst all of the special events occurring as part of its 20th Anniversary Celebration — this one taking the form of a new programming director.

Joyce Smar arrived in Amherst three weeks ago, with her husband and 11-year old daughter, to assume the position as the new Fine Arts Center's programming director. The position was formerly held by Steve Scott Martin, who has recently accepted a position with an arts organization in North Carolina.

Smar comes to UMass from the Toledo Museum of Art in Ohio, where she administered the museum's performing arts programs. She also has experience in the creation and management of a computerized ticketing network in Toledo, which served the arts and entertainment community.

"I was with my former employer for 27 years, and felt it was time for a change around the same time that the position at UMass opened," Smar says of the career move. "I had been quite familiar with Central and Western Massachusetts, and enjoy the atmosphere of UMass. It is a much more casual but very stimulating and challenging environment."

Smar also felt, after researching the history of the position at the FAC, that it would be a good environment for her family as well as her work, and has worked out quite nicely for them.

Applying her family's philosophy of striving to "improve, succeed and enjoy" to her work, she hopes to maintain, if not enhance, the high quality of performances that have taken place at the FAC.

Smar's approach to taking the new position involves getting to know people in the community, researching the past and finding ways to improve the future.

"I guess I see it as more of a constant evolution of what will happen in the future. There have been some very wonderful past events in programming and attendance, and there have been others that could use some improvement."

"We are always finding ways to meet the challenges of audiences, artists, art forms and the community, so pushing all of that forward is what I want to do," Smar said.

There are a number of special events planned for the 20th anniversary, but Smar is most excited about the new low student admission price of $5.

"I think for a $5 ticket, one can experiment, as a student, with events that you don't know if you would like or not," Smar said.

Smar and the other FAC directors hope that by lowering the admission price, students will be willing to go to events that are not necessarily part of their background.

The reduction in ticket cost was not the result of any outside funding. In fact, it is a risk on the part of the FAC.

Turn to INTERVIEW, page 10

SHORT CUTS

Quotes of Note

COURTESY ESTEE LAUDER
Elizabeth Hurley

"Elizabeth Hurley and Hugh Grant are listed in the latest Who's Who ... As for Divine Brown, she's listed in the latest Who's Ho." — Conan O'Brien

"David Hasselhoff says he's going to open up the `Baywatch' chain of restaurants. Don't we have these already? I think they'rcalled Hooters." — Jay Leno

People and Pop Culture in the News

Top career move of the week goes to Tonya Harding. The Olympian figure skater is now attempting to start a musical career. Last weekend she played with her band, The Golden Blades, as they opened for Kool and the Gang in Portland, Oregon. The crowd almost booed her off the stage.

Gerald O'Dowd's only claim to fame was that he was Boy George's brother. Now does tha: make Boy George his sister, his brother or both?! But last week he was charged with the murder of his wife. The rock star is in "absolute disbelief."

Sorry girls. Charlie Sheen is no longer in his 20s and he is no longer single. On Sunday, he celebrated his 30th birthday and he married Donna Peele, 25, in Malibu, Calif. Busy day.

British artists come together to help the people of Bosnia with a benefit compilation album. Among the bands contributing are Blur, Oasis, Suede and yes, Paul McCartney. The ex-Beatle is recording with Paul Weller and Noel Gallagher of Oasis as they redo the Fab Four classic, "Come Together."

Perhaps America's most well-known prostitute Divine Brown won't be spending too much time with her clients on Hollywood Blvd. any time soon. On Wednesday a court ruled her to spend 180 days in jail due to violating her probation. Thank God she had already filmed those cheesy lingerie ads, her career might not survive her sentence.

Is she ever happy? Famed actress and friend of Michael Jackson, Elizabeth Taylor has separated from her seventh husband, Larry Fortensky. If they got married on Neverland Ranch, one has to wonder what circus like atmosphere they'll divorce in.

Hot rumor, sad day — JFK Jr. to be married? But don't despair, you can catch the man on Murphy Brown where he shamelessly plugs his new political magazine George.

MTV is coming out with The Real Real World, a behind-the-scene, tell-all book about the groundbreaking series, "The Real World." It's an even more intimate behind the scenes look at the gossipy show. Can you stand the suspense?!

And speaking of suspense, isn't it overly convenient that all the extraneous guests on "Melrose Place" got blown up, leaving the ones we'd really like to see dead only slightly injured or totally fine?

Enjoy Grant Show while he lasts, he's leaving the show and that's part of why you didn't see him on the Entertainment Weekly cover. Also leaving Spelling Land is Luke Perry, who once again looks to find his inner self and fails miserably.

Contents of this column have been compiled by various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly. Mike Burke is a contributing writer.

Editor's Cuts

Food — Chubby Hubby

Who are the two men we always turn to in times of sadness, stress or overwhelming cravings? Why, Vermont's Finest, of course! Ben & Jerry have unleashed their latest flavor to tantalize the tastebuds of all ice cream addicts. It's called "Chubby Hubby," and the ingredients reveal why. The irresistible and almost sickening-sounding ingredients consist of fudge-covered peanut butter-filled pretzels in vanilla malt ice cream, rippled with fudge and peanut butter. According to the lore on the label, two novices from Pennsylvania dreamed up the concoction, mixed up batch, and fed it to their friend, telling him it was a new flavor from Ben & Jerry's. Apparently, he loved it, and after dubbing it Chubby Hubby, sent the recipe to Ben & Jerry. So now, thanks to that creative couple in Pennsylvania, we have new reason to pig out on a pint of Ben & Jerry's.

--Laura Stock

Zine — White Bread

These days it seems like everyone within an arms reach of a photocopy machine is putting out their own 'zine. Topics range from music to fiction to sex. The new issue of White Bread is one of the most well written 'zines around.

Written by Brandon, a student at Rutgers, White Bread is mostly a personal diary of his life. It might sound boring, but it really isn't. His writing style is elegant and fun to read and his stories will bring a chuckle to all but the most serious of readers.

Stories range from his first love to the worst roommate he had in college. If you think your roommate is bad, read this article, you might feel spoiled.

For the music fan, White Bread should be of interest too. There are interviews with Scud Mountain Boys and Some Velvet Sidewalk. And best of all, there is a four band compilation "featurning Tully Craft and Pumpernickel. All of this for just $3. Check it out.

--Mike Burke

Book — The Rodent

Well, it really is true. There is a lawyer out there called The Rodent and believe it or not, he's written a book titled Explaining the Inexplicable (A Pocket Books Hardcover/$16). The book combines anecdotes from real-life law firms with comical addendums, in The Rodent's own inimitable, caustic style.

In 1990, frustrated by the apathetic hierarchy of "the Firm" and dumbfounded by seemingly absurd office politics, then law firm associate, a.k.a. The Rodent, began an underground newsletter detailing the politically incorrect internal workings that he and his colleagues experienced. The newsletter quickly took off and began covertly circulating among associates across the country while firm partners sought desperately to uncover his identity.

Explaining the Inexplicable provides some brutally honest and hysterically funny answers, straight from the rat's mouth.

--Seema Gangatirkar

WWII pilots honored in museum exhibits

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla. — An old radio fills the airplane hangar with Billie Holiday's vintage blues, as ceiling fans whirl like propellers through the muggy air.

Dead ahead, a Douglas A-26 Invader is parked near the remnants of a bombed-out twin-engine Lockheed P-38 Lightning. To reach them, both, visitors must pass through entryways with signs over each doorway. "Whites Only" reads one. "Colored Only" reads the other.

It's a jolting yet fitting entry into the Weeks Air Museum's exhibit on the Tuskegee Airmen, the unheralded World War II black fighter pilots who challenged segregation and the Germans, but defeated only one foe.

A half century late, the story of Tuskegee's "Redtail Angels" — known for the red stripe painted on their aircraft tails — is finally being told in the mainstream, through the Miami museum exhibit and a recent HBO movie.

It's a story that should have been written in all elementary school history books, but wasn't. By war's end, 966 black men had gone through flight training at a dusty airstrip in rural Tuskegee, Ala., and completed 1,578 escort missions over Italy, Germany and North Africa. They lost 62 men in combat, but never lost a bomber to enemy fighters, an incredible record for any squadron, white or black.

"These were the least recognized war heroes of the entire war," said Joseph T. Camillen, a retired Air Force captain who was the first instructor at the all-black training field. "I think the public is accepting it now."

The Weeks exhibit, on loan through the end of the year from the Miami Museum of Science and due to travel nationally in 1996, weaves old photographs, news clips, flight diaries and other mementos from Tuskegee veterans with the museum's permanent antique aircraft collection. These are considered unique because many of the 35 P-51 Mustangs and Seversky P-35As can still fly.

One of the most intriguing artifacts on show is the propaganda film "Wings for These Men," a patronizing view of the black aviators narrated by a thirtysomething Ronald Reagan.

"He's learning, taking it slow," the former actor-turned-president croons as the camera pans the Tuskegee airstrip and then into a classroom. "Yes, he's getting muscles in his mind."

As condescending and politically incorrect as the film sounds today, it reflected the sentiment of the era.

"Tuskegee went against the myth that blacks could not fly airplanes," said Vernon Williams, a specialist in 20th century black history at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind. "It was an attempt, a token attempt, to conform with the separate but equal law of the land."

The "Tuskegee Experiment" was

Turn to EXHIBITS, page 7

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be type written with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

It's Back To School Time!
10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.
Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/16/95
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS
MIDAS
Mufflers • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m.- 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 3 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0060

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

Start The Semester Off Right With These Great Savings at Scott's
Scott's LIQUORS
Quantity Discounts Available
Gordon's Gin Co-Pack $13.99 1.75 Gordon's Lite Tonic
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30 Pack $10.99 +dep
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZIN $6.99 1.5L.
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $10.99 750ml
ROLLING ROCK, ICE HOUSE & RED DOG 1/2 KEGS $39.99 +dep
MOOSEHEAD & MOOSEHEAD ICE 12 PACK BOTTLES $6.99 +dep
BUD 24 - 16oz. Widemouth Bottles $13.99 +dep
CHECK OUT OUR OTHER GREAT IN STORE SAVINGS
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
Tele-Check for your personal check
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

~ ALBUM REVIEWS ~

Sweet surprises from Sugar

Sugar's newest release collects rarities plus a lot more

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

SUGAR
Besides
Rykodisc

COURTESY RYKO DISC
Sugar Besides

Bob Mould and his friends in Sugar sure have a lot of tricks up their well-worn sleeves. Since forming the band in 1992, Mould and company have released two full lengths, one full EP and numerous CD singles. Besides is his newest release and it compiles many songs that were previously available only on the CD singles. Boring, huh?

Yeah maybe, but there is more, lots more. The first pressing of the CD came with a bonus live disc of a full Sugar show recorded in Mould's hometown of Minneapolis last year. It is packed with over 75 minutes of guitar orgies and bubblegum pop melodies. Among the standout tracks are "Changes," "If I Can't Change Your Mind" and "Helpless." Sugar is an excellent live band and this disc shows them at their peak. In the studio Mould just can't capture the energy he puts out night after night when he is on the road.

Although it may lack the awesomeness of their live show, the regular released CD Besides gives a pleasant listen but lots of the stuff has been around for a while and many Sugar fans will already know it. The opening track "Needle Hits E" is one of Mould's lost classics and it may be the best pop song the band has done to date.

One nice feature of the CD is it features four songs written by bassist David Barbe who is always the forgotten member of the band. Just take a listen to "Where the Diamonds Are Halos" and you will hear Barbe's gift of simple but catchy songwriting.

As if releasing a bonus live CD was not enough, the band managed to include a hidden video! That's right, a hidden video. Just put the Besides CD in a CD-rom and you will be able to watch the video for "Gee Angel" on your personal computer. Pretty amazing, huh?

Amazing describes Mould best as he really is a musical and creative genius. Ever since his days with Husker Du, Mould has been reshaping the sound of the rock world. Musically, Besides covers no new ground for the band but it outshines all those spoiled pseudo punk band who owe a large portion of their major label contract to Mr. Mould. A–

Chili Peppers' red hot funk is back

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

THE RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS
One Hot Minute
Warner Bros. Records

COURTESY WARNER BROS.
One Hot Minute

Trials and tribulations have always plagued the Red Hot Chili Peppers, perhaps none as long and tedious as the last three years. While it took a mere year to regroup after the tramatic death of original guitarist Hillel Slovak, the departure of John Frusciante (the guitar behind the band's finest hour, Mother's Milk and BloodSugarSexMagik) in 1992 was a harder void to fill.

When ex-Jane's Addiction guitarist Dave Navarro was announced as the latest addition to the Chili Pepper fold in '93, things slowly evolved, musically, while hype of this union quickly made its way throughout the music world. With the Chili Peppers already at megastar level and Jane's Addiction's ascension to legendary status in the four years since their demise, the ensuing album from this supergroup of sorts was highly-anticipated for some time.

Finally, after what seemed like an eternity of delays, from the band's identity crisis to Anthony Kiedis' bout with writer's block, One Hot Minute is available to the public.

Jane's meets the Chili Peppers isn't exactly accurate but comes real close on many an occasion. Navarro's amorphous, prog-rock playing has definitely found its presence into the Peppers' highly-energized funk delivery and actually bears a striking resemblance to Uplift Mofo Party Plan, the most metal of Chili Pepper albums.

Much like Jane's Addiction's more ambitious pieces ("Three Days," "Then She Did"), "Deep Kick" and "One Big Mob" display such progressive pretensions in its multi-sectional structures, from chunks of skewed funk to dreamy soundscapes to ugly metallic grooves. This, fused with Kiedis' white boy rapping, has created, not so much one, but several new sounds into the Peppers' pastiche.

More along the lines of traditional Chili Peppers is "Aeroplane," an ode to the magic of music, that offers up a good summation of the band's 13 year existence ("I like pleasure spiked with pain, Music is my aeroplane"). With Flea's slap-happy bass intact and Navarro sticking to the funk, it's very much reminiscent of the Chili Peppers of old.

Other highlights include "My Friends," a Tom Petty-ish ballad likely to do what "Under the Bridge" did for BloodSugarSexMagik, and "Transcending," a song rich in colors and emotions to give an apt tribute to the late River Phoenix.

One Hot Minute has a few quirks ("Warped") but nonetheless offers up a fresh look at the ongoing saga of the Red Hot Chili Peppers. A–

■ exhibits

continued from page 6

launched in 1941 to train more pilots to combat advancing German troops. Eleanor Roosevelt, the NAACP and newspaper editors also had mounted a campaign to admit blacks into what was — and still is — considered an elite sector of the armed forces.

"The establishment called it the 'Tuskegee Experiment,'" recalled Leo Gray, 71 of Miami, a Tuskegee pilot who donated photographs and some personal artifacts to the exhibit. "We call it the Tuskegee experience."

Camilleri, 79, and Eldridge Williams, 78, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel who trained at Tuskegee, recently visited the Weeks museum, walking among the cases containing old goggles, gloves, model airplanes and postcards.

Camilleri noticed a picture of himself and some of his students, standing on the Tuskegee airstrip in front of a P-51. He recalled the day he learned he had been assigned to teach on a nearby airfield that later became the Tuskegee school.

"It was the 1939 World's Fair, in New York," he said. "I was working for a private flight school, flying passengers for $3 to see the exhibit.

"An inspector recommended me to Tuskegee. Next thing I knew, I had a train ticket to Tuskegee, Ala. in the mail. I'd never been out of Brooklyn. My mother, she said, 'What's a Tuskegee?' I said, 'I don't know, but we'll find out.'"

Eldridge Williams, who went to Tuskegee in 1942, recalled an incident similar to one cited in the HBO special "The Tuskegee Airmen," in which military police removed him from the train he was riding allegedly for drunk and disorderly conduct.

"I don't even drink," Williams said as the memories of segregation in rural Alabama came back to him amid all the Tuskegee relics. He said he had refused to show his orders to a private who was rude to him. The reprimand is still in his file.

Broadway's Gershwin extravaganza "CRAZY FOR YOU" September 22, FAC Concert Hall — $5
$5 — Back by Popular Demand BALLET NACIONAL DE CARACAS, October 22, FAC Concert Hall
Tales of Appalachia with KANDINSKY TRIO and storyteller Connie Regan-Blake November 19, Bowker Auditorium — $5
$5 — The New Grass Sounds of CHESAPEAKE December 2, Bowker Auditorium
Direct from Havana - the incendiary NATIONAL CUBAN FOLKLORIC DANCE ENSEMBLE February 9, FAC Concert Hall — $5
$5 — Pure Dynamite and a rollicking good time - PAUL TAYLOR DANCE COMPANY February 22, FAC Concert Hall
The funkiest quartet you'll ever see QUARTETTO GELATO March 31, Bowker Auditorium — $5
Tickets are on sale now at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or call 545-2511. Tickets are $5 for Five College Students. Get them before they're gone!

Let's get one thing straight...
The Collegian isn't.
Write for GLB Issues
Contact Wendy Darling, 113 Campus Center, 545-1749

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

Rusted Root
plus special guest Joan Osborne

OCTOBER 16
7:30 PM
ON SALE THIS SAT • 10AM!
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER BOX OFFICE, CIVIC CENTER CHARGE BY PHONE (413) 787-6600 AT ALL OUTLETS INCLUDING TOWER RECORDS, PEANUTS, SAM'S, MUSIC & MORE & PHONE CHARGE (617) 931-2000 • (413) 733-2500
EVENT DATE AND TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY JIM KOPLIK / JOHN SCHER / METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

Harriet showcase at Bay State

Indie rock show on saturday with Tully Craft, Tizzy & More

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

While Letters to Cleo and the Mighty Mighty Bosstones shamefully steal all the music press in Boston, a little record label named after a child's book, is releasing some of the most interesting pop records around. Run by a Harvard professor, Harriet Records has consistently put out slab after slab of delicious seven inch vinyl for over five years. This Saturday night at the Bay State, there will be a Harriet showcase featuring two of the labels best bands, Tully Craft and Vehicle Flips.

With the unfortunate breakup of the Seattle band Crayon, two members formed Tully Craft. While Crayon mixed punk rock noise with pure pop melodies, Tully Craft concentrates on the softer side of things. Their song on a recent Harriet compilation, "Pop Songs Your New Boyfriends Too Stupid To Know About" may be the funniest and catchiest song of the year. Also impressive is their debut single on Harriet featuring the song "True Blue" which owes credit to the Material Girl herself.

Expect great things from Vehicle Flips as well. Hailing from Pittsburgh this band lacks the energy of Tully Craft but makes up for it with well crafted songs. Also this band features ex-members of Wimp Factor 14, a band that was confused with Guns N Roses. Expect to hear lots of songs from their upcoming debut full length on Harriet.

The local scene will be represented by Northampton heroes Tizzy. Ever since their superb single on Chunk earlier this year, the band has been gaining the recognition they so rightfully deserve. With an upcoming single on Pop Narcotic due out any day now, the band should be catapulted into the national spotlight as one of the area's brightest stars. As a live band they rival anyone, except the Boredoms, for exertion of energy. It is not uncommon to see the bassist, Joel, jumping around in the crowd, while playing a guitar solo.

And finally Skylab will open up. Featuring Pat Maley, the famed owner of Yo-Yo studios in Olympia, the band is on tour for the first time.

With this stellar lineup, the Bay State should be packed with pop fans from all over. Both Tully Craft and Tizzy are two of the most exciting young bands around and it should be exciting to see them together in concert. This Harriet Records show will hopefully give this amazing label some more attention.

Tully Craft, Vehicle Flips, Tizzy, and Skylab play the Bay State in Northampton Saturday night. Call the club for more details.

COURTESY TIZZY

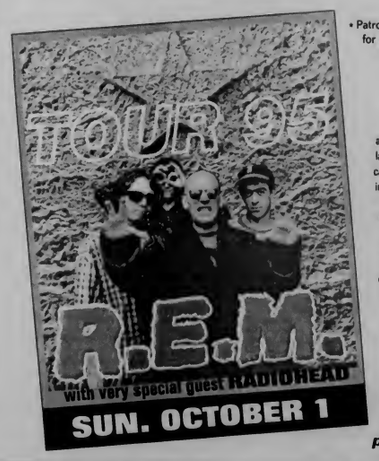
Tizzy will take the stage at the Bay State this Saturday as part of the Harriet Records showcase.

Budweiser THIS BUD'S FOR YOU.
THE Meadows MUSIC THEATRE
Meadows Exit 33 off I-91 • Hartford
DAVID BOWIE
LAWN SEATS ONLY $16*
WITH VERY SPECIAL GUESTS
nine inch nails
AND PRICK
ARE THE OUTSIDE TOUR 1995
TONIGHT SEPTEMBER 14

Tickets available, cash only, at STRAWBERRIES Music and Video Stores —
Avon • Bloomfield • Branford • Bristol • East Hartford • Enfield Farmington • Hadley, MA • Holyoke, MA • Killingly • Manchester • Naugatuck • Norwalk • Norwich • New Haven • New London • North Haven • Orange • Springfield, MA • Southington • Torrington Trumbull/ Bridgeport • Wallingford • Waterbury • West Springfield, MA • Wethersfield • Willimantic •

radio 104 WHRQ • modern rock
BIG DAY OFF
10 BANDS FOR 10 BUCKS*
Belly
Juliana Hatfield
Letters to Cleo
Joan Osborne
Jewel
Dandelion
Innocence Mission
Smoking Popes
Supergrass
Seven Mary Three
SEPTEMBER 21

or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX
203-422-0000



• Patrons are responsible for all parking charges & service charges.

NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, lawn chairs, umbrellas, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility gates. No refunds. No exchanges. Performances rain or shine. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change.

CONNECTICUT NEWS 30 The Official Weather Station for "The Meadows" people's bank Member FDIC

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Busch & Busch Lt	30 pk Cans $10.99	Jim Beam	1.75 liters $12.49
Rolling Rock	$13.49/case Bar Bottles	Bacardi Limon	750 ml $8.99
Meister Brau	12 pk cans $3.99	Kahlua	750 ml $12.29
New Amsterdam (Black & Tan, Ale, Amber, Blonde Lager)	$4.99/six	Gordon's Vodka	750 ml plastic $5.99
Sam Adams (Lager, Ale, Stout, Porter, Light, Scotch Ale)	$4.99/six	Jagermeister w/ free T-Shirt	375 ml $8.99
		1/2 Keg Special Sam Adams Ale	$75.00 + dep

Open M-Sat 9am - 11pm
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Thursday
September 14, 1995
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By: Audio Pro Media
Or Would You Rather Be Studying ?

~ MOVIES ~

Swayze and Snipes looking pretty in drag, fail to save latest movie

By Laura Stock and Mike Pessah
Collegian Staff

To WONG FOO, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING, JULIE NEWMAR
Directed by Beeban Kidron with Patrick Swayze, John Leguizamo, Wesley Snipes
Playing at Mountain Farms Four

What could be funnier than seeing three of today's most masculine, testosterone-driven men in film today don dresses, wigs and dance all over the screen to disco music? Well, a lot of things are funnier than To Wong Foo, Thanks For Everything, Julie Newmar.

Patrick Swayze as Vida Boheme and Wesley Snipes as Noxeema Jackson are both crowned Queen in a tie at a New York City drag contest and win airline tickets to Hollywood, California. About to embark on their dream to work in Tinseltown, the two encounter a crying drag "princess," Chi Chi Rodriguez (John Leguizamo) who is confused about what to do with her life. Being the altruistic drag queen she is, Vida offers Chi Chi the opportunity to come along on their journey and also to educate her so she can become, after only four steps, a full-fledged drag queen.

Inspired by an autographed picture of Julie Newmar, Vida decides the three will drive across country to spread Newmar's "message." So they hop in a Cadillac and commence a road trip bound to be filled with uproarious adventures, right? Wrong.

The handsome trio of women toss the map out of the window, have car trouble and never make it past the dusty hick town of Snydersville, where the conservative, albeit problem-filled setting resembles that of a twisted Norman Rockwell painting.

Vida, Noxeema and Chi Chi bring a pulse back into the lifeless community. With a splash of color and some styling tips, they revitalize pallid complexions and humdrum social lives. Vida serves as a role model to a troubled housewife, Noxeema encourages a mute elderly woman to speak and Chi Chi finds herself a boyfriend.

All of these miraculous acts are just dandy, but how can we be expected to believe them if our frustration continues to mount because nobody in the bucolic little town seems to realize that broad-shouldered beauties are really men.

Snipes and Leguizamo are believable as women, but Swayze utilizes the grace and rhythm he learned in Dirty Dancing to play one of his most convincing roles ever. Each have their own occasions to be funny, but the jokes are delivered slowly and sparsely, so that as the tempo slows audience interest reduces. Poor direction also factors in, as it appears Kidron raced through production, leaving minor errors in scenes that make a difference.

As far as comparisons to the "other drag queen movie," Priscilla Queen of the Desert, the two can only be related on the drag queen plot alone. Priscilla dealt more with emotional problems that the drag queens went through, while Wong Foo de-emphasizes the social acceptance aspect and relies more on poking fun at situations where men are in dresses.

A good concept and an exquisite performance by a beautiful Patrick Swayze cannot save this flick from just dragging on. C (L.S.)

COURTESY ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

Wesley Snipes, John Leguizamo and Patrick Swayze star in To Wong Foo Thanks For Everything, Julie Newmar.

THE PROPHESY
Directed by Gregory Wider with Christopher Walken, Elias Koteas, Eric Stoltz
Playing at Mountain Farms Four

Unlike most bad movies, The Prophesy doesn't appear to have been ruined by anything. I don't feel any desire to pontificate on how the corrupt Hollywood system destroyed a potentially good movie. My finger will not point accusatorially at a particular actor or screenwriter responsible for ruining a noble effort. The Prophesy lacks anything resembling a fatal flaw — it is all bad, with no way it could have been improved.

The Prophesy tells the story of Tom (Elias Koteas) — a typically disheveled police investigator that, fortuitously, happens to be an ex-priest. His police work is business-as- usual, until he is visited by Simon (Eric Stoltz), who turns out to be a guardian angel dressed in a sportsjacket. Simon informs Tom that he is in grave danger, then gracefully leaps out of a window, leaving behind a mysterious-looking book.

Tom calls upon his clerical training (no pun intended) and discovers that he is in possession of a previously undiscovered final chapter of the Book of Revelations. This final chapter tells the tale of a war among the angels in heaven.

Meanwhile, Simon intercepts a malevolent angel attempting to reclaim the book and throws him in to the path of an oncoming car. The police are conceivably puzzled by the oozing black mess left behind by the dead angel, and (not surprisingly) call upon the only member of the police force qualified to investigate incidents involving dead angels.

While Tom investigates in New York, the setting shifts to a schoolhouse in a run-down Arizona mining town. A 12 year-old student named Mary runs away from her oblivious teacher (Virginia Madsen) and meets up with Simon. Then in one of the most unintentionally scary scenes of recent memory, Simon gives Mary a full-on-the-mouth kiss and runs off. That evening, Mary falls ill.

Sound convoluted enough? Hold on to your rosaries, filmgoers — it gets worse; soon after, another snappily-dressed angel appears in Arizona. This angel is played by Christopher Walken, an actor who appears to have set his sights upon Dennis Hopper's status as A-list bogeyman. Decorated effeminately in cheap facecake and eyeshadow, Walken's angel looks ridiculously like a David Lynch interpretation of Jonathan Pryce's pimp in Miss Saigon.

Walken's angel hunts down Simon, and introduces himself as Gabriel. Gabriel offers Simon an opportunity to join "the dark side," and burns Simon to a crisp when his offer is rejected.

In the Prophesy, God, Satan, angels, cops, zombies and Native American spirits are all treated with varying degrees of ineptitude. The Prophesy showed me the wonders of the universe and made it appear boring.

The events in The Prophesy lacked any type of logical consistency or congruence. All a film has to do is to somehow create a plausible explanation for the events. Usual that means resorting to lots of pseudo-technical mumbo jumbo and commanding good performances (from the actors (see any Spielberg movie to see this done masterfully).

Those responsible for The Prophesy apparently consider themselves above such explanations, because none were given. The performers appear acutely aware they are in a stinker, and look as bored as the audience. Even the special effects were lackluster.

Watching The Prophesy was a pointless exercise in tedium. Few movies ever made me feel like I had wasted so much time. The Prophesy feels like it was stillborn, it is sub-mediocre. D (M.P.)

Bowie and NIN live; special gig on campus

By Jeffrey K. Lenchiner
Collegian Correspondent

Last Saturday about 25 students had the experience of a lifetime. The students, mostly from the University of Massachusetts, were given a private concert by Nine Inch Nails and David Bowie in the Mullins Center. The three- hour full "dress rehearsal" went on from 5:30 p.m. till around 8:30 p.m., while most UMass students were figuring out which party to crowd into.

Nine Inch Nails band members had been spotted all over the area last week, shopping in the Hampshire Mall, eating in Amherst and not trying too hard to disguise themselves. Many students got to meet the rock stars, and some of the luckier ones were clued into the existence of an upcoming full-dress rehearsal by Trent Reznor himself.

The band rented the Mullins Center to perfect their stage show for their upcoming tour. They are opening for rock god David Bowie throughout the tour, beginning tonight at the Meadows Music Theatre in Hartford. Apparently, David Bowie is a big fan of Trent Reznor and invited him to tour. Needless to say, Reznor accepted and thus the birth of "The Outside Tour 1995."

While a large percentage of campus was at the home opener for the UMass football team, a handful of students were waiting in the drizzle with hopes of getting into the Mullins Center. Around 1 p.m., sounds of amplified instruments being tested were barely audible in the back parking lot behind the center. Security's denials to our access requests were bringing down our morale. We began asking for help from bus drivers, Mullins janitors, stray dogs and any other Mullins people who would listen.

Around an hour later, a large tour bus pulled up; it was the entire Nine Inch Nails band, in the flesh. After our pleas to the band members were acknowledged but deflected away, finally Trent Reznor himself was asked. He immediately uttered the magic words, "Uh yeah, sure, okay." The manager of the band came over and told us it would be a long wait, but he assured us that we would get inside.

The celebration began immediately. High fives and cries of "Oh my god!" went on for what seemed like an eternity. We waited till 5 p.m. before the manager came back to bring us inside. The Mullins Center was empty except for the stage, staff and chairs placed in the middle of the floor for us. We were told that Nine Inch Nails and David Bowie were going to play their sets exactly the way they will be in concert, complete with light effects, full volume and a lot of heart.

Trent Reznor gave us a short greeting on stage, turned his back on us, and seconds later Nine Inch Nails was rocking the house much harder than on their recordings. The band's energy level seemed to match that of an arena with 10,000 screaming fans, except it felt like we were home, in an oversized living room.

Turn to CONCERT, page 13

Collegian Graphics
We're up all night putting together New England's largest college daily newspaper.
When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

There are hundreds of Registered Student Organizations at UMass...
There's at least one out there FOR YOU... CHECK THEM OUT!
The Daily Collegian's RSO Guide
Wednesday, September 20, 1995
LOOK FOR IT!

Celebrating a decade of Night Life
Pearl Street Nightclub
WEDNESDAY GAY NIGHT With Special Guest D.J.'s
THURSDAY 18+ DANCE PARTY Hosted by Nick Denyer of Today's Woup The Area's Biggest Dance Party, Music by Spin, Inc.
FRIDAY RETRO NIGHT Music From the 70s 80s & 90s With D.J. DENNIS 9:00 pm - 1:30 am "FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD"
SATURDAY MODERN ROCK DANCE PARTY Featuring Music by Stash, Better Than Ezra, Elastica, Nine Inch Nails, Letters to Cleo and more
LIVE MUSIC...
Thur., Sept. 14 - 7:00 pm 18+ JULIANA HATFIELD Empty
Fri., Sept. 15 - 8:30 pm 18+ CHUCKLEHEAD Johnny Socko
Tues., Sept. 19 - 8:00 pm 18+ GOD STREET WINE Sunflower
Wed., Sept. 20 - 7:00 pm 18+ MORPHINE
Thur., Sept. 21 - 7:30 pm 18+ HOME / PHINEAS GAGE Amanda's Dirty Secret / Driftwood
Fri., Sept. 22 - 8:30 pm 18+ SYNAESTHESIA
Sat. Sept. 23 - 7:30 pm All Ages MEPHISKAPHELES / SPRING HEELED JACK
Tues., Sept. 26 - 8:00 pm 18+ BELLY
Thurs. Sept. 28 - 7:30 pm All Ages LIFE OF AGONY Lordz of Brooklyn
Fri., Sept. 29 - 8:30 pm 18+ BIM SKALA BIM
Sat., Sept. 30 - 8:30 pm ROOMFUL OF BLUES
Sun., Oct. 1 - 8:00 pm 18+ MACEO PARKER
Mon., Oct. 2 - 8:00 pm THE FABULOUS THUNDERBIRDS
Tues., Oct. 3 - 8:00 pm JOE ELY
COMING
10/5 Dar Williams 18+
10/6 John Sheldon & Blue Streak
10/7 Filter / Everclear All Ages
10/9 Mike Watt 18+
10/13 The Machine 18+
10/15 Marianne Faithful
10/27 Betty
10/28 G. Love & The Special Sauce 18+
10/30 Jim Rose Circus Sideshow 18+
10/31 Machinehead All Ages
11/6 Robben Ford / Sonny Landreth
Tickets for all shows available at N tick Box office 525 BASS / 800 THE TICK Strawberries. For The Record in Amherst. Above Music in Greenfield
10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413 586 7775

Slip on. Zip up. Knock out.

ZANNA
Amherst Williamstown Brattleboro

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "BUSCH & BUSCH LT" bots $8.99 case
Capt. Morgan Spiced $15.99 1.75 ltr
Ernest & Julio Gallo White Zinfandel $3.99
Bud & Bud Light $13.99 case 16oz botts
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Pete's Wicked - Honey, Summer, Lager, Red, & Ale
Harpoon - all flavors including Octoberfest
Oregon- Nut Brown, I.P.A., Honey, & Raspberry
Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter, Wheat, & Octoberfest
Brooklyn - Brown Ale & Lager
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Evil Eye Ale $3.99 6pk/bots
Cossack citrus vodka $5.99 liter
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

■ FAC

continued from page 5

them to return for this year's festivities.

The energetic Lark Quartet, an all-woman ensemble, will help celebrate with two new pieces. One piece entitled "A Spiritual Fantasy" was written by Tillis, while another piece composed by Bulgarian Penka Kouneva was specially commissioned by the FAC for the 20th anniversary.

Local favorite Mummenschanz will be back with a new program in the spring. The group relies solely upon mime and masks to create fantastic and humorous skits.

The New WORLD Theater

The New WORLD Theater will also feature several premieres, including some in the Latino Theater Project, sponsored by a Readers' Digest Lila Wallace grant. This year, the Project intends to create stronger relationships with the community, explore ways the New WORLD Theater can increase Latino Theater activity and share with the artistic community the ideas and methods of professional Latino Theaters.

Other multi-cultural events include, "The Festival of Lights," a presentation which will be put on jointly with the Asian Music and Dance department. The festival will be followed by a dance party, featuring funky Indian music as well as a play entitled "Bones And Ash: A Gilda Story" that will feature the Urban Bush Women cast.

Also, mixing east and west, Saeko Ichinohe and Company will be at Bowker Auditorium in November. The unique dance company blends the traditions and artistry of Japanese culture with American contemporary dance. Farley said having Saeko Ichinohe will be a unique experience as "we have not had a Japanese dance before."

Another exciting event will be the Parade of Dynasties, coming in March to the Concert Hall. The story will combine the history and spectacle of the Chinese culture.

"The arts uniquely and naturally cross and interweave boundaries of race, ethnicity and gender in the celebration of creativity and spirituality, reflecting the ideal and unity of one human race," Tillis said.

The FAC will also sponsor a Community Day to thank the region and the University of Massachusetts for their support. The day will feature tours of the FAC and a performance of a play called Number 14 by Access Theater from Montreal. The play will document the experiences of people who meet on a bus.

The University Gallery has also re-opened. Currently, an exhibit on animation is being displayed. According to Farley, objects either move on their own or with interaction. Also, "a really cool" interactive virtual reality exhibit will arrive in February.

Student Discount

Farley stressed that tickets for Five College students are now only $5.

"We are already seeing an impact at the box office," she said. "Students can now see four or five shows in the money that it used to cost for just one. This is a major advantage — for the price of a movie, students can now see a live performance."

Not only is the FAC gearing up for a new season, it's also sporting a new look: the familiar green upholstery is gone, replaced with red and purple. The renovations on the exterior of the building are nearly complete, though Farley mentioned they hoped to put in an atrium over the walkway in order to preserve the floor tiles better.

"We're really excited. We're looking forward to a new vision," said Farley.

In coming years, the FAC hopes to work more with the community and with the University in academic programming and bringing artists into the community and broadening the scope of the center. In the past, the FAC has sponsored the highly successful interdisciplinary and effective course, The Lively Arts. The course fulfills a general education requirement and exposes students to theater, music and visual arts. The students are able to attend performances and workshops featuring major international as well as national stars.

The FAC is planning on collaborating with the Asian Music and Dance department and introduce new programming under Ranjanaa Devi, the current director of the Asian Music and Dance department.

Dr. Tillis also mentioned that he would like to develop a volunteer corps, composed of a diverse group of people, both from the University as well as the surrounding community. He stresses the "arts can establish a unique relationship" with the surrounding community. He notes that there is a "pattern" to the shows brought to the FAC and over four years, students will be acquainted with arts from around the world, leading to "interesting exposure."

Farley promised that this year at the Fine Arts Center will be a "full season and there is something for everyone."

■ interview

continued from page 5

"It's a gamble, frankly," Smar said. "It will provide us with a reduction in income from the student tickets that are sold, however we are hopeful that more students will choose to attend."

Feedback regarding the new student ticket prices has been positive, according to Smar. "There seems to be a real high on the $5 ticket."

Smar was present for the cake-cutting ceremony at the first FAC production — Steve Love and The New York Roller Express. This fun-filled day was run not only to entertain and kick off the fall season, but to thank the community for its support.

Another program, which will take place this April, is being run with the community in mind. "The Magical Mystery Tour," a day filled with tours and activities for students and families, is designed to thank the community for the last 20 years of continued support.

"We appreciate the support of the community and hope it will continue," Smar states.

Smar is also looking forward to attending live performances in Bowker auditorium.

"Once I get into the concert hall in Bowker during a live performance, I can observe the audience and its reaction to the performance. I can start to form my own opinions about what works and what doesn't work, which helps me make plans for the future," Smar said.

In two words, Smar is "very excited" about the upcoming season, and about being at UMass. She said she hopes to work closely with both performers and students and the community as a whole.

"I'm very pleased to be here, and I'd like to work very hard to bring the best quality performances and art to campus for the students to be able to enjoy. I intend to work very closely with their interests in mind," Smar said.

Just as Smar is excited about the upcoming season, the campus is thrilled to welcome her to UMass.

■ TV

continued from page 5

ing spasm of several plots per episode, few of which spill over into subsequent weeks. The fix is smart, quick and self-contained.

To keep truant viewers abreast of plot developments, Bochco will have a 60-second review at the beginning of each episode, as well as a clever rip-off of Court TV — here known as "Law TV" — in which fictitious reporters covering the trial will recap key plot points.

The good news is, the addition of "Murder One" will likely make Thursdays at 10 p.m. the most cerebral hour in television, putting two shows in mortal combat for viewers with demographics that make advertisers salivate, the kind of viewers Bochco himself says he would love to have.

"I think a lot of people who'd love to see this show, were it anywhere else, will miss it," he said. "So from that point of view, you know, I'm not crazy about the time slot. But someone's got to be there. I'm a team player."

He is already priming "Murder One" cohorts for a strong break in the Tuesday night slot, followed by a struggle when the show moves to Thursdays.

"For three weeks, we're going to feel like we're a success," he said. "And I'm trying to warn everybody to not be disappointed when we move to Thursday night and get our asses kicked."

Bochco is banking on the sophistication of an audience primed by months of real-life O.J. Simpson courtroom drama to keep up with dialogue that outsmarts his previous legal series — also a veteran of Thursdays at 10 p.m. — "L.A. Law."

In fact, it was "L.A. Law" and its limitations that gave Bochco the idea for "Murder One" in the first place.

"I started lobbying around the second year, maybe the third year of 'L.A. Law' to do a storyline that would run all year long, a trial that would run all year long," Bocheo said. The idea got only a lukewarm response, which Bochco attributes to the danger of fragmenting a storyline amid a large ensemble cast.

FAC FACTS

- Audiences are concentrated in the Pioneer Valley between Longmeadow and Greenfield.
- Last year, more than 80,000 patrons took advantage of 83 performances, 21 exhibitions and 30 artists residencies.
- Economic data provided by the New England Foundation For the Arts shows that the Center has a $12 million effect on the Western Massachusetts economy.
- The FAC was designed by architect Kevin Roche of Roche, Dinkaloo & Associates, a firm based in Hamden, Connecticut.
- It took 11 years to plan and construct the FAC at a cost of $16.3 million.
- The complex is 648 feet long with 206,600 gross square feet of floor space.
- A total of 275,000 cubic yards of concrete were used in construction, weighing a total of 471,487 tons.
- Facilities include 17 classrooms, 75 laboratories and 56 faculty offices.
- Recent shows have included Alvin Ailey Dance Company, Broadway shows Guys And Dolls, The Secret Garden, and the Ballet Theatre De Bordeaux.

— Seema Gangatirkar

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS
Basketball/ Volleyball Court FREE TO MEMBERS
Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes
Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmills • Life Cycle • Nordic Track
Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!
Group Discounts Get Your Friends Together And Save $$$
JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES
317 RUSSELL ST. • ROUTE 9 HADLEY
586-0633

Are You ... Arty?
THEN COME ON DOWN TO THE DAILY COLLEGIAN AND WRITE ABOUT WHAT'S COOL IN THE WORLD OF ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT. ASK TO TALK TO TARA.
It may just be the best decision you ever make!

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

WE'RE STRONG ON SAVINGS! COME IN AND SAVE!
LIQUORS 44
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 24 16 OZ. NR $13.49 DEP
NEW WIDE-MOUTH
GENESEE CREAM, ICE, RED, CASE OF 30 12 OZ CANS SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP
30 PACK
CATAMOUNT OCTOBERFEST CASE 24 12 OZ BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY & LIGHT CASE OF 2 12 PACK CANS $7.29 + DEP
PETE'S WICKED ALE FLAVORS 6 PACKS $4.79 + DEP
ZIMA 6 PACKS $3.99 + DEP
1/2 KEG $39.99 + DEP
BUD, LT, ICE, MICHELOB LT. & DK., ICE HOUSE, RED DOG, LITE
WINE OF THE MONTH
HICKORY RIDGE MERLOT CHARDONNAY 750 ML SALE $3.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $2.49
ALMADEN ALL FLAVORS EXCLUDING WHITE ZINFANDEL 3 Ltr. SALE $6.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $4.99
RENE JUNOT WHITE & RED 1.5L $4.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML 3 for $9.99
HAYWOOD CABERNET SAUVIGNON, CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.49
WOODCHUCK CIDER AMBER & DARK 6 PACK $4.99
TAYLOR DESSERT WINES PORT, TAWNY, GOLDEN, DRY, CREAM 1.5l $5.49
GORDON'S VODKA 1.75L $11.99
MYERS'S DARK RUM 1.75L SALE $10.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$10.00 FINAL COST $9.99
KAHLÚA 750 ML SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.99
CLAN MACGREGOR 1.75L $13.49
JACK DANIELS $10.99
CANADIAN MIST 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
JUAREZ TEQUILA 1.0L $6.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/14/95 THRU WEDS. 9/20/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Fall Bike Sale
KONA
HAHANNA $349.95
FIRE MOUNTAIN $399.95
LAVA DOME $499.95
CINDERCONE $625.00
KILAUEA $800.00
SEX ONE $975.00
EXPLOSIF $1249.95
Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St., (rear) • Greenfield 774-3701

Supermarket closes video stores; BayBank to offer in-store branches

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Stop and Shop has traded the convenience of a video store for that of a bank.

Stop and Shop will be closing all video departments in stores across the state from Springfield to Framingham.

Yesterday was the last day customers could rent videos at the Hadley store. The movies and video games will be sold until Sept. 23.

"It wasn't that we didn't get the business," said Jason Pierrepont, a Stop and Shop video clerk. "BayBank made an offer Stop and Shop couldn't refuse."

A lot of customers were disappointed when the store made the closing announcement last week, said Pierrepont, a two year veteran in the video department.

Pierrepont said he did not understand why the video store should be closed for a bank since there are Automatic Teller Machines at every register.

The prices of the videos range from just under $5 to about $20. Pierrepont said the videos are selling fast at these prices.

"This affiliation extends BayBank's growing variety of banking alternatives by providing customers the convenience of one-stop shopping in prime locations," said William M. Crozier Jr., president and chief executive officer of BayBank, Inc.

The bank will be opening 40 branches across the state in most Stop and Shops, said Diane Greer, a BayBank spokesperson.

The Hadley branch will open in November, and have three tellers, said Pierrepont.

The branch will have hours which Greer describes as extremely convenient. The branch will be open in the early evening. It will also be open seven days a week, including Sunday afternoons.

Greer said BayBank can hold such hours because it is not governed by state laws, but rather federal laws.

She said the branch will be full service, including loan applications and new account services.

The existing Fleet ATM in the Hadley store will be replaced with a BayBank machine, said Greer.

In November when the store opens, BayBank will hold a ribbon-cutting ceremony, she said.

The clerks in the video department will probably be transferred to other departments in the store because their union protects them, said Pierrepont.

Packwood's diaries could lead to congressional investigation

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department should investigate the campaign finance practices mentioned in Bob Packwood's diaries to determine whether any laws were broken, a public interest group said Wednesday.

The practices "may constitute knowing and willful violations of the federal campaign laws," Common Cause President Ann McBride wrote in a letter to Attorney General Janet Reno.

The diaries indicate Packwood, (R-Ore.), and Sen. Phil Gramm, (R-Texas), discussed in 1992 sending $100,000 in contributions from the National Republican Senatorial Committee, which Gramm then chaired, to the Oregon Republican Party, she said.

The contributions "were apparently intended to benefit Senator Packwood's re-election campaign," which would have violated a federal prohibition on the so-called "soft money" being spent to directly benefit federal campaigns, she said.

The Justice Department will consider the request but it probably will be weeks before its criminal division prepares a response, a department spokesman said Wednesday evening.

Packwood announced last week he would resign his seat effective Oct. 1 after a Senate ethics investigation that found he was guilty of sexual misconduct, soliciting job offers from lobbyists for his ex-wife and obstructing an investigation by altering his diaries.

Gramm has denied any wrongdoing.

"Nothing wrong was done," the Republican presidential hopeful told reporters last week. "What Senator Packwood is doing in his diaries I don't know."

Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal, said Wednesday night the request from Common Cause was no surprise.

"I'm sure that Common Cause, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Democratic Party, would like the Clinton administration to launch an investigation," Neal said. "It smells so much of politics that even the Clinton administration won't dare touch that."

Packwood had no immediate comment, an aide said in Portland, Ore.

Transit bus catches fire

NORTHAMPTON — A Hampshire Transit bus caught fire yesterday on its way to Northampton.

The bus was filled with passengers and travelling to Northampton at approximately 5:45 p.m. on Tuesday when it filled with smoke.

The driver pulled over and passengers were evacuated.

The fire and smoke were attributed to an air-conditioning belt which caught fire, Hampshire Transit spokesperson Barry Jones said.

There were no injuries to passengers and there was no permanent damage to the bus, Jones said. A second bus was sent to pick up displaced passengers within 10 minutes.

—Allison Connolly

Central & western Bosnia invaded, civilians flee

By Maud S. Beelman
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Government soldiers and their Croat allies were rapidly advancing on Serb-held towns in central and western Bosnia on Wednesday, sending thousands of Serb civilians fleeing.

The Serbs were offering little resistance and appeared to be pulling back, indicating they were reconciled to losing less important territory. They were likely to lose the land anyway in a possible peace settlement.

NATO also kept up its pressure on Bosnian Serbs, launching airstrikes on Serb-held territory around Sarajevo.

In Washington, Defense Secretary William Perry said he found no evidence of any civilian casualties in more than 100 NATO bombings since Aug. 30. The Russian government has accused NATO of killing Serb civilians, including children.

The advance by Croat and Muslim-led government troops came as U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke began a new round of shuttle diplomacy to settle on a plan to divide Bosnia's territory.

Holbrooke was likely to tackle the difficult issue in meetings with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who has negotiating power for the Bosnian Serbs. U.S. negotiators were carrying large maps as they entered the talks in Belgrade, the Serbian capital.

Last Friday, all three sides in the Bosnian conflict agreed on a plan under which the Serbs, who now hold about two-thirds of Bosnia, would have to give up large pieces of it. They would end up with 49 percent, leaving the rest for a Croat-Muslim federation.

U.N. and Bosnian officials reported early Wednesday that the town of Donji Vakuf, about 55 miles north west of Sarajevo, was falling to government and Croat forces.

Government forces for months have been trying to push north and west toward Donji Vakuf. Now, apparently, they have their eyes on a bigger prize, Jajce, 15 miles further to the north.

Croat forces were pressing east toward Jajce and the capture of Donji Vakuf would set up a pincers movement on Jajce. The Croatian news agency HINA reported Wednesday night that Jajce had been captured. There was no confirmation.

In addition to its strategic and economic importance, Jajce is significant psychologically. Its capture would put the allied forces in position to harass the Bosnian Serb stronghold of Banja Luka, farther north. Jajce also is the site of important hydroelectric plants.

■ Hatch

continued from page 1

Crowded seating

Another potential hurdle could have been a student overflow during lunch hours due to the reduction in seating room, a problem which should not be a factor, Potter said.

"The seating loss didn't net us a loss," she said.

According to Potter, increased seating in the Bluewall Center and "more attractive" and additional seating in the Coffee Shop should be ample compensation.

Also, Potter said that in the beginning of the school year, a greater number of students try to eat lunch at "precisely twelve noon," which she likened to the initially dense road traffic of off-campus students arriving on campus at the same time early in the semester.

However, she continued, when those students realize that they will encounter the congestion, they plan around eating at peak hours.

Potter said she guesses the now-demolished portion of the Hatch will not be ready for occupancy until fall of 1996.

■ Amherst

continued from page 1

Authority due to the departure of Jean Laino was also filled on Monday.

A combined panel of the housing authority and the select board voted on two candidates, Margot Parrot and Geraldine Pawley.

Pawley received the position of Housing Authority Commissioner by a vote of 7 to 2.

Pawley included among the changes she would like to make the current set-up of public housing, which presently allows for 85 percent elderly, and 15 percent handicapped.

"The handicapped portion has come to incorporate addicts and alcoholics," Pawley said. "I haven't been there, but I've heard Northampton and Holyoke people are afraid to go outside."

Pawley, a resident of public housing, described herself as a people person who has an open mind.

"I think it's important to have a person from public housing on the housing authority," said Joan Ross Logan, Chairperson of the Housing Authority, on why she voted for Pawley. "She will bring a whole new perspective to the board that we might not have."

Boss agreed with this ideology, and said someone thinking that they can make decisions on public housing without being a part of public housing is like having non-students in student government.

"It would be an example of materialism," Boss said.

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Emergency Medical Training
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Classes start September 18, 1995
Call UMass, Continuing Education at 545-0474

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK!
113 CAMPUS CENTER
545-3500

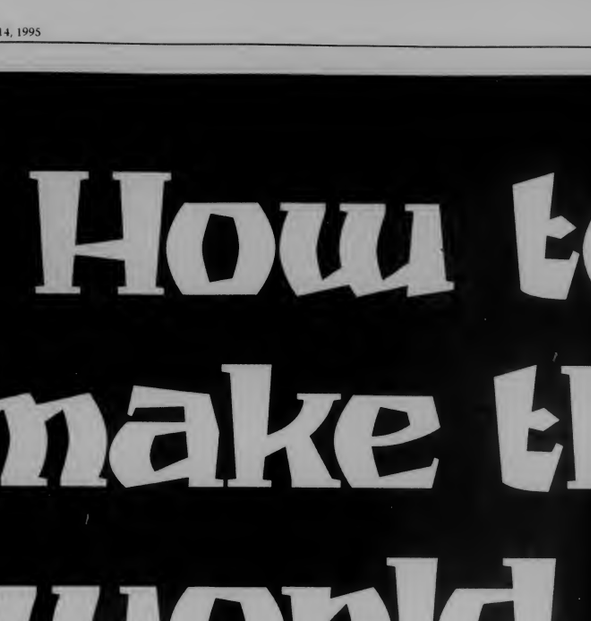
IOTA GAMMA UPSILON
406 N. Pleasant St.
Invites All University Women to Rush
Rush Dates:
Thursday, Sept. 14
Monday, Sept. 18
Tuesday, Sept. 19
All Rush Events Begin at 7:00pm
Call 549-7845 for Info and Rides

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• 8- 9 ft. Tables
• Live Music
This Friday 9/15
Clovis Point 9:45
• All Sporting Events
• Mon. Night Pool League
$5/hr. Fri., Sat. & Sun. Unlimited Players!
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284

Introductory Special!
WITH THIS AD
$5.00 OFF with student I.D.
Professional Consultation and Style Haircut with Stacey DiCarlo
Hurry! Exp. 10/28/95
Styles by Deborah
We Feature Complete Professional Hair Care • Wolff Tanning • Nail Care • Luxury Facials Pedicures • Body Waxing • Lash & Brow Tinting
65 University Drive
Amherst, 549-5610

picky picky
I'VE ALWAYS BEEN VERY PICKY ABOUT MY HAIR
AND RIGHT NOW I'M PICKING WHERE TO HAVE MY HAIRCUT IN AMHERST
I'M GOING TO REGENCY HAIR STYLISTS BECAUSE ALL MY FRIENDS GO THERE
By a o hair
I MADE A GOOD CHOICE. IT PAYS TO BE PICKY!
189 North Pleasant St • Amherst, MA • 253-9526

How to make the world a cooler place.



Choose the powerful stick that fights off odor and wetness all day. Six fragrances, one goal: maximum protection. Or get powerful Right Guard protection in a crystal clear gel. Leaves no messy residue or flaky white stuff. So clear, it protects invisibly.

Right Guard
Right there when you need it.

©1995 The Gillette Company

■ concert

continued from page 9

For part of the set David Bowie and his wife, supermodel Iman, came and sat about 20 feet behind us, causing several near-heart attacks. Nine Inch Nails rocked non-stop for over an hour before they were joined on stage by David Bowie and his band. The combination of Bowie's hypnotic voice, Reznor's howls and screams, Nine Inch Nails' frantic rhythms and sounds, and the '80s new wave style displayed by Bowie's band was incredible. They worked together perfectly, with seemingly contrasting styles blending together like a symphony of beautiful noise.

When Trent Reznor's band finally left the stage, David Bowie and his musicians covered a few Nine Inch Nails songs, with Trent Reznor helping out on keyboard, saxophone and any other instruments he could get his hands on. When Trent left, David Bowie played about an hour and a half of almost entirely new material. Classic Bowie hits that we've all grown to know and love were not performed. The only well-known song that Bowie sang was an incredible version of "The Man Who Sold the World", a song known more from Nirvana's "Unplugged" release than by Bowie's original recording.

When David Bowie finally finished his majestic set, we gave the best standing ovation we could muster up. He then hopped off of the stage, walked over to us, greeted us and asked our opinion of the show. I was the first to respond, and delivered the articulate response of "Uh, oh god, uh, WOW!" Others thanked him for the incredible show, but lacked the mastery of the English language I had just displayed. How does one respond to that line of questioning?

When Bowie finished greeting us, Trent Reznor gave us a shy, heartfelt greeting and goodbye. After handshakes and hundreds of, "You guys were incredible, man," we left.

We spent the rest of the evening basically freaking out, celebrating, and trying to come back to the real world. Not your average Saturday. Needless to say, the Nine Inch Nails — David Bowie Tour is not to be missed — even if you do have to pay.

■ football

continued from page 16

Campanile struck seven different pass receptors, compiling a career-high 10 completions for the game, and 110 yards passing on the day.

"We mixed a lot of guys in the game. There were quite a few different receivers and quite a few different backs," Campanile said. "They can all play and the coaches have confidence in all of them — so do I, I throw them the ball. I know they can catch, and I know what they can do after they catch the ball."

Unfortunately for Campanile, the second half against Richmond did not fare as well as the first half. In fact, it was the opposite. The quarterback's offense was unable to produce any points in the third or fourth quarters, due largely to the mental mistakes they made. The Minutemen fumbled, missed field goals, and Campanile did not complete his passes. The quarterback completed only three of 14 second half passes.

"I think the mistakes I made were critical. I under-threw one ball, that was big. I think we could have had a touchdown," Campanile said. "I don't think I made that many mistakes, but the mistakes I made were huge, including that fumble at midfield."

On paper, there were many bright spots for Campanile and his offense. At half-time of the Richmond game, it looked as if the Minutemen could run away with it.

With his coaching staff, Campanile has reviewed the Richmond game tapes this week, understanding the mistakes he made. He realizes he must take the positives which occurred and continue to build on them. The UMass offense looks to iron out the wrinkles in preparation for Saturday's match-up with Holy Cross.

"The mistakes I made were big, so as a whole, it was a poor game for me. If you put up seven points, the quarterback didn't have a great game, no matter what he did," Campanile said. "I know we have to improve. I know I have to improve and I know what needs to be improved on. I'm not panicked, but yet I'm not happy about what went on as far as my performance."

Losing to Richmond in the season opener was no doubt, a disappointment. The Minutemen were picked to roll all over the Spiders last Saturday. UMass takes this minor set-back as a learning experience, and shoots for improvement in the necessary areas.

"I think we need to motivate ourselves more, because you spend the whole camp talking about Richmond, and then you go out there and [play poorly]," Campanile said. "You really put to rebound. There is so much adversity to overcome right now. We were not supposed to lose that game. It is hard to accept."

Campanile and the Minutemen look to rebound Saturday at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium, when they face in-state rival Holy Cross. Kick-off is 1 p.m.

Your Ad Could Be Here
Collegian Advertising

Sports meeting

There will be a meeting for all sports staff tonight at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom, 113 Campus Center Basement (opposite the ATM machines). Anyone interested in writing for sports is welcome, no experience necessary. For more information, call Candice Flemming, sports editor, at 545-1851 or 545-0719.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. Thru Sept. 21/Separate Tickets
At 7:30 Daily Only!

"THE BEST MYSTERY THRILLER OF THE YEAR. Taut, Tense And Terrific!"
THE USUAL SUSPECTS
PolyGram GRAMERCY

At 9:30 Only! ISAAC MIZRAHI Takes You Down The Runway Of Fashion, Giving Us The Best Party Movie Of The Year!

"HILARIOUS! A TREAT!"
"THE SUMMER'S FUNNIEST MOVIE!"
LINDA EVANGELISTA NAOMI CAMPBELL CINDY CRAWFORD KATE MOSS ISAAC MIZRAHI
UNZIPPED
And Isaac Mizrahi Is A Laughing Riot!
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

We Deliver
Kai Chi
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St./Rt.9
Open 7 Days 6am - 10pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl Loaders: $1.50

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco: American Spirit Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS
ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99
ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99
7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.
LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri. 8 p.m. - 1a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3435
SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99
COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons
Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

You mean someone has answers to my student loan questions?!?

Yes. Citibank has all the student loan information you need now.

For answers to your student loan questions, talk to Citibank, the student loan experts. Our customer service representatives are here to help you from the beginning of the financial aid process through your final student loan payment. Exceptional customer service is just one reason why students have trusted Citibank with their education financing more than any other bank. To get the answers you need, call Citibank at 1-800-692-8200 and ask for Operator 268, send in the coupon below, or visit your school's Financial Aid Office.

PLEASE SEND ME APPLICATIONS FOR THE FOLLOWING STUDENT LOANS:
Citibank Federal Stafford Loan (subsidized and unsubsidized)
Citibank Federal PLUS Loan (for parents of dependent students only)
Citibank Graduate Loan Program (for graduate students of all disciplines - please indicate your field of study)
MAIL THIS COUPON TO:
Citibank (NYS)
Attn: The Student Loan Corporation
P.O. Box 22948
Rochester, NY 14692-2948
OR CALL 1-800-692-8200 and ask for Operator 268.
VISIT OUR WEB SITE at http://www.locl.com/HO/village/Citibank/CSLC.html
Name
Address Apt.
City State Zip
Telephone
Social Security #
You are currently: an undergraduate student a graduate student
Year of graduation
If you are a graduate student, please indicate the field of study you are pursuing:
Business (MBA) Medicine (allopathic and osteopathic studies)
Engineering Nursing
Other (please specify)
CITIBANK Code 269

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Help Wanted
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Motorcycles
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Know of any parties or have tickets you want to sell? Put an ad in the Collegian!

Learn to play bridge Free Thurs 7:9 p.m. (5 weeks) Free book lessons. t-shirt. Beginning Thurs. Sept 21 in Farm Lab Room 011

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Any Announcements? Place them in the classifieds!

The sisters of Sigma Kappa cordially invite you to attend open Rush Tues 5:30 8:30 and Wed Thur 8:00 9:00pm for questions or a ride call 256-0887

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau will be offering hours tou s tonight from 7:30 9:30 p.m. For further information please call Tara at 549-5435

Amethon at University womens please join us 10 noon rush on Wednesday and Thursday September 13 and 14. Pick up is at the horseshoe in Southwest at 5:45 p.m. both nights. Look for Chi Omega s (grav) Call Heather at 549-4723 10 R.S.V.P.

Iota Gamma Upsilon 406 North Pleasant St invites all U Mass women to rush 9-14 9:18 9:19 All events start at 7pm for info or rides call 549-7845

The sisters of Sigma Kappa cordially invite you to attend open rush Tues 5:30 8:30 and Wed Thur 8:00 9:00 p.m. For questions or a ride call 256-0887

Come meet the sisters of Sigma Delta Tau tonight from 7:30 9:30 for more information please contact Tara at 549-5435

UMass Women's Ice Hockey. Ever wanted to play hockey? Here's your chance still will growing club team. No experience necessary! Come to our informational meeting Wed. Sept. 13 at 7pm in the Campus Center (Meet outside the Bluewall) For more info call 549-1881 or 549-0603 See you there!

FOR SALE

Mazda 626, 1985 Excellent condition cassette $1,500 must sell Call 549-1539

Mercury Marquis, 1984, 70K miles Runs excellent. Power windows & doors 1500 or B.O. Call JJ 549-8981

1985 Yam 4 speed 76 sub bh Mileage 99,00 miles runs fine $400 or B.O 584-4056

87 Dodge pickup, RAM50 power steering long bed CAP 118K $1918(413)772-0318

1987 Honde Wagon 5 spd AC casset reliable serviced single owner 7950 253-4072

Students! 1979 VW Rabbit for sale Excellent shape, runs well, great for students 150,000 miles Fun car!! $1000.00 or BO Jenn @ 413-774-7024

BOXING LESSONS

With retired pro Dara Bumps 549-5757

DEADHEAD SKIERS!

195cm Olin "Dark Star" Oriental Direct skis for sale Brand new! Paid $440.00 but will accept B/O for these collector's items KEEP JERRY ALIVE!! Jann @ 413-774-7024 (not long distance)

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling." "Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking for." "What are you trying to tell me?" "Relevance, true spiritual enlightenment..." "Frank down the hall?" "No! Alliance Christian Fellowship committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit-filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info: Mark or Elizabeth 253-7206

ENTERTAINMENT

Having Halloween bash on 10/27 or 10/28? Got a huge house? Want a spooky bird? You need one!! and we need you! call Jack at 367-9636

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-9742

Furnished/Unfurnished apartments for rent. Sunderland, on bus route. 2 bedroom townhouses. Call 1TD at 256-1925 Available immediately

FOR SALE

Looking for a quick and easy way to sell things? Do it using the classified section of the Collegian!

Brother word processor 2200 includes manual, spellchecks disk has framing and spreadsheets 3 years old $750 call Justin 549-4484

Three dorm size fridges, two small ones one medium one $25-50 call Luke 549-4512

Toshiba 20" Stereo w/ remote 3yr old ask for $190 call 549-8563

Mecintach LC2 w/14" monitor, 20megs Ram Ext. Condition $950 or offer Call 498-5733

Matching sofa chair ottoman $100 Maytag washer $50 549-1777

Tandy 1000SL Computer w/ m Mon & Soft MS-DOS comp Asking 300 or BO call 6-6940

Adorable mini pet pig for sale I'm moving to Texas and Floyd can't take the heat Neutering and shots are taken care of Must see! 665-7935 Paid 450 asking 300 He's only 4 mos

Brother word processor with monitor Great for writing papers Call Kara 253-4078

Crib with mattress $55, Child's size bed $15 Twin foam mattress $15, Drafting table $30 (256)-5698

Mac Computers Powerbook 170 8/80 fax carry case $1195 Quadra 700 8/540 16" color monitor awesome graphics software $1995 call 256-0080

GREEN

22 hours 42 dnajoys. 1000 acres Totally legal Outdoor rhamstage Two big pop tents Skyward lasers Massive lighting displays Concessions Smart Bars Clothing and record store bazaars Life size Stone Henge replica Begins 4 p.m. September 23 and ends 2 p.m September 24 A Primary/Orrn Production 18+ Call Barb @ 548-0833

HELP WANTED

Looking for extra help, through the classifieds you are sure to receive plenty of responses.

Greiss Ships Hiring Earn up to $7000+/month World Travel Seasonal & full time positions No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 Ext. C500

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & full time employment available at national Parks Forests & Wildlife Preserves Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N 50011

Jobs for the environment Campaign with MassPirg to save our polluted rivers Flexible schedule $50 $75 / Day Call Tom 256-6434

Typesetter/Designer 1/2 time with MAC equipment Inquire! Drive and B/W copy scanner, Quark Express program need ad for spiritual publication Experience Ed real design sense Send resume by 10/01 to Miracles Magazine P.O. Box 181 South Deerfield, MA 01373

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop congress from wrecking vital antipollution laws Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something mean-ngful! Flexible schedule, $6 $8/hr Call read to summer job, career opportunity 584-9830

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted KRETE RESTAURANT 586-8755

PCA for male guad Evenings, overnights and weekends 7 85/hr Call 546-0666

Get paid for taking a test needed education students planning to teach Spanish or able to speak Spanish Tests will be held September 28, 29, and 30 at UMass Campus Center Payment up to $155.00 One to two days Space is limited You must preregister by September 20 For more info call Denise Cook or Nancy Hahn at 256-0444, M-F, 8:30-4:30 National Evaluation Systems

Drivers wanted $5-12/hr call Delivery Express 549-0077

Mala Torah reader needed Housing and parking Congregation Rodphey Shalom, Holyoke 534-5252

Mullins Center looking for students to work part time, late nights, and weekends doing post-event clean up Stop by Mullins center, 2nd floor and fill out an application today

Part Time person needed on M-W-F 9:00 am-1:00pm and Tu-Th 9:00am-12:00pm for receptionist position in local area computer integration firm A professional appearance and pleasant phone manner are required Computer skills are a plus Please apply in person or mail resume to ADI 701 Triangle St Amherst (Shawmut Building) b/w 9-5 M-F

Experienced yard and house-surround worker Part-time references 549-0413

Drivers wanted Cantones Pizza Co part time & full time call 256-6100

INSTRUCTION

Offering music lessons or tutoring? Place your ad in the Collegian!

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits With a patient and supportive teacher Sign up early, limited schedule Call Peter 253-5763

LOST

Lost something of great significance? Use the Collegian's lost section in the classifieds for FREE!

Very important Lost pen monblank in Campus Center on Friday It is a gift from my father Will reward Wellington 545-1968 885-6876

MODEM USERS

Call the Playground BBS! 256-6085 Over 4,000 files online Twenty online games including registered LORD, BRE and Usurper Food Co-Op and Recipe Bases, lots more! Stuff for everyone!

MUSICIANS

Are you looking to be in a band, or looking for someone to jam yours? Give the Collegian a try!

Musicians wanted Singer looking for drummer, bassist and guitarist to form and jam band Call adam 5-9825

PERSONALS

CASHIN STAFF Get psyched for a great year only the best is yet to come

To the cute guy in the Whitmore sneakbar: I was surprised to find you working there, but it was a pleasant surprise I have dreams of you and me and lunch sandwiches Respond here if you feel the same

Your secret admirer

To the best staff in the whole world welcome to Collegian Graphics!

Happy Birthday Joy Joy love Erinka, Joeo and Gwen

Tim Noerching I can't wait to cut some rug with you this weekend!

A Dream of Jeanne

POSTER GIVEAWAY

Moaday, September 18 University Gallery, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions While supplies last

ROOM WANTED

Need a room? Place an ad through the Collegian classifieds.

Prof mate. Looking for room in apt or home 546-0613

SERVICES

Exotic nail design airbrushing 546-1754

Experienced babysitter available, non-smoker, lots of references 546-0812

TRAVEL

Planning for Spring Break, or a skiing trip? Check the Collegian's classified section

Spring Break Travel free with Sun Splash Tours Highest commissions, lowest prices Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710

WANTED

Need a job, or simply looking for a computer? Place an ad in the classifieds.

Students to join health club as group to save money call Molly 256-8439

5ft 100lb pk-eyed brunette to perform tease @ party call 546-H-O-T-Y

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michael Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Musical inspired by T.S. Eliot work
5 Put on the market
10 "— It My Way"
14 Despaired
15 Balearic Islands capital
16 David Copperfield's first wife
17 Phi — Kappa
18 — Reine Lesage
19 Singer Anita
20 Deductive fire
23 Pub prosecutors
24 Newscaster Kooper
25 Actor Novarro
28 Polo Grounds hero
31 Train riders, sometimes
35 Like
36 Actress Renee
38 Newsworthy time
39 Banner for Jefferson Davis
42 Benz ending
43 "— for Sergeants"
44 Entr'— musical interlude
45 Showed again
47 Drink slowly
48 Jogger's woss
49 Crosstown vehicle
51 Quitting or spelling
52 Relinquish a ship's command
59 Actress Pitts
60 Twining plants
61 La Douce
63 Take — relax
64 San Diego player
65 Bend repeatedly
66 Chapper
67 Quack drink
68 Muscle resiliency

DOWN
1 Sam's front
2 One of the acting Baldwins
3 Percussionist Puente
4 Tie as a game
5 Whitish gems
6 New Deal dog
7 With 13 Down, June 14, 1995
8 Kuwaiti honcho
9 Charged
10 Redundantly titled 1960's musical
11 10 Down without pronouns
12 Tabriz locale
13 See 7 Down
21 Team devotee
22 Snicker
25 Indy 500 participant
26 Conjointly
27 Clementine's dad
28 "Awaxe and Sing" dramatist
29 Temple gateway
30 Chaplin role
32 Shawespeare's Sir Toby
33 Speechify
34 Wise guys
36 Brouhaha
37 Printemps followel
40 Boredom
41 Cosmetic overhaul
46 Snippety -
48 WWI gp.
50 Passes by 51 Fall on
52 Commonsensical
53 Ivan was one
54 Novelist Hunter
55 Tail of the scale
56 Munich master
57 First name in folk music
58 The Bureau's agents
59 Strike suddenly
62 Chop wood

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

T	R	E	L	L	I	S		T	R	A	N	C	E	S
R	E	L	I	A	N	T		R	A	D	I	A	T	E
A	N	E	M	O	N	E		O	N	A	T	R	I	P
P	A	D	O		O	R	N	O	T		A	N	E	T
E	M	A			E	A	P				S	I	N	E
Z	E	N	O		R	O	P	E	S		G	Y	N	T
E	S	T	A	T	E	S		R	E	V	I	S	E	S
			T	E	A			A	I	L
A	P	P	E	A	L	S		T	R	I	D	E	N	T
V	A	R	S		S	I	R	I	S		A	V	E	R
E	T	O			L	A	O				E	W	E
N	E	C	K		L	E	N	Y	A		O	N	D	A
G	L	E	A	S	O	N		A	R	O	U	S	E	D
E	L	E	M	E	N	T		M	A	R	T	I	A	L
R	A	D	A	M	E	S	T		T	R	E	S	T	L	E

6/14/95

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The winds of change make work much more exciting. New career avenues open up. A once-in-a-lifetime offer comes from out of the blue. A wise investment will pay off in December. Turn a hobby into a business early in 1996. Aligning yourself with unconventional people and projects will bring big profits next spring. Singles could find love at first sight.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Padres broadcaster Jerry Coleman, "Lone Ranger" star Clayton Moore, sculptor Kate Millett, dancer Joey Heatherton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Early morning finds you in a "can do" mood! A close associate offers excellent suggestions. Follow through; higher profits are possible. Review various business tactics before deciding what approach to take with a competitor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be better off working independently now. Others are not in a conciliatory mood. Tend to your financial interests. A brief shopping trip could net some incredible buys. Pay your bills on time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A favor is repaid. An inside tip helps you make money. You know all the right moves to make in romance. Heed your intuition. You can play the role of big brother or sister to perfection.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are back on the right track in business. Behind-the-scenes wheeling and dealing can be extremely profitable. Finish a complex work project. A social event puts you in the limelight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Storm clouds could be gathering. Try to resolve an emotional stand-off before evening. Stretching a tight budget is not easy. Be a stickler for details when making a large purchase.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Balancing business with pleasure is an art worth studying. A compromise sets the tone for a marvelous day. Giving in to your mate's request proves surprisingly easy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your generosity is admirable. Be discreet in private matters. Keep your personal involvement in a dicey situation under wraps. A desire for change prompts you to pursue ambitious new plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentrate on efficient communication. Long-distance calls are costly but save valuable time. A cherished career goal moves within reach. Keep in mind that you want to build a secure future for your loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You enjoy dealing with the public. Emphasize the benefits to the community that a new project will bring. Handle domestic chores with dispatch. Household members will cooperate if you appeal to their better nature.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A goal that once seemed unreachable is finally attained. You resolve to aim even higher! Focus on boosting your earning power. A former lover wants to rendezvous. Be careful not to jeopardize a current relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Consult an expert about getting a better return from your investments. A cash flow situation will soon improve. You ponder conducting a secret romance. Guard your reputation from those who like to gossip. Go slow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Higher-ups admire your keen attention to detail. Look for new outlets for your organizational skills. Can you really afford to spend a lot of time and money socializing? Tonight, level with romantic partner.

Tired of sitting around watching reruns of "Dear John?"

Then get off the couch and get down to the UMass Daily Collegian. We are always looking for writers at all of our desks. We are located in the campus center basement, opposite the ATMs.

Jewish Affairs needs writers!

If you're interested come on down to the Collegian offices!

113 Campus Center
545-3500

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

OK, CALVIN, YOU HAVE TO CATCH THE WATER BALLOON AAA!
HA! I'M IN THE COROLLARY ZONE! IF I CATCH THE BALLOON, THE THROWER HAS TO BEND OVER AND HOLD STILL!
WHAT?!
I CAUGHT IT!! HA HA HA HA!
OH THIS IS GOING TO BE SWEET!
I'M TAKING HOBBES PRISONER!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY BRUNO, YOU LOOK LIKE YOU'VE BEEN HAVING A BAD WEEK.
AND IT LOOKS LIKE LIFE'S DONE WONDERS FOR YOU.
I KNOW... LET'S PLAY A GAME.
I'M NOT GOING TO LIKE THIS.... AM I?
LET'S PLAY WHENEVER IT FEELING LOUSY GETS A HUG.
ACTUALLY, HOW ABOUT A GAME OF YOU-HIDE-AND-I-SIT-HERE-AND-DRINK.
YOU'RE NOT MAKING THIS EASY.
SORRY JIM, CAN'T SPELL IT OUT ANY EASIER THAN THAT.
YOU'RE GONNA BE FEELING PRETTY LOUSY IF YOU EVEN TOUCH ME, ¿COMPRENDE?
AHH... I SEE. YOU WANT TO PLAY EMOTIONAL-HIDE-AND-SEEK.

Butterling By John Ottinger

ONE MORE THING — I DO NOT DEEPCOM ON AN EMPTY STOMACH. I WANT A MOUND OF GIZZARDS TOAST AND SOME OJ, BROUGHT TO MY DRESSING ROOM IMMEDIATELY.
GOOD MORNING, MR. BUTTERLING. HOW WOULD YOU LIKE YOUR GIZZARDS CUT?
ARRWWRRRGGWWWRRG
APPLE JUICE? APPLE JUICE IS PANT!

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellirini

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'VE BEEN HIRED BY THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT TO HELP CUT SPENDING.
I'LL BE STUDYING YOUR EVERY MOVE AND LOOKING FOR WASTE AND INEFFICIENCY
THOSE WORDS IN BOLDFACE LOOK LIKE THEY'RE SUCKING UP THE OL' ELECTRICITY

The Amazing Spider Man By Stan Lee

VERY WELL, I'LL GIVE YOU TIME TO RAISE THE MONEY YOUR BROTHER OWES ME.
UNTIE HIM, GONJO.
I'LL GET THE MONEY-- I PROMISE!
OF COURSE YOU WILL. BECAUSE GONJO WILL NEVER BE FAR AWAY!

Simon By Mark Gagnon

HI THERE FOLKS, IT'S ME SIMON. TODAYS SECRET WORD IS: "NO".
© 1995- MARK GAGNON
HERE COMES SOMEONE WE CAN TRY IT ON!
WHY DON'T YOU GET A JOB, YOU WORTHLESS BUM!!
NO!
WELL, THAT WAS FUN! DON'T FORGET TO TRY OUT TODAYS SECRET WORD ON ALL YOUR FRIENDS!

Korky and Pete By David Robert

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

When we were young some of the kids used to force little Joey to bite the heads off of crickets.

If he didn't do it they'd keep punching him in the arm until he did.

One time they had to punch him 30 or 40 times before he ate it.

He went to college to become an entomologist.

Who knows what he did alone at night in the labs.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Timothy J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew J. Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Production ..... James P. Ganley, Lauria K. Witt
Matt "It's my birthday Saturday" Audette

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Wings	Meatloaf
Broc.&Cauli. Casserole	Chicken Fajita
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Caponata w/Pocket Brd.	Chili Cheese Puff
Broc.&Cauli. Casserole	Chicken Fajita

Quote of the Day

"A fox is wolf who sends flowers."

–Ruth Weston

Close to Home By John McPherson

"The in-flight movie is $4. If you're not interested in the movie, we ask that you wear one of these masks until the film is over."

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Collegian Classifieds
Because we have to fill a whole page.

Sports notice
The UMass dance team is holding auditions on Sept. 17 at 3 p.m. on the 19th floor of John Adams Tower. For more information, call Jessi at 253-1794.

Sports

Calipari on ESPN
Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari will appear on ESPN's Up Close with Chris Myers tonight at 6 p.m. The show will be repeated on Sept. 15 at 3 a.m.

UMass, Campanile look to rebound vs. Holy Cross

DAYMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN
The Minutemen, after dropping their season opener against Richmond, are preparing for Saturday's game against Holy Cross at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

First and 10 inside the opposing 20-yard line. Sophomore quarterback Vito Campanile takes the snap and — then what?

A touchdown is what the Massachusetts football team desires in this situation. Last week, the Minutemen failed to take advantage of several opportunities to put points on the board, inside the Richmond 20. This week, Campanile and UMass look to rebound from a disappointing 21-7 loss, and minimize mental mistakes when they face local rival Holy Cross.

"I don't think we took advantage of our opportunities. I think we had the game," Campanile said. "We had it right there for the taking, and we didn't take it. We as an offense, kept waiting and waiting — for what? I don't know."

The game against Richmond marked the first time since 1993 that Campanile had seen game action. He sat out last season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament. The former knee injury did not bother Campanile at all, and was not a factor in the result of his performance.

"[The knee] felt really good. It didn't bother me at all to be honest. It was tired the next day, a little sore," Campanile said. "Nothing out of the ordinary. A couple of shots will do that to anybody."

Campanile's performance on the field revealed the knee is capable of handling game situations. Missing a whole season, however, tends to make athletes rusty upon return to the field. Campanile wasted no time getting reacquainted with the gridiron, as he delivered a seven-yard complete pass on his first play back.

"I was adjusted right after the first play. I was ready to go. I was so pumped," Campanile said. "I felt good. It didn't feel like a year off at all to me. I wasn't thinking of that."

In the first half against Richmond, Campanile looked impressive. He completed seven of 10 passes for a total of 69 yards. He also displayed an ability to connect with a wide array of receivers, in order to get the job done.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 13

Rebecca Myers

Rebecca Myers out for 2–3 weeks

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

The truly great teams can overcome injuries in order to win games. This is a test the Massachusetts women's soccer team hopes it can pass in the upcoming weeks as it will have to deal with the loss of All-America candidate Rebecca Myers.

Myers, who is the field general at center midfield, will be lost for at least the next 2–3 weeks with a torn hamstring.

"We are a changed team now without Rebecca Myers," said Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy.

The injury has been lingering since the preseason as she was not 100 percent heading into the regular season.

She played the first 60 minutes against St. Bonaventure and 80 against GW last Friday, but will be unable to go this weekend when the Minutewomen head to Williamsburg Va. to face William & Mary and George Mason.

One of the biggest concerns is within the team itself. As long as they play the team game they are capable of, they will be in each game they play without their standout midfielder.

"We know we will play a good team game and that we will fight for each other," Rudy said of his squad's heart. "That's the thing we do best. How far that can take us remains to be seen."

Junior Amy Powell, a usual starter on the left flank, will assume Myers' position in her absence.

"We will shift around to compensate for her loss. We have done it at the ends of both games against St. Bonnies and against GW," Rudy said. "Amy Powell, a left, will be at the midfield. We are not unfamiliar with it. It is something that we have done before."

UMass does not do a tremendous amount of switching of players, so they can keep the units' cohesiveness throughout the game.

"Our strength is that when we get played in, the players understand each other, because we don't substitute a lot," Rudy said. "When you make a lot of substitutions, you don't get in the flow of the game."

The stretch of games played without Myers is a true character test for this team and the confidence in other players to step up in her absence could be an asset from this experience.

"How we react remains to be seen," Rudy said.

Water polo swims over Richmond, Blue Jays

By Teri Klein
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts water polo team extended its record to 6-1 this weekend at the Cambridge Invitational. The Minutemen went 2-0, posting victories over Richmond and John Hopkins in the event which was co-hosted by Harvard and M.I.T.

After struggling against Richmond in its first game of the Invitational, Massachusetts was able to come away with a 16-14 win over the Spiders. Luis Limardo led the way in scoring for the Minutemen with six goals and three assists.

Led by six more goals from Limardo, the Minutemen were at their best in their decisive 26-6 defeat of John Hopkins, which pleased UMass coach Russ Yarworth.

"At the John Hopkins game, we finally came out and played how we are capable of playing, and really dominated the game," Yarworth said.

Despite starting off the season with a strong record, Yarworth feels his team is still in the defining process.

"We really haven't clicked yet. That is a little bit of a function of having a new group this year," Yarworth said. "It is the first time in a couple years that we had to change our tactics and it's taking a little while to get it together."

Yarworth has started a different line-up every game in an attempt to find an identity and a cohesive combination.

According to Limardo, one of the major differences in this year's team is their ability to score.

"I think we are a better team than last year. Last year, only two or three people could score goals," Limardo said. "This year, there are a lot of people who can score and play both offense and defense."

With the loss of Javier Gonzalez, the Minutemen are looking for a spread-out offense, that will also incorporate some talented freshmen.

In addition to leadership, senior captain John Luviano has been an offensive contributor with nine goals and 11 assists. Freshman Brian Stahl has stepped up for the Minutemen along with Gabriel Marrero, two top recruits who are showing signs of promise.

• • •

Pool Notes: UMass opened their 1995 campaign with four games Sept. 2 and 3 at the Labor Day Invitational tournament held at Annapolis, MD. The Minutemen went 3- 1 in their season opener, with wins over Bucknell, George Washington and Richmond. Its only loss was to arch rival Navy, who defeated UMass 9-7.

"Losing 9-7 to Navy the first weekend of the season was not that disappointing, because the transition during the first couple games is difficult," Yarworth said.

Stahl had an impressive debut, leading the Minutemen in scoring with 11 goals and six assists.

Senior Alex Mujica has carried the brunt of the load in net for Massachusetts with 11 quarters played and has a team low 6.55 goals per game. Junior Paul Engin has also been busy in goal, playing 7.5 quarters, while allowing an average of only eight GPG. Junior Jeff Lee and freshman Dane Teruya have also seen time at the goaltender position.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Luis Limardo and his teammates are facing off against Queens this weekend in their toughest match of the season.

Boston blasts Baltimore

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Tim Wakefield allowed two hits in 8 1-3 innings and rookie Dwayne Hosey hit his first major league homer as the Boston Red Sox ended their five-game losing streak by beating the Baltimore Orioles 2-0 Wednesday night.

Hosey went 4-for-5 with two doubles and scored both Boston runs. Jose Canseco extended his hitting streak to 15 games with an RBI single in the eighth inning, and the Red Sox snapped their longest skid of the season.

Wakefield (16-4) struck out two, walked three and hit a batter. He allowed only one runner past first base.

The knuckleballer retired the first eight batters before Bret Barberie grounded a single to right. The Orioles didn't get another hit until Bobby Bonilla opened the seventh with an infield single. The loss officially eliminated Baltimore from the AL East race. Wakefield walked Brady Anderson with one out in the ninth and was replaced by Rick Aguilera, who got two outs for his 28th save. Cal Ripken grounded out with runners on first and second to end the game.

Wakefield outpitched rookie Jimmy Haynes (0-1), who allowed three hits in seven innings in his major league debut. Haynes, 23, walked three and struck out four.

His only mistake occurred on the second pitch of the game, when Hosey lined an 0-1 pitch over the right-field scoreboard. It was his first homer in 11 at-bats since being recalled from the minors on Sept. 1.

The Red Sox then loaded the bases before Tim Naehring hit into an inning-ending double play. Luis Alicea singled with two outs in the second and took third on a groundrule double by Hosey, but John Valentin followed with a fly out.

Boston didn't get another runner to second base until Hosey opened the eighth with a double off Mark Lee. After Mo Vaughn walked, Canseco hit a single to center.

Baltimore's only threat against Wakefield came in the fourth, when Rafael Palmeiro walked and took second on a groundout. Ripken then flied out.

Notes: The start of the game was delayed by rain for 27 minutes ... Boston won the season series 9-4 ... Canseco has hit in 31 of 32 games ... Bonilla, making his third straight start at third base, made two throwing errors.

Indians shut-out a streaking Yankees

Indians 5, Yankees 0
CLEVELAND (AP) — Charles Nagy pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout in three years and Albert Belle hit his 37th home run as the Cleveland Indians stopped the New York Yankees' six-game winning streak.

Shortstop Omar Vizquel drove in three runs and was brilliant defensively for the Indians, who avoided a three-game sweep. They split the season series with the Yankees 6-6.

Nagy (14-5) won his fourth straight start, walking two and striking out five in his second complete game of the year and his first shutout since he pitched a one-hitter at Baltimore on Aug. 8, 1992.

David Cone (15-8) yielded five runs and nine hits in seven innings.

Athletics 6, Royals 5
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mark McGwire hit his 30th homer and Danny Tartabull homered for the first time since his trade to Oakland in late July as the Athletics defeated the Kansas City Royals. McGwire's homer was his 268th, tying him with Reggie Jackson for first place on the Oakland career list.

Brady Toyner hit a two-run single off closer Dennis Eckersley with two outs in the ninth to pull the Royals within a run, but Eckersley got Gary Gaetti to fly to center for his 28th save. Doug Johns (4-1), making his sixth major league start, allowed three runs and six hits in six innings for Oakland. Jason Jacome (4-4) allowed four runs and six hits in 5 1-3 innings for Kansas City, which has lost five of six.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 2, 11 innings
TORONTO (AP) — Ivan Rodriguez hit an RBI single in the 11th inning and the Texas Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays for their fourth straight victory.

Texas moved within one game of New York for the wild-card spot. Toronto lost its fifth in a row. The Blue Jays have dropped six straight extra-inning games.

Matt Whiteside (5-4) was the winner and Mike Timlin (4-3) took the loss.

NCAA investigates Nebraska; assault charges steal star RB

By Dave Zelio
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Two players face assault charges, another is accused of attempted murder. University officials are putting the spin on Nebraska's image. The governor offers a psychological analysis, saying the players are having trouble "dealing with anger."

And, oh yes, Arizona State is in town Saturday for the No. 2 Cornhuskers' home opener.

It has not been an easy week for the defending national champions, suddenly entangled by a web of legal problems.

"We've been portrayed as a Miami," coach Tom Osborne said, referring to a school under NCAA investigation following reports of a financial aid scandal, drug-testing violations and a pay-for-play scheme. "Maybe we are, I don't know. I don't see it as quite that bad. I think we have a pretty good character level."

Star running back Lawrence Phillips and backup Damon Benning were arrested over the weekend for allegedly assaulting their ex-girlfriends. Phillips is off the team for now.

Phillips has pleaded innocent to misdemeanor charges of assault, trespassing and destruction of property following a confrontation at the apartment of transfer quarterback Scott Frost. No charges have been filed against Benning, who has maintained he acted in self-defense and is expected to play.

On Wednesday, backup receiver Riley Washington was in court to plead innocent to attempted murder. He faces an October trial. A weary Osborne admits he is distracted by the off-field problems. He said he expects several incidents each year simply because of the number (150-160) of young people on the team. He said it was up to others to decide is his program was "out of control." Local authorities say they haven't noticed any trends of violence among Husker athletes.

"I know from time to time we are involved in incidents involving the players," Lincoln police chief Tom Casady said. "But I don't know if that is out of proportion to any other group of students, or similar populations of anyone else."

Lancaster County attorney Gary Lacey said he did not see a trend.

"We have football players and others who get in trouble," he said. "Every once in a while we have a few more."

Nebraska football has dominated radio call-in shows and front pages since Phillips' arrest Sunday. Even Gov. Ben Nelson weighed in Wednesday.

"We're seeing a microcosm of young people who are having trouble dealing with anger and dispute resolution," said the governor, a Nebraska alumnus and big football fan. "We see how difficult the problem is for one football team ... there's no way that one coach, seven coaches or 100 coaches could do it all themselves."

Athletic director Bill Byrne, who said Tuesday his program was not at all like Miami's, said Nebraska has been a national leader in providing counseling and other programs available to athletes.

"We just need to make sure we're doing all that we can for our athletes ... maybe we need to do more," he said.

Word of the arrests, of course, has reached Arizona State. "It's kind of hard to believe," quarterback Jake Plummer said. "If it gives us an edge, it gives us an edge. Either way, we're going to come and play hard. It's not going to change the way we go into the game."

Nebraska coaches insist their team is ready, too.

"We still have a great football team. We've got kids that have a purpose," offensive line coach Milt Tenopir said. "These kids have dreams that they've worked on all winter and all summer — that isn't changing. They're focused."

Harbaugh might not start
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Harbaugh, the highest-rated quarterback in the NFL, may not even start this week for the Indianapolis Colts.

Craig Erickson, who started the first two games, Harbaugh and coach Ted Marchibroda know who will start at Buffalo, but weren't telling after Wednesday's practice. The quarterbacks shared practice time with the first unit.

"We'll make the formal announcement as far as the starting quarterback is concerned right at game time," Marchibroda said. "We're going to give our guys pretty much equal work this week in practice."

Marchibroda thought keeping his decision quiet might affect Buffalo's preparations. However, Bills coach Marv Levy said in a teleconference Wednesday that his team would prepare for the Colts without thinking about the Colts' decision.

"The only quarterbacks I prepare for differently are John Elway, Steve Young, and Randall Cunningham, guys who are great scramblers," Levy said.

Harbaugh has come off the bench two straight weeks to take over for a struggling Erickson, producing dramatic touchdown drives that sent both games into overtime late in the fourth quarter.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 8 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, September 15, 1995

Minutewomen hit the road
Women's soccer and field hockey leave the friendly confines of UMass to face some of their season's most difficult matches (See Sports, page 8).

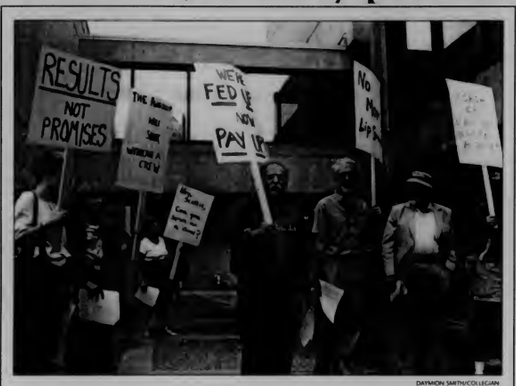
Cop-killer found guilty
In his third trial, Dorchester resident Sean Ellis was found guilty of murdering Boston police detective John Mulligan (See News, page 3).

Letters rocks at Pearl Street
Boston's Letters to Cleo impresses crowd with Melroe hit and other new tunes (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Expect it to be sunny with a high in the upper-60s today and Saturday. Things will cool down in the evenings with a low in the mid-40s. Chance of showers on Sunday with a high of 70.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 68 LOW: 40	HIGH: 68 LOW: 40	HIGH: 70 LOW: 45

Students, faculty protest financial cuts, contracts



DAYMION SMITH/COLLEGIAN
"Hey, hey, what do you say? Fund our contracts right away!"
Faculty members protest outside Herter Hall over the state of their contract negotiations.

■ Five–college students, supporters mourn "death"

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

In response to the proposed financial aid cuts led by the republican congress, students from the five-college area marched on Amherst Common yesterday in protest.

Dressed completely in black, the hundred or so supporters wanted Congress to be "held accountable" for their measures.

The rally was held in conjunction with similar ones on canpuses across the nation. The Amherst rally began with a funeral procession.

Amid tombstones marked, "Financial Aid, Died Sept. 20, 1995," "Education's" coffin was paraded along the parameters of the common. Obituaries were read for the slain Education, killed in an "attack perpetuated by the United States Government."

Booths distributing information on the bills being considered in Congress were set up along the edges of the common. Petitions against the cuts were also circulated for students to sign.

Vivian Lu, a junior at Mt. Holyoke College, was working one of the booths which offered the names, addresses and phone numbers of the senators that students may contact in order to tell them to vote against the financial aid cuts.

"I hope a lot of people will tell their representatives to support financial aid because a lot of students need it," Lu said.

Erica Sapp, a student organizer and member of the board of directors of United States Student Association (USSA), said that the objective of the rally is to inform students of what Congress is threatening to do to their education.

"We hope that the senators will realize that students are definitely opposed to what they're voting on next week, and that they will vote it down," Sapp said. "If not, Clinton will veto it."

Vanessa Johnson, a Hampshire College student and another organizer of the event, was impressed with the turnout and with the success of a rally formed in such a short time.

"I am committed to equal access to education," she said. "Pulling it together in four days proves that students are committed to this. It hits home for them."

Students attending the rally were happy to see that action was being taken against a program directly affecting them.

"I don't consider myself a politically active person," freshman Mt. Holyoke student Holly Dintzner said. "The colleges in this area are excellent. It's sad that the government doesn't want to put attention on the future of their country, which is education."

Cincinnati, Ohio native Kate Kiefer, also a freshman at Mt. Holyoke, depends on her financial aid package to attend school in Massachusetts.

"I couldn't afford school without the financial aid that I'm getting," Kiefer said. "That's why I'm here, specifically to find out what's happening."

Fellow classmate Johanna Stacy was skeptical about the government's intentions.

"I think it's crazy that they're putting so much money in defense and cutting education," Stacy said. "They're thinking short term goals rather than long term. The idea of the United States is to invest in the people."

Massachusetts politicians pushing for the students' cause and against the cuts were also represented at the rally. U.S. Rep. John Olver (D-First District) sent staff members to listen to the students' arguments. Olver visited UMass last Monday to discuss the status of education cuts in the House.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, (D-Mass.) could not attend the rally, but wrote a speech that was read by a Hampshire College student.

"Sen. Kennedy is definitely very supportive of our education and will do all he can to see it's a priority in the budget," Johnson said. "He's always been supportive of education."

Sarita Gupta, another organizer and speaker, preyed on the voting conscience of her audience.

She also pointed out that the government spends only 2% of their budget on education, and less than 1% on financial aid.

"In the budget pie, we aren't even a sliver," Gupta said.

"By the end of this rally, you will be empowered," Johnson said. "And we will move on and forward as a student movement."

■ Librarians, professors protest contracts' standstill

By Jonathon Liberty
Collegian Correspondent

Nearly 100 faculty members and librarians raged in protest outside of Herter Hall yesterday at 3:30 p.m., the starting time of the first Faculty Senate meeting of the year.

Demonstrators waved picket signs which bore such slogans as, "Hooker is gone, Scott next," "Hey Scottie, can you spare a dime?" and "Scott free! The way to be."

As the protest continued the faculty members chanted, "Hey! Hey! What do ya say, fund our contract right away!"

The group was protesting the stagnant state of their contract negotiations.

"We are protesting the shabby, shameful way in which [the Chancellor and the Trustees] and Governor's office treats the University faculty," history professor Robert F. Jones said.

Contract bargaining has been in progress for two years. The Faculty Senate/Board of Trustees and the Massachusetts Society of Professors, (MSP) had reached an agreement in which the professors would receive a 15 percent pay raise over three years.

The contract was ratified by the union in August of 1994. It was finalized by the signatures of the President and the Trustees in September 1994. The Weld-Celluci Administration rejected the pay package in January 1995.

For the past 13 months the MSP has said it feels that there has been insufficient action by Chancellor David K. Scott and the Board of Trustees in order to negotiate the contract.

MSP President Leo Richards stated that the faculty/librarians are enraged because they are tired of waiting for their negotiations to be finalized.

"It is demoralizing to work so hard and receive no rewards," mechanical engineering Professor Ian Grosse said.

Another protestor said that professors of equal qualifications at the University of Connecticut are making about $10,000 more than University of Massachusetts professors.

Several students seemed awestruck by the enthusiasm of the protestors, and some offered support by cheering the professors on.

Sophomore Suzanne Elliot said that she believes it is awful to see that professors are treated so badly at a time when education is so important.

The protest soon moved inside Herter Hall. The MSP members marched into Herter 227 where the 512th meeting of the Faculty Senate was taking place. As the meeting started, the protestors continued their chanting.

Despite the distraction, the meeting went along as scheduled. The Faculty Senate adhered to their agenda and the contract negotiations were not mentioned.

About one hour into the meeting many of the protesters left. As the faculty/librarians exited the meeting they said they were disheartened and

SHIN SUZUKI/COLLEGIAN
Five-college students hold a symbolic funeral for education to show they do not support possible plans to reduce financial aid.

AZT may not be best way to combat HIV

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The use of AZT as the first-line treatment for HIV infection may be re-evaluated as the result of a study that shows patients reduce risk of death from AIDS by up to 50 percent by using other drugs, researchers say.

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases announced Thursday that a drug called ddI reduced the rate of death by 50 percent among HIV patients when compared with the use of AZT alone over 147 weeks.

The conclusion came from a study of 2,500 HIV patients who were without symptoms of AIDS and were at an intermediate stage of the disease. The patients were divided into groups and given different combinations of the drugs. Researchers then compared the effects.

Dr. Scott Hammer of Harvard Medical School and New England Deaconess Hospital said that ddI alone, or combinations of ddI and AZT, or of a combination of AZT and another drug, ddC, were superior in all measures to AZT alone.

By using drugs other than AZT alone, he said, "we have shown that we can prolong survival."

AZT, manufactured by Glaxo-Wellcome Co., was the first anti-viral approved for treatment of HIV and continues to the be the recommended first treatment for the killer virus.

The other two drugs, ddI and ddC, were developed after AZT and are now in wide use, but they have generally been considered a second line of defense, used after the failure of AZT. Hammer said that may change.

"Based on this single study, it is likely that AZT will be reconsidered" as the first-line therapy, said Hammer. Bristol-Myers Squibb Inc. makes ddI and Hoffmann-La Roche Inc. makes ddC. These companies and Glaxo-Wellcome donated the drugs used in the study.

A survival advantage over AZT for ddI or a combinations of drugs was shown in an arm of the study that involved 1,400 patients who had HIV, but were without symptoms, and who had previously taken AZT. These patients, called the experienced group because of their AZT history, had CD4 T cell counts of 200 to 500 per cubic millimeter. CD4 cells are the primary target of HIV.

Hammer said patients in this group taking ddI alone experienced a death rate of 5 percent over 147 weeks. Patients taking AZT alone had a death rate of 10 percent. Those taking ddC and AZT had a death rate of 9 percent, while the rate was 6 percent for those taking a combination of ddI and AZT.

For patients who have never taken AZT, Hammer said, there was a trend both in survival and in slowing disease progression that favored ddI, a combination of ddI and AZT, or a combination of ddC and AZT when compared to the use of AZT alone.

Conclusions about relative effects of the drugs were based on clinical findings such as the drop in CD4 cell counts or the development of AIDS-related disease. In those cases, also, said Hammer, a combination of drugs or ddI alone showed a statistical advantage over AZT alone.

Dr. Anthony S. Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said the study shows for the first time that antiviral treatment "can reduce the risk of death in asymptomatic people with intermediate-stage HIV disease.

The study was supported by the NIAID. The complete findings are to be reported at the Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy meeting in San Francisco next week.

Patients in the study were enrolled at 52 locations.

Tennessee senator saves life of constituent in DC

By Diane Duston
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bill Frist (R-Tenn.) drew on his expertise as a heart surgeon yesterday and came to the rescue of a man who collapsed while visiting Congress.

The man, identified by Capitol Police as Graeme Sieber, 60, of Cleveland, Tenn., dropped to the floor from an apparent heart attack outside the office of Sen. John Chafee (R-R.I.) in the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

As Chafee staffer Patricia Parmer, a Girl Scout leader with cardiopulmonary resuscitation training, began working on the man, Chafee's secretary, Donna Davis, ran down the hall to Frist's office.

"Dr. Frist responded immediately," said a breathless Chafee, who went to the Senate floor to praise Frist and inform others of the emergency action.

"He really knew what he was doing and took complete charge," said Chafee. "And this gentleman, who was out — his heart truly had stopped to the best of their knowledge — revived because Dr. Frist responded so quickly."

Rescue workers who serve the Capitol soon appeared and took the man to the hospital, said Chafee.

He was in critical condition in the cardiac care unit of George Washington University Hospital later in the day, hospital spokesman Rich James said.

Unbeknownst to Frist, Sieber was with members of the National Association of Homes and Services for Children on their way to visit him and Tennessee's other senator, Fred Thompson, when he was stricken, aides to Thompson said.

Frist left for Tennessee soon after the incident and was not immediately available for comment, but his office

Turn to Frist, page 2

Bruins to open season at Mullins Center rink

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

It will be a night of firsts, as the team that christened the William D. Mullins Center ice in 1993, returns to open up its 1995-96 campaign.

The Boston Bruins will hold their Black and White game, an intrasquad scrimmage, at the Mullins Center tonight. The 1995 Black and White game was the first hockey game ever in the building. Due to an National Hockey League work stoppage, there was no Black and White game played in 1994.

The Bruins are predicted by many publications to be a contender for the Stanley Cup, generating considerable excitement in New England, and tonight's game will be their first public appearance of the season.

During the off-season, the Bruins added three high-profile players who are native to the Boston area. Forwards Kevin Stevens, Joe Mullen and Shawn McEachern will be playing their first games in the Bay State as members of the team.

Continuing the trend of unveilings, the organization will debut the slightly altered new jerseys at the game as well. Finally, former Bruin center Steve Kasper will be behind the bench as the new head coach tonight.

Portions of the proceeds will benefit the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association and the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Bruins president and general manager Harry Sinden said he was pleased that his team will have the opportunity to return to Amherst.

"We're looking forward to returning to the Mullins Center for this event," Sinden said. "It's a first-rate facility and it's important to us that our fans in Western Massachusetts have this opportunity to see our team.

"In addition to benefiting two fine organizations, I think we'll all have a lot of fun and see some competitive hockey."

In addition to the 7 p.m. game, there will be a media-only game at 1 p.m. for all rookies and free agents that are trying to crack the Bruins lineup.

In the later game most of the Boston regulars will see action, with the exception of a few players (most notably all-star center Adam Oates) who are rehabilitating from injuries. Some of the rookies from the 1 p.m. game will also take part.

Good seats are still available at Ticketmaster outlets and the Mullins Center box office for $15.50 and $10.50, with a $2 discount for children under 12.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Sept. 15

LBGA Dance — The first dance of the year, free, the Blue Wall, 9 p.m.–1 p.m.

Meeting — TimeOut Student Fellowship, games, contemporary worship, and speaker Elizabeth Bachrach–Tan on "Promises." Sponsored by the Alliance Christian Fellowship, for info call Mark at 253–0361 or Elizabeth at 253–7206, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Community — Pre–Shabbat Yoga, 549–1710, Hillel House, 4:30 p.m.

Community — The Shabbos Experience, a celebration of the Shabbos, food, prayer, songs, and stories, all welcome, 549–4094, Chabad House, 7 p.m.

Community — Shabbat services, dinner following service, $4 for students, $6.50 for non–students, 549–1710, Hillel House, 6 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, $1.75, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Film — Women's Center Movie Marathon, includes Thelma and Louise, free, Merrill, AC, 7:30 p.m.

Sports — Boston Bruins Black and White Game, intrasquad scrimmage, tickets $15.50 and $10.50, $2 off for children and UMass students, call Mullins Center Box Office at 545–3001, 7 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, by Euripides, directed by Sarah Sherman, FAC, 6 p.m.

Saturday Sept. 16

Community — Shabbos Morning Services, with traditional meal to follow, all welcome, 549–4094, 10 a.m.

Community — Torah Study, 549–1710, Hillel House, 10 a.m.

Community — Solar Observing, Amherst Town Common, 1 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Meeting — First meeting of the New Western Massachusetts Rainbow Coalition Chapter, activists from Western Mass. welcome to organize against the right wing's political agenda, Unitarian Society, 220 Main St., Northampton, 2–5 p.m.

Special Event — Celebration of the Divine Liturgy of St. John Chrysostan, Eastern Orthodox Tradition, officiated by Father Michael of St. George Cathedral, followed by brunch, for information call 585–3686, free, Chapin Chapel, AC, 10 a.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, by Euripides, directed by Sarah Sherman, Theatre Building, SC, 3–6 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 17

Community — Dance, with the music of the 60's, 70's, and 80's, $2, free with Hillel Activity Card, 549–1710, Hillel House, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, Campus Center Theater, AC, 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Music — Winds in Concert — the Massachusetts Wind Orchestra, Malcolm W. Rowell, director, works by Hidemith, Wilson, Sullivan, Downs, Leeman, and Fillmore, $ donation, John M. Greene Hall, SC, 3 p.m.

Theater — Auditions: Electra, directed by Sarah Sherman, Emily Dickinson Hall, HC, 3–6 p.m.

Notices

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256–8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1–Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co–op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co–operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC). Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or call 545–0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545–0137.

Special event — Ticket Sale: 21st Annual Multiband Pops, presented by UMass Department of Music and Dance. Mullins Center Box Office.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545–0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696–7752.

Volunteers Needed — The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee needs student volunteers to ring the bells in Old Chapel. Will teach and train anyone with reasonable musical ability. Call Ken Samonds at 545–1077 for more information.

Support Group — Rebecca Reid will lead a support group for single people over 30 Sunday nights, 7:30–9 p.m., low fee, single, divorced, widowed, all sexual orientations welcome.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256– 8482.

Yearbook — The Index Yearbook is looking for anyone interested in photography, writing, computer layout, and marketing to help put together an all–color yearbook, no experience necessary, paid editorships are still open, staff meetings every Monday at 7:30 at 304 Student Union.

■ Frist

continued from page 1

said he had checked with Sieber's doctor and learned the man was out of danger.

"All of us should have great respect and admiration for what Dr. Frist did," said Chafee. "Sometimes we get deeply involved with a billion [dollars] here and there... but there are other things that are very, very important around here."

Campus Police Log

Larceny

Sept. 13

An individual will be summoned to court for shoplifting in the Campus Center.

An individual reported his wallet had been stolen from Kennedy Residence Hall and that he has been notified his credit cards had been used.

An individual reported her furniture had been stolen from outside of her apartment in Lincoln Apartments.

There was a checkbook stolen from a bookbag in the room of a student in John Adams Residence Hall.

There were bicycles stolen from Thoreau and Moore Residence Halls.

There was a bicycle stolen on James Road.

Drug Law Offenses

Sept. 13

There was an odor of marijuana in Gorman, Thoreau and Brett Residence Halls.

Sept. 14

There was an odor of marijuana in Gorman, Cashin, Kennedy and John Adams Residence Halls.

There was a report of a group near the basketball court on Eastman Lane with a bong.

An employee found a pack of cigarettes in a woman's room in Marcus Residence Hall which contained marijuana cigarettes.

Accident — Leaving the Scene

Sept. 13

An individual reported his vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle while parked in Lot 12 on Forestry Way.

Sept. 14

A vehicle attempting to park struck a parked vehicle on Mather Dr.

Accident — Property Damage

Sept. 14

Two vehicles collided at the intersection while both were making a turn. There was property damage only, and no injuries.

Injured person

Sept. 13

An individual in Van Meter Residence Hall had an asthma attack and was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

A bicyclist who slipped on the wet pavement on Clark Hill Rd. was checked by an officer. There was no medical transport necessary.

An individual with an ankle injury in Mullins Lot on Commonwealth Avenue was taken to health services.

Let's get one thing straight...
The Collegian isn't.
Write for GLB Issues
Contact Wendy Darling, 113 Campus Center, 545–1749

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
BACKLIES
THE PRINCESS
TIE THAT BINDS*
DANGEROUS MINDS
TURNING POINT
HAMPSHIRE 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
MORTAL KOMBAT
A WALK IN THE CLOUDS
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S SENIOR TRIP
BABE
DESPERADO
SEPARATE LIVES
ANGUS
CLUELESS*

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties. The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS 30
No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS
interested in a CO-OP or INTERNSHIP this spring?
How about the Boston Globe?
The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service?
Boston's Hale and Dorr Law Firm?
IBM? MTV? GTE?
Or COKE of New York, Maybe?
Let the University Career Center help YOU get started!
"Welcome to the field Experience Sessions"
Begin September 18th
Call 545-2226 to sign up
NOW!!!

THE INDEX YEARBOOK
NEEDS
NEW STAFF FOR
PAID POSITIONS:
($$$$$$)
PHOTO, LAYOUT, COPY, & MARKETING
WORK FOR THE ONLY ALL-COLOR YEARBOOK IN NEW ENGLAND
COME TO
WEEKLY MEETINGS
Mondays 7:30pm
304 Student Union
the INDEX
FREE FOOD!!
PRIZES!!
WIN $$$!!
MEET PEOPLE!! or drop by anytime
or call anytime
545-0848

Defense grant given to UMass

Students visit hazardous waste sites through new program

By Amy M. Scott
Collegian Staff

Thanks to a federal grant, a University of Massachusetts organization offered a course this summer that gave field experience in hazardous waste engineering to 10 undergraduates from six colleges nationwide.

The U.S. Department of Defense granted UMass–Amherst the $1.3 million grant which resulted in the birth of the Environmental Technology Program Consortium (ETPC) — a group of 11 public, private and academic organizations from several states promoting environmental studies in the Fall of 1994. UMass was one of 16 universities nationwide to receive an environmental grant from the U.S. Department of Defense.

ETPC, which works out of the civil and environmental engineering department on campus, sponsored the 10–week summer course which trained the 10 students, three of whom were from UMass, to study environmental clean–up sites.

"I think it went pretty well," said Beth Barrett, associate director of ETPC. "[The students] were actually able to get some hands–on experience."

During the summer, the 10 students learned how to take samples from contaminated sites, analyze them in a laboratory and write summary reports on what the tests showed, Barrett said.

Each student visited one or more of three contamination sites in Massachusetts: Route 25 in Plymouth, where the Massachusetts Highway Department has treated the road with calcium magnesium acetate instead of road salt as a de– icing agent, because road salt would damage a local cranberry bog; an unnamed highway site, where gasoline and diesel fuels have leaked into the soil and ground water from underground storage tanks at a gas station, and might eventually reach a reservoir; and a historic gas station at now–closed Fort Devens in Ayer, where a tank of waste lubricating oil has tainted the sandy soil and might affect future activities at the site, which was bought by civilian developers.

Of the three sites, only the Plymouth site is not classified as a hazardous waste site. Students who worked on hazardous waste sites took a mandatory 40 hours of training on how to protect themselves on these sites.

Five UMass engineering professors and several graduate students served as teachers and mentors to the 10 undergraduates. Dr. David W. Ostendorf, associate professor of civil and environmental engineering, supervised the class_ activities. According to Ostendorf, who said his department got heavily involved with contamination field studies in 1988, the class_ research revealed nothing alarming — bacteria are breaking the contaminants down naturally.

"The program is a training program, so basically we wanted to take things that we pretty much knew already and teach the technology to the trainees," Ostendorf said. "We've been there before; We've sampled before. Our task is to go around and document that [a natural cleanup process] is in fact happening and the rate at which it's happening."

Bacteria in the tainted soil and ground water eat hydrocarbons in the presence of oxygen and convert them to carbon dioxide and water vapor, rendering the contaminants harmless, he explained.

The 10 undergraduate students involved, who attended two–year schools as well as four–year schools, had diverse backgrounds spanning from civil engineering to electrical engineering to computer science. In addition to the three UMass students, two were from Springfield Technical Community College, two from Morgan State University in Maryland, and one apiece from Case Western Reserve University in Ohio, Holyoke Community College and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York.

Travis Mitchell, who received his bachelors degree in civil engineering last spring, was one of the three UMass undergraduates in the summer course. This year, Mitchell will begin working toward a masters in environmental geotechnology at UMass.

"[Students in the summer class] each had taken different courses and are at all different levels of education. We learned from each other," Mitchell said.

Mitchell worked on both of the highway sites this summer. According to him, the undergraduates visited the sites while ground samples were taken with a drill rig (a large machine which is owned by a sub–contractor), took the samples back to the lab to be analyzed, and determined the rate at which bacteria are processing the contaminants. The Massachusetts Highway Department uses the reports written by the students to determine if the contaminants are breaking down at a satisfactory rate.

Shawn Kelley, who is also pursuing a masters in environmental geotechnology at UMass, served as a mentor for the undergraduates this summer.

"It being the first year of the program, there_s definitely room for improvement," he said. "Overall, I think the program was a success."

The grant was designed to divert U.S. Defense revenue to post–Cold–War concerns such as environmental protection, said Barrett. Besides striving to train students between 16– and 25–years–old in environmental engineering, she said, ETPC also offers scholarships and retraining for engineers who lost their jobs because of federal defense cutbacks.

Three of the 10 undergraduates who took the course in the summer have continued their environmental studies this fall, Barrett said, including one UMass student.

"Hazardous waste engineering, and environmental protection in general, are definitely emerging fields, and the long–term prospects for jobs look very good," Barrett said.

Dorchester man convicted in murder

By Nancy Rabinowitz
Associated Press

BOSTON — A man accused of killing a Boston police detective was convicted Thursday following his third trial.

Jurors deliberated for about five hours before returning a guilty verdict against Sean Ellis, 20. Ellis was convicted on first-degree murder, armed robbery and firearms charges in connection with the killing of Detective John J. Mulligan.

Ellis was sentenced to life in prison without parole by Suffolk Superior Court Judge James D. McDaniel.

Suffolk County District Attorney Ralph C. Martin's strong emotions were evident following the guilty verdict.

"You try so hard on behalf of the families. Over the course of two years, you develop an empathy for what the families go through," Martin said.

"It tests your resolve, it tests your faith, it tests your strength and endurance. While people are looking to the other side of the post for what's wrong with the court system I think we have something to be proud of today," Martin said.

Norman Zalkind, Ellis' attorney, expressed dismay over the verdict and said an appeal is planned.

"We were unhappily surprised. We thought this was a good jury but obviously they were good for the prosecution," Zalkind said.

"They put in less evidence this time, so maybe some of their evidence was tainted."

None of Ellis' relatives were in the courtroom for the verdict, although Zalkind said they were on hand throughout the trial.

"They have other children. They were very support ive of him," Zalkind said.

Mulligan's brother expressed relief that the long ordeal seems to be over.

"We're pleased obviously with the outcome. This is an example of why my brother believed in the system — it works for everyone. My brother would be proud of what was done on his behalf," Richard Mulligan said.

Mulligan was working a paid detail outside a Roslindale drug store in the early morning hours of Sept. 26, 1993, when he was shot five times in the face with a small-caliber handgun.

"I had a promise on the morning my brother was murdered there would be justice for John," Mulligan said. "This is a nice present for John. He would be 35 in a week or so."

WRITE FOR DEVELOPING NATIONS!
CONTACT SYED MOHAMMED ALI-RAZA
113 CAMPUS CENTER
545-1851

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK 545-3500

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 1pm–5pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.15/hr with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday. (413) 586-8535.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer
Abt Associates Inc

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst • 256-0080

Emergency Medical Training
by Human Services Training Consultants, Inc.
Classes start September 18, 1995
Call UMass, Continuing Education at 545-0474

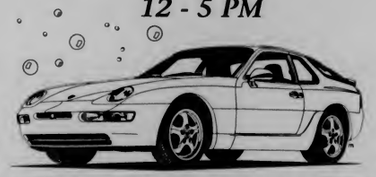
We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
DINNER SPECIALS
Save up to 30% OFF
Complete Dinners with your choice of Soup • Appetizer, Entree • Dessert
All For One Great Low Price!

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

How do we lug thee?

ZANA
Amherst
Williamsburg
Brattleboro

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

CAR WASH
Sponsored by the Greek Area
Saturday Sept. 16th
12 - 5 PM


Located Behind 375, 387, 389 & 395 N. Pleasant St.
Proceeds to Benefit the Sigma Alpha Mu Memorial Fund

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog • 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Position Vacant Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Fleming Sports Editor
Position Vacant Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1916 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Nazi wins war of supremacy

Want to make a quick $3.1 million? Become a Nazi and throw your wife and kid in front of a federal agent's gun.

The Senate is investigating an incident that occurred at Ruby Ridge, Idaho in August 1992. After repeated run-ins with white separatist Randolph Weaver, federal marshals surrounded his secluded cabin. Weaver had stockpiled weapons, some of them illegal; he had also sold guns illegally. Hiding from the authorities, Weaver and his family had not left the cabin in 18 months; the government was then determined to forcibly arrest the felon.

On Aug. 21, 1992, Weaver's dog startled the agents and a shootout erupted. Samuel Weaver, 14, was killed, as was Deputy Marshal William Degan.

Peter Orvetti

The FBI joined the crisis; its bumbling entry led to the accidental shooting of Vicki Weaver, Randy's wife, who was also a white separatist.

The feds screwed up big. There's no question about that. Three people who did not commit crimes — Sammy and Vicki Weaver and Bill Degan — died; Randy Weaver himself served just four months in prison. But the Senate ignores a larger issue.

The Senate's sideshow is being run by Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Penn.), who is best known for creating the "magic bullet" theory of the JFK assassination and for his harsh and outright untrue attacks on Professor Anita Hill in 1991. Specter is going for the incompetence three-peat with Ruby Ridge. The Senator is such a renowned statesman that his presidential campaign is scoring a whopping three percent in the polls; Specter figures that a bit of anti-government grandstanding, live on CNN and C-SPAN, couldn't hurt.

Ruby Ridge can't hurt Specter, but it might hurt the rest of us. What does it say about Americans that so many of us have rallied around this issue? Education funds are being slashed, welfare and affirmative action are being reworked, but what are angry citizens fighting for? The defense of a Nazi who made his money breaking the law.

The irony of Ruby Ridge is that Weaver is part of a movement that is preparing to fight a racially divided civil war. That's what all those guns are for. But when someone on his side of the battlefield gets hit, does he shoot back? Do his comrades take Boise? No. Weaver sues for redress from a government he doesn't even recognize.

Weaver's ilk would see the majority of the population of the world either subjugated or slaughtered, as a matter of policy. Separatists have killed many people, sometimes beating victims to death. But, Randy Weaver would say, Vicki and Samuel were different! They were white!

The Weavers did not just want to "separate" themselves from other races or from the government. They were part of the white supremacy movement. They had ties to the Aryan Nations. And, during the siege at Ruby Ridge, a band of skinheads, armed with illegal weapons, marched toward the cabin to follow Weaver in declaring the start of the race war. (The federal agents held them back.)

Weaver is entitled to his views, as are the skinheads and all the rest; the Constitution guarantees that. Weaver did break the law by stockpiling arms. Still, what happened in Ruby Ridge in Aug. 1992 was unnecessary and wrong, and merits an open and honest exploration. The most incensing part of the Weaver case is his award of $3.1 million in damages from the government.

Weaver had intended to sue for $200 million; lawyers say he would have won it. Still, even $3.1 million is disturbing. The full tax load of over a thousand people is going right into Weaver's pocket.

Weaver had the luxury of being able to sue because his family was assaulted by the government. But can Bill Degan's family sue? Can the widow of a street cop sue the street thug who put a hole through his head? How about the parents of an eight-year-old killed in a drive-by shooting? Or the mother of a Serb soldier killed by NATO? No, of course not. When you're in a fight, and bullets are fired, liability stops. None of these people can sue for redress. If anything, maybe Ruby Ridge will show us that we need to keep tighter controls on our weaponry.

Until then, you can sleep well at night, knowing that your tax dollars are at work, making a Nazi richer than you'll ever be.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

France's president causes outcry

By framing himself as the new Charles de Gaulle, newly- elected French President Jacques Chirac has perhaps shed some light on his own indomitable persistence in conducting nuclear tests in the South Pacific. Although debate flared immediately following the decision in June, last week's detonation — the first of a possible eight — has prompted an enormous international outcry.

Mark Mitchell

De Gaulle, head of the French resistance during World War II and later president of France, has recently been portrayed as a dictatorial leader who attempted to consolidate the presidential power to the point of a monarchy. By flying in the face of peaceful convention, Chirac has demonstrated his willingness to lead the country in aggressive policy similar to that of de Gaulle. His actions bear precious little resemblance to France's more recent role in the international community as a stable, conservative superpower.

President Chirac, in conducting these nuclear tests, may well have initially sought to resurrect his country's ailing reputation by creating a diplomatic stir. If so, he drastically underestimated the international public's response. Whether a military necessity or not, recent non-proliferation treaties indicate a trend toward the reduction of nuclear weapons with an eye toward extinction, while France's testing is contrarily indicative of escalation. By proclaiming his country's status as a superpower through these tests, Chirac has simultaneously declared his lack of faith in those treaties.

Quite frankly, these tests are a sham. They serve, at best, as a political tool to remind the world of France's virility (and that it is flagrantly manipulative of small Pacific Island economic dependencies). In light of his country's stagnant economy and rising unemployment, Chirac has resorted to transparent political schemes to both boost his country's international reputation and silence criticism at home.

But what about French Polynesia in all of this? Whose islands are going to be contaminated for Chirac's political schemes? I think the general rule ought to be: anything you wouldn't do in your own yard, don't do in someone else's. Sounds reasonable anyway.

Possibly the only reason the French public has been so complacent in protesting the tests is the state of emergency they are under. Under constant threat of terrorist bombings, security throughout the country has been tightened and public concern is distracted. Nevertheless, the French, increasingly conscious of environmental issues in recent years, have been noticeably quiet relative to the vehement condemnations from around the world, especially in Tahiti. (However, if France sends over many more riot police to enforce the "majority" opinion that the tests are a dandy idea, we certainly won't be seeing too many more articles on Tahitian protests in the New York Times.)

In the presidential race leading up to Chirac's election, the French public resoundingly indicated they wanted a drastic change and, boy, have they gotten it.

For an example of the diplomatic absurdity which has arisen in the past week, it would seem appropriate to look at the closest and most historically concerned country: Japan. What has shocked me most in recent days has been Chirac's intentional estrangement of Japan through several malicious comments. But considering Japan is perceived by most Europeans to be the most dangerous economic adversary, along with the United States, perhaps I needn't be too surprised.

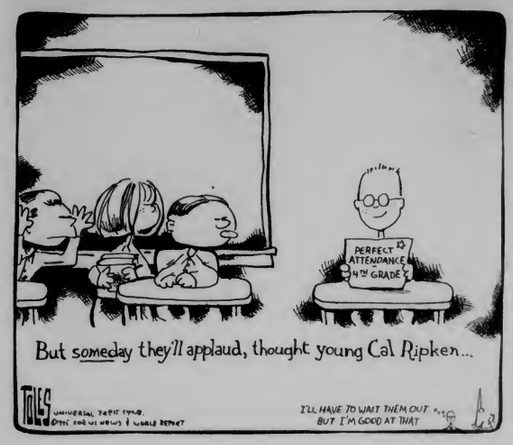
Considering the first test was conducted only one month after the 50th Anniversary of the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, one would think that some understanding on Chirac's part would be in order. Last Friday, though, a Japanese cabinet minister was publicly criticized for attending a protest in French Polynesia. (The mayor of Hiroshima spoke out as well, calling the testing, "a betrayal of mankind.") Chirac backed up the criticism, made by one of his foreign ministers, by saying he had no intention of visiting Japan any time soon; sounds punitive to me. Although Japan was the enemy in the past, that does not necessitate continued mistreatment now that they are allies.

Although France needs to reverse its downward spiral in the world economy, I suspect it would be easier to achieve that goal by motivating their economy internally. Threats such as this, stink of protectionism and other manifestations of paranoia. This was not what the French public asked for when they sought "drastic" action — not even remotely. Jingoist doctrine is incredibly shortsighted, as France will soon find out if Chirac insists upon such a course.

With the potential for seven more tests, each about three weeks apart according to the scientists in charge, President Chirac can expect a long, drawn-out fight on this issue. Furthermore, if the threat of terrorism within France should ever subside, Chirac will have to cope with an ever- increasing amount of resistance from his own people as well as from abroad.

Mark Mitchell is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial



PERFECT ATTENDANCE
4TH GRADE
But someday they'll applaud, thought young Cal Ripken...
TOILS
I'LL HAVE TO WAIT THEM OUT BUT I'M GOOD AT THAT

The price of environmental quality

Erin Barnes

The human and natural environments are mutually associated in that each needs the other for survival.

Often times, this relationship results in human comforts secured at the expense of the community and its surroundings. The practice of use and abuse may continue to the point where we will be responsible for our own sustainability without the assistance of Mother Earth, upon which we have historically relied. This ecological paradigm, though mutually associated, includes unfortunate trade-offs between environmental quality and human benefits or comforts, such as employment, private property rights and the economy.

A recent article appeared in the Christian Science Monitor which illustrates the difficult questions underlying the protection of the environment and a community's financial well-being. One would think the goals of a healthy environment and a sustainable economy could go hand in hand, when, often times, the two objectives could not be more divisive.

The article discussed how the indigenous people of Ecuador have waged an international legal battle against a prominent U.S. oil company. The $1.5 billion class-action lawsuit pending against Texaco was filed on behalf of the 30,000 Indians and colonists of the Amazon rain forest who claim the company acted with "callous disrespect for the health, well-being and safety of the plaintiffs."

In addition, the lawsuit states that "large-scale disposal of inadequately treated hazardous wastes and the destruction of tropical rain forest habitats caused harm to indigenous peoples and to their property." The San Francisco-based Rain Forest Action Network maintains that Texaco has spilled some 17 million gallons of crude oil into the Oriente, or Eastern Ecuadoran environment.

Maria Aguinda, a plaintiff in the suit, says water contaminated by nearby oil wells has caused her to have stomach and skin disorders, as well as losing scores of the family's livestock. Aguinda and others, who cannot even speak their nation's native language, are now relying on a court thousands of miles away to ensure them a better way of life.

Given the devastating health problems experienced by the indigenous people, a better way of life through public policy or court decision-making should not be far. However, a trade-off exists, giving rise to an important economic perspective that cannot be overlooked, even by those who filed the lawsuit. Oil is Ecuador's lifeblood, a $1 billion-a- year industry that represents 50 percent of the nation's export earnings and 62 percent of its fiscal budget. Economists say oil is the nation's best chance of paying off a $12.6 billion foreign debt.

In the meantime, as lawyers for both sides argue in the courtroom, Maria Aguinda remains hopeful, envisioning a settlement with a simple outcome such as clean water for she and her family to consume.

Unfortunately, the battle between environmental quality and economist interest is not merely international in scope, as similar trade-offs occur much closer to home. I spent my summer working with the Regional Office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency assisting a community in Rhode Island in protecting their ground water and drinking water resources from contamination, including that from local heating oil distributors.

I was afforded the opportunity to learn first-hand how community perceives environmental interests and more importantly, the community's willingness to pay for such protection. Though our goals emphasized education over enforcement, it was difficult to escape the regulatory shadow under which government inevitably finds itself.

Most business and industries inherently fear regulation, local government activities, or local interest committees and organizations. Even though it is important to involve businesses in both non-regulatory and regulatory related activities as it fosters needed dialogue on issues and concerns, and demonstrates an interest in their role in the community, convincing businesses of their role is a challenge, especially when money is involved.

These trade-offs will not disappear as long as we pit economic and environmental interests against one another. Sadly, this issue is further aggravated by the fact it is difficult to place a price on environmental quality such as clean air and clean water.

In Ecuador and closer to home, we must elect to give the environment a voice and place it on equal footing with our business and economic interests, or we will regret a thousand times over.

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Facts incorrect in book review

To the Editor:

Hussein Ibish's insulting attack — in the guise of a book review — on Professor Michael Klare of Hampshire College, and on the Five College Peace and World Security Studies Program he directs, in the Sept. 6 Collegian was full of distortions. Its publication was an embarrassment — less to Klare than to Ibish and the Collegian.

Ibish implies the program is a stooge for the Pentagon and its militaristic policies. For example, he writes that "Klare [and presumably PAWSS too] never challenges the basic assumptions underlying American imperialism."

In actual fact, the PAWSS Program since its inception in the early '80s has nearly always been critical of U.S. arms policies, and it has frequently sponsored critical presentations or symposia on U.S. foreign policy. I suggest the Collegian check Ibish's facts before accepting any further contributions from him.

George Levinger
Professor of Psychology, Emeritus

Students need to speak out

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Matthew Wurtzel's editorial in the Sept. 13th issue, titled "Policy keeps students locked in." In his article, he expressed a desire to change the University policy requiring undergraduates to live on campus for their first two years as UMass. I would like to address our ability to change University policies.

According to the Wellman Document of the Board of Trustees, the Student Government Association Senate is empowered to make formal recommendations to the University administration to change UMass policies.

The Wellman process works as follows. First, you need to get a motion passed in the Senate (and accordingly become an Act) to make such a change in University policy. Second, the Speaker of the Senate submits the Act of the Senate to the Chancellor for consideration. If the Chancellor approves the change, the motion is sent to the University President for approval. If approved, it is sent on to the Board of Trustees, who have the final say on all University policies. If no action is taken by the Chancellor or University President within 70 days of receipt, the Act is automatically forwarded to the Board of Trustees for consideration. In other words, the student voice cannot be ignored.

This past year was the first time that this Wellman process was in place for students to take advantage of, but due to the high turnover of Senators last year, it was not utilized often enough.

So I say to Matthew Wurtzel, or to any student who is interested in changing University policies, to please contact the SGA, the Senator(s) that represent you or become a Senator yourself. Nomination sheets are available in 424 Student Union and need to be in by next Monday at 5 p.m., with the elections being held next Wednesday.

The student voice is only as strong as the collective power of students who choose to express and act upon their opinions. I hop to hear from other concerned students like Matthew Wurtzel during the course of this year, to make this University a better place for us all.

Dan Castellano
Speaker of the Senate
SGA

Arts & Living

Iron Horse to host folk legend Richie Havens

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

As an alumnus of several of the big festivals of the 1960's, including Woodstock, Monterey and the Isle of Wright, Richie Havens has seen his share of fame and attention.

He is one of the most significant of the "protest" artists alive today. In the '60s he was seen at the forefront of the anti-war campaign as his song "Freedom" became synonymous with the peace movement.

Havens' show at Woodstock remains one of the most well known performances in the rock 'n' roll era. Opening up the massive three day festival, he held the crowd in awe for almost three hours. The Woodstock documentary shows just a brief portion of his most celebrated set.

Over 25 years later Havens is still an artist to be reckoned with. Although now out of the public eye, he has continued his career as a successful folk singer. This Sunday he will perform solo at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

His most recent album, entitled Cuts To The Chase, continues Havens' success as a folk singer with a message, as he performs his own material as well as songs by Bob Dylan and Sting.

When discussing the album title, Havens said, "Cuts To The Chase means that there's something very up-front, direct, and universal about each of these songs."

Richie Havens performs two shows at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton at 7:00 and 10:00 p.m. on Sunday night. Tickets are $17.50 advance and are available at the Northampton Box Office.

~ REVIEW ~

Letters shows they're not one-hit wonders

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

LETTERS TO CLEO
Pearl Street
September 13, 1995

Letters to Cleo returned to Pearl Street this Wednesday night.

COURTESY AMIE LASS

The status of pop has been fairly consistent throughout the years. Whether trends came and went within a blink of an eye or stayed and made lasting impressions, a good pop song was a good pop song. The same pertains today as Boston's own Letters to Cleo proved Wednesday night at Pearl Street.

Playing in support of their latest record, Wholesale Meats and Fish (Giant), Letters to Cleo, though looking somewhat road weary, turned in a strong and down to earth performance that supplied much more energy than any of their recorded works.

Vocalist Kay Hanley seemed to be the focal point of the band. With an air of nonchalance and schoolgirl innocence, Hanley took charge from the get-go, going through rockers like "Demon Rock," "Awake" and "Fast Way" to beautiful ballads ("Laudanum"). Her vocals were nothing short of stunning, giving a crystal clear representation of her capabilities.

Her bandmates fared just as well offering a tight set in which sonic passages never lost any sense of melody. Stacy Jones' powerful drumming was the main source of energy while Michael Eisenstein's rock guitar mannerisms gave even more reason to pogo around.

Things didn't get fully rolling until the second half, started by a rousing rendition of "Here and Now," the band's breakthrough single from the hit Fox TV series "Melrose Place." Creating a bond of familiarity with the audience, the band went on to finish the majority of Wholesale Meats and feature some tracks from their excellent debut, Aurora Gory Alice.

"Pizza Cutter" and "Little Rosa" yielded strong receptions in all its pop sweetness while "I See," the song many consider the band's first real breakthrough, was an added treat to die-hard fans.

It was quite obvious that the majority of the crowd were there on the basis of "Here and Now," but Letters to Cleo's delivery of bouncing, pop songs was infectious enough to get feet tapping and the good times rolling. Even if Letters to Cleo were to be regulated to the depths of being a one-hit wonder by the mainstream world of music, those that experienced them last Wednesday know it won't matter.

Chicago's Fig Dish opened the show with a somewhat cliched brand of alternative rock that failed to create any sort of impression other than that. Complete with power chord rhythms, undecipherable vocals and weirdo personas, the band had enough energy to pull them through, but not enough strong material to capitalize.

Collegian Graphics
Up all night to produce New England's BEST college daily

Tired of just glimpsing the world of Entertainment through your TV screen? Then come write for Arts & Living.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139
STUDENT SPECIAL
4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 No. Amherst
256 0080

Poster Give-Away Day
Monday, September 18 from 11am 4pm
Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of illustrated posters from past exhibitions.
Great Dorm Decor!
While Supplies Last

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains Incense
Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Area Rugs
Socks Leather Sale
Skirts
Baskets
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri 9PM
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

Introductory Special!

WITH THIS AD
$5.00 OFF with student I.D.
Professional Consultation and Style Haircut with Stacey DiCarlo
Hurry! Exp. 10/28/95
Styles by Deborah
We Feature Complete Professional Hair Care • Wolff Tanning • Nail Care • Luxury Facials Pedicures • Body Waxing • Lash & Brow Tinting
65 University Drive
Amherst, 549-5610

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. Thru Sept. 21/Separate Tickets
At 7:30 Daily Only!
"THE BEST MYSTERY THRILLER OF THE YEAR. Vast, Tense And Terrific!" Jack Mathews, New York Newsday
THE USUAL SUSPECTS
R
PolyGram GRAMERCY
At 9:30 Only! ISAAC MIZRAHI
Takes You Down The Runway Of Fashion, Giving Us
The Best Party Movie Of The Year!
"HILARIOUS! A TREAT!" Rex Reed, New York Observer
"THE SUMMER'S FUNNIEST MOVIE!" Peter Travers, Rolling Stone
LINDA EVANGELISTA NAOMI CAMPBELL CINDY CRAWFORD KATE MOSS ISAAC MIZRAHI
UNZIPPED
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinemagic 584-8435

1177 N. Pleasant Street
North Amherst (3 minutes from UMASS)
549-4555
muddy duck café
NOW OPEN Dinner & Cafe Menu:
Delicious Rotisserie
CHICKEN, DUCK, and TURKEY
...vegetarian to grilled fish to New York Strip...
Delightfully Affordable
Take Out Available
Wednesday, Thursday & Sunday 5-9 PM
Friday & Saturday 5-10 PM
BRUNCH Saturday & Sunday 10 AM - 2 PM
• Fine Selection of Wines, Beer, Microbrews & Frosted Mugs •
Enjoy a Free Draft Beer with UMASS I.D. Until the end of September

Latin American Cultural Center

Prizes:
1st Place: $125.00
2nd Place: $75.00
3rd Place: $50.00
For more information please contact:
Mercedez Betanco @ 549-8574
Katia Venator @ 546-6171
1st Annual Coed Volleyball Tournament
When: Saturday & Sunday @ 11:00 am
Where: Northeast Volleyball Courts
Registration Fee: $3.00 per player
Registration: Thursday & Friday @ Campus Center Concourse: Saturday @ location (10:00 am)

White returns to SF with Pats

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Reggie White and his San Diego Charger teammates were beaten and bewildered when they trudged into their locker room at halftime of last season's Super Bowl.

The San Francisco 49ers had scored on the third play of the game. They already had a 28-10 lead. They ended up winning very easily, 49-26.

"If halftime is 20 minutes long, [so] babies usually spend five to seven minutes talking about what we have to do and then the rest about how to execute it," White said.

"They didn't come to us till it was almost time to go out [for the second half]. I guess they were just really confused about what [the 49ers] were doing."

White plays the 49ers again Sunday, this time as the starting nose tackle for the New England Patriots. He was a backup last season, playing in 11 regular-season games but not in the Super Bowl.

The 49ers are off to a 2-0 start, while the Patriots have struggled offensively in splitting their two games.

Yet White thinks the Patriots have a chance even though they'll be on the road against Steve Young, Jerry Rice and a strong defense that already has scored on two interceptions.

"They're not unbeatable," White said. "You can put North Carolina A&T vs. Florida State and North Carolina A&T (his alma mater) might win. You never know."

White, who has accomplished far less than his namesake with the Green Bay Packers, was signed as a free agent as the Patriots tried to beef up their average-sized defensive line.

The team lists him at 315 pounds, although he was considerably larger when he joined his new team.

"This guy's a man. This guy is somebody that's going to have to be reckoned with," Patriots coach Bill Parcells said. "He's got good athletic ability. He's in pretty good condition now. That's what kept him from being a good player in the past, his physical stamina and endurance and his weight problem. Those things are not factors at this moment."

White won the nose tackle job in training camp, replacing Tim Goad who is starting for Cleveland after the Patriots decided they wanted a bigger player at that position.

White played well in the opening 17-14 win over the Browns but struggled in the first half last Sunday as Miami built a 17-3 lead in its 20-3 victory. He felt he improved in the second half. But now he has to face the 49ers.

Women's X–C tries to outrun Huskies

By Jason Wall
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's cross country team will try to extend its unbeaten streak to five this weekend when they travel to Orono, Maine to face off against Maine and Connecticut.

The Minutewomen opened up their season last weekend with victories over Brown, New Hampshire and Maine, to put their record at 3-0.

The Minutewomen will rely heavily on senior Jen Waeger, juniors Kristen Donaldson and Katie Greenia, and sophomore Christy Martin. They are four of the 15 returning runners.

UMass coach Julie LaFreniere has been very pleased with the way her team has been running, and one of the major reasons for that is the dedication of her runners in the off– season.

Sophomore Rebecca Donaghue is one of the runners who has shown major signs of improvement.

"Rebecca is in amazing shape," LaFreniere said. "She is very competitive and focused. She did what she was supposed to all summer."

LaFreniere hoped that her team would not take it easy this summer, and they did not let her down. It seems her biggest success story has been Donaghue.

"Rebecca is here because she works very hard. She's tough as nails. She should be up at the front [of the pack]. It would surprise me if she wasn't. As for this weekend's meet against Maine and UConn, Maine should not be a problem. We beat them easily [last weekend]."

LaFreniere is worried most about UConn, as Maine has only one strong runner.

"What will determine a win against UConn is the three, four, and five runners on both teams. If [we] can run in a tight pack, [we] can win."

Another runner who LaFreniere feels could be an asset to the team, is Danielle Wood, who is consistent.

The Minutewomen have had their share of bad news injury–wise. Sometimes hard work can lead to injuries, which is true for freshman Suzy Hitscherich, who was running well, but now has tonsillitis.

Melissa Langevin, last year's top runner, will redshirt this year due to injury. Although her absence will be felt, the team has taken a head–on approach to the season. Many of the other runners will be looking to step up and fill the gap left by Langevin. Runners like Martin, Greenia, and Donaldson who thus far have clearly not relied on others to bring home the win.

LaFreniere has much confidence in her runners from both the physical and mental aspects.

Men's Cross–Country season opens with questions

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

As the sun is fired to start the [illegible] cross country season, [illegible] Ken O'Brien thought he would [illegible] some answers than questions.

"I don't think we would have this [illegible] at the start of the [illegible]," said. "I will feel a [illegible] we know what every[illegible]."

[illegible] opens in earnest on [illegible] they will run against [illegible] Boston, Mass. Boston College, Brown, Delaware, Iona, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire and Northeastern will all run Saturday.

It seems the strength of competition can only help the Minutemen's cause in terms of reaching their goal: Atlantic 10 Champions.

"If we come out of the weekend beating half of the teams we compete against, I have to be pleased considering how we are starting the season," he said.

Starting the season with solid leaders will not be one of the teams problems. Juniors Matt Behl and Mike Macieko have been working very hard over the summer and are in excellent shape.

The question remains as to who will be the three, four and five runners for the team.

"There are a couple kids who appear right now to be the ones who will be backing Behl and Macieko up," O'Brien said. "Mark Buffone, Timmy Boulard, Ryan Carrara and Pat Murphy could all contribute. John Way is also someone I would put in that category."

"I felt that with everyone returning from last year's squad we would be in a lot better shape, but injuries have hurt that," O'Brien said. "I wish I could be more enthusiastic then I am right now."

It does not appear that there will be immediate help coming from any newcomers to the squad as the freshmen who have joined the team will take some time to develop into collegiate runners.

"It's very different running in college than it is in high school," O'Brien said. "When they ran in high school it was only a three wild race, now the distance is doubling on them."

Tired of sitting around watching reruns of "Dear John?"

Then get off the couch and get down to the UMass Daily Collegian. We are always looking for writers at all of our desks. We are located in the campus center basement, opposite the ATMs.

Collegian Classifieds They Work!
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.

Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials may be used. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.

Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS

Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.

Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.

Last names may not be used in personals.

The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may not be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.

All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the author printing the ads filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be printed on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.

The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Help Wanted
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Motorcycles
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Ready to play bridge [illegible]

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The sisters of Sigma Kappa [illegible]

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau [illegible]

Attention all University women [illegible]

Gamma Upsilon Eta North [illegible]

UMass Women's Ice Hockey [illegible]

AUTO FOR SALE

Mazda 626, 1991 [illegible]

Mercury Marquise 1984 70K miles Runs excellent Power windows & doors $500 or B.O. Call Jul 549-3991

1985 gm 4 spd red Mitsubishi Mirage 89,00 miles, runs fine $400 or B.O 584-4156

87 Dodge pickup, RAMSO power steering, long bed, CAP 118K $1918 (413)772-1918

1987 Honda Wagon 5 spd AC cassette tape/cd changer serviced single owner 2950 253-4012

Students! 1979 VW Rabbit for sale Excellent shape, runs well, great for students 150,000 miles Fun car!!! $1000.00 or BO Jenn @ 413 774-7024

'92 Red Jeep Wrangler 5 speed soft top 17,000 CD player, Alarm, $12 000 or best offer 549-0611

86 Subaru GL Hatchback 5 speed Runs well 1 owner $1700 253-9795

Car for sale '91 Hyundai 41,500 mileage, air conditioning, radio cassette, automatic $7800 call 256-1785

BOXING LESSONS

With retired pro Dalla Rimpus 549-1757

BUILD YOUR RESUME

Come to the UMree Credit Union Opening for Spring 1996 at 6:30 pm to build your resume! Looking for new tellers for fall 1995! Stop by call Christine at 545-7800

DEADHEAD SKIERS!

195cm Elin "Dark Star" Original Dead skis for sale. Brand new! Paid $440.00 but will accept B/O for these collector's items KEEP JERRY ALIVE!! John @ 413 774-7024 (not long distance)

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling" "Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking for." "What are you trying to tell me?" "Nirvanize, trust, intellectual enlightenment..." "Frank down the hall?" "No! Alliance Christian Fellowship committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit-filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info, Mark or Elizabeth 253-7706

ENTERTAINMENT

Having Halloween bash on 10/27 or 10/28!! Got a huge house? Want a spooky find? You need yelP! and y.P! needs you! call Jack at 367-9638

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery, 253-9742

Furnished/Unfurnished apartments for rent Sunderland, on bus route 2 bedroom townhouses Call ITD at 256-1925 Available immediately.

FOR SALE

Brother word processor 2200 includes manual, printwheel, disk has framing and spreadsheets, 3 years old $250 call Justin 549-4484

Three darm-rize bridges, two small ones, one medium one $25-50 call Luke 549-4573

Yeshiba 20" Sierra w/remote 3yr old ask for $150 call 549-8563

Macintech LCI w/14" monitor, 20megs Ram Exc Condition $950 or offer Call 498-5733

Matching sofa chair ottamen $100, Maytag washer $50 549-1777

Tandy 1000SL Computer with Mon & Soft MS DOS com; Asking 300 or BO call 6-0540

Two adorable birds that need good home! If interested please call 256-6765

GREEN

22 hours. 42 dooyays. 1000 acres Totally legal Outdoor marstage Two big play tents Skyward lasers Massive lighting displays Concessions Smart Bars Clothing and record store banaars Life-size Stone Henge replica Begins 4 p.m. September 23 and ends 2 p.m September 24 A Primary/Dhm Production 18+ Call Darb @ 546 0833

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Jay Jay Love Erkka, Joyce and Gwen

HELP WANTED

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $7000s/month World Travel Seasonal & Full time positions No exp necessary For info call 1-206 634 0468 Ext C500

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N 50011

Jobs for the environment Campaign with MassPirg to save our polluted rivers Flexible schedule $50 $75 / Day Call Tara 256-6434

Typesetter/Designer 1/2 time with MAC equipment suppotet Drive and BW color scanner, Quark Express program need ed for identical publication Experience Ed real design sense Send resume by 10/01 to Miracles Magazine P.O Box 181 South Deerfield, MA 01373

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop congress from wrecking vital antipollution laws Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule, $6-$8/hr Can lead to summer job, career opportunity 584-9830

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted, KRETE RESTAURANT 586 8755

PCA for male quad Evenings, overnights and weekends 7.85/hr Call 546 0666

Get paid for taking a test needed education students planning to teach Spanish or able to speak Spanish Tests will be held September 28, 29, and 30 at UMass Campus Center Payment up to $155.00 One to two days Space is limited You must preregister by September 20 For more info call Denise Cook or Nancy Hahn at 758-0444, M F, 8:30-4:30 National Evaluation Systems

Drivers wanted $6-12 hr call Delivery Express 549-0077

Mola Torah reader needed Housing and salary Congregation Rodphey Sholom, Holyoke 534-3262

Mullins Center looking for students to work part time, late nights, and weekends doing post-event clean up Stop by Mullins center, 2nd floor, and fill out an application today

Full Time person needed on M-F 9:00 am-5:00pm for receptionist position on local area computer integration firm. A professional appearance and pleasant phone manner are required Computer skills are a plus Please apply in person or mail resume to ACI 231 Triangle St Amherst (Shawmut Building) b/w 9-5 M-F

$25,000/yr Income Potential Reading books Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext R-1732 for details

$40,000/yr Income Potential Home typists/PC users Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext T-1732 for details

Interns Needed! The Valley Optimist Magazine is loooking for Editorial and business interns Pick up some great experience with a wonderful crew Send clips, letters and resumes to The Valley Optimist 13 Old South St Northhampton, MA 01060 Call 586-7070

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits With a patient and supportive teacher Sign up early, limited schedule Call Peter 253-5263

Guitar Lessons by Kevin Collins Guitar for fun, classical Free intro lesson Harm Grad 256-1233

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in music, theater, and dance Registration for group instruction runs Sept 6-22, 1995, private instruction is ongoing We are located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass, 413-545-0518, for info

MODEM USERS

Call the Playground BBS! 256-6085 Over 4,000 files online. Twenty online games including registered LORD, BRE and Usurper. Food Co-Op and Recipe Bases, lots more! Stuff for everyone!

MOTORCYCLES

'82 Honda Magna V-45 750 cc, V-4 Very fast and reliable No reasonable offer refused $1,800 bo Page anytime 292-0065

MUSICIANS

Needed: Funk drummer, organ, keys The Colonel Mustard Trio! Call Ryan or Andy 549-1016

PERSONALS

CASHIN STAFF: Get psyched for a great year only the best is yet to come.

To the cute guy in the Whitmore sneckber: I was surprised to find you working there, but it was a pleasant surprise. I have dreams of you and me and lunch sandwiches Respond here if you feel the same

- Your secret admirer

To the best staff in the whole world welcome to Collegian Graphics!

Alex, The past year has been great! Happy first

- Andy

POSTER GIVEAWAY

Monday, September 18, University Gallery, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions While supplies last

ROOM WANTED

Prof male, Looking for room in apt or home 546-0612

SERVICES

Exotic nail design airbrushing 548-1794

Experienced babysitter available, non-smoker, lots of references 546-0612

TRAVEL

Spring Break Travel free with Sun Splash Tours Highest commissions, lowest prices Campus reps wanted! Call Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800 426-7710

WANTED

Students to join health club as group to save money call Molly 256-6439

WEIGHT LOSS

Bantled Willpower! Lose up to 30 lbs., 30 day money back guarantee Natural doctor recommended 323-4964

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HOBBES! DON'T GUARD ROSALYN! I'M GOING TO GET HER WITH THIS BALLOON!
THE TIGER IS MY PRISONER!
I GUESS I'LL JUST HAVE TO SOAK YOU BOTH THEN! HA HA HA!
SORRY CALVIN, I TOUCHED YOU WITH THE BABY SITTER FLAG
THE BABY SITTER FLAG? WHAT'S THAT?
IT MEANS YOU MUST OBEY THE BABY SITTER
...WHO SAYS IT'S A HALF-HOUR PAST YOUR BEDTIME NOW LET'S GO IN.
AWWWWW! DARN BABY SITTER FLAG

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'M FROM THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT. I'M HERE TO REDUCE COSTS
IT MIGHT SEEM LIKE ALL I DO IS COME UP WITH SHORT-SIGHTED WAYS TO SAVE MONEY WHILE MAKING YOUR JOB HARDER. BUT THERE'S ANOTHER SIDE TO THIS STORY AND THAT WOULD BE ?
I FORGET

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOU WENT EASY ON SANDRA STEWART'S BROTHER, GONZO. WHY?
'CAUSE OF HER! YOU KNOW HOW I FEEL ABOUT HER!
FOOL! SHE DOESN'T KNOW YOU'RE ALIVE!
SHE WILL -- SOMEDAY!

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Life is just totally tough. It's a bear.

I meet my ex-girlfriend and she says, "How are you?"

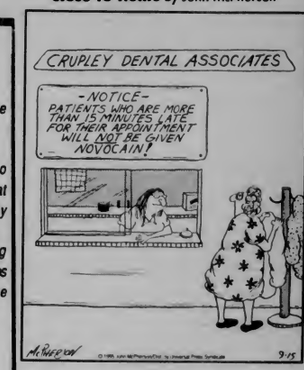
I say, "Fine." Actually, I felt so nervous and upset to see her that "Fine" described the tiny particles my brain had broken into when I saw her.

She was stading there looking fragile, lovely, hair by Warner Bros., lips by Renoir, and gentle vocals by Lee Remick.

I said, "How are you?" She started to cry.

That made me feel much better.

Close to Home By John McPherson



CRUPLEY DENTAL ASSOCIATES
-NOTICE- PATIENTS WHO ARE MORE THAN 15 MINUTES LATE FOR THEIR APPOINTMENT WILL NOT BE GIVEN NOVOCAIN!
9-15

Generation X By Chris Lehman

IN COLLEGE, YOUR EYES ARE YOUR VERY MOST IMPORTANT ASSET. SO, AGAIN - TRANSLATE FROM READING TO MUSIC.
IF I READ ANOTHER WORD, MY EYES WILL BUST.
AGAIN - MY EYES FROM TOO MUCH TIME AT THE COPY MACHINE.
AND GET ENOUGH SLEEP SO YOU WON'T GET "SHUT EYES."
MR. NICHOLS IS MY CLASS BORING YOU?!
Z.Z.Z... A LITTLE.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellivini

EXCUSE ME, MR REFEREE, SIR. COULD YOU COME HERE, PLEASE?
I NOTICED ON THAT LAST CALL YOU DIDN'T HAVE YOUR RULE BOOK WITH YOU HERE, USE MINE.
THANKS! YEAH, AND IF YOU GET STUCK THERE'S A SECTION IN BRAILLE NEAR THE BACK.
WHAT'S A TECHNICAL, COACH?

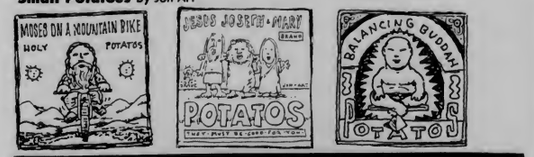
Bruno By C. Baldwin

SOMETIMES I WONDER WHERE YOU DISAPPEAR TO.
DON'T WORRY ABOUT IT, MEN TOO.
IT'S THAT VACANT STARE THAT MAKES ME PUT ON TEDDY'S FAVORITE SWEATER AND GOLDEN RETRIEVER USED TO WEIRD ME OUT LIKE THAT TOO

Korky and Pete By David Robert

I'M AFRAID A SHOT IS GET IN TOUCH WITH MY FEMININE SIDE
YOU DERP! IT'S THE '90S. YOU'RE FOOLING ABOUT IT ALL WRONG
YOU'RE ABSOLUTELY RIGHT! NOW FIND A FUR, WOOD-MORE SILVA LOT!!
I'M GOING TO HAVE TO BEAT THAT!

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



"MAKE ANY SANDWICH A MEAL" Deal

Add Chips and a Medium Soda for Just $1
Always with Fresh Bread Baked Daily

6" ALL BEEF 1/4 LB. ARMOUR HOT DOG
ONLY $1.99

SUBWAY

Corner of main St. & No. Pleasant St.
Sunday Thru Thursday 10 -12
Friday & Saturday Open Late 10 - 2
256-1919

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician.....Shin Suzuki
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Marc Dionne
Marianne Haner

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Turkey Burger	Eggplant Parmigiana
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Quarter Pound Burger
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Bean Burrito	Eggplant Parmigiana
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Oatburgers

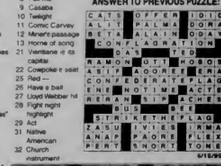
Daily Crossword

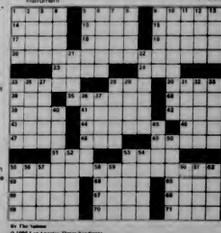
Edited by Trude Michel Joffe

ACROSS
1 One kind of appeal
5 Office supplies
9 Winner's reward
14 Take on
15 Soap additive
16 Sideslep
17 Soprano Mofo
18 Harvest
19 Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov
20 Beethoven classic
23 "The Big —" New Orleans
24 Rocker Adam
25 Docirine
28 "Rookie" Byrnes
30 Computer symbol
34 B. Graham's title
35 Clean-out
38 Go for it
39 "Metamorphoses" poet
41 Whirling
42 Sidle
43 — precedent
44 Fire starter
46 TV's "Major —"
47 Tickle pink
48 Corrode
49 Ecstasy's counterpoint
51 Music unit
53 "The Vampire Lestat" author Anne
55 Glenn Miller hit
63 Cherokees cousins
64 Appetizing store
65 Weight watch
66 Assessor's amount
67 Sprong bloom
68 Biblical location
69 Jazz man Eubie
70 Part of MIT
71 Author Santha — Rau

DOWN
1 Phony
2 Spanish lad
3 Just answer yes —
4 Contest by the pitch
5 Helen's abductor
6 Sad song
7 Webster of words
8 Fall into
9 Casaba
10 Twilight
11 Comic Carvey
12 Mevel's passage
13 Home of song
21 Ventilate it as caulks
22 Cowpoke's seat
25 Red —
26 Have a ball
27 Lloyd Webber hit
28 Fight night highlight
29 Act
31 Native American
32 Church instrument
33 Wanting
36 Misanthropes
37 Part of 60 Down
40 Sumac
45 Kentucky Derby is one
50 Male or female
52 Bridal path
53 Something old
54 South Bend squad
55 Belgrade citizen
56 European range
57 Actress Nadi
58 Blue pencil
59 Withered
60 Verdi opus
61 Consider
62 Burning mountain of renown

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





© The Tribune
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Quote of the Day

"Small rooms or dwellings discipline the mind, large ones weaken it."

-Leonardo Da Vinci

Sports notice

Any women interested in joining the indoor and/or outdoor track & field teams should sign up in Room 224 Boyden Hall by Friday, Sept. 22. For more information, call 545- 2759.

Sports

Sports notice

The intramural department is still accepting team entries/rosters for many sports. Get your team rosters into the intramural office, 215 Boyden Hall. For more information, call 545-0022/2693.

Women's teams head south for difficult weekend

Soccer ready for William & Mary, George Mason

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts women's soccer team defeated George Washington 1-0, they passed their first test of the season. This weekend poses the second test.

The Minutewomen travel to Williamsburg, Va. where they will take on the 17th ranked William & Mary Saturday and George Mason Sunday. The loss of Rebecca Myers is a key loss when playing these two formidable opponents.

"This week is a litmus test for us," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "A test to see how we stack up with some of the better teams in the country that are out of region."

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

The Minutewomen take to the road to test their strength against some of the nation's best teams.

The first opponent will be the toughest for the Minutewomen as they will play William & Mary, previously 5th ranked in the country.

"W&M is a very good side in terms of their squad," Rudy said of the Tribe. "On paper, their squad looks very good but they haven't quite gotten results. They have been quite disappointing."

After unexpected results in the past week against Texas A&M and Southern Methodist University, a loss and a tie, UMass isn't quite sure what to expect from this talented team.

"I expect that they are just going to play their hearts out," Rudy said. "They have not played a typical W&M style, which is typically a very pretty style of play. They usually play a controlled game, a lot of wing play down the flanks, they have a big kid up front in Natalie Seaton, one of the top rated forwards in the country."

Seaton has put up very impressive numbers in her first five games. She has five goals and five assists for a total of 15 points and is joined up front by Whitney Cali who is their leading goal scorer with seven.

On Sunday, the opposition will be in the form of the George Mason Patriots.

"George Mason is a very good side," Rudy commented on their second opponent of the weekend. "They are loaded with talent."

That talent includes Lisa Echea up front, who in her last game tallied five times in her team's 14-0 victory over East Carolina.

When asked about the strength of schedule this weekend and throughout the year, Rudy said it was geared to make them better later in the year.

"The point is to build and build over the course of the season. We started with Saint Bonaventure and then had a week to prepare for a tough A-10 team like GW, then another week to prepare for this weekend with two tough teams," said Rudy.

"All this is preparation for the A-10 Championships and the New Englands."

The injury to Myers is compounded by the continuing injuries to Meghan Brennan and Michelle Ferzan. Myers, with a reported torn hamstring, had been playing on it since the pre-season but had to be sidelined for her own well being.

Brennan's been nursing a sore back for the last three weeks and may not be able to go this weekend as well. Ferzan has been diagnosed with a badly inflamed knee and has been resting it all week in the hopes of returning to practice in the near future.

Minutewomen take on nation's best this weekend

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

No. 15 Massachusetts will tangle with the best there is in collegiate field hockey this weekend when they take on No. 1 North Carolina (Sunday) and No. 3 Old Dominion (Friday).

Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly said that because of the high rankings of their opponents, that the Minutewomen have nothing to lose.

Although the Minutewomen enter both games as heavy underdogs, they hope to repeat last year's upset specials.

North Carolina knows all too well about those upsets, and after being knocked from No. 1 perch by the Minutewomen a year ago, the Tar Heels will have revenge on their minds and won't take Massachusetts lightly.

Donnelly said that the rivalry that exists between UMass and UNC is a friendly one.

"They like us. They just can't stand that we beat them," Donnelly said. "The kids all truly like each other. They hang out together during the off-season. It's a different kind of rivalry because you don't want to lose to your best friends. It's made the games excellent."

UNC has earned the top spot this season, as its four wins have come against solid opponents. After pounding then No. 10 Penn State 6-0 in their opener the Tar Heels have steamrolled over William & Mary (5-1), Iowa (4-3) and Temple (4-0).

What may be most frightening about North Carolina is that the backbone of the squad is made up of freshmen and sophomores. Leading scorers Kate Barber (7 goals) and Abbi Keller are only sophomores, as is goalie Jana Withrow.

If UMass has an advantage, it is that North Carolina plays Old Dominion on Saturday in a match that the Minutewomen will be able to observe. If the game is a grueling one for UNC, UMass will have the advantage of being well-rested.

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass field hockey is hoping they can upset two of the all-time bests in one week like they did last year.

Old Dominion has been a long time nemesis for Massachusetts. The team, whose 1995 media guide's cover reads "Just do it better," has done just that for over a decade in collegiate field hockey. The Monarchs lead the all-time series with UMass 13-3, but the Minutewomen captured the 1995 contest 1-0 at home.

"Old Dominion is just excellent year after year. They lost a ton [from last year's team] and they're still excellent," Donnelly said. "It's almost not fair."

Also in the almost unfair category is goaltender Kim Decker. The former US National Team Member has set a standard of excellence in the Monarch net for several years and is living up to it again this year.

Like UNC, Old Dominion also pounded Penn State 7-0 in its season opener, but fell to No. 3 James Madison 1-0 and then rebounded to beat Northeastern 4-2.

The Minutewomen have had a week to prepare for this test, something Donnelly is very happy about.

"They've been by themselves, just focusing on the games," she said.

As a young head coach, Donnelly likes to use these games as an opportunity to learn from coaching legends Karen Shelton (UNC) and Beth Anders (ODU).

"They are two of the very best and I'm not too proud to learn as much as I can from them.

Notes: Both the UMass and UNC squads will be the guests of UNC Chancellor Michael Hooker who is hosting a gathering at his house in Chapel Hill.

Minutemen to face inter–state rival Holy Cross

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

The flame continues to flicker tomorrow, as the traditional Massachusetts-Holy Cross football game will take place for the 45th time between the two schools.

Each team enters the inter-state battle trying to rebound from losses which occurred last Saturday. Holy Cross fell to Hofstra 24-9 while the Minutemen were handed a 21-7 thrashing from Richmond.

This game is a non-conference match-up for the Yankee Conference Minutemen. The Crusaders of Holy Cross takes the field representing the Patriot League.

UMass has won the last three meetings, including a 32-0 shutout in Worcester last year. The Minutemen are 7-5 all- time against the Crusaders at McGuirk field, and UMass coach Mike Hodges has a personal record of 3-0.

The Holy Cross offense features quarterback Chad Vaughn, who made his collegiate debut last Saturday. Vaughn struggled in the first half completing only one of his nine passes. He fared better in the second half, ending 7-for- 18 with 131 yards passing, including a touchdown pass.

On the Holy Cross defense, the Minutemen must look out for linebacker David Streeter. Streeter led the Crusaders with 13 tackles against Hofstra last Saturday. He also had two sacks in that game.

Minutemen Notes: UMass cornerback Breon Parker has stepped up his punt return performance. Last Saturday, Parker returned five punts for 51 yards and had a 43-yard return negated by a UMass penalty. Parker finished with 106 total return yards on the day.

Senior fullback Rene Ingoglia is dealing with a nagging hamstring, but will play against Holy Cross. Junior fullback Ron Brockington sat out last Saturday's game with a sore hip, but is probable for tomorrow.

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Cornerback Breon Parker hopes to return the Minutemen to their winning ways

Minutewomen host invitational

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

After attending tournaments hosted by Hofstra University and the University of California at Santa Barbara, the University of Massachusetts volleyball team will be taking part in one last preparatory Invitational before their Atlantic 10 schedule begins, its own.

The UMass Invitational begins today at Curry Hicks Cage, with the Minutewomen (4-3) set to face Michigan (tonight at 7 p.m.), Brown and Syracuse (tomorrow at noon and 5 p.m.), the three other teams in the tournament.

UMass coach Bonnie Kenny no doubt would like a better tournament record than the one it earned last week in Santa Barbara, where it defeated Toledo, but fell to nationally ranked UCSB, nationally ranked Utah, and San Jose State.

"I think we're working hard," said Kenny. "We're working on the things we need to be working on. But more time needs to be spent working with our younger players. Right now they require a lot of individual attention. But overall the effort and intensity is there."

Michigan (3-3) comes to town after playing some tough teams as well, including the powerhouse UCLA Bruins, whom Michigan managed to win a game from. The Wolverines definitely have the capability to give the Minutewomen a run for their money. And because Michigan is the first team UMass will play this weekend, Kenny has primarily focused on them this passed week.

"They have some good outside hitters, and they really serve the ball well," Kenny said. "To be successful we're going to have to serve aggressively and play great backcourt defense. Because it's the defense that's going to score us our points.

"As far as Brown and Syracuse are concerned, we'll be able to watch them play each other before we face them ourselves, so that should give us a good idea of what to expect from them."

UMass' junior outside hitter Giza Rivera, sophomore middle blocker Michelle Paciorek and sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan have all been playing exceptionally of late. Rivera earned 27 kills against UCSB, the second highest total in the history of the UCSB tournament. Against Utah, Rivera had 15 kills, and against San Jose she had 21 kills along with 19 digs.

Paciorek mustered 12 digs against San Jose State, a school record, and also tied her personal record of 12 kills. Nolan came up big against Utah, registering a team-high 11 digs in addition to nine kills.

A duplicate performance by the trio would be more than welcome by their teammates for the upcoming three games.

"Our main goal is to improve with each match," Kenny said.

That statement becomes more and more important as the A-10 season approaches. It appears that Kenny has done all she can to ready her squad for another competitive season, and as a result there is no reason the team can't be a huge success.

Water polo heads to EWPL tourney

By Teri Klein
Collegian Staff

When you are the defending champions, you invite your closest competitors to point to your match on the schedule.

Such is the case for the No. 13 nationally ranked Massachusetts men's water polo team. It faces its toughest opponent of the season to date on Saturday, when they go up against Queens College in the Eastern Water Polo Association League tourney.

Massachusetts coach Russ Yarworth expects Queens to be one of the greatest challenges of the season.

"It's going to be a tough game," Yarworth said. "I'd say they are the most improved team in the East. We have our work cut out playing them because they would like nothing better than to knock off the defending champions."

Queens, who enters the game ranked No. 17, have a considerably different look to it this season. Several talented junior college transfers have improved the team's line-up with their size and shooting ability. Made up of mostly juniors and seniors, this season's team is more experienced than in the previous meetings between the two teams.

In addition, Queens is playing with added strength and depth than it had in the past. Reserve players are providing considerable support for the team's starters which has helped Queens in the early season.

"Even though Queens has been playing at an improved level over last season, Yarworth still feels his squad can prevail. The key to victory lies with his team's intensity.

"Intensity is the bottom line. We have to play intense in order to win and that is something we have not been playing consistently this year," Yarworth said.

Junior Luis Linardo commented that it is tough being the champions because you are the biggest game on the schedule for most opponents, and you must play with the hunger to win.

That is what we are missing right now, the hunger to win the game, to beat teams by 10 goals, not just one or two," Linardo said. "Last season, we went out and intimidated other teams. Now, we are just playing the games, win or lose."

Yarworth would also like to see better shooting and shot selection from his team this weekend. On the season, UMass has attempted 197 shots on goal, while only making 87 goals, for a percentage of .452. That number is down from last year's .516.

Senior Alex Mujica, who missed last weekend's games due to a pulled groin, expects to be back in goal for the Minutemen.

UMass will also compete against the host of the tournament, the US Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, NY, and Iona.

The team's goal once again will be to defend its crown as EWPA champions.

"Last year we went 9-0 in round robin play, 3-0 at Easterns, and 3-0 at the championships," Yarworth said. "That's hard to match but we're planning on it."

Ohio roadtrip marks first as Soccer faces new rivals

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

For the first time this season the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will take to the road, as they travel to Ohio to face new additions to the Atlantic 10, Xavier and Dayton, this weekend.

The Minutemen (3-1-1, 1-1-1 A-10) opened their season with four matches at Richard F. Garber Field, and an off- campus home match.

This will be the first meeting ever between UMass and both of this weekend's foes.

Twice already this season UMass has faced unfamiliar opponents and has not fared well, tying Virginia Tech and losing to Fordham. Following those results, UMass can ill-afford a loss on this pivotal conference trip.

Whether or not UMass will have A-10 Rookie of the Year Karsten Bremke is still a matter of concern. Bremke has been sidelined for the past three games with a groin pull. In his absence, the Minutemen have played well, but not up to their full capabilities.

Dave Siljanovski's status is also of some concern, with a sore right knee. Siljanovski did not start on Tuesday and only played about sixty minutes against Siena.

Siljanovski is the team's leading scorer with four goals and five assists. Named the A-10's Player of the Week, he has tallied at least one point in each UMass game thus far, picking up much of the scoring slack while Bremke has been sidelined.

Tonight at 6 p.m. marks Xavier's (1-3) inaugural A-10 match, after opening with four non-conference opponents.

The Musketeers are making an event out of the occasion as both the athletic department and Student Activities Council are co-sponsoring a pregame tailgate party.

Senior Maurice Schilten has done much of Xavier's scoring, leading the team with three goals and seven points. The Musketeers are coming off of their best season ever, posting a 12-8 record in 1994.

Dayton (3-2) is Sunday's opponent and will make their A- 10 debut against the Minutemen as well. Dayton is 3-1 at home thus far this season.

Freshman Kane Teeter has come off the bench to score a pair of goals tying him with sophomore Drew Krafcik for the team lead. Senior Joe Lehmann has been solid in net posting a 0.88 goals against average and a pair of shutouts.

Sports Notice

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs are looking for new recruits for the 1995-96 season. New member registration will be on Wednesday, Sept. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center during the UMass women's volleyball match against Connecticut. UMass students get into the game free with a valid student I.D.

It costs $25 to join and new members (undergraduates only) will be picked by a lottery system. Only one application per person will be accepted. Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Sept. 21 and 22. Minutemaniac benefits include: advance ticket pickup, Minutemaniac T-Shirt, game receptions, "The Maniac" Newsletter and a membership card.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 9 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, September 18, 1995

Alessio leads Minutemen to victory

Frank Alessio ran for 155 yards, including an 84-yard touchdown run, to help lead UMass to a 51-0 thrashing of Holy Cross (See Sports, page 10).

UMass surfs the World Wide Web

UMass OIT launches new software today to help students gain better access to the World Wide Web (See story, page 3).

Juliana Hatfield rocks Pearl St.

Juliana Hatfield played Pearl St. this past Thursday night promoting her latest album, Only Everything (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Expect it to be mostly sunny today with a northern wind around 10 mph. Things will cool off tomorrow and Wednesday with increasing cloudiness in the afternoon.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 45	HIGH: 70 LOW: 30	HIGH: 74 LOW: 40

Student dies after fall from JQA

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts senior Jack C. Toney, 22, of Worcester, Mass., fell to his death from his 13th floor window in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall in the Southwest Residential Area on Sunday morning.

According to a press release, the fall was reported to police at 10:45 a.m. Toney was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Both UMass police and state troopers assigned to the Northwest District Attorney's office are still investigating the death, the press release said. Foul play is not suspected at this time.

Toney had just moved from the 17th floor to his a new single room on Saturday.

Sophomore history major Matt Berinato witnessed the arrival of the police at the scene of the accident from his 21st floor room in John Adams Residence Hall.

Berinato said that at approximately 11 a.m., he looked out his window to find paramedics and police officers below. The area in front of the victim's dormitory was sealed off by police tape.

"I looked out and saw [the victim] on the ground," Berinato said. "[The paramedics] were working on him for quite a while on the ground."

Another witness, sophomore Mike Esposito, said he was at the scene and in relatively close proximity to Toney when the police officers arrived.

Esposito, a finance major, said he overheard the second officer tending to Toney say that the victim still had a pulse. Toney was taken away by ambulance after approximately 10 minutes, Berinato said.

Thomas Robinson, Vice-chancellor for Student Affairs, drafted and distributed 12,000 copies of a letter on campus "explaining what happened and notifying students who they can contact for help," the press release read.

"We are all shocked and grieved by Jack's death," the letter read. "We have been working hard since this morning to marshall our resources so we can help Jack's family, friends, teachers and other students."

Offered in the press release and letter are the resources where students can receive help. These vary from Mental Health to University-affiliated Chaplains.

"It is important for all of us on campus to understand that we are not alone," Robinson said in the press release. "We are here to help each other."

Memorial services for Toney have not yet been announced.

For help or services, contact Mental Health 545-2337.

Peace in Bosnia discussed by panel at Amherst College

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

As carnage and bloodshed continue to plague the peace process in the former Yugoslavia, a panel sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) convened Wednesday night at Amherst College to discuss alternative approaches to resolving the conflict.

The discussion, entitled "Bosnia and the World: How to Stop the Killing," included Frances Crowe of American Friends Service Committee, Glenn Ruga of Friends of Bosnia and Michael Klare of Hampshire College and PAWSS.

> "There is no military solution to this war."
> – Frances Crowe

All three speakers voiced their dissatisfaction with the current political and diplomatic situation in Bosnia.

"There is no military solution to this war," said Crowe, reacting to increased military involvement by the UN Rapid Reaction Force and NATO in recent weeks. "The solution will be political... the warring parties and Western diplomats must look for common ground."

A military victory by either faction, in the end, would only cause more human suffering, said Crowe. "We must stop looking at war in terms of victory and defeat."

Crowe, whose organization sends volunteers to Bosnia as conflict resolution activists, advocates a three-step peace plan. First, sanctuary must be provided to all civilians who seek shelter from the war. Second, soldiers on all sides must be encouraged to lay down their arms. Finally, said Crowe, a unbiased, "solid, multinational force" must be sent to the region to replace the highly criticized UN Protection Force.

Ruga was skeptical of Crowe's seemingly passive approach, favoring a more unyielding policy towards the Bosnian-Serbs.

"The concept of 'a Greater Serbia' is no different from the Third Reich," Ruga said. In light of such a comparison, allied resolve, which demanded unconditional surrender from Nazi Germany in 1945, must be as strong towards the Serbs in 1995, according to Ruga.

A dramatic parallel between the two regimes, said Ruga, was evidenced in the recent Serb occupation of Srebrenica, in which an estimated 6,000 Muslim men, women and children were slaughtered execution-style and buried in mass graves. "We are talking about a carefully planned massacre," Ruga said.

Ruga expressed frustration over the West's inability to use its power and influence as a force for peace in the region, saying the West "completely bungled any opportunity to stop the conflict." If air power was used three years ago at the onset of the fighting, as it is being used presently by NATO, the conflict would have never perpetuated itself this long.

"We must destroy their weapons and arrest their leaders," said Ruga, who opposes the U.S.-backed peace plan which allots 49 percent of Bosnian territory to the Bosnian Serbs and 51 percent to the Muslim-dominated government.

Klare, the third speaker, who supports increased military involvement in Bosnia, said the international community has been unsuccessful in fostering a peace agreement because "we lack a clear analysis" of the situation.

"The purpose of the aggressor is to inflict pain and punishment on a whole group," he said, who, in this case, meant the Muslims.

The re-emergence of hate politics, evidenced in Russia and the United States, is the "most worrisome phenomenons in the post Cold-War era," said Klare. "For the sake of our freedom," he added, the West must prevent the Serbs and others from advancing this ideology through the force of arms.

"Economic life in Serbia must come to a stand still," Klare said. Furthermore, the United States should commit ground troops to the region, as the current military policy which limits U.S. forces to air strikes is taking "the easy way out" of a conflict which needs sacrifice and commitment to resolve.

"Politicians of hate do not listen to the politics of peace," said Klare, thus, leaving the West with few alternatives besides bolstered military involvement.

Firm fires lawyer after suing Boston Latin

BOSTON (AP) — Partners at the law firm Lane Altman & Owens denied reports on Sunday that they fired the Boston lawyer who is suing the city over racial quotas at Boston Latin School.

Michael McLaughlin said he had been requested to leave the firm, where he has been an associate since 1992, because he refused a request to drop his challenge against the school department. But the firm said in a written statement that McLaughlin chose to leave after he refused to comply with the partners' request that he withdraw as lawyer — not plaintiff — in the case.

"We did request that he replace himself with more experienced and objective counsel because he is not experienced in such litigation and because the suit involved his own daughter," according to the statement, which was released Sunday.

The partners also said McLaughlin violated a firm policy by not notifying them in advance of filing the suit.

McLaughlin was unavailable to comment on Sunday. But on Friday he read from a statement which he said the firm's partners had drawn up for him.

"I publicly announce that I am leaving the firm and that my departure results from the unwillingness of the firm to have me affiliated with representing my daughter in this action," McLaughlin said.

The partners did not address comments on the issue made earlier by Donald Bloch, a partner at the law firm, The Boston Globe had quoted Bloch as saying that a fellow partner, civil rights activist Henry F. Owens III, had objected to the case.

McLaughlin filed the suit Aug. 11 on behalf of his 12-year-old daughter Julia, saying she would have been admitted to the prestigious school if not for quotas that set aside 35 percent of places for black and Hispanic students.

McLaughlin said his daughter's score on the entrance exam was the same as or higher than 149 students who were admitted, including 103 blacks and Hispanics.

Bloch said Owens felt it would be unethical for him to take civil rights cases while McLaughlin was pursuing the Boston Latin suit. Owens is a former president of the Boston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and has been involved in several major civil rights cases. He could not be reached for comment.

Vietnamese Americans diverse after 20 yrs

Professor talks on refugees, boat people, valedictorians, Born to Kill & Buddhists

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

This year will mark the 20th anniversary of the largest migration of Vietnamese citizens to the United States.

Last Thursday, Hien Duc Do, a professor at San Jose State University, lectured at Amherst College on "Refugees, Boat People, Valedictorians, Born to Kill, and Buddhist Monks: Understanding Vietnamese in the United States."

Do spoke on the complexity and diversity of Vietnamese Americans. These high school valedictorians are the product of the earliest migration of Vietnamese Americans; they had the opportunity to immigrate to the United States much earlier than most.

There are the Buddhist monks from San Jose, a group of women who, in order to raise money to build a temple, collected aluminum cans for redemption. When word got out of their unusual fundraising methods, groups began to send donations for the temple, which when finally erected, provided language classes and served as a community center, according to Do.

Do's lecture dealt mainly with refugees and boat people, Vietnamese Americans that migrated to the United States between 1975-1978.

He spoke about the two types of refugees: "anticipators refugees, those that anticipated and planned to move out of Vietnam, and the acute refugees, those who didn't anticipate coming to the United States and had to leave everything behind." Do explained how most of the Vietnamese in the United States are the "acute" refugees.

The first wave of refugees came before the fall of South Vietnam; these were the well informed. They came from the big cities of Saigon, full of western influence — the ones whom the U.S. arranged to leave Vietnam, according to Do. Many of these refugees either worked for the U.S. government or for American corporations in Vietnam. This group succeeded and survived in the United States.

The second wave, the boat people, comprised the largest amount of refugees, left following the defeat of South Vietnam. On this date, 80,000 Vietnamese citizens traveled either to the American embassy or on makeshift boats, attempting to leave their country. According to Do, these are the individuals and families that most people didn't think would leave Vietnam.

"They were the rural, less educated Vietnamese citizens, more likely to not succeed in the U.S.," Do said. There were no arrangements by the United States to help these refugees exit Vietnam. They had poor navigational skills, and 50 percent of them never made it to shore.

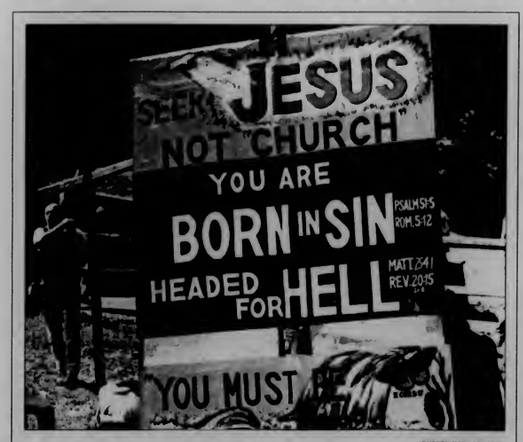
Those who did make it to the United States were faced with the "government dispersal policy," Do said. The U.S. government had many different methods of resettlement, but the primary one was Sponsorship. Volunteer agencies sponsored individual families to live with them, causing thousands of Vietnamese to scatter throughout the United States.

This was followed by a number of secondary migrations. The 1990 census showed that 75 percent of all Vietnamese were concentrated in only seven states," Do said.

The last group of Vietnamese refugees Do discussed are the "Born to Kill," a Vietnamese gang based in California (alongside many other gang groups, such as Asian Boyz or East Side Troublemakers).

Do explained that these gangs provide a sense of security that young Vietnamese Americans find neither at home or at school. Do attributed this lack of security to the fact that they are too "Americanized" for their traditional parents, yet foreign to their peers and teachers at school. For many of these young Vietnamese Americans, verbal and physical harassment in the schools is a daily occurrence.

"Gangs provide a way to protect themselves and offer support," Do said.



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Activism in front of the library

Michael Woroniecki, in the background, and his family preached to students on Friday afternoon in front of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Woroniecki was met with friction and jeering from the crowd of students.

Chancellor speaks on pay negotiations

By Robert Dunn
Collegian Staff

Angry protesters and an outline of Chancellor David Scott's goals for the University of Massachusetts through the next century highlighted the Faculty Senate meeting last Thursday.

The protest was organized by the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP), and consisted of faculty members and librarians upset over the perceived lack of action in delivering their negotiated contract.

More than 30 protesters stood at the back of Herter 227, some carrying hand-painted signs criticizing the University's handling of negotiations thus far.

Signs carried slogans such as, "Coach Cal, can you spare a dime?", and "3 years and no raises? Get serious."

Leo Richards, president of the MSP, addressed the senate meeting with what he called good news and bad news.

The good news, according to Richards, was that $37 million has been set aside for collective bargaining raises. The bad news, he said, was that "the trustees haven't really been bargaining in good faith."

He went on to cite an August 30th meeting between faculty and the board of trustees at which Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Dan Taylor, failed to show, and a September 7th meeting which Richards called "a disaster."

Richards called the protest the "first step" in drawing attention to the faculty's plight, and said he hopes that future demonstrations will have more impact.

At the meeting, Chancellor Scott made references to a report released in U.S. News and World Report in which UMass finds itself in the second of four tiers of colleges and universities across the country.

The poll based its standings on areas such as SAT scores of incoming freshmen, retention rate, graduation percentage, and alumni giving rate.

Other universities in the second tier include Boston University, the University of Connecticut and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Scott handed out his own grade for the university on an overhead display which read, "A is for Amherst."

He then went on to display university trends since 1982 in such areas as operating budget, SAT scores of incoming freshmen and research grant funds.

Scott showed how those trends rose during the early 1980s, fell from 1988-1994, and are now in an upward swing.

Scott hopes that those areas will continue to improve throughout the next century, with more and continued support from the state administration.

"I weep for what we might be if we had half a chance," he said.

The Chancellor was quick to give credit away for the improvements that the University has made, calling them the "results of the achievements of this campus before I came."

Early in the meeting, time was spent covering various issues facing the campus, including building repairs, plans for construction on campus and a short address from the Graduate Student Senate President, Shan Manikkalingam.

Manikkalingam criticized the faculty senate for not involving the GSS in any recent changes in administrative changes or the formulation of what he referred to as "top-down plans".

A progress report of sorts was made on the repairs to the Fine Arts Center. Although crews have finished their work on the building, the senate says that it is still "not satisfied" with the job and that the building still leaks.

The senate says that it is "vigorously pursuing" the state to provide a solution to complete the project.

John Bracey, the secretary of the Faculty Senate, received a round of applause from the audience when he suggested the planning and construction of new classrooms on campus.

"With all the planning going on, what seems to have been lost is the idea of a classroom building. Every plan we have is about wonderful buildings, but how about a building that we can walk into and teach students in?" Bracey asked.

Performance used to empower

Northampton Celebration of Women's Voices raises money

By Maureen Rozonski
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday evening the First Churches in Northampton hosted an event that was aimed at communicating and empowering the public through acoustic music, poetry, and performance art.

The event, titled "A Celebration of Women's Voices" was an example of the true meaning of the word benefit. The equipment used by the performers was donated by local organizations and the performers volunteered their talents.

Producer Robert Fisher introduced the performers by playing instruments and singing songs. He later said, "Music is sweet life."

A performance by Janet Aalfs, from the Valley Women's Martial Arts, combined poetry and martial art movements. She spoke of a language of love that "is spoken through communication, and is a collective process of finding and using our voices."

Other performances included acoustic music by Amy Fairchild, Linee Perroncel and the group Kristen and Sandi. Susan Stinson recited poetry.

Robert Fisher's Productions & Promotions, a company that was originated and funded by the Department of Mental Retardation, sponsored the event. Fisher's production was first attempt made by the department to support the talents and goals of its patients.

Aimee Mitchell, coordinator of Pioneer Developmental Services for the Department of Mental Retardation, helped Fisher's effort to make the production. Mitchell said, "This is a radically, innovative, and different kind of event."

It gave the Department of Mental Retardation the opportunity to support Fisher's dream of producing his own production, and to donate all proceeds from the show to two local women's organizations in Northampton. Necessities/ Necesidades and the Ware Women and Family Resource Center received the donations raised during the event.

Roz Cuomo, funds manager for Necessities/ Necesidades said, "We received a phone call inviting us to come. We thought, this is great."

The two organizations will use the donations to buy books for their resource centers, to send women to conferences, and to improve their shelters.

The New England Learning Center for Women in Transition (NELCWIT), Lesbian Education and Volunteers for Health (LEAH) and the Breast Health Project were invited to the show.

EMILY BEE/COLLEGIAN

Guitarist Cindy Bow performs at the "Celebration of Women's Voices" on Thursday, Sept. 14 at the First Churches in Northampton.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Sept. 18

Community — Welcoming reception sponsored by the Muslim Students Association for faculty, staff and students, reception from 6:30–7:30 p.m., Mahgreb salat at 7:30 p.m., with a brief meeting to follow. Check Campus Center Information desk for room. For more information, call Utama at 256–4573

Community — Rosh Hashanah Challah Baking – hands on workshop, learn how to make traditional challah for Rosh Hashanah, led by Mrs. Yocheved Adelman. $2 for supplies. Chabad House, 7:30 p.m., for more information call 540–4094

Meeting — UMass Italian Club, all welcome, Rm. 301, Herter Hall, 6:30 p.m.

Meeting — The South Asian Club's first meeting of the year, Rm. 905, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 19

Lecture — Gallery Talk: Idealism, Naturalism and Expressionism in the German Print at the Turn of the Century, John Czaplica, Mead Art Museum, AC, free, 12:15 p.m.

Meeting — The first meeting of the Woman's Chapter of Hillel House, join in discussing plans for the coming year as well as the direction the group will take, all sisters welcome, Hillel House, 8 p.m.

Meeting — Vanity of vanities, Everything is vanity, Bible study, sponsored by the Graduate Christian Fellowship, Rm. 177, Campus Center, 7:30 p.m.

Reading — Grace Paley, activist and writer of stories and poems, AC Creative Writing Center Fall Reading Series, free, Wotton's Books, 19 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Video and Panel Discussion — Harvest of Shame, 1960s documentary about the plight of migrant workers, panel discussion about the changes in conditions since the 1960s, sponsored by RAIL, the Alliance for Student Power, and MIM, Rm. 904, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 20

Lecture — Republicans, Clinton, and US Foreign Policy, Five College Faculty Panel with: Michael Klare, PAWSS; Luan Troxel, SC; Gregory White, SC; part of PAWSS Fall Lecture Series, Rm. 103, McConnell, SC, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The ALANA Caucus' first meeting of the year, all interested students welcome, Rm. 301, Student Union, 6 p.m.

Meeting — Informational meeting for the 1996 UMass Program in Siena, Italy, third floor lounge, Herter Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Music — Jamie Anderson, singer, songwriter, comic, part of the GLBT Cafe Series, $3–$5 donation requested, 545– 4824, The Blue Wall, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 21

GLBT Lecture — Fighting Words: A Queer Declaration of Independence, by Scott Tucker, queer writer, health care activist, democratic socialist and founding member of ACT UP, free and open to the public, accessible, 545–4824, Rm. 803, Campus Center, 12–1:30 p.m.

Meeting — The UMass Hang Gliding Club's first general meeting, all welcome, call 545–0804 for information, Campus Center, check info desk for room, 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, informational meeting for perspective members, sixth floor lounge, Thompson Tower, 4–6 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital: Baroque to Jazz, David Sporny, trombone with Nadine Shank, piano, $5 for public, $2.50 for UMass students, Bezanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Notices

Exhibit — "France '95", the works of 40 UMass undergraduate art majors during two intensive summer programs in the South of France, photography, drawings, paintings, sculpture, handmade books, and journals, Herter Gallery, Sept. 18–28, M–F 11–4 p.m.

Exhibit — Foundations Works, a juried exhibition of two and three dimensional works by first year art students in the 1994/95 Foundations Programs in Art, directed by Prof. Pat Lasch, Sept. 18–28, Herter Art Gallery, M–F 11–4 p.m.

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256–8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1–Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co–op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co–operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Union, Room 428, open Mon.–Fri., 10 a.m.–5 p.m or call 545–0865

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STDs, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545–0137

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3– credit course, listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545–0022, 215 Boyden

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696–7752

Volunteers Needed — The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee needs student volunteers to ring the bells in Old Chapel. Will teach and train anyone with reasonable musical ability. Call Ken Samonds at 545–1077 for more information

Support Group — Rebecca Reid will lead a support group for single people over 30, Sunday nights, 7:30–9 p.m., low fee, single, divorced, widowed, all sexual orientations welcome

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256– 8482

Yearbook — the Index Yearbook is looking for anyone interested in photography, writing, computer layout, and marketing to help put together an all–color yearbook, no experience necessary, paid editorships are still open, staff meetings every Mon. at 7:30 p.m., 304 Student Union

Correction

The article, "Librarians, professors protest contracts' standstill," by Jonathan Liberty, that ran in the Collegian on Sept. 15, did not include the end of the article. The end should have read:

About one hour into the meeting many of the protesters left. As the faculty/librarians exited the meeting the said that they were disheartened and dumbfounded by the lack of attention which they were given.

As Chancellor Scott ended the meeting, a furious faculty member questioned him about the amount of effort and priority which he was placing on behalf of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP). Scott only replied by stating, "Bargaining continues."

The MSP refuses to give up they said. They will continue to urge Scott to make the contract his first priority. The protest was only the first in a series of demonstrations which will take place over the next two months.

The Collegian regrets the error.

HELP WANTED

Drivers Needed to Deliver the UMass Collegian on Campus

Must Have a Car

Stop in at the Collegian Office in the basement of the Campus Center or Call 545-3500 and ask for Ryan or Earl Introductory Special!

WITH THIS AD
$5.00 OFF with student I.D.
Professional Consultation and Style Haircut with Stacey DiCarlo
Hurry! Exp. 10/28/95
Styles by Deborah
We Feature Complete Professional Hair Care • Wolff Tanning • Nail Care • Luxury Facials Pedicures • Body Waxing • Lash & Brow Tinting
65 University Drive
Amherst, 549-5610

RUSH ΒΘΒ
The only fraternity on campus that lets you haze yourself!
- Beta Theta Beta -
103 Campus Center

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 4 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst • 256-0080

Mental Health Groups – Fall 1995

Food and Feelings:
A Group for Women Experiencing Eating Problems... Monday, 3:30-5pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families.....Monday, 3:30-5pm

Improving Self-Esteem, Building Self-Confidence.....Tuesday, 3:45-5pm

Women's Group:
Graduate Students & Professional Women.....Tuesday, 12:45-2:15pm

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families (group conducted in Spanish)
Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfunctionales.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Marijuana and Mental Health.....Wednesday, 3:30-5pm

Lesbian, Gay and Bi-Sexual Support Group.....Thursday, 3:45 - 5pm

Groups will begin in early mid-October. All groups require a pre-group interview. Groups are open to students and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. For information or to sign up for an interview call 545-2337 or drop by 127 Hills North, Monday - Friday 8:00am - 5:00pm.

Serbs get extra 72 hours before U.N. deadline

By Maud S. Beelman
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Western officials said yesterday the Bosnian Serbs were pulling their big guns away from Sarajevo, and gave the rebels another 72-hour reprieve from the threat of devastating air attacks.

At the same time, the Serbs were trying to fight off an advance by government troops in western Bosnia. Thousands of refugees fleeing the fighting choked the roads leading to the Serb stronghold of Banja Luka.

International mediators were trying to incorporate the shifting battle lines into their plans. They said the government's advance on Banja Luka could draw Serbia, the major power in the region, into the fighting.

"The next few days and hours may determine the fate of the war," said U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke.

In a statement issued in Zagreb, Croatia, the U.N. and NATO commanders said they had postponed a deadline of 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) Sunday because the Serbs were showing "initial compliance" with demands to pull artillery and other heavy weapons back at least 12 1/2 miles from Sarajevo.

"Therefore, we agreed that the suspension of the airstrikes be extended for an additional 72 hours," said a statement by NATO commander Adm. Leighton Smith and U.N. commander Lt. Gen. Bernard Janvier of France.

The new deadline expires at 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) on Wednesday. "It is our common judgment that the Bosnian Serbs have shown a substantial start towards withdrawing their heavy weapons beyond the limits of the exclusion zone," said the statement.

It didn't say how many weapons the Serbs withdrew by Sunday night, but Bosnian government radio put the figure at about 150. The Serbs were thought to have had about 300 heavy weapons in place. At midnight Saturday, the Serbs had removed 71, according to the United Nations.

"The additional 72 hours will permit the Bosnian Serbs to completely relocate their heavy weapons beyond the limits of the Sarajevo TEZ (total exclusion zone)," the statement said. Smith and Janvier noted that the Serbs had allowed the Sarajevo airport to resume operations and that roads into the city had reopened for use by the United Nations and aid agencies.

They indicated one of their next steps would be to bring together Serb and Bosnian government commanders to discuss a cease-fire around Sarajevo.

The NATO and U.N. commanders warned that if the Serbs didn't keep their promise, or attacked within the zone around Sarajevo, airstrikes would resume.

The commander of Serb troops around Sarajevo, Gen. Dragomir Milosevic, said that by 6:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. EDT), half of the weapons had been removed, and the rest would be pulled out by Wednesday night.

In Western Bosnia, Serb forces that once seemed invincible melted away before an offensive by troops of the Muslim-led government.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic wouldn't say how far government forces might go. But he said he believed that for the first time in the 3 1/2-year-old war, they were in control of the situation.

AP reporter Jovana Gec, on a tour organized by Bosnian Serb officials, saw about 60 pieces of heavy weaponry near the edge of the 12 1/2-mile zone, heading away from Sarajevo.

OIT releases software for Web access

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Get your mouse, turn on your computer, and fasten your seat belts. The University of Massachusetts is about to take the next step onto the information superhighway.

For most American universities, and most of the world, getting on the World Wide Web (WWW) means the chance to see amazing graphics and pictures and using the mouse to get around to find anything that may strike your fancy. (See related story.)

However, up until now, most UMass students can only see the WWW in a text-only format. Today the University's Office of Information Technology (OIT) is unveiling their new UMAccess software which will allow students to get full Web capabilities, including graphics and click-and-point capability.

"It is something we've wanted to do for a long time," said Chuck Lyman, the associate director of OIT. "We've been working on it since the beginning of May."

Ben DeLong, a sophomore computer science major at UMass, said, "It's about time. I am extremely impressed and happy at the amazing effort OIT put into this. . They've done a phenomenal job getting this together.

"The Web is just starting to become very well known. I think it's been underrated up to this point," said DeLong, who has worked with a number of groups on campus to help set up Web pages. "I think the Web is important because it is a way of putting information in one place where people can find it all of the time."

The new programs will also help students who may want to build their own pages on the Web, because they will now be able to see the graphics. While OIT is willing to help students set up pages, they do not have a scanner for students to use to upload pictures onto their pages, Lyman said.

New software

Students will be able to pick up the new software in the OIT offices in Lederle low rise starting today. The new program is free, with the $20 account fee.

After students install the UMAccess software onto their computers they are instructed to download Netscape which allows them to view the Web's graphics, and use their mouse.

Another feature of the new software is it will run faster than the Procomm and Microphone programs most students currently use. The new software runs at 19,200 baud, which is double the speed of the current programs.

Lyman cautioned that it may not seem any faster, however, since the complex graphics on the WWW take a long time to be displayed.

He explained that students will not need to get new Terminal Adapter Units in order to run the faster software, since they were modified over the summer to be able to function at the higher speed. Off-campus students will still be able to use their modems as well.

Beta Test

The new software is technically being beta tested through the fall semester, Lyman said.

"It's pretty damn near a complete product," he said. "We are looking for problems. We're expecting problems... but not because of the software."

He added that there was a 10-person "SWAT team" which would be giving a very high priority to problems with the new technology.

Lyman also said he expects the office to be swamped over the next two weeks, so some students may want to wait to pick up the software, and avoid the long lines.

In other words, you need to get through the traffic before you get to the on-ramp to the information superhighway.

■ World Wide Web offers a variety of information

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

If you were ever interested in finding out when a movie is playing at the local theater, but could not keep up with the recording on the voice mail, maybe you should check the World Wide Web.

AT&T is not bringing you the service, but small local companies are.

Examples like the one above are available today on the Web.

The Web is a place very similar to its older cousin, the Internet, where people can acquire information or just have a good time.

There are numerous sites students can log into at no cost. Whether students have interests in music, money, or movies — it is out there.

Entertainment news and info abound on the Web including local entertainment news.

A local site of interest may be The Virtual Valley WWW Page at http://www.virtual-valley.com. The Virtual Valley is operated by a University of Massachusetts sophomore, Benjamin DeLong.

The Virtual Valley provides students with information about the movies playing at the Hampshire Six Movie Theaters, concerts coming to the area, and even shopping. The Virtual Valley also hopes to connect students with local leaders.

Another entertainment orientated page is operated by WAAF, a Boston based radio station. It has the play list, background on disc jockeys, and concert information. The WAAF Web address is http://www.WAAF.com.

Students interested in comics might want to check out the Uncanny X-Page at http://www.students.uiuc.edu/~m- blase/x-page.html.

For the sports-minded there is the ESPN page, which is chock full of the latest sports information. The address is at http://espnet.sportszone.com.

Students who are interested in their money may went to check out BayBank's new page at http://www.baybank.com.

The BayBank page provides students with an interactive adventure in banking. The page has a graphic layout like a dormitory room, and clicking on certain items in the room will reveal different types of info, from how to manage a check book to Massachusetts entertainment news.

In addition to the various commercial pages, there is practically an infinite number of independent pages. Some people who have found nothing of interest themselves have started their own pages.

Collegian Classifieds
113 Campus Center
545-3500

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
BEST AEROBICS BEST MACHINES
$139 STUDENT SPECIAL 4 MONTHS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • CYBEX
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES
TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE
LIFEROWER • GAUNTLET
GRAVITON
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116 So. Amherst
256-0080

AEROBICS
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

Research Interviewers
Hiring Now For Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday–Friday, 5pm–10pm, Saturday 11am–5pm and Sunday 3pm–9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am–5pm, Monday–Friday: (413) 586-8635.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

HEALTHWORKS
ADULT FITNESS AT KIDSPORTS
Basketball/ Volleyball Court
FREE TO MEMBERS
Aerobics
Step • Slide • Hi-Lo Impact • Specialty Classes
Circuit Weight Training
Cardio Machines
Stairmaster • Treadmills • Life Cycle • Nordic Track
Free Weight Training
Cardio Theater
Only Health Club in the area that has one!
Group Discounts
Get Your Friends Together And Save $$$
JUST 5 MINUTES FROM AMHERST AREA COLLEGES
317 RUSSELL ST. • ROUTE 9
HADLEY
586-0633

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs
Whitmore Administration Building
Amherst, MA 01003

To the Campus Community:

It is with much regret that I inform you of a tragedy that occurred [yesterday] morning in our community. Jack C. Toney, a senior communication major from Worcester, fell to his death from the 13th floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall. Jack was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, where he was pronounced dead on arrival. The UMass and state police are still investigating Jack's death, although no foul play is suspected at this time.

We are all shocked and grieved by Jack's death. We have been working hard this morning to marshall our resources so we can help Jack's family, friends, teachers and other students.

We have many campus resources to assist you in dealing with Jack's death. These include the staff in the residence halls, the Dean of Students Office, the Employee Assistance Program, Mental Health, the University Police, my office and the chaplains affiliated with the University. Please do not hesitate to make use of any of these services.

I feel a deep sense of loss at Jack's death as many of you will.

Sincerely,

Thomas B. Robinson
Vice Chancellor for Students Affairs

THINGS YOU ALREADY KNOW...
- Always wear clean underwear.
- Watch Melrose and 90210 every week.
- Lend a hand to a friend in need.
ONE THING YOU DON'T KNOW...
Only 25% of UMass students smoke pot more than once a month.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Positions Vacant Staff Artists
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Corner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The fine line of free speech

Marni E. Helfner

I recently read the Massachusetts Supreme court ruled for the first time that the Constitution does not extend free speech to people who threaten their spouses.

The ruling came from a case in which a woman obtained a restraining order against her husband and felt it would not be enough. After getting the order, the husband came along and verbally harassed and threatened the woman.

The husband's defense team claimed he was entitled to make that threat under the guise that it is "free speech." The court ruled against him, saying the threat was the legal equivalent of the crime of assault or abuse. The judge in the case ruled "...Clearly, the First Amendment does not protect conduct that threatens another," according to an article in the Boston Globe.

After reading the story I felt pushed and pulled by the many issues that were arising. I am a women's studies major, and also a firm believer in freedom of speech.

The right to free speech is one of the greatest freedoms we have in this country. Unlike others in the world, people in the U.S. can announce anything they like without the threat of prosecution. And here, in the U.S., that even extends to hate speech. As much as I despise the Klan and Neo-Nazis, I will always defend their right to say what they want.

Mind you, this thought isn't original. Voltaire was the first one to lay it on the line about free speech. He said, "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

I also believe victims have the right to be protected from their abusers. No one should have to live in fear because someone is trying to hurt them. Women have the right to expect the court system and society will protect them from their potentially violent ex-husbands.

Obviously those ideas clash. The fine line between the freedom of speech and the freedom to live without fear is easily crossed and re-crossed. Neo-Nazis can tell me that all Jews should die, and that is protected as free speech. A former partner could tell me he hated me and wanted to kill me and that could not be protected as free speech. How do we make the line a little more visible and harder to cross?

On an intellectual level, I believe in Voltaire's ideas. But as a woman who has suffered at the hands of an abuser, I firmly believe in the right to be protected.

Only victims can know the fear of not knowing who or what lies around the next corner. I can't expect the courts or the abusers to know how that feels, but I can ask them to understand and empathize what it feels like.

Of course, you can play the devil's advocate and say that if you deny the hate speech, you start to deny other forms of speech. Pornography also falls under the same category.

So what is the solution? Perhaps we need to come to the understanding that freedom of speech is not really free. It does carry a price. Unpopular beliefs and ideas are always subject to ridicule. Galileo was punished for proclaiming the world was round and the Earth circled the sun. John Scopes was the subject of a national trial for teaching Darwin's theories as correct and creationism as wrong.

Unpopular ideas are the basis for change in society, but can we support those ideas when they put others at risk?

I don't think so. America has ideals for freedom of speech, for equality, for justice. But America is hardly ideal. Equality, justice, free speech and other things are only ideals in this country — not reality. Reality is that husbands beat, and sometimes kill, their wives. Reality is that women are fighting to be able to live their lives without fear.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Breaking the social outcast barriers

Wendy Darling

The UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance holds Info-Socials throughout the academic year, but almost without exception, the turnout for the first meeting of the year is at least three times greater than turnouts for meetings later on.

Last Tuesday's Info-Social was no exception, with nearly 50 UMass students cramming into a room high in the Campus Center. A dozen people had to sit in the middle of the room, (chairs ran out quickly) and those who arrived later ended up squashed together near the door.

Once the meeting came to order the audience was attentive, listening to the official speakers talk about volunteer opportunities, upcoming events, and group plans for the future. They laughed at the facilitator's jokes, nodded their heads in agreement, and spoke up now and then asking questions.

What wasn't apparent until the end of the meeting, however, was the real agenda of the LBGA. The one item that keeps people showing up for meetings again and again. Want to know what that agenda is? Connecting people.

People who hadn't seen each other all summer were exchanging greetings and hugging. The noise level went through the roof, and laughter rang out into the hallway. People had connected.

As individuals and as a group, gay, lesbian and bisexual people are among the most socially isolated minorities, and it is for this reason that organizations like the LBGA keep running.

While there is something to be said for "gaydar" (a kind of sixth sense that allows some GLB people to know who their friends are) and for being "out," to a large extent, GLB people are often left at the mercy of situations such as LBGA meetings to find their fellows. Societal homophobia leaves them with little choice.

While a black student can usually pick out other blacks by sight, a lesbian student will find her job considerably more complicated. The world is a dangerous place for lesbians to live, and it's not often that a woman comes along wearing a big button that says "I'm a lesbian."

But there are a number of other ways for a lesbian to find other lesbians. Visiting clubs and bars on "girls night out." Signing up for classes in GLB studies or even women's studies. Going to GLB lectures, concerts and workshops. Checking out people on the street. Keeping her ears up and listening.

All this in mind, it is still quite a feat to find someone. And even when they do, their search methods are far from foolproof.

What is she looking for anyway? An admission? A certain hairstyle? Some kind of psychic message? Ultimately, the end of a successful search comes only when one lesbian looks at another lesbian or a bisexual woman and says, "This is what I am." There can be a lot of guessing in between, but this is what it comes down to.

As it turns out, on this campus the rough translation of "This is what I am" is attendance at the weekly LBGA Info- Social. Even when you account for heterosexual allies, a room of 50 men and women expecting to talk about GLB issues equals a room full of what many GLB people would call "family."

Some people might ask why all these people showed up. Others would ask why the lesbian student was so obsessive about finding someone to talk with and be with. Still others would want to know why any of these people would want to get together at all — besides the "obvious" reason of arranging sex and plotting to corrupt society.

Based on the facts, however, most people came to talk, meet people, exchange stories and share with each other an element of themselves they often find they must hide from the world.

They came to find a place where they could be their whole selves without worrying about bad things that might happen to them.

They came to the meeting because this is who they are, and this is who they want to remain.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

Trapped in a world unGratefully Dead

Matt Audette

Jerry's dead.

Yes, it has been over a month now since Grateful Dead frontman Jerry Garcia passed away, and believe it or not, the world has kept on turning.

For awhile it was looking pretty ugly. On the day the news quickly spread throughout the world that Garcia had died in a drug rehabilitation center, society was beginning to seem like a grim place. I remember seeing tons of disillusioned, scruffy kids, decked out in their tie-dyed uniforms, aimlessly meandering the streets with vacant looks in their eyes that could only have said one thing:

"What the am I going to do now?"

I scoffed. "Get a life," I mumbled under my breath. I mean, how could this rag-tag band of old-timers who had been kicking around since the age of the dinosaurs mean so much to so many people? Were kid's lives so completely empty and so desperate for something to cling to that they would nightly subject themselves to 20-minute versions of "Fire On The Mountain"?

I dismissed this national youth mourning as nothing more than a phase which would pass as soon as the kids realized they could just start following Phish, Blues Traveler or any other of those equally underwhelming hippie acts.

But then a strange thing happened. Before poor Jerry's body could be rested into the ground, a bizarre phenomenon began to occur. Everybody (and I mean everybody!) was coming out and expressing their sorrow and telling their war stories about how much Garcia and The Dead meant to them.

Right-wing politicians were coming out of the rock n' roll closet and admitting they were secretly Dead lovers (but I bet they still didn't inhale), while magazines such as Entertainment Weekly and Rolling Stones were devoting entire issues to the late musician. Even my dad (a three- piece suit banker-type) was bummed out over the death of Garcia.

What the hell was going on?

Was I the only human being on earth who did not see what the big deal was? Was I the only one who had once got to see the legendary band and nearly fell asleep watching a then obese Garcia stand like a statue and noodle around on his guitar for four hours? Obviously so. Sure, it's a sad day when anyone as talented as Garcia is lost, but come on, weren't we all getting a bit carried away here?

All of a sudden I was a refugee in a world of Gratefully Dead people. My friends looked at me as if I were the living and breathing human incarnation of Satan when I expressed my feelings about both Garcia and The Dead. Their cold glances just about shouted the word "blasphemer," and soon I was slowly but surely beginning to feel as though I was the biggest, most ignorant, jerk in the whole world.

Then, just as I was about to admit that I must be abnormal, I realized what was really going on here. I found myself talking to people, both kids as well as adults, who acted all distraught about the loss of Garcia, but in actuality knew absolutely nothing about the man or his music. Yes, the world was crawling with people who bore those silly Grateful Dead teddy bears on their shirts and on their cars like membership cards but wouldn't know the Dead from Culture Club.

"Uh, I like that song about driving a train on cocaine," was what I heard day in and day out. Then an explanation suddenly occurred to me. Somewhere between the band's incarnation in the '60s and the present, Garcia and The Grateful Dead had somehow miraculously morphed from an influential rock band into a multi-media corporation. Don't believe me?

Pick up the latest issue of Entertainment Weekly and towards the back you'll find a page advertisement that allows you to buy all sorts of Garcia merchandise — including the Jerry Garcia neck-tie!

Of course when any "rock star" dies their image is most likely going to be exploited for profit (some of those Kurt Cobain shirts, like the one with his death certificate on it, make me sick), but the Jerry Garcia neck-tie? Does anybody else in the world see the absurdity of this?

All of a sudden I don't feel so bad. At least I'm being honest — I don't know, or care to know, much about Garcia and his former band, and I'm not going to fake it because our consumer-based culture says it is the cool thing to do. It's an insult to both your ability to choose what you like and dislike, as well as to the people who truly loved and admired what Garcia did in his lifetime.

But still, everyday I see more bodies clad in Grateful Dead paraphernalia. I can't help but think how many of these people are really fans of the band's creativity or how many of them just gave in to all the media and commercial hype. I guess, if the business men have their way, we will all eventually be one of Jerry's kids — whether we like it or not.

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

Bad music booms out of alternative radio

Paul A. Sarkis

I did a bit of traveling this summer down Texas way, and as I cruised around in my rental car scanning the radio dial, I was disgusted to find a trend that I experienced in Boston had seemingly reached nationwide proportions.

This trend being carried through our airwaves is disguised as a break from the dulldrum of radio norm, as an adventurous, youthful surge into the outer limits of society's standards. It is, however, a profit-bearing scheme which reduces the variety of music on the radio into a selection which resembles the after 2 a.m. menu at McDonald's.

This trend being carried through our airwaves is disguised as a break from the dulldrum of radio norm, as an adventurous, youthful surge into the outer limits of society's standards. It is, however, a profit–bearing scheme which reduces the variety of music on the radio into a selection which resembles the after 2 a.m. menu at McDonald's.

It is Alternative Radio, a time which has dawned upon us like the Ice Age, encapsuling what it consumes, and stifling all forms of life in its wake. Up and down the dial Alternative Radio is a phrase which fills the minds of radio exec.'s with warm thoughts of dollar signs, and fills our ears with a mediocre lot of rehashed melodies and half-assed attempts at breaking new musical ground.

This title, however, is a misnomer as you would be hard pressed to find an alternative to Alternative Radio anywhere in the country. The perpetrators of this homogenizing of American radio are, of course, the radio stations. Across the country there are a litany of stations who have changed their broadcast stripes, as it were, and are lining up to switch their programming to the new, hip, sounds of American Pop Culture.

In Boston, for example, WBCN wants to be WFNX, WFNX is suddenly top 40, and WAAF, having dispelled its glam-rock crown of the '80s is suddenly the home of "New Music." The difference between these stations? It is minimal to say the least. WFNX has remained basically the same while the music it has been playing since its inception has burst into popularity like so much fresh rainwater saturating the steamy pavement on a furnace-blasted summer day.

I draw this analogy for a reason. Like the rainwater, this new music was refreshing and different in its initial insurgence after the deluge over the dry monotony of '80s radio began. However, the result was the same. Today's radio, like the runoff from a roadway after a late summer thunderstorm, is tasteless, bland and an increasing nuisance, as it meanders its way in one singular direction into the gutter.

The current programming has its roots in the music boom of the early '90s. Bands like Pearl Jam, Nirvana and REM have become the staples of this meager crop of music, and these bands may be found on one of these stations at any given time. In order to fill the void left between the few quality tracks available, the stations that are caught up in this MTV-esque hoopla take much less appealing music, wrap it in an Alternative ribbon, and jam it down our throats in an endless barrage of monotony which leaves us dazed.

After listening to the radio for any amount of time, which I am usually forced to do at work and so forth, my mind becomes so fixated on the two or three songs of the day that I cannot prevent the corny riffs or inane lyrics from repeating in my head, much as they do on my radio dial. The programming on these stations overlaps to such an extent that it is extremely difficult to find anything new these days.

Our radio stations are locked in an interweaving myriad of recent hits and upcoming pop idols. The well has run so dry that a band such as Silverchair has been catapulted into popularity based almost solely on the fact they were billed as having a similar sound to Pearl Jam.

The list goes on, but the quality consistently plummets. I'm sick of Green Day. I hope the Gin Blossomswilt in the current drought, and would like to see Tripping Daisy break their necks upon landing. When bands such as Sponge, (whose lead man has fake heroin addict tracklines tracing his arms) and solo acts like Alanis Morriset begin to overshadow premium artists like Bob Mould and Matthew Sweet, then we have already reached a musical trough which again needs to be uprooted, perhaps with more progressive consequences.

Until then, I'll continue to find it more and more difficult to extract the same passion out of bands like Live and Alice in Chains when they are served up as appetizer, main course, and dessert by the proprietors of the "Music Revolution."

Paul A. Sarkis is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

COURTESY MAMMOTH/ATLANTIC

Juliana Hatfield entranced the audience at Pearl St. Thursday night.

Hatfield shines at Pearl Street

By Rob Stevens
Collegian Correspondent

JULIANA HATFIELD
Pearl Street
September 14, 1995

Last Thursday night Pearl Street fans got to check out Juliana Hatfield, who is considered by some to be the pioneer of the new surge of female stars from Boston. Playing songs from all of her solo albums, Hatfield brought along the often overblown image of the ever-so-hip, female alternative singer as she put her self on display in front of a packed crowd.

The best aspects of the night were Juliana's great attitude and pleasant vibes. The set started off loud and hard as Juliana and her four member backing band performed a bunch of rough-edged, hard-driven, guitar-slinging songs. Since she had dyed, bleach blonde hair similar to the color and length of Kurt Cobain's, a presence reminiscent of the late superstar could be felt. Many times throughout the night, Juliana hid behind her hair and her bangs, using her concealment as a weapon to unload her material.

The most interesting point of the night occurred near the beginning of the set. Hatfield was rocking along and hypnotizing the crowd, when all of sudden she blurted out, "I don't have a good voice, my voice sucks," taking everyone by surprise, including her most devoted fans. Maybe one would expect this from a friend or even a beginning singer, but not from the respected Hatfield.

After her brief outburst, Hatfield continued singing. The unexpected statement actually freed her voice from any worries of living up to her near legendary reputation. She simply utilized her Berklee-trained voice as would an ace guitarist with his instrument — taking it to extremes and not holding anything back.

Pearl Street always has a tough crowd to please, and often the crowd will stand with their arms crossed waiting for a performer to musically take them away. With the help of her band, Hatfield gave just that — an entrancing show that engulfed the crowd with emotions of vengeance and mysticism.

Disco divas dance at Bluewall

Authentic '70s garb, funky grooves set mood for evening

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

DISCO:
BOOGIE DOWN ALL NIGHT LONG
Bluewall
September 14, 1995

The mirrored ball shone upon a crowd of disco lovers who had come out of the closet, dusting off their mothball- scented bellbottoms and unabashedly shaking their booty to the Bee Gees at the Bluewall on Thursday night.

DJs Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley provided the '70s grooves at the admission-free disco "Boogie Down All Night Long" dance. Seventies costumes were encouraged, and the garb ranged from leisure suits to sequined mini dresses, accessorized by love beads, medallions and mood rings.

The music set the mood, though. Tunes from Blondie, Gloria Gaynor and Kool and the Gang kept everybody groovin' and singing at the top of their lungs.

The general consensus among the disco fans was that the night was "groovin."

"I love disco. Its great to dance to, and everybody looks great tonight," said student and dancer Tom Myer.

Student Gary Raymond's opinion of the evening was: "Fierce divas, very disco-ish, having loads of fun with the boys and girls."

The buzz that circulated around the dance floor was due to the performance by a Madonna impersonator. Chris Savansko, dressed in a blonde wig, black leather bustier, knee high boots, fishnet stockings and sequined shorts, did a very authentic and electrifying rendition of the disco version of Madonna's "Fever."

"My act is an attempt at retro Madonna. I'm pleasantly surprised and glad to be seen in front of such a great audience," Savansko said.

The night was summed up best by student Karen Dahlstrom, who said, "Tonight was excellent, we need more of it."

The dance was one of the first events of the year-long 25th Anniversary of the Campus Center celebration.

Jawbreaker's Dear You rocks punk scene

By Jason Flax
Collegian Correspondent

JAWBREAKER
Dear You
Geffen

After putting out three independent records on various labels, Jawbreaker from San Francisco has released its major label debut, Dear You, on which the trio takes their emotional punk sound to new levels.

The six-year-old band, which has been wrongly associated with the California punk scene of Green Day and Offspring, is lead by singer, guitarist and songwriter Blake Shwartzenbach who sings with a slight English accent while painting dark lyrical pictures that can't get more sincere.

Opening the album is "Save Your Generation" — somewhat of a wake-up call anthem which closes with the message, "Simple rule — every day be sure to wake." Other songs such as "Fireman," "Accident Prone," and "Million" deal with the usual lawbreaker themes of love-gone-bad and depression.

By far, the most pop-oriented song is "Jet Black." With its powerful ballad feel, it could be the only flaw in the record if one exists at all. Most unique is the last song titled simply, "Unlisted Track" — an acoustic number which offers a break from the noise that brings the album full circle.

Dear You is much more mature than their previous efforts, due to this albums' slicker production. Although, at times, it seems to be heavily influenced by Nirvana, Dear You has a sound that is all Jawbreaker. A-

Don't just go to shows — Write about them!
Come join us at the Collegian Arts & Living department.
545-3500
113 Campus Center

What are the Most Powerful Words In Your Permanent Record?
(check one)
☐ Transcript
☐ Resumé
☐ Diploma
✓ The Wall Street Journal
For special student rates send in coupon below or for faster service call (800) WSJ-8614
7am-10pm Eastern Time Mon.-Fri.
☐ Send me a one-year subscription for $67.00
☐ I'd prefer a 15-week subscription for $33.00
Name
Address
City State Zip
School name Graduation date
☐ Check enclosed ☐ Bill me later ☐ Charge to my ☐ AMEX ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ Diners Club
Card no. Expiration date
Signature
THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.
Mail coupon to: The Wall Street Journal 200 Burnett Road, Chicopee, MA 01020
©1995 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved. Offer good for a limited time and only in the continental U.S.

Rush ΣK
Tuesday, September 19 6:30- 9:00 p.m.
Spaghetti Dinner
Wednesday, September 20 6:00- 9:00 p.m.
Mocktails
Thursday, September 21 6:00 p.m.- 9:00 p.m.
"Friends" night
19 Allen St (behind Hillel)
Questions 256-6887- for info or rides

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC Leadership Excellence Starts Here

UMass Division of Continuing Education
Your entryway into the University and the future
• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register now for Fall classes.
Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

TOTAL FITNESS
Without Waiting In Line
$139 6 months
STUDENT SPECIAL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
Rte. 116
So. Amherst - 256-0080

There are hundreds of Registered Student Organizations at UMass...
There's at least one out there FOR YOU... CHECK THEM OUT!
The Daily Collegian's RSO Guide
Wednesday, September 20, 1995
LOOK FOR IT!

Tennis loses season opener

By Jameson Heos
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's tennis team dropped their season opener on Friday 5–2 against Boston University, but are hoping to use this loss as a building block for a good year.

UMass coach Judy Dixon said, "I felt that we played really well. I don't feel demoralized because I feel like they came out of this ready to go."

One bright spot was the play of freshman Todd Cheaney and Ryan Ginley at No. 3 doubles. After veterans Justin Lynn and Alex Aller lost 8–4 at No. 1 doubles, and Ankur Bayshu and Gregor Rummel lost 8–5 at No. 2 doubles, Ginley and Cheaney jump started the Minutemen with an impressive 8–6 victory. Despite losing the overall doubles point, momentum was on the side of UMass. Allen rebounded from his loss in doubles to cruise 6–2, 6–2 over Greg Toon at No. 4 singles followed by Bayshu's victory over Jonah Fox 6–3, 6–2 at No. 3 singles.

Suddenly disaster struck. Senior co-captain Darren Tau felt that he was not mentally ready to play and Dixon was forced to insert Eric Peters at No. 6 singles. Peters, who had been away from tennis all summer in South America, was physically outmatched by Pete Schastny 6–0, 6–0. A perfect day eluded Cheaney at No. 5 singles as he fell 6–3, 6–4 to Ben Sturner.

"We lost No. 5 and that was a match. I think given raw talent, that we could have won. But I am dealing with a freshman who just played his first match, so he'll learn from that and it won't happen again," Dixon said.

JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN
The men's tennis team split two matches over the weekend beating Wesleyan but falling to Boston University.

The weight of the match then fell on the shoulders of senior co-captain Lynn and Rummel. At No. 1 singles, Lynn lost 7–6, 6–2 to Anthony Hanigs while Rummel battled to three sets but came up short 7–5, 3–6, 6–1.

"I knew that No. 1 and No. 2 singles were going to be very tough because they are always tough for us to win," Dixon said. "The way UMass tennis is normally played is that we are very deep so that we really try to go after the doubles point, but the match wasn't over until the last game was decided."

UMass continued their season on Saturday with a 6–1 victory at Wesleyan to leave them with a 1–1 record for the year. Lynn paced the Minutemen with a 6–4, 6–2 victory at No. 1 singles followed by Rummel's 6–2, 6–1 win at No. 2 singles. Bayshu and Aller remained undefeated with straight set victories and also combined at No. 2 doubles to win 8–7 (7–3). Lynn and Rummel lost 8–3 at No. 1 doubles, but Cheaney and Ginley came through again to take the doubles point by the score of 8–2.

Cheaney earned his first singles victory 7–5, 6–0 while Darren Tau returned to action but fell 6–1, 6–3.

With their first win under their belt the Minutemen open up their Atlantic–10 schedule today against Rhode Island at 2:30 p.m.

Minutewomen tie with Connecticut

The Massachusetts women's cross country team improved their record to 5–0–1 this weekend at a tri–meet in Orono, Maine. Taking five of the top ten places, the Minutewomen overpowered Maine 31–70, and tied Connecticut at 31.

The UMass team was led by personal record setting performances from their top four finishers. Rebecca Donaghue took third with 17:59, shaving over 25 seconds off her previous mark, while Jen Waeger took fifth place in 18:05, also a personal best. Christy Martin took 1:40 off her previous personal mark, taking sixth in 18:22, and Kristin Donaldson set a personal record 18:58, placing eighth.

Katie Greenia rounded out the Minutewomen's top five finishers with a ninth place time of 18:43.

At the Boston College Invitational, the UMass men's cross country team's season opened with a nine–team meeting, featuring national powerhouses Michigan, Brown, Iona, Delaware, Northeastern, New Hampshire, Maine, UMass and host BC. UMass took fifth place at the meet, while Michigan won the Invitational with the top score of 36 points.

The Minutemen placed five runners in the top 30, leading them to a score of 105 points. Matt Behl was the first Minuteman harrier across the line, finishing eleventh with a time of 24:49. Mike Maciejko turned in a 24:55, taking thirteenth place overall. Ethan Nadeau crossed the line 23rd, clocking a 25:14, and Tim Bollard placed 28th in 25:28. Mark Bulfone wrapped up the UMass top five, placing 30th in 25:31.

—Casey Kane

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

The Minutewomen came to the Cage Saturday morning more focused than the night before ready to earn its first home win. UMass shut down the Bears winning in three straight games 15–11, 15–10, and 15–9 without Rivera who sat out with a sore shoulder. Game one opened slowly as UMass came from behind to tie it up at seven then pushed it through to win. Sophomore Michelle Paciorek stepped it up for the Minutewomen posting five kills on seven swings with no errors in game one, earning her a spot on the All– Tournament Team, along with Rivera.

"We don't use Michelle as much as we should. She should have had as many swings as Nash. It's just awkward having a lefty in the middle. That's definitely something we have to work on," Kenny said.

UMass won the second and third games handily, as the Bears didn't put up much of a fight. Sophomore Lesley Nolan led the Minutewomen offensively with 17 kills while Nash posted a team–high with five blocks and freshman middle blocker Leslie Hartlen earned eight digs.

"I think we realized that when we're ahead we can't quit like we did [Friday]. [Saturday] I think we played all the way through," Nolan said.

Kenny was pleased with the number of players that got to step on the court against Brown, "A lot of people got playing time. It was the first time [freshman setter] Katie Pearce set for us. She got her hands on the ball and controlled our play well," Kenny said.

UMass 3, Syracuse 0

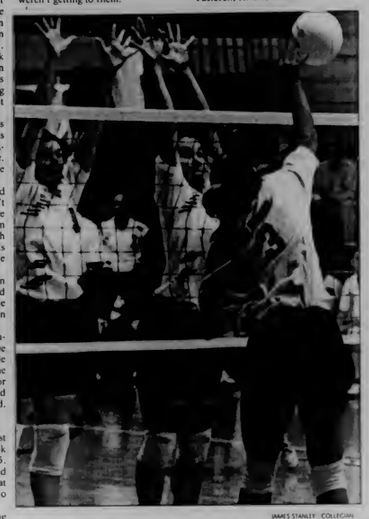
The Minutewomen saved the most exciting game for last as they took Syracuse 15–9, 15–6 and 17–15. After sailing through games one and two, it was clear in game three that the Orangewomen were not ready to go home.

As Syracuse led 14–10 at game point, UMass clawed its way back to win. Led by Rivera, who rested her shoulder and came back to lead the team with 21 kills and four aces, Kenny's squad came through when it counted. Nolan posted 14 kills and 12 digs while Nash recorded 13 kills and a team–high 14 digs.

When asked of the trouble in game three of the match, Kenny replied, "We didn't hit .381 like we did in game two and we really didn't block. They were hitting balls and we just weren't getting to them."

Tournament Notes

The All–Tournament Team was comprised of Mary McMains, Brown; Linnea Mendoza, Suzy O'Donnell, Michigan; Jen Murphy, Syracuse; Paciorek, Rivera, UMass.



JAMES STANLEY / COLLEGIAN
The Minutewomen finished in second place at the UMass Invitational this weekend, beating Syracuse and Brown, but losing to Michigan.

STUDY ABROAD
Semester, Summer and Year Programs
Ecuador • Spain
England • France
Canada • Mexico
Costa Rico • Italy
INTERNATIONAL STUDIES ABROAD
isa
817 W. 24th St. Austin, TX 78705
(800) 580-8826
•SINCE 1987•

Poster Give-Away Day
Monday, September 18 from 11am - 4pm
Visit the University Gallery and choose a complimentary selection of illustrated posters from past exhibitions.
Great Dorm Decor!
While Supplies Last

Lizottes Tobacco Shop
76 Main St., Northampton, MA
584-2812
Imported: Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobacco, Clove Cigaretts
Bulk Pipe tobacco, American Spirt Cigarettes, Magazines
Pipes: Peterson, Falcon, Meerschaum

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON
406 N. Pleasant St.
Invites All University Women to Rush
Rush Dates:
Monday, Sept. 18
Tuesday, Sept. 19
All Rush Events Begin at 7:00pm
Call 549-7845 for Info and Rides

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialities.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

Accepted at more schools than you were.

It's everywhere you want to be.

Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995

DAMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN
The Minuteman defense was outstanding on Saturday, holding the Crusaders scoreless while causing numerous turnovers.

■ football

continued from page 10

"We had [seven] different people score on offense, we had four different running backs. I mean, that's awesome. I've been here for five years, four years playing, and that's never happened before. That just shows there is a lot of talent, and the offensive line did a great job," Ingoglia said. The senior co–captain played with a hamstring injury, and almost didn't suit up for Saturday's game.

With a 22–0 UMass lead at the half, it was do or die for Holy Cross. On the kickoff to start the third quarter, LaJuan Coney fumbled the ball on the Crusader 16–yard line, which was forced by Justin Reimer and recovered by Khari Samuel. Three plays later, the Minutemen were in the endzone, and the second half scoring display began.

"If there was a point in the game, it was fumbling the kickoff to start the second half," Vaas said.

"Our special teams played great, we got the ball in good situations, and we scored this week, and that's what we didn't do last week. And we put together good drives, also," Ingoglia said.

Seven different UMass players scored on the day. The defense had five sacks, two by Vernard Fennell. There were three interceptions. There were four fumble recoveries. The Minutemen did a little bit of this, a little bit of that. It resulted in a whole lot of points.

"This week in practice was really difficult for coaches and for players," Hodges said. "We talked about everything. We spent so much time talking that by the end of the week, the kids said, 'hey, let's stop talking about it and do it."

■ Holy Cross

continued from page 10

scored their first career touchdowns.

Jordan carried the pigskin 15 times gaining 92 yards, including a touchdown. Pizano had only three attempts, but took advantage of his opportunities ending with 21 yards. Pizano was excited to get his first score, and is confident with his role as a rising back.

"This is one of the best days of my life," Pizano said. "It definitely was a real confidence builder, but I'm just out there doing my job."

Hodges showed great confidence in his young backs, taking pressure off his featured back. Ingoglia has dealt with a nagging hamstring injury and was pleased that the younger backs were able to step in and get the job done.

Inserting Jordan and Pizano into the game gave them the opportunity to succeed, which they visibly did. It also allowed Hodges to pat himself on the back for the recruiting job he has done.

"Those kids we recruited that we redshirted last year are legitimate backs," Hodges said. "I think they showed that last weekend and again today. Those kids can both play."

"We have two young kids, two redshirt freshman. They really stepped it up. They are UMass' future," Ingoglia said. "They will help us tremendously this year."

As far as Ingoglia's hamstring is concerned, the status is day to day. The hamstring knotted up on Ingoglia on Friday, and he was worried about not being able to play.

"I still don't believe I'm running the way I should be running. I got to get back to my old form and really start pounding in there," Ingoglia said. "I think with each week, personally, I'm getting better. I'm trying to get into a flow, get into a rhythm."

Despite not being 100 percent, Ingoglia still tallied over 100 yards and drove home two touchdowns. The senior captain was thrilled with the way the scoring was spread out.

"We had six people score on offense. We used four different backs that scored. That's awesome," Ingoglia said. "I've played here four years and nothing like that has ever happened."

All of this depth at running back occurred without junior running back Ron Brockington, who is nursing a sore hip and is expected back next week. Brockington transferred to UMass from Syracuse, and is expected to join Ingoglia and Alessio, to give the Minutemen the one of the best backfields in the Yankee Conference.

The running back theme is turning into the more, the merrier. When Brockington returns, Hodges will have six running backs to choose from. Ingoglia will likely receive the largest chunk of the duty, but knowing the Minutemen have a solid offense is most important.

"We have to build off this and have momentum. I think we have a great offense, both passing and running," Ingoglia said. "We did a lot of damage. We have to stay up and build from this."

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

flawless," Donnelly said.

Despite her injury Walker made 15 saves in the contest, while the UNC defense didn't even allow Massachusetts to get one shot.

It took the Tar Heels 12:45 to score, but once they got going their offense poured it on, as Kate Barber and Joy Driscoll each had two goals for the victors. Donnelly pointed to Walker's limited mobility as an important factor.

"It had a huge effect. She would have made some of the saves if she had been healthy," said Donnelly, who praised Walker's efforts. "She was really courageous out there. Her teammates owe her big. If it wasn't for her, it could've been a lot worse."

With the exception of penalty corners, the Minutewomen and Monarchs played evenly, but Old Dominion's two penalty corner strikes proved to be the difference on Friday afternoon.

The game remained scoreless through most of the first half until Danielle Chellew converted on a penalty corner to give ODU a 1–0 lead with less than 10 minutes before intermission.

The second half was much like the first. Neither team could connect on a scoring opportunity early on, and Massachusetts battled to try to knot the score at one, and force overtime.

Chellew finished off Massachusetts with 6:33 remaining, making good once again on a penalty corner to seal the victory.

"It was a pretty even game," Donnelly said.

Massachusetts will get another crack at the ODU in less than two weeks when the two teams square off Oct. 1 at UConn.

"Hopefully, Stacy will be healthy and it will be a better showing of the two teams," Donnelly said.

Despite the 2–4 record, Donnelly feels that her team will rebound.

"We're very strong and very proud," she said. "I'm confident we'll bounce back in a hurry.

"It's not a major overhaul. We just need to fine tune some things and gain some confidence."

The team will get today off, and will return to practice tomorrow to prepare for Wednesday's game with Yale. Starting time is 3:30 p.m. in New Haven, Conn.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

Miller, a senior midfielder, scored his second goal of the year, off of a cornerkick, in the game's 11th minute, to put UMass on top. Siljanovski was credited with an assist on the goal.

Siljanovski has at least one point in each of UMass' seven games this season. He leads the team with six goals, six assists, and 18 points and stands an excellent chance of being named the A–10's Player of the Week for the second consecutive week.

Regina would tally from Mike Butler at 66:50 to give the Minutemen a 2–0 lead, and close the game's scoring. The goal is the third of Regina's freshman season.

Gruber made seven saves in the Minuteman net as both he and the team upped their record to 5–1–1. Gruber has played all but 13 minutes in goal this season.

The Minutemen have a rough week ahead of them. Wednesday they will travel to Durham, New Hampshire for a match against a tough UNH side. Saturday, the Minutemen will return to Richard F. Garber Field for a date with the powerful Boston University Terriers. BU, the defending NAC Champion was ranked No. 1 in the nation for part of 1994 and finished at 19–1.

Sports Notice

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, is looking for new recruits for the 1995–96 season. New member registration will be Wednesday, Sept. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center during the UMass women's volleyball match against Connecticut. UMass students get into the game Free with a valid student I.D.

It costs $25 to join and new members [undergraduates only] will be picked by a lottery system. Only one application per person will be accepted. Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Sept. 21 and 22. Minutemaniac benefits include: advance ticket pickup, Minutemaniac T–Shirt, game receptions, "The Maniac" Newsletter and a membership card.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS:
WHEN OUR JOB IS DONE – YOUR DAY IS JUST BEGINNING.

ART PRINTS • POSTERS • FRAMES
Over 2,000 images...art reproductions, photography, nature, music, romantic, landscapes, 3-D, movies, humor, floral, ethnic, celebrities, fractals, sports, and more ...as well as poster hangers and frames. All at low prices!

THE ART PRINT & POSTER sale
LIMITED TIME ONLY!
LIMITED TIME ONLY
DATE: Mon. - Fri., Sept. 18 - 22
PLACE: Campus Center Concourse
TIME: 10:00 am - 4:30 pm
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center
545-2619
Hours: Monday- Friday 9- 5 p.m.
Saturday 11-3 p.m.

Get in the race.
Study abroad.
Not everyone wins the Tour de France, but you can win in life by making study abroad part of your undergraduate experience. Break from the pack and find new adventures and points of view. Call us for our 1996-97 program catalogs. Specify Australia, Greece, Great Britain, Ireland, Austria, Peace Studies or Mexico. We provide a full range of services to get you in the race.
1.800.755.5607
cea@beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/
BeaverCollege
Center for Education Abroad

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as tilled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Learn to play bridge free Thurs 7-9 [illegible]

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Amamnion all University Women please [illegible] open mtg Wednesday and [illegible] Oct 13 and 14. Pick up [illegible] Southwest at 5:45 [illegible] Look for Chi Omega [illegible] Heather at 549-8723 [illegible]

Iota Gamma Upsilon 405 North Pleasant St. Amherst. Mass women to [illegible] 9-18, 9-19. All events start at [illegible] 549-1184

UMass Women's Ice Hockey Ever [illegible] Hockey? Meet your [illegible] our growing club team. No [illegible] Come to our open [illegible] Wed. Sept. 13 at 7pm [illegible] Address 161. Meet outside the [illegible] Bus will leave at 6:45. [illegible] 549-1881 or 549-1660. See you there!

AUTO FOR SALE

Mercury Marquis 1984, 79K miles, Runs excellent. Power windows & doors. $500 or B.O. Call 323-5489.

'82 Red Jeep Wrangler 5 speed soft top 2.1/4000 CD player. Alarm. $6,000 or best offer. 413-256-6711.

'86 Subaru GL Hatchback 5 speed, Runs well, power. $1700. 253-9795.

Car for sale Honda Civic Sil. 41,500 mileage, air conditioning, radio cassette, automatic. $3600 call Kim 256-1785.

1983 Chevy 80,000 original mileage very good condition. $700 or B.O. 323-8077.

Male Torah reader needed Housing and salary. Congregation Rodney Sholom

EMPLOYMENT

[illegible] 534-5752.

Cruise Ships Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal & full time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 Ext C500

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call (206) 545-4804 Ext. N 5001

Jobs for the environment Campaign with MassPirg to save our polluted rivers. Flexible schedule $50 $75 / Day. Call Tim [illegible] 6434

Environmental activists needed! Work for CLEAN WATER ACTION & stop corporate polluters from wrecking vital anti-pollution laws. Learn valuable organizing & campaign skills, work in great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule. $8-$8/hr. Call now to jumpstart your career. Call (800) 684-9830

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted. KREE RESTAURANT 549-8755

Get paid for taking a test needed: education students planning to teach Spanish or able to speak Spanish. Tests will be held September 28, 29 and 30 at UMass Campus Center. Payment up to $150.00. One to two days. Space is limited. You must preregister by September 20. For more info call Denise Cook or Nancy Hamel at 256-0444 M-F 8:30-4:30. National Evaluation Systems.

Drivers wanted $6-12/hr. call Delivery Express 549-0611

Mullins Center looking for students to work part-time, late nights and weekends doing pool events. Clean up. Stop by Mullins center, 2nd floor and fill out an application today.

Full Time person needed on M-F 9:00 am-5:00pm for receptionist position in local area computer integration firm. A professional appearance and pleasant phone manner are required. Computer skills are a plus. Please apply in person or mail resume to ACI 731 Triangle St. Amherst Shawmut Business Park 9-5 M-F

Interns Needed! The Valley Outlook Magazine is looking for Editorial and business interns. Pick up some great experience with a wonderful crew. Send clips/letters and resumes to: The Valley Outlook 13 Old South St. Northampton MA 01060. Call 586-7070.

BUILD YOUR RESUME

Come to the UMass Credit Union September 18th or 19th at 6:30 pm to build your resume! Looking for new tellers for fall 1995! Stop by call Cristine at 545-3000

Having Halloween bash on 10/27 or 10/28? Get a huge house! Want a spooky band? You need yet? and yet? needs you! can jack at 367-9636

Brother word processor 2200 includes [illegible] 6-05-60

Macintosh computer for sale. Complete system including printer only $499! Call 1-800-289-5685.

Custom fit car cover for Prelude 1997. Has new $80 or bo. 256-8833

IBM pc notebook comp word excel. Need $ for school bo. 549-6061

12 string acoustic guitar w/ case. Practically brand new! Call Mike 256-8150

MOTORCYCLES

'82 Honda Magna V-45 750 cc. V-4. Very fast and reliable. No reasonable offer refused. $1,600 bo. Page anytime 792-0065.

BOXING LESSONS

With retired pro Diana Bumpus 549-5752

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester

ENTERTAINMENT

manual, spellcheck disk has learning and spreadsheets, 3 years old $.50 call Justin 546-4484

Toshiba 20" Stereo w/ remote 3yr old

FOR SALE

ask for $180 call 549-8563

Matching sofa chair ottoman $100 Maytag washer $50 549-[illegible]

Trendy 1000SL Computer with Mon. & Soft. MS-DOS comp. Alarm 300 or 800 call

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in music, theater and dance. Registration for group instruction runs Sept 6-9, 1995; private instruction is ongoing. We are located in 73 Barnard Hall, UMass. 413-545-0519 for info.

Basses, lots more! Stuff for everyone!

MISCELLANEOUS

POSTER GIVEAWAY

Monday, September 18 at University Gallery, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions. While supplies last.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742 and Ubridge Food Co-Op and Recipe.

WEIGHT LOSS

Bottled Willpower! Lose up to 30 lbs 30 day money back guarantee. Natural, doctor recommended. 323-4384.

ENLIGHTENMENT #1

"I'm Sorry Darling." "Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking for." "What are you looking for?" "Me."

MUSICIANS

PERSONALS

ing to talk to me? Reverence, trust, intellectual enlightenment..." "Frank down the hall!" "No! Alliance Christian fellowship committed to discipleship, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info: Mark or Elizabeth 253-7706.

CASHIN STAFF: Get psyched for a great year: only the best is yet to come.

To the cute guy in the Whimore snack bar I was surprised to find you working there but it was a pleasant surprise. I have dreams of you and me and lunch sandwiches. Respond here if you feel the same.

Your secret admirer

To the best staff in the whole world welcome to Collegian Graphics!

Exotic nail design airbrushing 549-1794

Needed. Funk drummer, singer, keys. The Tannen Mustard Trio! Call Ryan Andy 549-1016

GREEN

22 hours. 42 daisys. 1000 acres. Totally regal. Outdoor mainstage. Two big pop tents. Steward lasers. Massive lighting displays. Concessions. Smart Bars. Clothing and record store. Bobbys. Life size Stone Henge replica. Begins 4 p.m. September 23 and ends 7 p.m. September 24. A Primary/Dim Production. 18+. Call Barb @ 549-0833.

Students to join health club as group to save money. Call Molly 256-6439.

Kevin. Only you could promise me forever and then 7 months gone and the rest to begin. I love you, Kevin. happy anniversary. Love, Dionne

Lee Weiner get off the internet for a couple of minutes. you geek!

Exotic nail airbrushing 549-1794

Experienced babysitter available with references. Please call Alyssa 549-8885.

ROOM WANTED

for info

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906.

Spring Break Travel free w/ th. Sun Splash Tours. Highest commissions, lowest prices. Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida. 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

WANTED

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21–April 19): You cannot afford to take anyone or anything for granted now. Exercise greater caution in financial matters. Someone new enters the romantic sweepstakes.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): An upcoming trip requires careful planning. Make reservations well in advance. A friend offers useful insights about your approach to life. Share your expertise with others.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Your financial expectations are met. A surge of confidence and energy leads to new responsibilities and an overdue raise. Widening your social circle leads to valuable friendships.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Make the most of a professional opportunity! Technical skills could play a big role in your getting a raise or promotion. Enrolling in a special class will teach you what you need to know.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): New goals present themselves today. Thinking about what you have accomplished in the past will help you plot future victories. Join the computer revolution: advanced technology saves you valuable time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Use your keep intellect to explore profound scientific subjects. Enrolling in night school or taking weekend classes will broaden you horizons. Romance is on your mind this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov.21): The emphasis now is on accepting responsibility for your own actions. Think positive! Follow through on plans already underway. Excellent communication skills let others know that you are in charge. Touch base with special people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Romantic partner may need some time alone. After a long delay, a professional project finally moves forward. A family member may act disgruntled. Deal with any problems in an upbeat manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Others may be confused by your seemingly erratic behavior. Do not allow tensions to build to the breaking point. Athletic activity provides a healthy outlet for nervous energy. Shower your loved ones with affection.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb 18): A new hobby encourages you to express yourself creatively. Remember, a project does not always have to make money in order to make sense. Be careful not to give away company secrets during "pillow talk."

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Complete business from the past few weeks. Turn the searchlight on bad habits and old fears. Making a fresh start will prove invigorating! A frank talk helps you feel closer to your loved ones.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

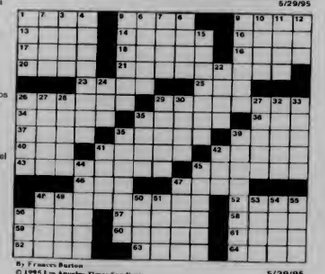
ACROSS
1 Money
5 Not at all racy
9 Blowout
13 Court game, with "jai"
14 Enjoys a book
16 Singly
17 Dermis
18 Bone: Comb. form
19 Equipment
20 Actor Rip
21 Abolitionist hero
23 Optimistic words
25 Have lunch
26 Putt, for one
29 Ariel and her kind
34 Kindled anew
35 Niagara and Victoria
36 Negative
37 Get the wrinkles out
38 Preposterous
39 Singer Marvin
40 Commuter's transport
41 City in Florida
42 Tutu material
43 Weaken
45 Heroic Helen
46 Sushi item
47 Auction
48 White's arachnid
52 Scamps
56 Feathery wraps
57 Hunter of the sky
58 Singer Jerry
59 Woody's son
60 Silky velvet
61 Nobelist Wiesel
62 Adolescent
63 Wanton look
64 Flute feature

DOWN
1 Time gone by
2 City in NE Nevada
3 Hideout
4 "Off again, on again, Gone again —"
5 USC mascot
6 Jason's father
7 Trig. geom etc.
8 Neighbor of Nod
9 Colombian capital
10 Fresh
11 Glance over
12 Part of HRH
15 With dignity
22 St. Louis players
24 Folding bed
26 Take the wheel
27 Showed again
28 Single-handed
29 French director Louis
30 A Fitzgerald
31 Everything included
32 Sir Conan —
33 Take the helm
35 Italian auto
38 Seafood
39 Swift traveler?
41 Finished
42 — Aviv
44 Rhyme's partner
45 More shrewd
47 Oliver or Sharon
48 Apple center
49 Healthy
50 Viva voce
51 Prong
53 Fellow
54 Ballet bend
55 Type of pearl
56 Cave dweller

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	D	C	S		A	D	A	N	O		M	A	S	S
S	I	L	O		D	E	C	A	L		A	L	O	E
S	C	E	N	E	O	F	T	H	E	C	R	I	M	E
A	T	A		D	R	E	S	S		U	T	T	E	R
M	A	N	A	G	E	R			S	T	E
				B	E	D		C	L	I	E	N	T	A	L
S	A	S	E				G	A	I	N	S		R	N	A
C	A	S	T	O	N	E	S		L	O	T	W	I	T	H
A	R	T		T	E	N	S	E			E	G	E	R
R	E	S	T	O	R	E	D		L	I	E
				R	O	D			A	C	T	R	E	S	S
S	P	O	O	L		E	G	R	E	T		L	E	I
P	L	A	Y	E	D	T	H	E	M	A	R	K	E	T
A	I	R	E		I	N	A	N	E		T	I	N	E
T	E	S	S		S	A	T	A	N		E	N	O	S

5/29/95



By Frances Burton
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate
5/29/95

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

WAKE UP! IT'S TIME TO GET READY FOR SCHOOL.
UHNGGG
JUST CHECKING. I'M GLAD YOU'RE UP AND DRESSED THAT SHOULD THROW HER OFF THE TRAIL FOR A WHILE

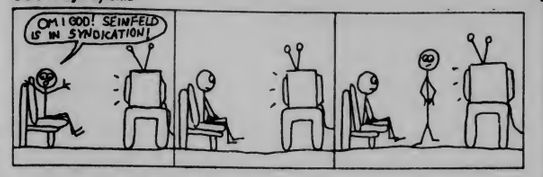
308 Boyz By Skid



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

MAYBE I CAN GET ENOUGH MONEY IN NEW YORK TO PAY ROBART FOR YOU!
IT'LL SAVE MY LIFE, SIS! BUT--WHY NEW YORK?
BECAUSE--SPIDER-MAN IS THERE!
TAXI

Butterling By John Ottinger

MR. BUTTERLING, I'VE DECIDED TO GRANT YOUR REQUEST FOR NEW FACILITY-ISSUED UNDERWEAR.
YES, RESIDENTS OF SHADY BRAIN SHOULD CONCENTRATE ON BECOMING WELL-THE COMFORT OF THEIR UNDERGARMENTS SHOULD BE THE LAST THING ON THEIR MINDS.
SO, DON'T WORRY-THE SHIPMENT SHOULD ARRIVE ANY DAY NOW.
I HOPE YOU LIKE BURLAP.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

THEY CUTIE, WHAT'S HAPPENING? I SAW YOU OVER HERE ALL ALONE AND THOUGHT YOU MIGHT WANT COMPANY.
LISTEN TO THIS. "BUT WHY DO THEY LOVE ME SO MUCH, IF I'M NOT WORTHY OF SUCH LOVE? OH, IF ONLY I WERE ALONE AND NO ONE LOVED ME AND I, TOO, HAD NEVER LOVED ANYONE."
I'LL LOVE YA BABE.
BARRRMP! OH I'M SORRY, WRONG ANSWER. THANKS FOR PLAYING THOUGH.

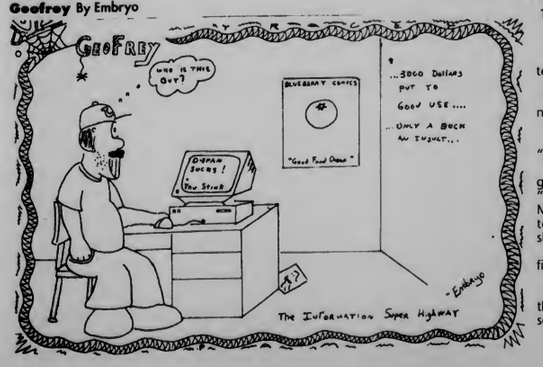
Dilbert By Scott Adams

HELLO. IS THIS THE MOUNTAIN RESORT WHERE ALL OUR EXECUTIVES ARE HAVING A RETREAT?
IS IT TRUE THAT LOUD NOISES CAN CAUSE AVALANCHES?
IF YOU SEE MY BOSS, TELL HIM I SAID
HI!!
©1995 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Generation X By Chris Lehman

SO, MEEP, AFTER FIVE MONTHS, HOW DO YOU LIKE OUR COUNTRY?
I LIKE IT. AMERICA'S SPORTS AND TV, BUT ES-PE-CIALLY I LIKE IT. THE MUSIC.
I AM A BIG...UM... FAN OF THE GROUP "BLOW IT OUT YOUR HOOTERS."
THAT'S "HOOTIE AND THE BLOWFISH."
YES... WELL, WHATEVER.

Geofrey By Embryo



Lost Horizons By Douglass Cecchineri

WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?
"COACH... TELL WINSLOW HE CAN'T LATERAL THE BALL TO HIS INVISIBLE FRIEND!"
SHHH!... YOU'LL HURT HIS FEELINGS
IF YOU DO IT AGAIN I'LL PUNCH YOU IN THE HEAD!
JUST TRY IT... BARNEY!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I have a very big 65 gallon fish tank.

I only have one chubby little goldfish who slowly waddles around alone.

Because of the glass angles, sometimes, I can't even see Beebles.

Beebles rubs his side against a stone a lot.

I asked the clerk at the pet store:

Why does my fish keep rubbing against the stone?

If I buy another fish and my fish falls in love, will Beebles be happier than when Beebles was alone?

The clerk threw me out of the store.

Hail to you all who waddle alone!

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Look, I don't have a cent in the car. Here are four Chiclets and a ticket to my son's high school play."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Thang Vo
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Jeff Hodge
Daniel Bergeron

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tri County Fairwich	Veal Parmesan
Egg Roll	Baked Chick'n
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Colache	3 Bean Casserole
Veggie Egg Roll	Carrot Onion Schine

Quote of the Day

"Fame lost its appeal for me when I went into a public restroom and an autograph seeker handed me a pen and paper under the stall door."

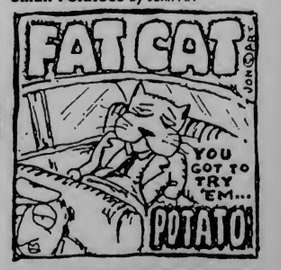
–Marlo Thomas

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
TOP 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that You're Going to Have a Bad Semester

10. You get the calculus professor who teaches entirely in mime.
9. You just got your schedule today.
8. You found a severed head in your new MicroFridge.
7. Your RA's nickname is "Adolph."
6. Your roommate keeps offering to "shave you."
5. When you try to register for classes, gentlewoman greeting you with "Welcome to the University of Massachusetts touchtone registration system" replaced with drunken man who shouts "What do you want sucker?"
4. They passed out cyanide pills at your first class.
3. Your bed mattress reeks of urine.
2. Biology professor declares to class that you are to be the "specimen" for the semester.
1. Your latest class? 7:00 a.m.

Small Potatoes By John Art



THE COLLEGIAN NEEDS MORE STUDENT COMICS!

TO FIND OUT HOW TO SEE YOUR NAME AND ARTWORK IN PRINT, COME ON DOWN TO THE CAMPUS CENTER, AND SEEK OUT JUAN.

PLEASE BRING A SAMPLE OF YOUR WORK WITH YOU!

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- The men's tennis team split two games over the weekend, defeating Wesleyan but losing to BU (See story, page 6).
- The men's and women's cross country teams both competed this weekend. (See story, page 6).

Tomorrow's Collegian will have a more in-depth look at the two meets.

- The women's tennis team beat Vermont on Saturday 7–2 in its fall season opener. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

Collegian Sports • Monday, September 18, 1995

UMass demolish Holy Cross 51–0 to gain first win

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

"What can you talk about?" Holy Cross' Peter Vaas said to a room filled with reporters after his hapless Holy Cross Crusaders were crushed by Massachusetts, 51–0 Saturday afternoon.

Minutes later, it was Minuteman coach Mike Hodges who did the talking about the blowout in front of 8,819 at Warren G. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

"That was a lot more fun than last week," Hodges said with a smile.

It may not be a measuring stick as to how UMass will fare this season, since the Crusaders are one of the weaker teams on the schedule. Yet, putting up 51 points and giving up the donut hole provided a much–needed confidence booster after last week's disappointing 21–7 loss to Richmond.

As for the UMass–Holy Cross series, the Minutemen, you could say, have had the edge in the last three matchups. The combined scores of those games — 120–7.

The 51 points was the highest UMass output since 1988, when the Minutemen defeated New Hampshire, 64–42. As for the margin of victory, it was the largest since 1963, when UMass demolished Rhode Island, 57–0.

Discussion after last week's Richmond game focused around the Minutemen's failure to take advantage of opportunities. This week was a bit different. Holy Cross managed to turn the ball over seven times, and UMass capitalized by scoring on five of them.

Massachusetts	51
Holy Cross	0

"The Minutemen did the things they had to do. I don't think they had a turnover. Every time the ball hit the ground, it bounced up into their hands. Every time we put it on the ground, we lost it. You can't turn the ball over [seven] times to my daughters and their friends and expect to win," Vaas said.

"Obviously, everyone knew what the problem was last week, so we had everybody's attention," Hodges said. "When we got the ball in the situations today, there was a little extra determination to get it done. That's what we talked about all the time. When the opportunity arises, get it done. And that's what we did."

The Minutemen rushing attack did its thing, gaining 438 yards on the ground. They went with Rene Ingoglia, and he gained 108 yards. They gave it to Frank Alessio, and he sped for a career–high 155 yards on 12 carries, including a 84–yard touchdown run. Redshirt freshman Matt Jordan was called upon, and he delivered in the form of 92 yards on 15 carries and his first career touchdown.

Another redshirt freshman, Jim Pizzano, got into the act as well, and reached the endzone on a 14–yard run in the second quarter. Backup quarterback Anthony Cutterton even gained 50 yards on keepers. The Minutemen ran roughshod over the Crusader defense for the entire game, and it didn't seem to matter who it was that had the ball.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Frank Alessio was a force on the ground for UMass in Saturday's 51–0 victory over Holy Cross, gaining 155 yards on 12 carries.

Minutemen run wild led by Alessio, Ingoglia

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

It looked like a baseball pitching staff, with the five–man rotation in effect.

Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges incorporated five running backs into his ground game Saturday, displaying solid depth and leaving the Holy Cross defense baffled.

The Minutemen ground attack totalled 438 yards on the game, distributed among the five. Walter Payton Award candidate Rene Ingoglia carried the ball most frequently, gathering 108 yards on 24 attempts.

"I think we have a lot of kids who can run with the football," Hodges said. "But [Ingoglia] is special and he's the guy we got to go to, to get ourselves going."

With much emphasis on Ingoglia, the Holy Cross defense was confused all day by the mixture of running backs used by Hodges. The explosion of backs contributed largely to the 51–0 shellacking of the Crusaders.

Junior tailback Frank Alessio led the way, accumulating 155 yards including an 84–yard dash to the endzone for a touchdown. Junior Darryl Thomas delivered a clutch block to the Holy Cross defender, making the longest Minuteman touchdown of the season possible.

"As a running back, when you hit a seam like that you feel confidence. Darryl had a key block. Rene rounded the corner and Thomas knocked out the cornerback," Alessio said. "When you get open grass like that, it's a great feeling."

It was a great day for Alessio, but light also shined on sophomore running backs Matt Jordan and Jim Pizano. The pair each

Turn to HOLY CROSS, page 7

Minutewomen lose to Tribe, beat Patriots

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

In the last three meetings between No. 6 Massachusetts and No. 17 William & Mary women's soccer teams, the Minutewomen defense was able to shut down the Tribe's outstanding forward Natalie Neaton.

But not this time.

Neaton finally figured out the UMass defense and broke free for two goals to lead No. 17 W&M past UMass 2–1, Saturday in Williamsburg, Va.

Massachusetts	1
William & Mary	2

The Minutewomen did rebound on Sunday though against a tough George Mason squad on the strength of Rachel LeDuc's fifth goal of the season, beating the Patriots 1–0.

Against the Tribe, UMass held a 13–10 shot advantage and a 5–2 corner kick advantage, but could only muster the one score.

W&M jumped out to a 1–0 lead at the 20–15 mark when Neaton nailed a shot into the far upper corner off an assist by Susie Metzger.

UMass got its only goal when junior midfielder Julie Magid scored from 10 yards out at the 47:15 mark to make it a 1–1 game. LeDuc assisted on the score.

Rudy said the goal was one of the best ever in UMass history, resulting from a five–pass combination. It started when Amanda Thompson passed the ball to Nikki Ahrenholz, who in turn passed it to Sandy Shimogaki, who beat a defender one–on–one and then knocked the ball towards the goal. LeDuc first–timed it to Magid, who one–timed it for the score.

"That was an incredible goal," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said.

Neaton headed in the game–winner at 58:25 on an assist by Anne Cook.

UMass keeper Danielle Dion had four saves while her counterpart Karen Wake notched seven.

"Neaton had one great goal and one sort of lucky goal," Rudy said. "It was a disappointing loss, but these things happen."

Against George Mason, in a game that starred in the rain, the Minutewomen dominated. UMass got off 20 shots while the Patriots could only counter with eight.

Massachusetts	1
George Mason	0

The only score of the game came in the 72nd minute, when LeDuc headed in a Magid assist. With the score, LeDuc continues to lead the team with five goals and 11 total points.

In Rebecca Myers' absence, Magid and Amy Powell did an outstanding job controlling the midfield. "Julie [Magid] and Amy dominated the center of the field," Rudy said.

Rudy was also pleased with the play of his defenders. "The back four played very well, very secure. Erin Lynch was very good defensively, of course."

Dion made six saves in the victory while George Mason keeper Jamie Pagliarulo made 12. "She [Pagliarulo] had great range," Rudy said.

The Minutewomen, now 3–1 on the season, return to action on Friday, Sept. 22 when they host Texas A&M at 2 p.m. in the UMass Classic. Wright State and New Hampshire will play at 4 p.m.

"We learned a lot about who we are [this weekend]," Rudy said. "We can play with good teams. We did some things very well this weekend. [But] we have to work on things."

Injury report: Myers traveled with the team but did not play due to her hamstring injury. She is expected to be out for another two weeks. Sophomore Erica Iverson was taken out of the game with 15 minutes to go because of a strained knee. Her status is unknown. Lynch hurt her ankle against George Mason but remained in the game.

Field Hockey loses twice over weekend

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

With revenge on its mind, the North Carolina field hockey team made Massachusetts pay for last year's upset, as the Tar Heels pounded UMass 5–0 yesterday. The loss capped off a rough weekend for the Minutewomen, who also lost 2– 0 to Old Dominion and incurred a key injury to goaltender Stacy Walker.

Going into the weekend, Massachusetts coach Megan Donnelly felt that it would be a can't–lose weekend, because nobody expected her No. 15 squad to knock off either No. 1 North Carolina or No. 3 Old Dominion. What Donnelly didn't count on was an injury to Walker.

Walker suffered a sprained medial collateral ligament in practice on Thursday, but was able to play in both games, a fact that Donnelly considers unbelievable.

"It was a small miracle that she played at all," Donnelly said. "The fact that she was making saves was unbelievable."

The Minutewomen found out what five teams before them already knew — the Tar Heels are good. Their performance seems to show that there is some considerable distance between No. 1 and the rest of the pack.

Prior to the game against UMass, the Tar Heels drubbed No. 3 Old Dominion 5–0 as well, as they continue to bulldoze over a difficult schedule.

"North Carolina played nearly

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

UMass sweeps Ohio downs Xavier, Dayton

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

A road trip to Ohio proved to be just the remedy that the Massachusetts men's soccer team needed as it took a pair of Atlantic 10 matches.

Friday night, UMass (5–1–1, 3–1–1 in A–10) utilized a pair of Dave Siljanovski goals to top Xavier 3–2 in overtime in Cincinnati. The Musketeers fell to 1–4, (0–1 A–10) on the season.

Yesterday afternoon, it would be Brad Miller and Scott Regina who would tally for the Minutemen as they rolled to a 2–0 victory over Dayton (3–3, 0–1).

The Minutemen faced Xavier on Friday in the first ever meeting between the two schools, and after a scoreless 41 minutes, UMass welcomed Xavier to the A–10 with a pair of tallies.

Colin Johnson took a feed from defender Bennie Sheally and scored for UMass at the 41:15 mark. Siljanovski scored unassisted just 29 seconds later, and UMass was rolling.

Xavier's Vladimir Ciric would not let the Musketeers go down easily in their conference debut, as he scored a pair of second half goals at 49:29 and 75:59.

In overtime, Siljanovski scored his second of the night at the 96:10 mark to secure victory for the Minutemen.

Senior goalkeeper Eric Gruber made nine saves to boost UMass.

Yesterday, the Minutemen traveled to Dayton for a date with the Flyers. This was also the first meeting between the two schools, the fourth time UMass has faced a fresh opponent thus far this season.

The Minutemen wasted no time in getting a leg up on Dayton, on a slick field, in an Ohio rainstorm.

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 7

Volleyball places second at Invitational

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the Massachusetts women's volleyball team opened its season in the Curry Hicks Cage as hosts of the two–day UMass Invitational. This year, the exceptional field of teams consisted of Brown University, Syracuse University, and the University of Michigan.

The tourney ended in a three–way tie for UMass, Syracuse, and Michigan all posted 2–1 records, thus the winning team had to be decided by number of games won. When the last ball bounced off the floor, it was Michigan (8–3) that reigned supreme, followed by the Minutewomen (6–3) in second and Syracuse (6–5) in third, while Brown struggled (0–3).

Michigan 3, UMass 0

UMass opened the tournament Friday night as they went up against Michigan and lost three straight games 15–12, 15– 10 and 17–15. In game one, the Wolverines, led by Tournament MVP Kristen Ruschiensky, opened with characteristically tough defense that shut the Minutewomen down. Senior middle blocker Rachel Sky was a force at the net for UMass, but coach Bonnie Kenny's squad couldn't pull through.

Game two began as the women in blue served up five unanswered points. UMass came from behind to tie it up at seven, but again couldn't put Michigan away.

"We can side out, but we don't put the ball away off the dig. Michigan dug the ball in transition and then killed it," Kenny said.

Game three of the match saw UMass open with four unanswered points served up by junior outside hitter Dionne Nash, but again the Minutewomen had problems cracking the Wolverine defense.

"We know that we could do better. The team that played [Friday] wasn't UMass. The level of intensity was really low. We were definitely not the team that played in the UCSB tournament last weekend," said Giza Rivera, junior outside hitter.

Despite opening with a loss, the crowd in the cage was rocking, especially in the heart wrenching 17–15 loss in game three.

UMass 3 Brown 0

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 6

First ever game at Mullins

UMass faces Connecticut on Wednesday, Sept. 20, in the William D. Mullins Center in the Reebok/UMass–UConn challenge at 7 p.m. This will be the first–ever volleyball match to be played in the Mullins Center, as the University prepares to host the NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championships in December. Reebok will present gifts to the first 100 fans entering the Mullins Center. Tickets are $5 for adults $2 for children. UMass students are admitted free with a student ID.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 10 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 19, 1995

Newcomers boost Bruins in '95–96
The Boston Bruins are hoping that newcomers like Kevin Stevens will lead them to the Stanley Cup (See Sports, page 10).

Forestry department set for tree survey
The UMass Forestry and Wildlife Management departments are conducting a tree survey in Springfield (see News, page 3).

Thinking of just the right words
Juan Muñoz's "Portrait of a Turkish Man Drawing" will be on exhibit at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Today will be sunny and pleasant with the high in the 60s. Tomorrow sunshine will give way to clouds with showers likely. highs still in the 60s.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 40	HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

One more minor adjustment
Matthew Pirraglia, left, and Paul Dunham adjust a transit as they prepare to survey the area around Central yesterday afternoon. The landscape contracting majors are working on a design for the area.

Clinton appoints UM professor to financial responsibility board

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts professor Andrew Brimmer, who holds the William D. Barrett professorship in economics, has been appointed by President Bill Clinton to chair the District of Columbia Financial Responsibility and Municipal Assistance Authority board.

The board was instated as a result of the dire fiscal financial crisis that the District of Columbia is currently in. The district has culminated a $700 million debt. Brimmer's and his colleague's responsibilities will be to oversee the budget plans of the city until it recovers.

The board has influential powers of recommendation and may even implement their own budget plans for the city if local officials fail to move toward a balanced budget.

The unpaid five–member board will also review major city labor contracts and all legislation proposed by the District of Columbia City Council.

A history

Curing the Capitol's financial crisis is a long way from Brimmer's childhood in Louisiana, the son of a sharecropper. He told the Boston Globe earlier this year that when he was growing up, "The emphasis was on learning all you can. You never know when you'll need it."

Brimmer was drafted into the U.S. Army at the age of 18 and was shipped to Hawaii after the end of World War II. After his discharge, he attended the University of Washington. He went on to receive a masters' degree and a doctorate.

Brimmer taught economics and finance at Michigan State University from 1958–1961. He also taught at Harvard University's school of Business Administration, where he received his doctorate. In addition he spent a year in India as a Fulbright Fellow.

Holding honorary degrees from 20 colleges and universities, Brimmer has written on general economics, international finance and balance of payments as well as economic development in the black community.

But Brimmer is no stranger to Washington political posts. In 1966, he was appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson to a full 14–year term at the Federal Reserve. He was also the first African–American to serve on the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. However, he resigned in 1974 to pursue other interests. For the last 20 years, he has operated his own Washington–based financial consulting firm, Brimmer and Company, Inc.. His clients have included the cities of Atlanta, Philadelphia and St. Louis, as well as Dade County, Fla.

In 1991, Brimmer was appointed by President George Bush to co–chair a national commission studying the savings and loan crisis.

Terry Lynch, director of the Downtown Coalition of Churches, told the New York Times last May that Brimmer is an "excellent choice for the position." Lynch also told the Times that they "need someone with his kind of management and fiscal expertise and at the same time proven civic and civil rights concerns."

Brimmer represents Massachusetts

Brimmer came to Massachusetts in 1987. Each fall, he teaches on a part–time basis an advanced undergraduate research seminar on business and macroeconomic policy besides lecturing regularly. He also works with graduate students who are preparing their dissertations. He will return in October to visit his class.

Dr. Douglas Vickers was responsible for bringing Brimmer to Massachusetts. They were both members of the faculty at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business, where Brimmer taught from 1961–1966.

"Dr. Brimmer is without doubt the most outstanding applied economist of his time," Vickers said. "Through his very wide responsibilities, he has made a number of fundamental contributions in a number of applied areas."

Dr. Vickers spoke highly of Brimmer's accomplishments and how his appointment reflects on the University's economics department.

"This is a significant honor for the economics department to have Andrew Brimmer as a part of the academic program," Vickers said. "He offers courses which are very attractive to the department's best students."

Economics department chairman James Boyce also admires Brimmer's work, and is proud that a professor of his prestige is a member of this faculty.

"Andrew Brimmer is one of the best known economists in the United States with a distinguished record of service in both the public and the private sectors," Boyce said. "It's a great honor for the department and the University to have him as a member of the faculty."

"We're very honored to have him here," Judy Dietel, the Chair's Secretary, said. "He's like a king who's kept the common touch. I believe it's a quote from Rudyard Kipling. It's one of the nicest things I can say about someone who has risen in the ranks."

Brimmer has been appointed to serve on the board for the next three years.

Senate accepts two amendments

By Phil Milson
Collegian Correspondent

The Senate voted Friday to accept two amendments proposed by John F. Kerry (D–Mass.), affecting the Welfare Reform Act.

The first attempts to use schools for community–based learning centers, and the second requires parents to sign a "Parental Responsibility Act."

States would have the power to expand hours of operation to schools that serve the needs of "at–risk" children and their families. They may also design and establish educational and recreational activities for disadvantaged families.

"In this time of tighter budgets we need to make better use of the resources we already have, such as our schools, to strengthen and improve our communities," Senator Kerry said. "These amendments go to the heart of this by turning our schools into community–based centers for learning and recreation."

The Department of Education will be responsible for the administration of the projects, and will be required to provide $10 million to the states for each of the next five fiscal years. These projects have been established in part to complement the already existing, "Community Schools Program," which is administered by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Kerry's second amendment requires parents receiving welfare to take a more active role in their children's education and supervision. Parents must now sign contracts obligating them to ensure school attendance, immunization of their children and their presence at various parenting, money management classes and school activities.

Springfield prepares for preliminary elections

By Trudy Tynant
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A heavy turnout was predicted as residents of the state's third largest city prepared to pare down a field of five mayoral candidates today.

Springfield Mayor Robert Markel faces City Council President Michael Albano, former Mayor Charles Ryan, lawyer Frederick Hurst and 19–year–old Chelon Jenkins in his bid for a third two–year term. The top two vote getters in the non–partisan preliminary election will face each other in November.

Mayoral preliminary elections are also scheduled today in Beverly, Everett, Lynn and Salem, while council preliminaries were scheduled in Boston, Chicopee, Northampton and several other cities.

Election Commission Secretary James Sullivan predicted Monday that the hard fought non–partisan campaign being played out against a backdrop of an upcoming referendum on casino gambling could bring 40 percent of Springfield's voters out to the polls.

Markel, a 51–year–old political science professor, was elected without opposition two years ago. But his opponents, particularly Albano, have capitalized on several summer stumbles by Markel, including a move to shut all of the city's branch libraries. The mayor backed off the shutdown proposal within five days following a barrage of public criticism.

Ryan, 68, last served as mayor from 1962–67. He spearheaded an anti–casino gambling citizen's group that narrowly defeated a non–binding referendum last November endorsing a gambling casino in the city. Ryan said he decided to run to push his economic development platform as an alternative to gambling.

Albano, 44, is the most outspoken supporter of casino gambling among the three front–runners, as city residents face another non–binding vote on gambling in November.

Albano, 44, is the most outspoken supporter of casino gambling among the three front–runners, as city residents face another non–binding vote on gambling in November.

Hurst, 51, is a lawyer and former member of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. He has styled himself as a political outsider who could unite a racially divided city. Jenkins became involved in city politics after a 20–year–old black motorist was fatally shot by a white police officer in February 1994 and has called for better training for police and more participation in government by young people. She and Ryan are the only candidates to oppose casino gambling.

In Beverly, incumbent Mayor William F. Scanlon Jr., faces former Mayor F. John Monahan and Karl Jansons in the preliminary election. Everett Mayor John R. McCarthy is opposed by John D'Agostino, Barry F. Erickson and Stephen Smith in his bid for another term. Lynn Mayor Pat McManus is opposed by Martin McNulty, Gerard Caron and James Cowdell.

Salem Mayor Neil Harrington also has three opponents: MichaelHarris, Thaddeus Lantych, and Robert Machado. In Boston, three incumbents are seeking re–election in the at–large City Council race. There are 15 candidates.

Trial addresses aspects of women's rights

Northampton woman challenging law; hopes to gain the right to breastfeed in public

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

A Northampton woman is scheduled to speak with Senator Stan Rosenberg this Friday about protecting a woman's right to breastfeed her child in public or in private.

Connie Forcier was repeatedly asked by a courthouse guard to leave a Northampton courtroom in early August because she was breastfeeding her infant while waiting for a friend.

Forcier said she was given the argument that adults were not allowed to eat or drink in the courtroom and children should not either. Forcier refused to leave, saying, "You can't compare infants to adults."

"I'm trying to get the law changed to protect women's rights. It is legal for women to breastfeed, but there is nothing protecting women's rights. A woman can be arrested for indecent exposure while breastfeeding, but not for breastfeeding itself," Forcier said.

Tom Mitchell, an aid of Rosenberg's, said the senator "has been taking this issue very seriously" and that "he is anxious to hear what (Forcier's) specific concerns are."

Society's view of breastfeeding is at the heart of the debate, said Forcier. "People look at it sexually rather than a way to nurture and a way to feed my baby. I think it's silly. It shouldn't even be an issue. It's what God intended," she said.

Forcier said she chose breastfeeding instead of formula for her children because it is healthier. "Breastfeeding reduces the chance of juvenile diabetes, allergies, childhood cancers and it reduces the chance of cancer for the mother."

The following states have recently passed legislation protecting nursing mothers from an arrest for indecent exposure: Florida, Iowa, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Virginia, Illinois, Texas, Nevada and Utah.

The decision is pending in Arizona, New Jersey and Ohio. After speaking to Senator Rosenberg on Friday, Forcier said she hopes Massachusetts will be put on this list.

Forcier said she chose breastfeeding instead of formula for her children because it is healthier. "Breastfeeding reduces the chance of juvenile diabetes, allergies, childhood cancers and it reduces the chance of cancer for the mother," she said.

Forcier has received a lot of support from women's organizations and other nursing mothers. "The reason I'm so adamant about this is because I'm an experienced nurser. Someone could have stopped nursing over this. I don't want to see that happen. Breastfeeding is too beneficial for both the mother and the infant."

Forcier is trying to get on a TV show to spread public awareness about the benefits and naturalness of breastfeeding.

Forcier has never had a problem breastfeeding in public before. She said she has breastfed both her children everywhere, whenever her children were hungry.

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

And they never need water . . .
Mitali Shah, a junior psychology major, checks out the prickly flora in the Durfee Conservatory yesterday.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Sept. 19

LBGA Info-Social — The LBGA will hold its weekly info- social from 7 p.m. - 9 p.m. in the Campus Center room 803. refreshments will be served and a movie (title to be determined) will be shown.

Lecture — Gallery Talk: Idealism, Naturalism and Expressionism in the German Print at the Turn of the Century, John Czaplica, Mead Art Museum, AC, free, 12:15 p.m.

Meeting — The first meeting of the Woman's Chapter of Hillel House, join in discussing plans for the coming year as well as the direction the group will take, all sisters welcome, Hillel House, 8 p.m.

Meeting — Vanity of vanities, Everything is vanity, Bible study, sponsored by the Graduate Christian Fellowship, Rm. 177, Campus Center, 7:30 p.m.

Reading — Grace Paley, activist and writer of stories and poems, AC Creative Writing Center Fall Reading Series, free, Wootton's Books, 19 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Video and Panel Discussion — Harvest of Shame, '60s documentary about the plight of migrant workers, panel discussion about the changes in conditions since the '60s, sponsored by RAIL, the Alliance for Student Power, and MIM, Rm. 904, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 20

Community — Israeli folk dancing, instruction from 7:30 p.m. - 8:15 p.m., open dancing from 8:15 p.m. - 9 p.m., free and open to the public, Hillel House.

Lecture — Republicans, Clinton, and US Foreign Policy, Five College Faculty Panel with: Michael Klare, PAWSS; Luan Troxel, SC; Gregory White, SC; part of PAWSS Fall Lecture Series, Rm. 103, McConnell, SC, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The ALANA Caucus' first meeting of the year, all interested students welcome, Rm. 301, Student Union, 6 p.m.

Meeting — Informational meeting for the 1996 UMass Program in Siena, Italy, third floor lounge, Herter Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Asian American Students Assoc. first general meeting, new members welcome, room 903, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Music — Jamie Anderson, singer, songwriter, comic, part of the GLBT Cafe Series, $3-$5 donation requested, 545- 4824, The Blue Wall, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 21

GLBT Lecture — Fighting Words: A Queer Declaration of Independence, by Scott Tucker, queer writer, health care activist, democratic socialist and founding member of ACT UP, free and open to the public, accessible, 545-4824, Rm. 803, Campus Center, 12 p.m. - 1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Animal Rights Coalition's first meeting, all are welcome, room 903, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Meeting — The UMass Hang Gliding Club's first general meeting, all welcome, call 545-0804 for information, Campus Center, check info desk for room, 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, informational meeting for perspective members, sixth floor lounge, Thompson Tower, 4 p.m. - 6 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital: Baroque to Jazz, David Sporny, trombone with Nadine Shank, piano, $5 for public, $2.50 for UMass students, Bezanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 22

Lecture — "Environmental effects of Bolide Impact at the KT Boundary," by Haraldur Sigurdsson, Five College Distinguished Lecturer, School of Oceanography, University of Rhode Island, Geosciences Lecture Sciences Series, Morrill 2 South, Room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Notices

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 5-1506

Exhibit — "France '95," the works of 40 UMass undergraduate Art majors during 2 intensive summer programs in the South of France, photography, drawings, paintings, sculpture, handmade books, and journals, Herter Gallery, Sept. 18-28, M-F 11-4 p.m.

Exhibit — Foundations Works, a juried exhibition of two and three dimensional works by first year art students in the 1994/95 Foundations Programs in Art, directed by Prof. Pat Lasch, Sept. 18-28, Herter Art Gallery, M-F 11 p.m. - 4 p.m.

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256-8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1-Oct. 31, Mon-Fri 9 p.m. - 5 p.m.

Co-op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m or call 545-0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545-0137.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545-0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696-7752.

Campus Police Log

Sudden death

Sept. 17

Jack C. Toney, 22, of Worcester, fell to his death from the 13th floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Liquor law violations

Sept. 15

Daniel K. Armstrong, 20, of 244 Harkness Ave., Springfield, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol, as well as possession of a Class D substance.

Sept. 16

Dean R. Peasley, 20, of 100 Adelaide Terr., Torrington, Conn., was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

James R. Rae III, 20, of 1 Mimosa Cir., Ridgefield, Conn., was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

Francis Case, 19, of 309 S. Longyard Rd., Southwick, was arrested for transporting alcohol.

Eric J. Searles, 18, of 43 Club House Road, Tolland, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

Christopher L. McMahon, 17, of 253 Coburn Ave., Worcester, was arrested for possession of a false or stolen license and underage possession of alcohol.

Matthew L. Grimley, 18, of 31 Sunrise Ave., Grafton, was arrested for underage possession of alcohol.

Drug law offenses

Sept. 15

An odor of marijuana was investigated at Gorman Residence Hall.

An odor of marijuana was investigated at Webster Residence Hall.

An odor of marijuana was investigated at Washington Hall.

Sept. 17

Gregory E. Myers, Jr., 21, of 69 Fairway Drive, Wethersfield, Conn., was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Traffic stop

Sept. 16

Tony B. Dias, 19, of 156 Holy Cross Cir., Ludlow was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol.

Wayne L. McCormick, 20, of 40 Red Oak Lane, Ballston Spa, New York, was arrested for transporting liquor.

Injured person

Sept. 15

A diabetic individual in Cance Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual with breathing difficulties was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Sept. 16

An injured person at the Press gate on Stadium Drive refused ambulance transport.

An individual with an ankle injury was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Sept. 17

An individual with medical problems at Coolidge Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual who fainted at Franklin Dining Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

A person from Wheeler Residence Hall with unknown medical problems was taken to UMI.

Vandalism

Sept. 15

There was a window smashed on a vehicle in Lot 22.

There was a window smashed in the lobby of Kennedy Residence Hall.

An individual reported that his vehicle had been damaged in the Campus Center garage.

Sept. 16

There was a chair thrown through the window of the 5th floor lounge, John Quincy Residence Hall.

Sept. 17

Christopher L. Donnelly, 20, of 335 Woburn St., Lowell, was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and malicious destruction of property valuing under $250.

Accident

Sept. 15

There was a report that a front bumper was damaged at Van Meter Residence Hall.

Sept. 17

There was a report of minor damage done to a parked vehicle in Lot 34.

A vehicle on University Drive, attempting to pass another vehicle, hit curbing, which caused a flat tire and bumper damage.

A vehicle slid on wet pavement and struck the bumper of another vehicle on Washington Road.

A vehicle hit curbing while exiting Campus Center Way.

Animal complaint

Sept. 15

There was a report of an injured bird. Environmental Health and Safety responded.

Larceny

Sept. 15

There was a Walkman reported stolen at Grayson Residence Hall.

Sept. 16

There was a sign stolen from the top of a parked vehicle in the Southwest Mall.

There was a bicycle stolen from Patterson Residence Hall.

Sept. 17

There was a report of property stolen from a pizza delivery driver at John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Noise complaint

Sept. 15

There was a complaint of loud music at Dwight Residence Hall.

Sept. 16

There was a complaint of loud music at Emerson Residence Hall.

There was a complaint of a loud stereo at Gorman Residence Hall.

Intoxicated person

Sept. 15

An intoxicated person on Sunset Ave. was cared for by friends, according to police.

Sept. 16

A 19-year-old intoxicated individual by the Southwest Mall was put in protective custody.

There were two individuals arguing at the Southwest Circle.

Judies

Munchie Madness

Monday - Friday 3-6

1/2 Price Munchie Menu

Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes	~~$6.95~~	$3.48
Potato Skins	~~$6.99~~	$3.50
Nachos Especial	~~$7.25~~	$3.63

And More!

51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

HELP WANTED

Drivers Needed to Deliver the UMass Collegian on Campus

Must Have a Car

Stop in at the Collegian Office in the basement of the Campus Center or Call 545-3500 and ask for Ryan or Earl

AEROBICS

FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA

253-3539

WALKING DISTANCE

THE COLLEGIAN IS ALWAYS LOOKING FOR WRITERS IF INTERESTED COME DOWN TO THE 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT ASK FOR JUAN

UMass Division of Continuing Education

Your entryway into the University and the future

• Over 200 credit courses and noncredit workshops — in the evening!
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Part-time bachelor's degree program for busy people
• Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register now for Fall classes.

Call for a free course catalog - 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst

providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Tree inventory set to take place

UM department to help pinpoint hazardous trees in Springfield

By Amy H. Parodysz
Collegian Staff

The Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management is coordinating a tree inventory project in Springfield and Agawam — two cities among the first in the country to use community volunteers in the development of a computerized inventory of their urban forests.

The survey will help city planners to pinpoint hazardous trees, as well as the best spots to plant new trees.

"The tree in the city are a critical component, and if the people can benefit from that the whole quality of life increases," said David Bloniarz, project coordinator and Springfield resident.

Trees "cleanse the air, cool the cities during the summer and add oxygen to the air," said Bloniarz. They also "add monetary values to residential and community places" and add aesthetic beauty, he said.

The resident volunteers "are people who have the most to gain or lose by the quality of the trees in their city because they are the people who live in those neighborhoods," said Bloniarz.

Volunteers will collect such information as size, species and condition of the trees, and that data will be incorporated into a computerized Geographic Information System (GIS). Bloniarz says the trees will be part of a GIS map, which will include sewer and gas lines, pavement, sidewalks, and other physical aspects of a municipality.

About 30 residents from each community are needed to complete the survey, which will be conducted Oct. 7 and 8 in Springfield and Oct. 14 in Agawam. Training for the session will take place in a joint session on Sept. 26.

Volunteers make the project possible because they complete work that would be impossible to fund due to budget restraints, according to Bloniarz. Their work will result in 2,500 hours of labor, which translates into more than $25,000 worth of service.

The McKnight and South End neighborhoods of Springfield, which are among the oldest parts of the city, will be studied in an extension of last year's survey of Metro-Center. There are an estimated 4,000 trees in the neighborhoods being studied.

Last fall, 57 volunteers studied 1,100 on trees on 20 miles of roadway in Metro-Center.

"The people who volunteered have a strong appreciation for the environment and a sense of civic pride," said City Forester Edward Casey.

Springfield is ideal for the survey, according to Bloniarz. "It has a rich diversity of people from different culturally, social, economic and educational backgrounds," and "a rich tradition of urban forestry," said Bloniarz.

After the initial Springfield study, the Town of Agawam contacted the University.

In Agawam, there is an estimated 2,200 trees along the 26 miles of roadway. However, only 13 miles of high-traffic roadway will be surveyed, according to Deborah Dachos, the director of planning and community development in Agawam.

The Massachusetts Urban Forestry Management Project, a subdivision of the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management, has received a federal grant from the U.S. Forestry Service for the past three years. They are working in cooperation with the USDA Forest Service and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management.

The first year, Brookline was surveyed and 100 residents volunteered.

"We hope to do the whole City [of Springfield] if more of that funding is available," said Casey.

UMass students interested in this project may call David Bloniarz at 545-3208.

Rabbis forbid use of 'purity computer'

By Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Technological progress is not always welcome: Ultra-Orthodox rabbis have forbidden followers from using a "purity computer" to determine when they may have sex.

The increasingly popular, hand-held device helps religious couples navigate a restriction in Jewish law against sex starting 12 hours before menstruation to seven days after it ends. Many couples have in the past turned to sages for help with the calculation.

With the computer, women need only enter information about their menstrual cycle. The device — actually a calculator programmed exclusively for this purpose — then details when sex is permissible.

Several rabbis last week banned the use of the devices, Arieh Wexler, rabbinical court secretary in the predominantly religious town of Bnei Brak, said Monday.

Rabbi Yosef Halevi Eliashiv, an authority on Jewish law, warned in a letter to the religious daily Yated Neeman that the "purity computer" might spark a technological incursion into other areas where rabbis traditionally held sway.

"Everyone must go to the home of his rabbi, put his question and abide by the answer," wrote Eliashiv.

In another letter published by the paper, Rabbi Eliezer Yehuda Waldenberg warned the manufacturers "lest they dare to tread on holy ground (and) turn computers into authorities on Jewish law."

Sales information on the purity computers" was not available.

About a tenth of Israel's 4.5 million Jews are ultra-Orthodox.

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Roll, roll, roll your poster

Senior Spanish major Jeff Mabel rolls up a purchase for Brigitte Cooper, a junior education major, at left, at the poster sale on the Campus Center Concourse yesterday. Sophomore Tracy Patterson rings up the sale.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK!
113 Campus Center 545-3500

AIM HIGH

The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective

Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.

We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.

The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.

Call us at 545-2437 for more details.

AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

Give the Collegian an international perspective!

Come write for Developing Nations

Multicultural Affairs
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Imagine having direct access to thousands of African American MBAs in major U.S. firms nationwide. And having the right connections and the right opportunities to help keep your career on track. If you're an MBA student who's ready to put your career plans in high gear, we're an organization that can help you. The National Black MBA Association (NBMBAA) is a national network of business executives and entrepreneurs who work in a wide range of industries.

Over 4,000 Corporate Contacts
Only One Name to Remember
Only One Event to Attend

- For 25 years, the National Black MBA Association has provided unique opportunities for MBA trained professionals. Put these contacts to work for you by becoming part of this growing force of business leaders. By joining the NBMBAA at the student rate of $55, you'll receive full membership benefits, including:
- •Scholarship programs for undergraduates, graduates and Ph.D. candidates
  •An annual conference and other professional development programs
  •Mentoring programs that provide access to experienced professionals in your field
  •A membership directory featuring detailed contact information on all members
  •A quarterly newsletter
  •Employment Network Services that help you with job searches and placement
- Attend our Annual Conference September 27--October 1, 1995 at the Boston Marriott Hotel Copley Place and activate this network. Our Career Fair, on September 28--29, 1995, offers over 1,000 contacts from hundreds of corporations.
- Join the NBMBAA. This small investment can reap big rewards for your career. Call or write today for a membership application. Discounted student rates are available for the conference and membership.
- The National Black MBA Association
  180 N Michigan Ave | Suite 1515 | Chicago, IL 60601
  312 | 236 | 2622

It's Back To School Time!

10% Off Parts With Campus I.D.

Not valid with other discounts • Does not apply to oil changes and alignments • Discount valid only at time of purchase • Offer expires 10/16/95

FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE TO CAMPUS

MIDAS

Mufflers • Brakes • Shocks • Struts
Computerized Alignment
Rte. 9, Hadley 586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

THE COLLEGIAN IS ALWAYS LOOKING FOR WRITERS IF INTERESTED COME DOWN TO THE 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT ASK FOR JUAN

Any Two Calzones only $7.95 price includes tax

Fall Specials Save in Twos 256-6100

Two Large Cheese Pizzas only $12.00 price includes tax

Regular, Whole Wheat & Corn Bread Crusts Available on Pizza & Calzones

CANTONE'S CO. PIZZA 256-6100 45 RPM 481 West Street Amherst MA

FREE DELIVERY 256-6100 Open 4pm - 2am 7 Days $7.00 Min. on M/C & Visa

Any Two Large Subs only $8.00 price includes tax

No Coupons Needed With These Specials 256-6100

Any Two Large 1-Item Pizzas only $14.00 price includes tax

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Position Vacant Staff Artists
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Gen Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Connec News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Searching for an answer

Taft Bailey

I sit here numb with sorrow as I reflect upon and mourn the tragic death of a fellow University of Massachusetts student. I cannot even begin to imagine what must of went through this young man's mind as he contemplated whatever severe emotional agony that ultimately lead to the painful decision that pitted him against the essence of our existence; the powerful confrontation between the sometimes harsh reality of life and the uncertainty of death.

Although I never personally knew this brother, I feel as though somehow my absence in his time of sorrow could have been, by fate, avoided. As a student body and as a society we are all a bit weakened by the loss of an individual who sadly chose not to contribute his piece to this complicated and often difficult puzzle that we call life. I am deeply afflicted by a question for which I now realize there is never a definite answer — why?

In fact, a small symbol of this sorrow and ambivalence is finding its way down my cheek as I struggle to write these words. My interest in the answer to this question brought me to the library where I began to research the topics of depression and suicide. There I uncovered a great deal of information that may be of value to others such as myself interested in preventing the reoccurrence of such a tragedy.

Major depression occurs in 10 percent to 20 percent of the worlds population in the course of a lifetime. The term depression is often modified by words that imply either some specific factor or some chemical mechanism as the cause of the state. Thus, in psychological terms, depressions have been considered as the reactions to some loss of, or separation from, a valued person or object.

Depression is defined by a standard set of symptoms described in the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders. They are: 1. Poor appetite and significant weight loss, or increased appetite and significant weight gain. 2. Insomnia or increased sleep. 3. Agitation, or retardation of movement or thought. 4. Loss of interest or pleasure in usual activities or decrease in sexual drive. 5. Fatigue and loss of energy. 6. Feelings of worthlessness, self-reproach or excessive inappropriate guilt. 7. Diminished ability to concentrate, or indecisiveness. 8. Recurrent thoughts of death or suicide or suicide attempts.

Research indicates that certain well-defined methods of psychotherapy can help in the treatment of some cases of depression, but no evidence exists that traditional insight-oriented psychoanalytic therapy is effective in serious cases such as those accompanied by suicidal thoughts or attempts.

I feel strongly that suicide is the triumph of ambivalence over the struggle for survival. The essence of this contradiction lay primarily in the inability to comprehend the tragic repercussion of fatality, or the infinite indication of the defeated state of death which is far from triumphant for anyone forced to contend with the death of a loved one.

Many romanticists view suicide as a poetic challenge to mortality in which the will to carry on is sacrificed for the mystical unknown realization of death. Diaries and other evidence about the thinking of people committing suicide reveal they commonly consider their death as a passing on to another world or going to God, or simply escaping this world.

Researchers have found that suicide notes almost always read as if their authors believe they will still be able to witness what happens to them after they are dead. This suggest that these individuals do not think of themselves as dying when they commit suicide — merely that they will be living in a different way or in some other world. While there is a great deal of speculation about death, one thing that remains certain is when you die, your existence in this world as the entity that the world has come to know and love is gone forever, and the only remnants left behind are memories, mere images of a departed soul.

Why didn't I notice there was something wrong? Could I have said or done something? If only I had taken the time to talk with him or listen to her. These and other questions slowly and painfully eat away at the conscience of the friends and loved ones of individuals who take their own lives. Researchers have advanced a number of theories in the effort to explain the causes of suicide. Psychological theories stress personality and cognitive factors. Sociological theories stress social and cultural factors.

One of the major psychological theories of suicide is the personality theory, which attempts to explain suicide on the basis of differences between the suicidal person and non- suicidal people. Sociological theories of suicide usually emphasize the importance of either the social structure or the situations individuals face.

Whatever traumatizes an individual to the point that he or she envisions no solution other than death, pales in comparison to the pain individuals close to that loved one will have to carry with them for a lifetime.

If you, or someone you know, display the above indications of depression, or is contemplating suicide, please seek help. Consider the pain and emotional anguish that your death will have on those around you. The University Mental Health Services offers professional assistance 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In addition, concerned students, I, Dan Lizana and Sid Ferreira of the CEEBMS staff have organized an information session which will take place of Sept. 26 in the New Africa House Library for individuals seeking more information on the symptoms of depression. A health care professional will be on hand to answer questions and give insight on methods for students and staff to recognize and seek assistance for those in need of professional help. Immediately following the informational session, we intend to hold a candle light vigil walking in silence from the New Africa House to Southwest, where we will commence the evening in prayer.

Life is precious and no matter how difficult things may seem, there are people out there who really care and are willing to help you get through difficult times.

Editor's Note: Police have not confirmed whether or not Toney's death was a suicide.

Taft Bailey is a UMass student.

Reaching out to remember

Brett Morehouse

I don't think I noticed Jack at first. When you're starting to teach another semester's karate gym class your mind is unanimously focused on your own energy and movement, and you are trying to match verbal description to enhance what your students are seeing. From the moment you break out of the initial class meditation you're sweating. Your karate form and integrity have to be the pinnacle of what you can offer, even if they aren't asking you for it to be that way. Your students become a moving blur as you scan from one to the next.

Some looked at me lethargically in those first minutes, barely moving their bodies to the cadence of this outrageous, white clad physical education instructor. Some watched me with disbelief or apprehension. John, my friend and co- instructor, would also draw the same looks as he would return my bark-like shout (kiai as it is appropriately called) from his position in the back of Boyden 237. Juan, our Teaching Assistant, would hold the center.

It's an unusual experience that is not for everybody, but there are always those who can connect with it. These are people who find in themselves a well, never before tapped into. This source boils over when met with such an art which combines on-your-feet meditation and physical training whose demands on one's coordination make even agile jocks look like fools.

Jack Toney made that connection as much as anyone I have ever known. He was a well built, good looking guy with dark, curled hair and dark, smooth complexion. His brightly colored, green eyes stood out. He was a former track team hammer thrower who first turned my head when I realized he was sweating far more than I was. His face was entrenched in concentration. He stuck low in the training stances. I never had to tell him anything twice. He was always in attendance, and always in ardor.

He quickly learned of the NECKC Shotokan club and just as quickly became its most attended member. We didn't have much to offer him, just a stone stairwell in the back of Totman.

But I would find him there sure enough at times, alone in that dreary place spurring himself to move in the way that we were teaching him. But we could never teach him to have a spirit like he did. He projected good energy that was never underlaid with any dark motive. This good energy of his always was on full power. Always.

You may think I just say this because I happen to know him, and I want to score self-righteous points by gracing these PC pages with my two cents. No way. Jack Toney was for real.

You could feel it just by being within feet of him. That "divine spark" once talked about by a man named Colonel Chamberlain. That inescapable ingredient that makes us human. To be without it is just to be a person lost in the wilderness of apathy and plainness.

It was this drive to live that brought my soon to be gym class teaching assistant to a mountain where he fell. No doubt he was scaling the steepest slope he could find when he incurred his leg injury which cost him his karate. That was a little over a year ago. I was just glad that I had ever known him at all.

I remember the times in spurring when I struck him near full force, and after the sudden exhale his first reaction would be to laugh. But then he would grit his jaw, regather himself, and fire away at me. I couldn't help but smile and laugh also, and I'm not really supposed to do that.

But a drive to live and disregard for heights also brought Jack to his window that rainy, Sunday morning. Clinging to the sides of it, he probably reached out to feel the rain on his hand or face just like any of us who take the time to appreciate these timeless things. But humans are not timeless. I grieve this fact, and I grieve his death.

Brett Morehouse is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

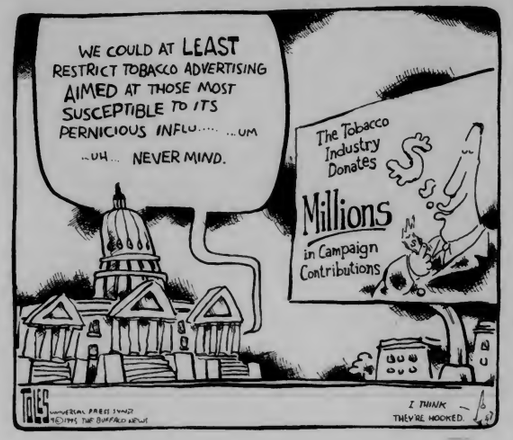
All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account; letters@olt.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial



WE COULD AT LEAST RESTRICT TOBACCO ADVERTISING AIMED AT THOSE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO ITS PERNICIOUS INFLU..... ..UM
..UH... NEVER MIND.
The Tobacco Industry Donates
Millions
in Campaign Contributions
I THINK THEY'RE HOOKED.
TOLES

Possibilities of a new candidate

Mark McGrath

His father came to America from Jamaica on a banana boat in 1920. He grew up in Harlem and the South Bronx. He graduated as a geology major from the City College of New York and went on to serve his country in Vietnam. Eventually he climbed through the ranks to become Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He is retired general Colin Powell, and he just may be the next president of the United States.

Although he has never stated he is going to be a presidential candidate, the American public and media have thrust the idea upon him. He is a prominent figure, even though he retired from public life two years ago. Everyone seems to support Colin Powell. In an age when politicians are no longer attractive to the public, a man who is not and never has been a politician seems to be rising to the top.

One of the things that is so attractive about Powell is he is everything that makes America great. He is the American Dream personified.

Around the turn of the century, millions of immigrants took a long and terrible journey to a country that was foreign to them. They left their homes, families, everything they had in their old countries in order to start again, to begin a new life in the land where dreams could come true. These immigrants were the people who built America.

Colin Powell's parents were Jamaican immigrants. They came to America with the same goals, endured the same hardships and lived difficult lives. Powell grew up in some of the worst parts of New York City, but he endured, and in fact, prospered. He took his opportunity and made something great of it.

Along the way, Powell has had to overcome many challenges, and at times he has failed. He began his college education as an engineering major. After deciding engineering wasn't his thing, he moved on to the pursuit of Geology. He never became a world-famous geologist, so he took that education with him when he went into the armed forces. There, he found his niche.

He realized his path to glory wasn't through Academia, it was through Vietnam. From there he climbed the chain of military command all the way to his last position, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, one of the most powerful positions in the country.

The fact that he is part of a minority has never deterred him. Growing up in the melting pot, he never had to see blatant racism until he went to Georgia for basic training in 1958. Once there, he experienced segregation firsthand. In his book he writes, "If I was going to be confined to one end of the playing field, then I was going to be a star on that side of the field. I was not going to let myself become emotionally crippled because I could not play on the whole field." He has become a star, and then some.

One of the more surprising aspects of his popularity as a yet to be declared candidate is the fact that he has done so without the backing of a political party. In fact, he has expressed disappointment with both parties. He believes the time may be coming for a third party which could represent the "sensible center of the American political spectrum."

If nothing else, Powell knows how to please the American people. His platform is nebulous at best, but more will be revealed as he makes a high-profile book tour this month.

Who knows? The United States may not be ready for another executive military man. The time may not yet have come for a minority president. But the idea of Colin Powell in office is very interesting at least.

In his lifetime Colin Powell has lived America. At present, as Americans search for direction, he could be the one to lead us into the 21st century. We already know he's a strong leader and a great man, and he would make a fantastic candidate, but whether or not he'll make a great president is something we're just going to have to find out.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Down with the textbook empire

Andrew Trodden

Returning to school each semester almost brings tears to my eyes and it's not because I'm so glad to be back here at UMass. The tears are simply due to the realization that I will spend more money in the first two weeks than I will throughout the rest of the semester.

I know what you are thinking, what method of enjoyment could possibly send my financial situation into such a harrowing tailspin. Unfortunately I don't receive even the teeny-weeniest bit of enjoyment out of parting with this rather large sum of cash. Maybe it would be a lot easier to accept this loss if the money wasn't going to the Textbook Annex.

The Annex has such a hold on our schools little textbook world, they can basically name their price. Despite the revoltingly high prices these books cost, we as students will pay for them because we need them. It's either pay for it at the Annex or go on a statewide book hunt and pay for it in gas money.

Allow me to give you a little evidence against the high and mighty Annex prices. A friend of mine recently, shall we say, beat the system. He checked a price on a book in the Annex and upon discovering that the book would set him back 45 big ones, he switched to plan B.

This fellow worked in a book store during the summer so he called up the store and ordered this book. The fun part of this is it only cost him 14 bucks, granted this was with his employee discount. But let's be reasonable here, even with a 50% discount the original price would still only be $28. But I highly doubt he had that high of a discount, which means the book was even cheaper. Regardless, we are still talking about some serious price markups on the part of the Annex.

As if we don't pay enough money for tuition here at UMass, the school feels they need to squeeze us for everything we've got. (I think the school would just rather we spent our money on them instead of on beer and cigarettes.)

The Annex will continue to name their prices at will until people will no longer pay for them, or take their business elsewhere — as is the case of the many professors who have the books for their class come from the book stores in town. Not that those stores are any cheaper, but at least it takes some business away from the Annex, which might in the long run force them to lower some of their prices. Well, maybe not, but it's at least worth the shot.

Until prices go down we all will continue to pay the Annex for their seemingly endless wealth of available knowledge, that's in paper form of course. We will pay for these books with hopes that we'll get a nice chunk of change for them at the end of the semester.

Sure thing, the check's in the mail.

Thinking of the good ol' textbook buyback usually arouses me to indulge in a hearty guffaw. But upon further reflection my laughter dissipates into the horrific realization of what the buyback really is — textbook extortion. After spending 300 greeners on books one might envision a healthy payback. Then they may as well envision themselves heading towards the light, because a big payback ain't gonna happen Jack.

The Annex knows at the end of the semester we're all in such dire need for cash that we take any amount we can get our hands on. If we actually have some money when we hear that petulant offer of theirs, we'll laugh in there rosy faces. But if we're broke ... gimmee that money.

I could buy a book, never even crack the binding, return it at the end of the semester receiving a lot less than I paid for it, and get about the same as the guy whose book has pages missing, a torn binding and highlighting all over it, even if the highlighting was done with a black marker.

I'd really like to know how the annex decides just exactly how much they'll give you for a used book. The condition of the book certainly holds no weight and they barely even look at it.

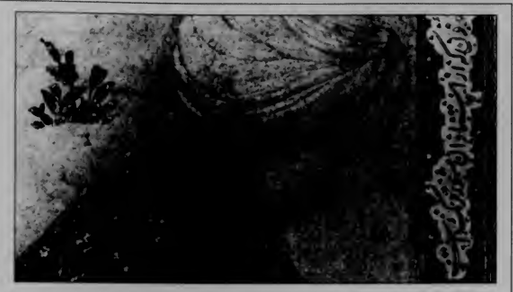
I could buy a book, never even crack the binding, return it at the end of the semester receiving a lot less than I paid for it, and get about the same as the guy whose book has pages missing, a torn binding and highlighting all over it, even if the highlighting was done with a black marker. Not to mention that these two books will both be on the shelf the next semester with a 75 percent markup of what they bought them back for.

Does the Textbook Annex really need to make this much money at the expense of the students? The Annex could make plenty of money without having to sell at extremely high prices and buyback at extremely low prices.

We are all being financially raped by the Textbook Annex, and to continue the metaphor, we're not reporting it. The Annex system needs to be changed or else we will continue to pay even higher prices and receive even lower returns.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living



Gentile Bellini's "Portrait of a Seated Scribe or Artist" COURTESY ISABELLA STEWART GARDNER MUSEUM

Sculptor creates from drawing

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

A "Do not Disturb" sign should be placed at the entrance of the special exhibitions gallery at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston. The exhibition "Portrait of a Turkish Man" recreates the solemn and solitary mind-set of an artist at work.

In "Portrait of a Turkish Man" Spanish artist Juan Muñoz crafted his own version of a delicate and colorful miniature called "Portrait of a Turkish Scribe or Artist" by Gentile Bellini, which is part of the permanent collection at the museum. Muñoz's installation shows a polychromed bronze statute of a boy sitting down, immersed in his work. The white enclosed room lacks windows or any type of decoration, with the exception of dark, oilstick drawings of human mouths.

The original Bellini drawing is a very delicate portrait of a Turkish man dressed in elaborate and embroidered attire, drawing on a blank tablet. Bellini's version incorporates western techniques such as shadowing, dimensions and human proportion, together with Byzantine features, such as decoration.

What was he drawing in that blank tablet? According to the exhibition guide, the miniature attracted the attention of the internationally renown sculpture last spring during his stay as an artist-in-resident. For Muñoz, it raised questions on the "ideas of inner focus, concentration and gaze, which equally describe the subject of the painting, the state of mind of an artist, and the changing and historical relationship of the viewer to the work of art," according to the exhibition guide.

The second theme that stands out and influenced Muñoz's work is the feeling of being an "outsider," according to the exhibition guide. He is a contemporary artist forced to deal with strangers and feelings of foreignness while displaying his artistry all over the world, similar to Bellini's experiences working abroad 500 years ago.

Gentile Bellini, an Italian artist of the 15th century from Venice, was famous for his family affiliations, particularly his brother Giovanni Bellini, reputed to be

Turn to SCULPTOR, page 6

Morphine's soothing sounds return

Sandman & company bring two string bass and sax to Noho

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

The walls at Pearl Street will be shaking with the sound of many a great bass groove this Wednesday night as the Boston trio Morphine takes the stage for a night of infectious music.

Heralded as one of the more original bands to come out of the Boston scene in quite some time, Morphine has, from the very start, been a band with its own identity (rather than just a band featuring former Treat Her Right members). This identity has been forged, mainly in part to the band's unusual instrumentation.

Featuring Mark Sandman on two-string slide bass and vocals, Billy Conway on drums and Dana Colley on saxophone, the trio first began to attract the bulk of its following after the release of their second album, Cure For Pain. The album's dark overtones, combined with a mixture of effects on both the bass and saxophone made five of the songs on the album a perfect fit for the soundtrack to the art-house flick Spanking The Monkey.

The band's latest album, Yes, features more unrelenting grooves, catchy sax hooks and the quirky singing/spoken word lyrical works of Sandman that made Cure For Pain an alternative smash.

But the real magic of this band is in its live show, which are known throughout the country for being notoriously crowd-pleasing which they have proved in performances in all over the country and in Europe.

Morphine will play Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton on Wednesday night at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12.50 in advance. Call 584-7771 for more information.

Boston's own Morphine are returning to Pearl Street on Wednesday night. COURTESY PETER ANDERSON

STUDY ABROAD
Semester, Summer and Year Programs
Ecuador • Spain
England • France
Canada • Mexico
Costa Rica • Italy
INTERNATIONAL STUDIES ABROAD
isa
817 W 24th St
Austin, TX 78705
(800) 580-8826
•SINCE 1987•

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
indoor Tennis & Basketball
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
*Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• stepo • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
Join now for our 15 week semester special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

THINGS YOU ALREADY KNOW...
◆ Always wear clean underwear.
◆ Watch Melrose and 90210 every week.
◆ Lend a hand to a friend in need.
ONE THING YOU DON'T KNOW...
Only 25% of UMass students smoke pot more than once a month.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
549-2671
An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of the UHS Eye Care Program, Fall, 1995
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Program

My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 80,000 individuals over that last 20 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and recently co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Eye care services include:
- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being about to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"

uhs EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient Hours and Campus Location
CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

Minutemaniacs
UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, are looking for new recruits for the '95-'96 season!
UMass
New Member Registration
Applications will be available and accepted at:
UMass Women's Volleyball vs.
Connecticut
$25.00 to Join!
New Members Will Be Picked By A Lottery System. Undergraduates Only!
September 20, 1995
7:00 P.M.
Mullins Center
Minutemaniac Benefits:
• Advance Ticket Pickup
• Minutemaniac T-Shirt
• Game Receptions
• "The Maniac" Newsletter
• Membership Card
UMass Students FREE with Valid Student I.D.
[Only one application per person will be accepted]
[Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Thursday & Friday]
Minutemaniacs

Innocence Mission poised for big time

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

How must it feel to be labeled a hot new band after being around for 12 years? Well you could ask the Innocence Mission when they play the Iron Horse tonight in support of their sophomore release on A&M, entitled Glow.

Largely due to the success of their single, "Bright As Yellow," the Innocence Mission can now be heard on alternative radio stations across the country along side of Verruca Salt and Green Day.

Glow is probably the band's finest moment and bassist Mike Bitts attributes it to the fact that, "We spend a lot of time together outside of practice and recording. Our friendship is a big part of our music."

The band indeed must be friends because for the past 12 years the band has been playing in the depths of obscurity. Before Glow, they released two albums on A&M, The Innocence Mission and Umbrella. Both of which received critical praise but barely made a dent in record sales.

The band is led by Karen Peris who writes all of the songs and sings lead vocals. She sights musical geniuses of John Lennon, Paul Simon and R.E.M. as big influences as well as the lesser known Red House Painters.

They have certainly put in their time as a band and it looks as if the future will be bright. Tonight's show at the Iron Horse should prove to be a delightful show with one of the hottest not so new bands around.

The Innocence Mission plus a special guest are appearing at the Iron Horse tonight for a 10 p.m. show. Tickets are $6 and are available at the door.

COURTESY DISCORD

PC from D.C.
Fugazi will appear at Pearl Street this Friday for a 7:00 p.m., all-ages show. Tickets are $5 and will be on sale Wednesday morning at Tix Unlimited, the Northampton Box Office and For the Record.

Mass. Wind Ensemble entertains Smith

MASSACHUSETTS WIND ORCHESTRA
John M. Greene Hall
September 17, 1995

The Massachusetts Wind Orchestra musicians gathered in the John M. Greene Hall at Smith College on Sunday, September 17.

Under the baton of its founder, Malcom W. Rowell, Jr., the orchestra played a varied selection of pieces from composers including Hindeman, Wilson, Sullivan, Downs and Fillmore.

A 55-member volunteer ensemble, the Massachusetts Wind Orchestra premiered in the fall of 1992. The members consist of public and private school music educators as well as private music teachers, freelance musicians and over 30 University of Massachusetts Department of Music graduates.

The program opened with Marche Hongroise and ended with three contrasting marches, enabling the audience to gain a sense of the different character of the respective pieces. Overall, the performances were even and engaging and the musicians were commended by a well-deserved standing ovation.

— Dionis Gauvin

■ sculptor

continued from page 5

one of the most famous Venetian painters of that century, and his brother-in- law Andrea Mantegna.

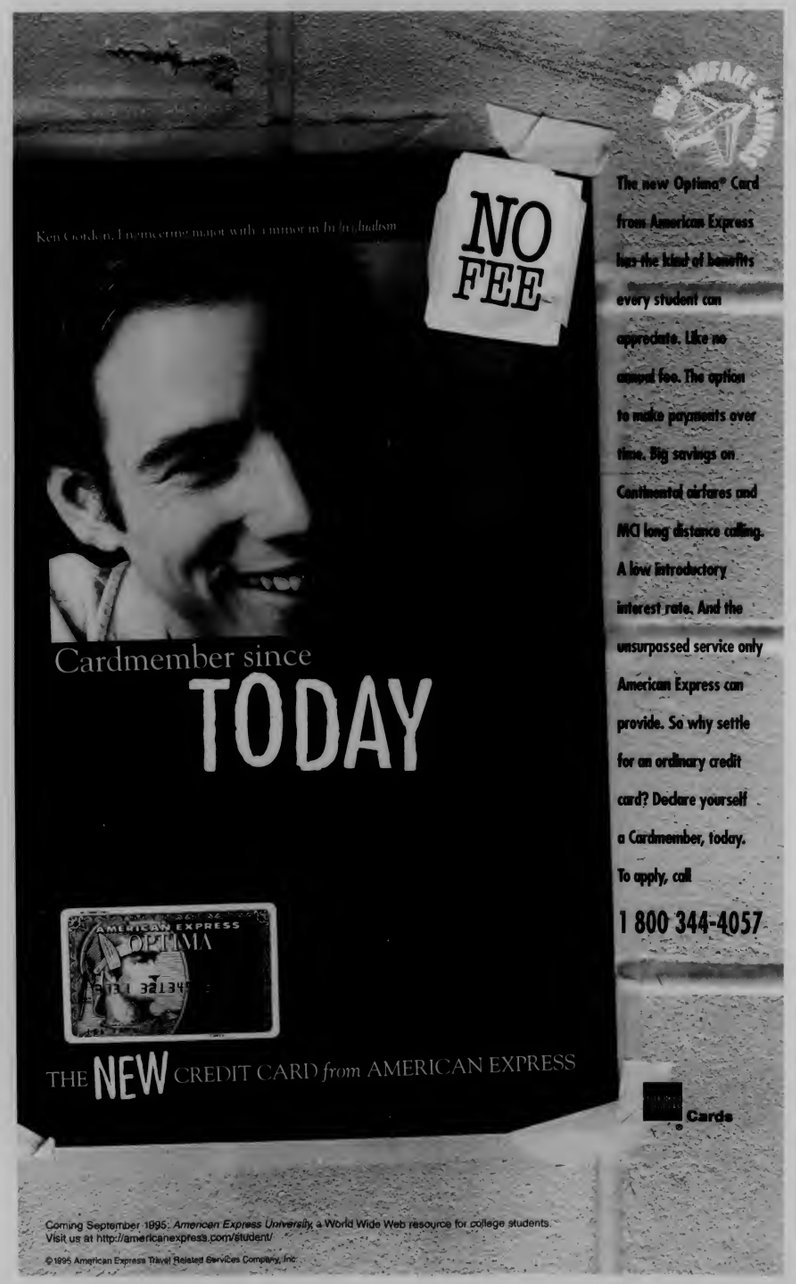
Perhaps other members of his family reached higher status as painters, but Gentile Bellini's portraits won him great recognition and a post in the official delegation to serve as a painter for Sultan Mehmet II in Constantinople. The drawing of the Turkish man was composed by Bellini during his two year stay there.

If for Muñoz the Turkish man was drawing mouths, then what were they saying? The artist suggest through the museum's publication that not only the context of Bellini's drawing inspired him, but also the location of the miniature in the Early Italian Room of the museum. Inside the room works by other masters as Fra Angelico and Piero della Francesca, hand-crafted tiles and a monumental fireplace surround the miniature drawing. However, the view from the second-story window of the Muddy River (part of the swampy Marshlands of the Fenway, one of the public parks that encircles Boston), enhanced Muñoz's perception of the Bellini miniature.

The miniature is one the smallest works inside the Early Italian Room but it breaks through the harmonious protected walls of the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum to become influenced by the voices of the river. The exhibition guide book explains, "What danger lies just outside the windows of the Gardner Museum? Muñoz suggests that a disembodied voice speaks from the river, rousing fears and feelings of guilt and complicity ... but here too, it is frustrated, and no exchange occurs.

The only dialogue that does take place happens in the gap between the artist's creation and the mind of the spectator, leaving an atmosphere physically charged like electrical synapses, emotionally charged like childhood associations and historically charged like the discipline of art making."

"Portrait of a Turkish Man" runs from September 15 to December 31, at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, 280 The Fenway, Boston. The museum will be open free to all on Saturday, October 7, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Regular admission fees are $7 for adults; $5 for senior citizens and college students with current I.D., $3 for youths, ages 12- 17; free to museum members and children under 12; Wednesdays, $3 for college students.



Ken Gordon, Unconvention major with minor in Intimidation
NO FEE
The new Optima® Card from American Express has the kind of benefits every student can appreciate. Like no annual fee. The option to make payments over time. Big savings on Continental airfares and MCI long distance calling. A low introductory interest rate. And the unsurpassed service only American Express can provide. So why settle for an ordinary credit card? Declare yourself a Cardmember, today. To apply, call 1 800 344-4057
Cardmember since
TODAY
AMERICAN EXPRESS OPTIMA
THE NEW CREDIT CARD from AMERICAN EXPRESS Cards
Coming September 1995. American Express University, a World Wide Web resource for college students. Visit us at http://americanexpress.com/student/©1995 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

One other potential answer appears to be first round draft choice McLaren. At only 18-years-old, the 6-foot-4-inch rookie has already impressed the Bruin brass.

"Kyle McLaren has had a super camp for us. He's done everything that's been asked of him," Kasper said. "He's showing a lot of poise and confidence for a young guy. I'm encouraged by it."

Sinden agreed with his new coach.

"He's a pretty solid defensemen. He's only 18-years-old and we must always remember that," he said. "He's a strong kid. He looks to me as if he's going to be a heckuva player."

In goal Kasper will look to Blaine Lacher as his No. 1 netminder, with Scott Bailey and Rob Tallas hoping to challenge Craig Billington for back-up duty.

Sinden expects another good year from Lacher.

"He had a terrific year [last season] as a first-year player. He's got to play at least as well this year," Sinden said. "From what I've seen so far, he's a little lighter. He's quick. He played very well so far. I don't see any reason that he won't improve."

The combination of a revamped offense, new uniforms and a new building, has brought new excitement to fans of the organization.

"I think there a rise in excitement," Sinden said. "With the FleetCenter and a couple of players we've acquired that are new to the team, are well known around her. We had two first round draft choices. All of those contribute to it."

Is it exciting for Sinden?

"Darn right it is," he says with a big grin. "It never changes for me."

The Bruins open their season Oct. 7 in the FleetCenter against the New York Islanders.

DAMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Defensemen Don Sweeney works the point in the Bruins offensive zone during the Black and White game Friday night at the Mullins Center.

■ men's cross country

continued from page 10

"Our sophomores don't have a lot of solid meet experience, and to see Ryan perform like that was really positive. If he can keep moving up like that it'll be a good season for him."

This was the opening meet of the season for the Massachusetts team, and it gave O'Brien a chance to see what the future season holds. As they look to the upcoming Paul Short Invitational, the coach is optimistic.

"We should race well in upcoming meets. Our top six guys ran well this weekend and I'm happy with everyone's performance. It looks like we're going to have a good season."

O'Brien said.

■ moves

continued from page 10

Veterans such as Steve Heinze, Ted Donato, Steve Leach, Brent Hughes and Dave Reid, who have been with the Bruins for many years are fighting for roster spots as well as playing time. Fighting being the operative word.

The pressure to make the team in any way possible was evidenced the first time the entire team stepped on the ice for training camp. No less than six altercations occurred the first day. They may have been wearing the same team logos, but they were not acting like teammates.

Heinze was involved in one of those altercations. He received a broken nose and took 10 stitches across the bridge of his nose, but he never missed a shift. His spirited play as well as his ability to score goals to this point in the pre-season has made an impression on upper management.

"Steve Heinze played a heckuva game for us," Kasper said after the Black and White game. "Not just because he scored goals. He worked hard and went up and down [the ice]."

"Steven Heinze has had an excellent training camp," Sinden agreed.

Kasper feels the additional talent produces good competition and will bring out the best in players during the camp.

"I definitely think it has," Kasper said. "I made it abundantly clear over the summer that if you're a returning player, don't take anything for granted and don't waste a day."

"Training camp is a short time," Kasper added. "Every game and every practice is important. It's time to show."

The biggest acquisition of forwards was the one that brought hometown heroes Kevin Stevens and Shawn MacEachern back to Boston from Pittsburgh where they each have won Stanley Cup Championships. Both played their college hockey down the street from the new FleetCenter on Commonwealth Ave., Stevens at Boston College and MacEachern at Boston University, where both were stars.

Joe Mullen, also formerly of Pittsburgh, was added a month later and although he is 38, he plays the game with tremendous skill and can still put the puck in the net often.

Todd Elik is another pick up in the off-season that should make the team. Formerly of the San Jose Sharks he was a role player and scored timely goals as the upstart Sharks twice knocked off heavily favored opponents in opening rounds of the playoffs the past two years.

Those four newcomers are a lock to make the roster as well as Neely, Oates, Mariusz Czerkawski and Jozef Stumpel. No more than 12 will make the opening night roster. That leaves at least eight people vying for four spots. The numbers are against them.

With the amount of talent on the roster, the Bruins could have three potent scoring lines and should be one of the league's top teams going into the playoffs.

Sports Notice

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemonians, are looking for new recruits for the 1995-96 season. New member registration will be tomorrow at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center during the UMass women's volleyball match against Connecticut. UMass students get into the game free with a valid student I.D.

It costs $25 to join and new members (undergraduates only) will be picked by a lottery system. Only one application per person will be accepted. Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Thursday and Friday. Minutemonian benefits include: advance ticket pickup, Minutemonian T-Shirt, game receptions, "The Maniac" Newsletter and a membership card.

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm. (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator.
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Rush ΣK
Tuesday, September 19 6:30- 9:00 p.m.
Spaghetti Dinner
Wednesday, September 20 6:00- 9:00 p.m.
Mocktails
Thursday, September 21 6:00 p.m.- 9:00 p.m.
"Friends" night
19 Allen St (behind Hillel)
Questions 256-6887- for info or rides

AIM HIGH
The Career Of A Lifetime Begins With A College Elective
Air Force ROTC is more than just an elective, it can be money in your pocket.
We offer scholarships to any area college students who qualify as well as guarantee a job with excellent benefits in over 200 career specialties.
The only obligation you have is 3 hours of class per week. There is NO MILITARY OBLIGATION during your first 2 years of college.
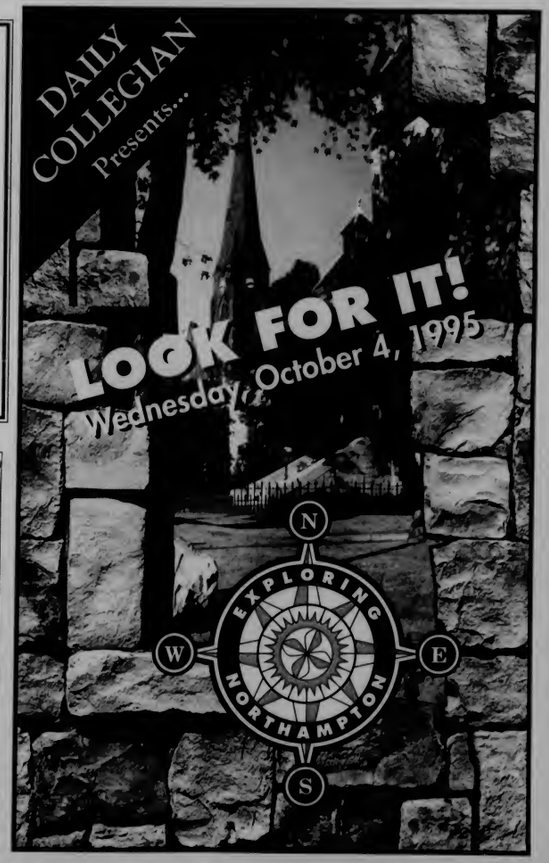
Call us at 545-2437 for more details.
AIR FORCE ROTC
Leadership Excellence Starts Here

The Club
Tennis & Fitness Center
659 Amherst Road/Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
413/549-3638
Newly Remodeled • On Bus Route
5 Minutes From Campus
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
Student Packages
(unlimited aerobics and fitness)
One Semester, Sept.1 - Dec. 31 $145.00
Both Semesters, Sept. 1 - May 31 $245.00

There are hundreds of Registered Student Organizations at UMass...
There's at least one out there FOR YOU... CHECK THEM OUT!
The Daily Collegian's
RSO Guide
Wednesday, September 20, 1995
LOOK FOR IT!



Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Learn to play bridge now! Thurs 1-3 pm 8 weeks. Free book, lessons, t-shirt. Beginning Thurs. Sept 21. Fine Lab Room 61.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention all University Women please join us for open rush on Wednesday and Thursday, September 13 and 14. Pick up is at the horseshoe in Southwest at 5:45 pm both nights. Look for Chi Omega signs! Call Heather at 549-4723 to RSVP.

Iota Gamma Upsilon 406 North Pleasant St. invites all U Mass women to rush 9-14, 9-18, 9-19. All events start at 7pm for info or directions call 549-784

UMass Women's Ice Hockey Ever wanted to play hockey? Here's your chance. Join our growing club team. No experience necessary! Come to our informational meeting Wed Sept 13 at 7pm in the Campus Center (Meet outside the Bluewall). For more info call 549-1897 or 549-3603. See you there!

Vanity of vanities. Everything is vanity. Bible study. Tonight 7:30 pm. Campus center room 177. Graduate Christian fellowship.

Mazda 626, 1985 excellent condition car, some $1500 must sell. Call 549-1539.

Mercury Marquis 1984, 70k miles, Runs excellent. Power windows & doors. $1500 or B.O. Call JJ 549-8861

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING 545-3500

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 Red Jeep Wrangler 5 speed soft top 27,000 CD player Alarm $12,000 or best 413-256-8771

'86 Subaru GL Hatchback 5 speed Runs well Owner $700 253-9295

Car for sale Honda Civic SR 47,500 mileage, air conditioning, radio cassette automatic. $3800 call 4-m-756-1285.

1983 Chevy 3K,000 original mileage very good condition. $700 or b.o. 253-9017

Honda CRX 1985 sunroof, cassette, sunroof 45,000 miles excellent condition $6500 549-7463

EMPLOYMENT

Mole Torah reader needed. Housing and salary. Congregation Rodphey Sholom Holyoke 534-5202.

Cruise Ships Hiring. Earn up to $2000+/month. World Travel. Seasonal & Full-time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 206-634-0468 Ext C500.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1 206 545-4804 Ext N 5001

Jobs for the environment Campaign with MassPIRG to save our polluted rivers. Flexible schedule $10-$15 / Day. Call Peter 256-6434

Environmental activists needed! Work on CLEAN WATER ACTION & state congress from wrecking with antipollution laws. Lean valuable organizing & campaign skills, work w/ great people, make money doing something meaningful! Flexible schedule $6-$8/hr. Can lead to summer job, career opportunity. 584-9830

Drivers, waitresses and kitchen help wanted. KRETE RESTAURANT 586-8255.

Get paid for talking a test needed: education students planning to teach Spanish or able to speak Spanish. Tests will be held September 28, 29, and 30 at UMass Campus Center. Payment up to $155.00. One to two days. Space is limited. You must preregister by September 20. For more info call Denise Cote or Nancy Hahn at 256-0444, M-F, 8:30 4:30. National Evaluation Systems

Drivers wanted $8-12 hr. call Delivery Express 549-0077.

Mullins Center looking for students to work part time, late nights, and weekends doing post-event clean up. Stop by Mullins center, 2nd floor, and fill out an application today.

Full Time person needed on M-F 9:00 am 5:00pm for receptionist position in local area computer integration firm. A professional appearance and pleasant phone manner are required. Computer skills are a plus. Please apply in person or mail resume to ACI 231 Triangle St. Amherst (Bowmut Building) b/w 9-5 M-F.

Interns Needed! The Valley Optimist Magazine is looking for Editorial and Business interns. Pick up some great experience with a wonderful crew. Send clips, writers and resumes to: The Valley Optimist 13 Old South St. Northampton, MA 01060. Call 586-7070

BUILD YOUR RESUME

Come to the UMass Credit Union September 18th or 19th at 6:30 pm to build your resume! Looking for new tellers for fall 1995! Stop by, call Christine at 545-7800

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach contraceptive workshops at university health services. Call for more information 549-2971, ext 181.

Campus center jobs in the Bluewall, Hatch and Coffee shop. Mid day shifts, variable hours, weekdays. Apply at the Hatch office between 11am and 3pm weekdays

ENTERTAINMENT

Having Halloween bash on 10/27 or 10/28? Got a huge house? Want a spooky band? You need vePI and vePI needs you! call Jack at 367-8636

FOR SALE

Brother word processor 2200 includes manual, spellcheck disk has framing and spreadsheets, 3 years old. $250 call Justin 546-4484

Toshiba 20" Stereo w/ remote 3yr old ask for $190 call 549-8563

Matching sofa chair ottoman $100 Marilyn weather 536 549-1777

Tandy 1000SL Computer with Mon & Soft MS DOS comp Askins 300 or BO call 6-0940

Macintosh computer for sale. Complete system including printer only $499. Call 1 800 289 5685.

Custom fit car cover for Prelude 1992 like new $40 or b.o. 256-8633

IBM pc notebook comp word excel Need $ for school. bo. 549 6061

12 string acoustic guitar w/ case Practically brand new! Call Mike 256-8150

Rollerblades womens 7 1/2 (mens 6) $30. Word Processor-Smith Corona 3 new ink cartridges included. $150. Prices negotiable. 546-7311

Couch $10. Bureau $30. Recliner $30. Call John 256-8388

Nike Airmaxx men's 9. Cost $125. Asking $65 or bo. Never worn. 546-7798

MOTORCYCLES

82 Honda Magna V 45 750 cc. V 4 very fast and reliable. No reasonable offer refused. $1,600 bo. Page anytime 792-0065

INSTRUCTION

BOXING LESSONS
With retired pro Dicte Bumpus 549-5762

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits. With a patient and supportive teacher. Sign up early. Limited schedule. Call Peter 253-5263

Guitar Lessons by Kevin Collins. Guitar for fun, classical. Free intro lesson. Hartt Grad 256-7313

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in music, theater, and dance. Registration for group instruction runs Sept 5-22, 1995; private instruction is ongoing. We are located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass. 413-545-0519, for info.

Bases, lots more! Stuff for everyone!

Guitar Lessons Have fun this semester and earn 1-2 credits with a patient and supportive teacher. Spaces still available (bass last two weeks). Call Peter 253-5263

Exotic nail design airbrushing 546-1794

MISCELLANEOUS

POSTER GIVEAWAY
Monday, September 18, University Gallery, 11 a.m. 4 p.m. Visit the gallery and choose a complimentary selection of posters from past exhibitions. While supplies last.

FOR RENT
Fridge Rentals Free delivery 253-8742 and Usurper Food Co-Op end Recipe

WEIGHT LOSS
Bottled Willpower! Lose up to 30 lbs. 30 day money back guarantee. Natural, doctor recommended. 323-6984

MUSICIANS

GREEN
22 hours, 42 deejays. 1000 acres. Totally legal. Outdoor mid-stage. Two big pop tents. Skyward lasers. Massive lighting displays. Concessions. Smart Bars. Clothing and record store bazaars. Life-size Stone Henge replica. Begins 4 pm September 23 and ends 2 p.m. September 24. A Primary/Omni Production. 18+. Call Derb @ 546-0833

Needed. Funk drummer, singer, keys. The Cosmic Mustard Trio! Call Ryan Andy 549-1016

PERSONALS

ENLIGHTENMENT #1
"I'm Sorry Darling." Huh?" "I've found what I'm looking for." "What are you trying to tell me?" "Relevance, trust, intellectual enlightenment." "Frank down the hall?" "No! Alliance Christian Fellowship: committed to discipleship, outreach, and spirit-filled fellowship plus lots of fun!" Info Mark or Elizabeth 253-7296

CASHIN STAFF. Get psyched for a great year...only the best + yet to come

To the cute guy in the Whalmere zoocbbor: I was surprised to find you working there, but it was a pleasant surprise. I have dreams of you and me and lunch sandwiches. Respond here if you feel the same

Your secret admirer

To the best staff in the whole world welcome to Collegian Graphics!

Students to join health club as group to save money call Molly 256-6439.

Kevin. Only you could promise me forever, then part 7 months gone and the rest to begin. I love you Kevin, happy anniversary. Love, Christine

Lee Weimer get off the internet for a couple of minutes, you geek!

Happy twenty something birthday, Kayti! Don't think of it as getting older, think of it as getting better! Party it up! We love you! From your housemates.

Exotic nail airbrushing 546-1794

SERVICES

Experienced babysitter available with references. Please call Alyssa 549-8885 for info

Happy Birthday Mom! from the staff in the dungeon

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

Legal questions? The student legal services office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Grants and scholarships available. Billions of $$$ in grants. Qualify immediately. 1-800-243-7435 (1-800-AID-2-HELP)

Spring Break Travel Free with Sun Splash Tours. Highest commissions, lowest prices. Campus reps wanted! Sell Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida 1-800-426-7710

"I found it in the Daily Collegian"
Collegian Classifieds They Work!
545-1864

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS THEY WORK

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

By Jean Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A partner shows a new willingness to reason now. If you must sign a legal document, seek expert advice on its terms. Protect your professional reputation and resources, others may try to appropriate them.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): Guard an original money-making idea until you can talk with experts. Discuss your plans with family members only. Some news you receive from afar could be exaggerated.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Your greatest pleasure comes from helping others. Spend a little extra cash on an older person. Travel is best postponed. Find time to discuss your personal goals with your mate or business partner.

CANCER (June 32–July 22): Your concerns are well-founded. You need more freedom when setting goals. Opening new lines of communication is a priority. Consult an attorney regarding rights and permissions. Clear everything with experts before committing yourself.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Tend to old business before launching a new project. The squeaky wheel gets the grease. Speak up if you want certain improvements on the job. A hobby can be turned into a source of profits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): You cannot afford to take foolish financial risks. Be careful what you say over the next few days. A loose-lipped confident could sink you plans. Show greater flexibility. Take life as it comes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): You gain a decided business and financial advantage now. Sign a contract before someone has second thoughts. Pleasant developments occur where both romance and business are concerned. Call the folks at home regarding a vacation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Investigation with your co-workers or a disorganized home environment could make you snappish. Curb your temper when dealing with children. This evening, focus on finance rather than affairs of the heart. Devise a better budget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Take a well-and-see attitude. It would be a mistake to voice your ideas before they have a chance to mature. Slow down where romance is concerned. Flirting from partner to partner is risky.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): The cards are stacked in you favor where an important decision is concerned. Make a new commitment to your family or job. Seek the support of influential people without being obvious. Romance has its tricky moments.

AQUARIUS ((Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Eliminate time-wasting activities from your schedule in order to concentrate on work demands. Tempers may be short. Keep your conversations with business associates brief and to the point. Write meaningful memos to higher-ups.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Avoid saying you will do things you really have no desire to do. Promises may be broken, appointments missed, objects mislaid. Ride with the tide. Group activities are favored this afternoon and evening. Be gracious.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest college daily

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michael Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Fitzgerald forte
5 "The Man from —"
10 "Rosebud"
14 Bistro
15 Lloyd of Hollywood
16 That, in Tours
17 Odd, to a Scot
18 Tony Award drama
20 Siphon trailer?
21 Not aweather
22 Family in TV's "Soap"
23 Lettuce variety
26 Nerd's relative
28 Violinist Isaac
29 Arch start
31 By way of
34 Musical staff symbol
36 Stress
38 African antelope
41 Accompanying 43 "Judith" composer
44 Padre
46 Key of Beethoven's "Eroica"
48 Part of RSVP
49 Pier
51 Auto style
55 Goodbye, in the Bois
57 Walk idly
59 Of a certain grain
61 JFK arrivals
63 Former mideast gp.
64 Beef order
66 Soprano Berger
67 Towel marking
68 Depend on
69 Bolt holder
70 "What — is new?"
71 Over
72 Nora's pooch

DOWN
1 Really cleans
2 Freight shipment
3 House type
4 Actress Leoni
5 Get rid of the crew
6 Peers
7 Detective's aide
8 Just out
9 Tolkien creature
10 Get lost!
11 It's often heated
12 Fashion magazine
13 "— of Our Lives"
19 System of moral values
24 Debate
25 Ltd.'s US relative
27 Slow going
30 Miller's "— The Fall"
32 Hostelry
33 Had a bite
35 Agile
37 "— a Hot Tin Roof"
38 Kitchen-duty Gls
39 Mentalist Geller
40 Expanders of a sort
42 In the wings
45 Hogs
47 Puncture lead-in
50 Colorado River capital
52 Road maneuvers
53 Butter or gallery
54 Editor's targets
56 Thick
58 Was curious
59 Will — wisp
60 Cain's victim
62 Dispatch
65 Haggard heroine
66 Greek "H"

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

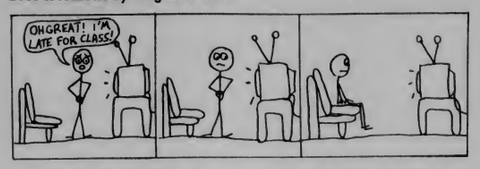
S	N	O	B		P	E	N	S		M	E	D	A	L
H	I	R	E		A	L	O	E		E	V	A	D	E
A	N	N	A		R	E	A	P		L	E	N	I	N
M	O	O	N	L	I	G	H	T	S	O	N	A	T	A
			E	A	S	Y			A	N	T
C	R	E	D	O			E	D	D	I	C	O	N
R	E	V		S	H	A	V	E	D		D	A	R	E
O	V	I	D		A	R	E	E	L		E	D	G	E
S	E	T	A		T	I	N	D	E	R		D	A	D
S	L	A	Y		E	A	T		A	G	O	N	Y
			B	A	R		R	I	C	E
S	U	N	R	I	S	E	S	E	R	E	N	A	D	E
E	R	I	E	S		D	E	L	I		D	I	E	T
R	A	T	A	L			I	R	I	S		E	D	E
B	L	A	K	E		T	E	C	H		R	A	M	A

By Allin Maez
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

FOR SHOW AND TELL, I BROUGHT A LITTLE TOY AIRPLANE
IT'S SORT OF ORDINARY I SUPPOSE, BUT I LIKE TO HAVE IT AROUND
IT REMINDS ME THAT AS SOON AS I SAVE A LITTLE MORE MONEY, I'LL BUY A TICKET AND PUT SO MUCH DISTANCE BETWEEN YOU CHUMPS AND ME, IT WILL BOGGLE YOUR MINDS!
IT'S NOT AN ATTITUDE, IT'S A FACT!

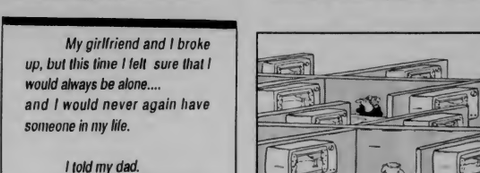
Lost Horizons By Douglass CeClineri



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

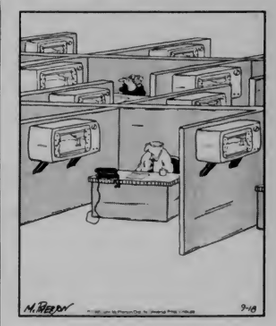
NEW YORK! MYSTERIOUS FIGURES PROWL THE ROOFTOPS...
WHAT MAKES YOU THINK WE'LL FIND SPIDER-MAN?
THIS IS WHERE HE USUALLY WEB-SWINGS AT NIGHT!
AND NOTHING CAN GET PAST THESE NIGHT VISION GLASSES!
THERE! I SEE HIM!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



My girlfriend and I broke up, but this time I felt sure that I would always be alone.... and I would never again have someone in my life.
I told my dad.
He said, "Don't feel bad. Take comfort.
Being alone..... can be a lovely peaceful gift to yourself.
Also, as many people have done before you, ... you can spend a portion of your life working for others and within yourself to cultivate mercy, hope, truth, beauty and daylight."
I asked him if there was anything of his I could break.
He brought me his favorite tobacco smoking pipe.
I said, "Thanks dad."
Life is good.

Close to Home By John McPherson



Dilbert By Scott Adams

GREAT NEWS! I'VE REENGINEERED YOUR JOB TO MAKE YOU MORE FULFILLED!
YOU'LL NO LONGER BE LIMITED TO ONE LITTLE PART OF THE VALUE CHAIN. YOU'LL BE INVOLVED IN ALL STAGES OF PRODUCTION!
OH LORD, YOU FIRED ALL THE SECRETARIES!!
DUST MY CREDENZA

308 Boyz By Skid

NOW GUYS...
I'LL TELL EVERYBODY YOU HAVE TONYA HARDING BED-SHEETS!
I'LL TELL EVERYBODY YOU STILL LISTEN TO "NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK!"
GUYS!
...WEARING YOUR DONAHUE UNDEROOS?!
STILL SLEEP WITH YOUR MICHAEL JACKSON DOLL?!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

SO, BRUNO, WERE GOING TO PLAY "GLOWING-IN-THE-DARK GOLF-BALL CHIP AND PUTT" AT MIDNIGHT IN THE GRAVEYARD. YOU IN?
I KNOW, BUT SILLINESS...
BRUNO, YOU'RE SILLIER THAN ANYONE ELSE I KNOW.
I GUESS IT JUST DOESN'T DO IT FOR ME ANY MORE
COME ON BRUNO, IT'LL BE FUN WE EVEN INVITED RALPH NADER, AND I'M SURE HE'LL BE DISAPPOINTED IF YOU DON'T SHOW.
SORRY DAN, NOT THIS TIME.
DON'T KID US DANIEL, IT JUST FEELS SO POINTLESS
WELL... IT IS POINTLESS AND IT'S SILLY AND STUPID. SO WHAT? SINCE WHEN DID OUR LITTLE PRISE-SUPPER FIND ANYTHING TO HAVE A POINT?

Butterling By John Ottinger

This shipment of burlap underwear, the Warden ordered to humiliate us around today.
To show our defiance and to shed light on our cause, we set fire to the underwear.
Unfortunately, we forgot to take 'em off!

Making Do By McCormic

No Vacancy

The Collegian is still looking for a Black Affairs Editor if you are interested in helping your community voice its opinion, please come down to the Collegian and see Juan or call 545-3500.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN TOP 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Questions UMass Professors Cannot Answer

10. How can DC food be so gob–nobody good?
9. What's the deal with that talking dolphin on Sea Quest?
8. How does Calipari manage to earn 100 times my salary?
7. What REALLY goes on inside the Polymer Science Building?
6. Why have so many people purchased Windows '95 without realizing that it runs like a pig, and is a ticking bomb waiting to bring your PC to it's knees?
5. (Insert own female orgasm joke here).
4. Why is PVTA the only acronym my students can remember?
3. What is the real name of that little red punching bag hanging in the back of your mouth?
2. Why won't the psychic friends return my calls?
1. When will Beavis and Butt–head finally score?

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacClean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reilly
Production Supervisor ..... Gregory Iafrate
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Fishburger	Manadarin Chicken
Mesquite Chix Sand.	Fettuccini/ Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Curried Red Beans	Mandarin Chicken
Mesquite Chix Sand.	Fettuccini/Lentil Sauce

Small Potatoes By John Art

THE COLLEGIAN NEEDS MORE STUDENT COMICS!

TO FIND OUT HOW TO SEE YOUR NAME AND ARTWORK IN PRINT, COME DOWN TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER, AND SEE JUAN.

PLEASE BRING A SAMPLE OF YOUR WORK WITH YOU!

Quote of the Day

"The absolute truth is the thing that makes people laugh."

–Carl Reiner

Sports

New additions make Bruins optimistic

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Going into the 1995-96 season, the Boston Bruins are looking toward more offense in hopes of making a run at their first Stanley Cup in over 20 years.

If Friday night's Black and White intrasquad scrimmage at the William D. Mullins Center was any indication, the Bruins have found that offense. The two squads combined for 13 goals (eight for the Black, five for the White) in the contest.

After a disappointing finish last season in which the Bruins were eliminated by New Jersey in the first round of the playoffs, the B's made wholesale off-season changes. Gone was head coach Brian Sutter, who was replaced by former Boston center Steve Kasper. The new coach was immediately given offensive resources that his predecessor had lacked.

The Bruins took advantage of the cost-cutting fire sale in Pittsburgh, dealing young forwards Bryan Smolinski and Glen Murray to the Pens in exchange for Kevin Stevens, who Boston has long coveted, and Shawn McEachern. The Bruins picked up a pair of talented free-agents as well in Joe Mullen and Todd Elik.

The newcomers wasted no time in getting involved in the Black and White game. McEachern scored the White squad's second goal on a line with Cam Neely and Dave Reid, who was filling in for the injured Adam Oates.

According to Kasper, the all-star center's progress is right on schedule.

"Adam is progressing perfectly," said the first-year coach. "He had surgery on his finger. It was recommended by our medical staff that he stay out of contact for the first week or two of training camp. I don't see any pressing urge to change that."

It is unusual at this time of year to be talking about the Bruins and not wondering how healthy Neely is, but the early reports on the star power forward are good ones.

"Cam is skating as well in this camp as he has in five or six years," said Bruins President and General Manager Harry Sinden. "He looks very good."

Neely is expected to rejoin Oates as one of the league's top duos. Factor in Ray Bourque, Stevens and Al Iafrate (if he's ever healthy) or Don Sweeney, and the Bruins could have one of the league's elite power play units.

Elik and Stevens, who were playing together on the Black squad's first line, played like they had been linemates for years. The two, along with linemate Sandy Moger, combined for three second period goals, including a highlight film spin-around tally by Stevens to put the Black squad comfortably ahead.

"I think this was Kevin's best outing of the camp so far," Kasper said. "He seemed to fit well with Elik and Moger. They seemed to play well together as a trio. I'm encouraged by that."

The abundance of forward talent has Kasper excited about the possible combinations.

"Right now we have some depth," Kasper said. "I plan on spreading [the offense] around."

Despite the new players, Kasper is stressing that the team has to play differently if it is going to be more successful this year.

"Personnel wise there is a lot of changes, but this team has to play differently than they have in the past," he said. "In the playoffs, New Jersey initiated everything and we sort of tried to react to it. We have to become a team that doesn't sit back and wait to see what's going to happen.

"We have to dictate how the games going to be played. With those additions, we have a good chance of doing that."

One of the factors that allowed New Jersey to dictate the play was its size superiority. In addition to the scoring potential, the off-season acquisitions could make the Bruins big and bad again.

Stevens boasts a 6-foot-3-inch 217-pound frame, while Elik stands in a 6-foot-2-inches at almost 200 pounds as well. First round draft choice Kyle McLaren (6-foot-4, 210 pounds) can throw the weight around with the best of 'em.

Stevens, a veteran of two Stanley Cup Championship teams in Pittsburgh, likes what he sees so far from his new teammates.

"It's nice to be here. I'm excited, but we'll wait to see what happens," said Stevens, who is optimistic about the team's potential. "It's a good team. We have a good nucleus of players and I think we can work toward something good."

While the offense appears to be rolling along smoothly, there have been some questions on defense.

Kasper has pledged to limit Bourque's minutes as the Bruin captain continues to age. Don Sweeney is coming off of his best season as a pro, but with Al Iafrate still sidelined for a unknown time increment, the Bruins will look to some of their younger blue-liners to step forward.

Jon Rohloff and John Gruden, who both showed signs of promise a year ago, and veteran Alexei Kasatonov will be expected to step up.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Forward Mariusz Czerkawski swoops in on goaltender Blaine Lacher in Friday night's Black and White game at the Mullins Center.

Bruins find forward talent in abundance

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

It's a dilemma that any coach would love to have facing him entering a season: having too many talented forwards in training camp.

The 1995 Stanley Cup playoffs proved that the Bruins needed help at the forward position. The top checking line of the New Jersey Devils focused on Cam Neely and Adam Oates, while taking their chances with a suspect second line.

The Devils held the Bruins to five goals in five games and Boston was eliminated from the playoffs early.

Questions were raised as to who could possibly fill the role on the second line and take the heat off of Neely, Oates and whomever the left wing of the day happened to be.

But this year, things could be very different.

President and General Manager Harry Sinden went out and acquired proven scoring talent. Not only has the new blood revived the team, but it has made the returning players realize if they don't show something during the pre-season, they will not be wearing Black and Gold in October.

The level of intensity in pre-season workouts and exhibitions has been extremely high, as well are the expectations for the season ahead.

What does this mean to players from last year's team?

"I think they got the message here," Sinden said. "This is a tough team to make."

New coach Steve Kasper has a very difficult job in trying to mesh the newcomers to the team and decide who should stay on the club.

Turn to MOVES, page 7

Women's tennis starts fall season with two wins

By Jay Warner
Collegian Correspondent

Coming into the 1995 fall season, Massachusetts coach Judy Dixon was looking to improve on last season's doubles performance from her squad.

With the first two matches of the year complete, Dixon's team has not only improved, but dominated doubles play. On Saturday, UMass captured their season opener at home, beating Vermont, 7-2. The Minutewomen squad followed up the next day with a 7-2 victory over Rhode Island.

Massachusetts 7, Vermont 2

Opening the season at home, the Minutewomen took five of the six singles matches and two of the three doubles matches, highlighted by senior co-captain Liesl Sitton's two wins. Sitton cruised to an easy win at the No. 1 singles spot with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Abbey Woodbridge. Sitton and Caroline Steele teamed together to chalk up the No. 1 doubles match over Woodbridge and Annie Davidson, 8-6.

Freshman Jackie Braunstein was impressive in her singles debut, handing Vermont's Julia Renstrom a 6-1, 6-1 loss at the No. 4 singles slot. Sophomore Noelle Orsini was overmatched at the No. 2 singles, losing 6-2, 6-3 to Annie Davidson, but redeemed herself by combining with Braunstein to defeat UVM's Becky Sohn and Courtney Bealko, 8-4, at No. 3 doubles.

UVM's Bethany Benoit struggled to keep her match close at No. 3 singles with UMass junior Liz Durant, but Durant sailed down the stretch to win, 7-6, 6-0. Durant and freshman Marie Christine Caron were not as lucky at No. 2 doubles, losing a close match to Benoit and Renstrom, 8-5.

Steele picked up the No. 5 singles match with a 6-1, 6-4 defeat of Sohn, while sophomore Lana Gorodetskaya rounded out the card winning the No. 6 singles.

Massachusetts 7, Rhode Island 2

Back-to-back matches didn't seem to bother the young Minutewomen squad as they posted their second victory in as many days, defeating URI. After losing the first two singles matches, UMass went on to sweep the remaining four singles and all three doubles games.

Braunstein continued her impressive fall campaign, easily defeating Sarah Fitzpatrick 6-0, 6-0 in the No. 3 singles. Her success carried over in her No. 2 doubles match, where she combined with Caron to post an 8-3 win over the Rams' Fitzpatrick and Marisa Petrone. Caron also won No. 6 singles to post the first victories of her collegiate career.

Steele had yet another excellent outing, starting the day by handling Petrone in the No. 4 singles match, 6-3, 6-2. She also teamed with Sitton in the No. 1 doubles dominating URI's combination of Jill Estes and Peyton Levitan, 8-1.

Gorodetskaya improved to 2-0 in singles play with a defeat of Emily Dwyer in the No. 5 singles, overpowering her 6-0, 6-0.

Men's water polo earns eighth win

By Teri Klein
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team locked up its eighth victory of the season this weekend at the Eastern Water Polo Association League Tourney held in Kings Point, NY. The Minutemen extended their record to 8-1 defeating all three of its opponents in decisive wins.

First up for UMass was a difficult Queens College squad.

A familiar problem arose in the first minutes of the game when the team came out and quickly fell behind. Massachusetts coach Russ Yarworth felt that once again the team's low intensity level was the reason the team got off to a slow start.

"We still came out and played without the intensity that we needed to have in order to win the game," Yarworth said.

With the score 5-2, Yarworth readjusted the defense, switching from a zone to a press, which enabled his team to shut down Queens' premier sharp shooter, Pedro Delima.

"Our press really seemed to take Queens out of their game plan and they couldn't adjust for the rest of the game," Yarworth said.

The Minutemen went on to outscore it's opponents 14-3 en route to a 16-8 victory, allowing only one goal from Queens in the final two quarters.

The fact that the team overcame an early deficit impressed senior co-captain John Luviano. "A good thing about this win was that we didn't fold being down 5-2. We came back and stepped up our level of play. This was the first time that we played with that kind of aggressiveness."

Back in goal once again was Alex Mujica, who had a strong performance against Queens with seven saves. Gabriel Marrero and Juan Carlos Limardo played excellent defense while Luis Limardo led the way for UMass in scoring with six goals. Luviano had a solid game picking up two goals and two assists.

One player in particular who had a key role in UMass' win was junior Ron Gonen. Gonen, who had missed last season because of injury, had an impressive outing scoring five goals and playing a more physical, aggressive game than in past matches.

The final two games of the tournament proved to be no problem for UMass. The Minutemen wasted no time pulling ahead of both their opponents early on before defeating the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy 25-12 and Iona 26-10.

These two games against lesser opponents allowed Yarworth to insert players who had not seen much playing time this season.

Yarworth was pleased with the performance of his freshmen and B-team players, saying he saw a bright spot in the team's future. Freshmen Scott Stevens, Geoff Gear and Carlos Mendez exploded for a combined total of 21 goals. Freshman Dane Teruya and junior Paul Engin also saw considerable time in goal.

UMass XC overpowers Maine

By Casey Kane
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts women's cross country team took to the trails of Orono, Maine this weekend, looking to keep its perfect record intact.

Running a fast course and facing tough competition, the Minutewomen turned in top performances as they overpowered host Maine 31-70, and scored even with Connecticut at 31, to run their record to 5-0-1.

The afternoon was highlighted by several record setting performances, as key runners stepped up to power the Massachusetts team. Sophomore Rebecca Donaghue was the first UMass woman across the line, taking third overall in a time of 17:59. Her time is an improvement of over 25 seconds from her previous mark.

"Rebecca ran very strong. I was extremely pleased," Massachusetts coach Julie LaFreniere said. "Danyelle Wood and Katie O'Toole from UConn (the top two finishers respectively) are excellent runners. Patty McCormick (Maine, third overall) qualified for last year's nationals in the indoor and outdoor 5,000 meters.

"It really goes to show how hard Rebecca has been working when she breaks into that group," LaFreniere said.

Senior co-captain Jen Waeger was not far off pace from the top finishers, as she placed fifth overall, clocking a personal best 18:05. Christy Martin turned in a 18:22, taking 1:40 off her old personal record, as she placed sixth.

"Jen Waeger has really stepped up, and we're going to need her to do that all season," LaFreniere said.

The Massachusetts team also had solid performances from Kristin Donaldson, finishing eighth with a personal record time of 18:38. Sophomore Katie Greenia, who redshirted last year, rounded out the Minutewomen top five, taking ninth place in 18:43.

LaFreniere noted that fifth-year senior and co-captain Cheryl Lyons turned in a good race as UMass' sixth finisher, placing 13th overall. "It was a very, very good meet for us," LaFreniere said. "I knew Connecticut would show up with a strong team and I was extremely pleased with our showing against them. This really gives me an optimistic outlook for the rest of the season.

"I told my runners that they could really pull this off if they stayed together and ran as a pack. It's really exciting when you tell them they can do something, and they go out and do it. It's wonderful. My girls ran with a lot of heart this weekend. It would have been a long ride home if we didn't run well. I'm extremely pleased and proud."

The Minutewomen will try to extend their unbeaten streak next Saturday (12 p.m.), at their only home meet of the season, when they take on Boston University, Vermont and Central Connecticut.

First ever volleyball game at Mullins

UMass faces Connecticut tomorrow in the William D. Mullins center in the Reebok/UMass–UConn challenge at 7 p.m. This will be the first–ever volleyball match to be played in the Mullins Center, as the University prepares to host the NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championships in December. Reebok will present gifts to the first 100 fans entering the Mullins Center. Tickets are $5 for adults, $2 for children. UMass students are admitted free with a student ID.

Cross country takes fifth place at BC Invitational

By Casey Kane
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's cross country team got its season off to a solid start this Saturday at the Boston College Invitational.

Run at Franklin Park in Boston, the site that hosted the 1993 World Cross Country Championships, the nine-team field included Michigan, which was ranked eighth nationally in pre-season polls, and powerful Iona.

Scoring 105 points, the Minutemen took fifth place, placing just behind Brown and host Boston College. Michigan took first with 36 points and Iona second with 42. "That was approximately how I thought we would finish," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "Michigan and Iona are strong every year. Both Brown and BC have already run meets this year, so they were a little more prepared in terms of racing readiness."

UMass' day was highlighted by strong performances by a number of runners. The Minutemen's top finisher was junior Matt Behl, who ran a 24:49, a personal record. Behl placed 11th overall. Mike Macieko also eclipsed a previous best, turning in a time of 24:55, taking 13th place.

"Matt ran really well. That was a good time for that course. Mike had a good race too, and I'm happy with how the two of them ran," O'Brien said.

Senior Ethan Nadeau ran a 25:14, finishing 23rd, and Tim Boilard took 28th place. On pace at 25:31, Mark Buffone rounded out the Minutemen top five.

One performance of note was that of UMass' sixth man, Ryan Carrara. Carrara, a sophomore, took 41st place overall, beating out several upperclassmen.

Turn to CROSS COUNTRY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 11 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, September 20, 1995

A Mullins debut
Lesley Nolan and the rest of the UMass volleyball team play tonight at 7 p.m. in the Mullin's center (See Sports page 14.)

The contract debate
UMass students respond to men's basketball coach John Calipari's newly signed contract. (See Campus Perspectives, page 3).

The flaming moe.
moe will hit the Iron Horse stage tonight with Chin Hol the improvisationally based band from Burlington, VT (See Arts & Living, page 9).

Extended Forecast
Break out the umbrellas and galoshes, again, cause we're headed for a second straight rainy Wednesday. Never fear, a clearer weekend is close at hand. Fall is here.

	Sunday	Thursday	Friday
	HIGH: 70 LOW: 60	HIGH: 75 LOW: 65	HIGH: 75 LOW: 65

Student parents upset with aid

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Batya Weinbaum, a graduate student and teaching assistant in the English Department, had her day care subsidy from the state of Vermont cancelled two semesters in a row. On Sept. 6, she received a notice that read, "Graduate school is not an acceptable training service need."

In the 1960s and '70s student activists across the nation pushed for child care benefits, and received them, according to Cecilia Rio, child care coordinator for the Graduate Student Employee (GEO) organization. At first, only two- year associate's degree candidate's were eligible, but eventually state welfare was available to students undergraduate degrees.

However, graduate students have never received these benefits because their education is considered to be "professional development," Rio said.

"What we're seeing now [if Weld's proposal is passed] is a retraction of welfare benefits being extended to undergraduate students, locking them in, at best, to an associate's degree," she said.

Rio, a single parent graduate student, called Gov. William Weld's proposal to limit the amount of welfare to two years "a way of shutting doors, especially to single parents."

University Day Care

The University of Massachusetts has a day care program with 78 slots. These positions are rationed — one-third for undergraduates, one-third for graduates, and one-third for faculty and staff.

The two facilities, the Grass Roots Day School and the New World Day School, offer day care for children aged 2- years and nine-months to five years.

There is a two-year waiting list for these slots, according to Rio. There was a list for all three groups, and that the wait to enroll younger children is longer, said Marianne McKim, budget and personnel manager for Child Care Services.

"I've never been able to get in," Weinbaum said.

McKim said the fees range from $106-$160 a week, depending on the age of the child, family size and income.

According to calculations by the GEO office, the minimum cost for a toddler for one school year is $7,200.

In addition, the family plan at University Health Services is $2,358 for two semesters, according to Health Services. For graduate student resident assistants and TAs, the cost is $208.20. Still, the average yearly stipend for graduate student employees for one year is $8,200 — $1,000 more than child care costs alone, according to the GEO office.

All the time-slots at University

Turn to CHILD CARE, page 3

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Steve Smarz, the babysiter, holds 2 1/2 year old Ola Weinbaum while waiting for her mother, because she couldn't arrange day care through UMass.

Ceremony recalls El Grito de Lares

By Michelle Lugo
Collegian Staff

Young activists and Puerto Rican student leaders joined with local community figures yesterday to remember the one and only day in the history of the island when it was an independent and sovereign nation, free from Spanish dominion and American rule.

"El Grito de Lares" exploded on September 23, 1868, when a group of revolutionaries occupied the sleeping town of Lares in the center of Puerto Rico. The rebels seized the town hall and established a provisional government including president and supporting cabinet.

By the next day Spanish forces regathered and killed or incarcerated the revolutionaries, but the battle for independence had only just begun. "El Grito de Lares" left a lasting imprint on the movement for independence and many Puerto Ricans still celebrate the date.

More than a century later, speaker Gumersindo Gomez declared Sept. 19 "El Grito de UMass." Gomez was invited to participate by the organizers of Boricuas Unidos the Puerto Rican student association on campus. Gomez, a public figure among the Puerto Rican community in Springfield, borrowed the philosophical underpinnings of the upsurge and applied them to the current situation of Puerto Ricans at UMass.

"What is a Puerto Rican?" Gomez said. "Let's start thinking about who we are. We are here to educate others that we are people, we are proud, we have the same ambitions, and we are going places despite what they say."

Gomez, who served 20 years in the U.S. armed forces and fought in Vietnam, said he understands what it means to fight for ones beliefs.

Gomez said Puerto Ricans have been U.S. citizens since 1917 because the United States needed more soldiers to fight in the world wars. Puerto Ricans have been fighting American wars ever since, yet a small percentage of Americans in this country know that Puerto Ricans are citizens. In Gomez's words to a mostly Puerto Rican public in front of the Student Union steps, "we have paid our dues."

Other speakers, such as graduate student Rob Venator said the "El Grito," or the scream in English, "was a movement claiming a heritage and an identity free from interference. To allow us to make decisions as adults not as children. To participate as equals in the world."

Graduate student Luis Carasquillo Correa said, "It is important that UMass in some way emphasize the education of Puerto Ricans, and Dominicans, especially because they make such a great majority. This event puts an emphasis on race relations not only between Blacks and Whites but with Hispanics too."

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

A member of the Boricuas Unidos who was the spokesperson at the rally, introduced scheduled speakers at the celebration held yesterday on the Student Union steps.

Students gather for vigil in Toney's memory

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

A student gives her last wishes to Jack Toney, a UMass senior who died last Sunday. About two hundreds students and faculty attended a candle-light vigil that started at the New Africa House and ended at John Quincy Adams in memory of Toney last night.

By Marni E. Heffner and Daymion Smith
Collegian Staff

More than 200 students, staff, and concerned people gathered together last night to remember Jack C. Toney and come together as a community.

At 8 p.m., people gathered at New Africa House to remember Toney and to speak about the reaction in the University of Massachusetts community. Toney, 22, died after falling from the 13th floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall on Saturday morning.

Several members of the UMass community including anthropology professor Dr. Helan Page, Sid Ferreira, coordinator of CEEMBS, Chancellor David K. Scott, Student Trustee Dan Lizana and Dr. Barry Farber of University Health Services' Mental Health spoke at New Africa House.

Turn to VIGIL, page 2

SGA to hold elections today for area governments

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Asssociation of the University of Massachusetts will again be in session, marking the start of its year with elections being held across campus tomorrow.

However this year, the senate has redistricted the elections and eliminated the "unequal distribution of senate seats" of last year, Dan Castellano, student speaker of the SGA, said.

"The student judiciary came down with a ruling last semester that said that the implementation of the fall elections were unconstitutional because not every student had an equal voice and vote," Castellano said. "Essentially that meant disproportionate representation across campus."

Last year, for example, there was one senator for each house in the Greek Area, representing 50 residents. In Sylvan there was also one senator for each dorm, but there were 375 residents to be represented.

Therefore, there was a definite need to redistrict, according to Castellano. The senate responded by creating "at large seats" for individual living areas, eliminating the senator-per- house rule.

Now, there will be one senator for every 250 students. In Southwest, there will be two senators elected from the high- rise dorms which house 500 students. Dorms housing less than 250 students, such as Emerson in Southwest, will be put into the at-large pool and senators will be elected accordingly.

"This ensures that every student gets an equal voice in vote," Castellano said. "You won't find the same disparity as last year."

However, in the Spring elections for area government only seven candidates out of 28 positions were on the ballot, and those seven were all write-ins.

"They were legitimate write-ins, but they were winning with only two votes," Castellano said. "If the elections were by the books, they would be in charge of a $20,000 budget."

The elections failed last spring because of the lack of participation in the process.

"The area government that was elected in the spring was never ratified by the senate," Castellano said. "A lot of procedures were not followed. We decided to run the elections again [today] in an effort to strengthen area government."

These new elections will also provide candidates with an opportunity to meet with their constituents. The constitution mandates that prospective candidates collect 100 signatures. This requires office seekers to go out into their community and find out what the specific needs of the students are.

"From the perspective of the SGA, the area government officers are the closest connection we have to the students living in those areas," Castellano said.

He forecasts that the fall elections will represent the students more fairly, thus improving relations between the students and the administration.

"We've gotten a much better response, which is what we wanted," Castellano said. "We're striving to get more students involved in the student process. The wider we can extend the branches of the SGA, the stronger the student voice will become on campus and the better we can represent the students."

CRC organizes for 'Cannabis Awareness' week

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Correspondent

Despite their controversial cause, the Cannabis Reform Coalition has been one of the most visible RSO's in the opening weeks of the semester.

The organization began handing out flyers and soliciting new members as early as Convocation, and members have spent the last few weeks at a table in front of the Student Union Munchie Store and Campus Center Concourse.

The organization claims to have solicited 150 new members and expects to surpass 1000 this year. They have already held their first open house and showed their first informational movie in their newly relocated office in the Student Union.

Currently, the CRC is preparing for the upcoming Cannabis Awareness week. On September 18 the CRC will be having their first general meeting, featuring lawyer and NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws) representative Dick Evans as a guest speaker. Tuesday night there will be another open in the CRC office. On Thursday the 21st the organization will be promoting the movie "SEX, Drugs, and Democracy" which will be shown in the Northampton Academy of Music.

On Friday, in conjunction with Earthfoods, the CRC will be presenting Hemp Food Day. Some of the dishes served include hemp seed pasta salad, hemp seed melt into cornbread, and hemparella.

CRC Secretary John Lanzerotta insured that the

Turn to CRC, page 3

Springfield voters oust Robert Markel

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Springfield's Mayor Robert Markel became a lame duck after Tuesday's primary vote. That leaves leaving City Council President Michael Albano and former Mayor Charles Ryan running against each other in November, in a race that could parallel a referendum on casino gambling in the city. In unofficial results Tuesday night, Ryan received 7,930 votes, or 37 percent; Albano received 6,764 votes, or 32 percent; and Markel placed third with 4,160 votes, or 19 percent. Voter turnout was about 33 percent.

Frederic Hurst received 1,740 votes, or 8 percent, and Chelan Jenkins came last with 694 votes, or 3 percent.

Mayoral preliminary elections also were held in Beverly, Everett, Lynn and Salem, while Boston, Chicopee, Northampton and several other cities held city council preliminaries.

The West Roxbury state representative's seat also was being decided Tuesday night, after Democratic incumbent Vincent Mannering's decision to step down two months ago.

Markel, a 51-year-old political science professor, was elected without opposition two years ago. But in the preliminary election his opponents capitalized on several summer stumbles, including a move to shut all of the city's branch libraries. The mayor backed off of the shutdown proposal within five days following a barrage of public criticism.

Ryan, 68, who last served as mayor from 1962 to 1967, said he decided to run to push his economic development platform as an alternative to casino gambling. He spearheaded an anti-gambling group that narrowly defeated a non-binding referendum last November for a casino in the city.

Turn to XXX, page 3

Campus Police Log

Suspicious vehicle
There was a vehicle in Lot 22 with a smashed window. The owner was notified.

Vandalism
There was a report of graffiti in the Campus Center garage.

Injured person
An individual in Hill House with a medical problem was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual in Knowlton Residence Hall with an asthma attack was assisted to his room.

Accident
There was a two-vehicle accident in Lot 33. One operator was issued a citation for "Care in turning."

Annoying behavior
There was an investigation of a threatening behavior by an individual in Field Residence Hall.

Larceny
There was a backpack stolen from the Textbook Annex.
There was a wallet stolen from Pierpont Residence Hall.
There was a bicycle stolen from Thatcher Residence Hall.

Animal complaint
There was a raccoon acting in an unusual manner.

Health/Safety hazard
A gas can was removed from Goodell Library.

Drug law offenses
There was an investigation into an odor of marijuana in Coolidge Residence Hall.

■ vigil

continued from page 1

Page, who was one of Toney's instructors, spoke about creating more community within the African-American community.

"This is not about coming together and calling it a community, but creating a community," Page said. "We created more of a sense of a community."

Gerald Fonville, residence director in Prince/Crampton cluster, commented on the discussion which Page initiated. "She said that while she was a professor on this campus, she was speaking not as an official of the University, but as a black woman on this campus. She put in words, what a lot of people were feeling as a member of the African- American community after the loss of two men from our community in the past six months."

The group of students than walked with candles to the front of IQA where they held a candle light vigil. As the group walked from New Africa House to Southwest, more students and members of the community joined them, so that approximately 200 students arrived at the doors of IQA.

Taft Bailey, an organizer of the event along with Ferreira and Lizana, organized the event in response to, and as a means of coming together around Toney's death.

"People, in general, come together at a time of crisis — that's nature's way of telling us," Bailey said.

"It was very powerful, and very emotional. We wanted to evoke a spirit to take care of each other and be supportive of each other. Gerald [Fonville] kept repeating something over and over again, 'I am my brother's keeper.' There's a lot of responsibility there," Bailey continued.

While no University or police statement has been issued around the death of Toney, several speakers implied that the death was a suicide.

"Of course the University can't issue a statement yet, everything points towards suicide," Bailey said. "No one wanted to speculate, but that was the theme...but still, it doesn't matter, there's still a loss in the community."

For help or services, contact Mental Health 545-2337.

Collegian Classifieds, They work!

Jack C. Toney, 22

Jack C. Toney, 22, of Worcester, died in Southwest Residential Area on Sunday.

Toney fell from the window of his John Quincy Adams Residence Hall room on the morning of September 17. He was a student at the University of Massachusetts at the time of his death.

Toney was a senior communications major at the University. Early in his studies at the University, he competed as a thrower for the men's track and field team.

Services for Toney will be held today and tomorrow in Worcester.

Calling hours are on Wednesday from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Arthur Manzi Funeral home, 179 Shrewsbury Street.

Funeral services are on Thursday at 10 a.m. at St. Christopher's Church on West Boyleston St. Mourners planning to go to the mass are encouraged to arrive at the funeral home by 9 a.m.

For directions, call Arthur S. Manzi & Son Funeral Home at (508) 754-5400 or fax at (508) 752-1674.

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1995

If you know

A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A SIGNED NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

ALUMNI AND CURRENT UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

For More Information Contact::
Lori Baronas at 545-5278 or
E-Mail Address: l.baronas@dpc.umassp.edu

TO: Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Graduate Dean
Room 514 Goodell
Fax 413-5453754

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Sept. 20

Community — Israeli folk dancing, instruction from 7:30- 8:15 p.m., open dancing from 8:15–9 p.m., free and open to the public, Hillel House.

Lecture — Republicans, Clinton, and US Foreign Policy, Five College Faculty Panel with: Michael Klare, PAWSS; Luan Troxel, SC; Gregory White, SC; part of PAWSS Fall Lecture Series, Rm. 103, McConnell, SC, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The ALANA Caucus' first meeting of the year, all interested students welcome, Rm. 301, Student Union, 6 p.m.

Meeting — Informational meeting for the 1996 UMass Program in Siena, Italy, third floor lounge, Herter Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Asian American Students Assoc. first general meeting, new members welcome, room 903, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Music — Jamie Anderson, singer, songwriter, comic, part of the GLBT Cafe Series, $3–$5 donation requested, 545- 4824, The Blue Wall, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 21

GLBT Lecture — Fighting Words: A Queer Declaration of Independence, by Scott Tucker, queer writer, health care activist, democratic socialist and founding member of ACT UP, free and open to the public, accessible, 545-4824, Rm. 803, Campus Center, 12-1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Animal Rights Coalition's first meeting, all are welcome, room 903, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Meeting — The UMass Hang Gliding Club's first general meeting, all welcome, call 545-0804 for information, Campus Center, check info desk for room, 5:30 p.m.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, informational meeting for perspective members, sixth floor lounge, Thompson Tower, 4–6 p.m.

Music — Faculty Recital: Baroque to Jazz, David Sporny, trombone with Nadine Shank, piano, $5 for public, $2.50 for UMass students, Bezanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 22

Lecture — "Environmental effects of Bolide Impact at the KT Boundary," by Haraldur Sigurdsson, Five College Distinguished Lecturer, School of Oceanography, University of Rhode Island, Geosciences Lecture Sciences Series, Morrill 2 South, Room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Community — Annual Intertribal Powwow, traditional crafts, fine arts, and foods, open to the public, day money registration- for Native American dancers only, 10–11:30 a.m., $4 per day for general public, $6 for both days, $3 per day for Five College students and staff, $5 for both days, family rates available, no drugs or alcohol, Curry Hicks Cage, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Meeting — Time Out Fellowship: Praise and Worship, games, and speaker Steve Chase on "Enchanted Life," for information call Mark of Elizabeth at 253-7206, Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Notices

GLB RA Matters — Residence Life Staff who identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or are questioning their sexual orientation are invited to attend GLB RA Matters. Meetings are every Friday in Mary Lyon from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. For more information contact Dawn M. Bond 5- 1506.

Exhibit — "France '95", the works of 40 UMass undergraduate Art majors during 2 intensive summer programs in the South of France, photography, drawings, paintings, sculpture, handmade books, and journals, Herter Gallery, Sept. 18–28, M–F 11–4 p.m.

Exhibit — Foundations Works, a juried exhibition of two and three dimensional works by first year art students in the 1994/95 Foundations Programs in Art, directed by Prof. Pat Lasch, Sept. 18–28, Herter Art Gallery, M–F 11–4 p.m.

Exhibit — 25 years of Nacul Center, works by Tullio Inglese and Judith Inglese, 256–8025, Nacul Center Gallery, Amherst, Sept. 1 – Oct. 31, Mon–Fri 9–5 p.m.

Co-op — If you heat your house or apartment with oil, the Pioneer Valley Heating Oil Co-operative (PVOC) could earn you savings this winter. For more information contact the UMass Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC). Student Union, Room 428, open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m or call 545-0865.

Wanted — Graphic intern for the Residential Educational Alcohol Program. Includes design and productions of health promotion materials, credit toward graduation. Excellent opportunity for someone interested in health promotion (AIDS, STD's, and Alcoholism). Contact Sandra Withcomb 545-0137.

Intramurals — P.E.P. 189 Officiating Intramurals, a 3 credit course. Listed under Education in Course Registration Booklet. Paid officials are also needed for fall sports but must attend one clinic to get scheduled for games. Call the Intramural Office at 545-0022 or go 215 Boyden Building.

Family Planning Services — HIV testing, pregnancy testing, birth control, medical tests, assistance for struggling families, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts, (800) 696–7752.

Volunteers Needed — The Campus Chime and Carillon Committee needs student volunteers to ring the bells in Old Chapel. Will teach and train anyone with reasonable musical ability. Call Ken Samonds at 545–1077 for more information.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center, for information call Utama at 256–8482.

Yearbook — the Index Yearbook is looking for anyone interested in photography, writing, computer layout, and marketing to help put together an all–color yearbook., no experience necessary, paid editorships are still open, staff meetings every Monday at 7:30 p.m. at 304 Student Union.

Distinguished Visitors Program

Students bringing exciting people of exceptional merit of achievement in the arts, sciences, politics, and entertainment to the UMASS campus.

KURT VONNEGUT
ANGELA DAVIS
BELL HOOKS
JIMMY CARTER

distinguished visitors program

PHYLLIS SCHLAFFLY
RALPH NADER
WYNONA LADUKE
CHUCK D

Yeah, we got that!!

Come to our new members meeting on Monday, October 2 at 6 pm in the Campus Center Room 811.

For information on how to join the Distinguished Visitors Program, please stop by our office at 404 Student Union Building, or call 5-0046. You are welcome to our weekly meetings on Mondays at 6 pm in Campus Center. Look up the room location in the schedule posted by the elevators.

the BLUEWALL presents
DISCO
Thursday, September 21, 1995
Boogie Down All Night Long
FREE ADMISSION
9:30 pm - 1:00 am
70's Costumes encouraged
With D.J.s Billy Arnold and Robert Dwelley
Lighting and Sound By:
Audio Pro Media
Morrill D. Lincoln Campus Center 25th Anniversary

"Because Two Is Better Than One"

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Chris Conner • Photos by Suzanne F. Garb

Given the recent budget cuts from state university education, what do you think of John Calipari's new contract?

"I'm a little disappointed that people who further our education like professors don't even get half what [Calipari] does. However, he has done a lot for our school with his donations."

JENNY R'CHARDSON
senior, history
Boston

"My feeling is that UMass to do some serious prioritizing as to where they spend their money. I think athletics are an important part of our campus and support people who wouldn't have the economic capability to go to college, but UMass needs more academic funding."

STASIA KUDREZ
senior, English/journalism
Burlington

"Since Coach Cal is bringing in a lot of money to use towards other sports on campus it doesn't really affect our tuition. It doesn't bother me at all. This campus should be thanking Coach Cal for bringing prestige and money instead of condemning him."

JAIME RESNICK
sophomore, political science
Marblehead

"He is making legal money. Granted, he should question the amount of money he's getting, but the ones who allow him to make that kind of money are the ones to blame."

JAY BEE
junior, forestry
Port-Au-Prince, Haiti

"I think you'd have to call into question the whole athletic department, not just Coach Cal. We have to decide where UMass needs to go — in the direction of athletics or academics."

MIKE DAY
senior, political science
Woburn

"I think he deserves any money that's coming to him just because of the money he brings in through the basketball program."

TOM MOSSCROP
junior, landscape architecture
Westford

■ child care

continued from page 1

Day Care are full-time, and during traditional work week hours, 8:15 a.m. – 5:15 p.m.

Weinbaum, who would prefer a more flexible, part-time child care schedule, said, "You end up buying time that you don't need or you can't afford." Weinbaum's solution is to hire a babysitter for her two-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Ola.

However, there have been times when she was forced to bring Ola to class.

"I had to sit on the floor in the hallway to nurse my child," said Weinbaum, who describes the University as "inaccessible" to children and student parents. A few times she has left Ola in the car while she ran to get a book from the W.E.B. Dubois Library, because, said Weinbaum, "There are no handicapped parking places for people with children."

"I think the major problem is the lack of recognition and support by the University for students with families," Rio said, "especially families under different circumstances, such as single parent families, low income families and international student families."

Balancing work, studies & children

During the summer, Weinbaum was informed that one of her classes was being changed from the afternoon to the morning. Since she had to arrange child care for this semester by May, Weinburg had to use a credit card to make up the $400 difference in child care costs.

"One of the highest groups in poverty are young single mothers and their children," Rio said. "If some of these changes go through, they're going to be locked out of this opportunity [for an education]."

The current state subsidies are only available to welfare recipients. Most students who work lose their welfare and their subsidies, according to Weinbaum. "They can't work, so they have to stay on welfare," she said.

When day care facilities have to take subsidies that are for an amount less than their normal fee, they take a pay cut, said Weinbaum.

After more than five years of balancing her time between her son Malcolm and grad school, Rio is finding that public kindergarten doesn't improve her child care situation much. There are early release days every Wednesday in Amherst, in addition to February and April vacations and other holidays.

"There's this idea that once your kid is in kindergarten, all your problems are over," she said.

Weinbaum, in an attempt to "discontinue this needless infliction of pain and suffering," is organizing a Family Court starting this Friday at 10 a.m. across from the Mini- Store in the Student Union.

■ CRC

continued from page 1

foods served "contained no psychoactive ingredients" and that they are "devoid of any THC products."

The finale of Cannabis Awareness Week arrives on Saturday, when the CRC will be sending three busloads of students to the Boston Marijuana legislation rally. Nearly 1200 people are expected to attend the social/political event.

The CRC will soon be becoming a chapter of NORML, said CRC vice president Brian Julin, who has been a member since the organizations inception in the fall of 1991. Julin described NORML as "committed individuals who want to see the job done."

In exchange for access to the national organizations resources and recognition, the CRC will donate all profits from one of the year's events to NORML.

On Oct. 11 the UMass Board of Trustees will vote on whether to put a positive check donation on the semester tuition bill which individuals can check off if they wish to donate $3 to the CRC. As is the case with MASSPIRG, a negative "check" must be indicated if the individual does not want to make a donation.

Two years ago students voted for a referendum for having the check-off option on the bill. The upcoming vote has given the CRC their fare share of media attention in the past week.

Julin said that the vote "should be a clear cut issue" and that "the publicity should be focused on the larger issue."

Lanzerotta said the CRC will take action against the Board of trustees should they block the request.

"If [the Board] attempts to circumvent the will of the students," he said, "We are prepared for eminent legal action."

With the added money that the donation option could bring, the CRC plans to create an impartial drug education program for students.

"Students have little access to health effects based on medical literature," he said. "We want folks to know what they're dealing with."

However, as has been in the past, the CRC has been met with opposition from some other RSOs.

Jamie Resnick, former vice president of the Young Republicans Club and current president of Hillel House said he was upset that the CRC passed out literature to freshman at Convocation.

"Marijuana is illegal, period," he said. "They should study it more instead of trying to legalize an unhealthy behavior."

He also said he was "sick of the positive and negative check off fees," and that RSOs should raise their own funds.

Advil
Pain reliever/Fever reducer
INDICATIONS: For the temporary relief of minor aches and pains associated with the common cold, headache, toothache, muscular aches, backache, for the minor pain of arthritis, for the pain of menstrual cramps, and for reduction of fever.

SUMMER'S OVER.

Thank goodness there's Advil.® Advanced medicine for pain.™

Advil contains ibuprofen. Use only as directed. ©1994 Whitehall Laboratories, Madison NJ.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Juan Jose Chacon Quiros de Quetzcoatl Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Position Vacant Black Affairs Editor Positions Vacant Staff Artists
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Walking down the ignorance aisle

In an age when the word safe should be synonymous with the word sex, particularly in our age group, why is it still embarrassing for the buyer as well as the seller to purchase condoms?

I work in a local drugstore so I see the same nervous smiles daily. Guy walks in, searches every aisle in the store for at least fifteen minutes before he plops down some aftershave, gum, Mountain Dew and, oh yeah, some Trojans. Girl scurries by me, returns to the counter with some lipstick, gum, Cosmopolitan and a variety pack of rubbers. I look past both of them to the candy rack across the way, take their money and wonder, "should I say have a good night or will I sound like too much of a pimp?"

This should all be second nature to me now. I've sold more "Astro-glide," and "Magnums" than I dare recall. I still throw them in the bag instantly though as if to reassure the customer I have no idea what they've purchased. This apparently is the cross you have to bear for being responsible enough to protect yourself.

I remember when my high school made the news for being bold enough to suggest dispensing condoms at the school nurse's office. The community was in constant debate over whether or not kids really do have sex — seemingly unaware of the growing teenage pregnancy rates.

The most compelling speeches, though, came from students. They voiced their horror stories of walking into 7-11 on a Friday night for a slurpee and some safe sex, only to be

This should all be second nature to me now, I've sold more "Astro-glide," and "Magnums" than I dare recall. I still throw them in the bag instantly though as if to reassure the customer I have no idea what they've purchased.

Tara Ruelle

glared at by the guy behind the counter eating a corn dog. Only the brave and tough-skinned practiced safe sex at that point. We were all for dispensing condoms at school; as some saw it, no more useless, expensive purchases for one $5 item.

This makes complete sense to me now when I see people in their 20's spend an hour in my store just to avoid a line and make a break for it with their rubbers. This also rings true when I feel myself blush as a 16-year-old comes in to ask, "Where are your prophylactics ma'am?" I don't want to feel like someone's sixth grade teacher when someone puts birth control on the counter in front of me.

There should be a way for condoms to become a lot more accessible as well as acceptable to the public at large. I don't think passing them out at the Spring concert does the job. You see more fountain-tipped baboons that day than you can shake a stick at.

If dispensing condoms at school isn't the absolute answer to the problem it might be a small remedy to the dilemma. If someone like a school figure were to admit that it's okay to have sexuality, but to be sexually responsible, it might ease the minds of the hormone-driven masses. I certainly don't think this would be effective without any education, but it would be a lot more effective than seeing the "joy of Life" two years in a row in health class.

It might also prepare us all for that adult walk down the birth control aisle at our local drugstores. It beats the hell out of a line at a health clinic for an HIV test.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Living in a diverse society

Writer's Note: The following column was previously written for the diversity newsletter of CIGNA Corporation during my internship for CIGNA this past summer. The column was written for the education of corporate America addressed through the experiences of a college student. It has been slightly modified.

When I was interviewing for my summer internship as CIGNA, I remember my reaction when Wayne King, of Human Resources, mentioned a diversity newsletter the division published. A newsletter on diversity?, I thought. Why would a corporation care so much about diversity that it would publish a newsletter about it? But as I got to think about this question some more, I understood the purpose.

When you think of the word diversity, what quickly comes to mind? Race, culture, gender, age and sexual orientation are some examples. But there's more; much more. Going into college I quickly learned that diversity is more than what we can see with our eyes. It includes the way each individual thinks.

When you think of the word diversity what quickly comes to mind? Race, culture, gender, age and sexual orientation are some examples. But there's more; much more. Going into college I quickly learned that diversity is more than what we can see with our eyes.

David Chan

We all come from different life-shaping experiences and thus we all have our own unique opinions and beliefs. Some of us are vegetarians and some of us love steak and eggs in the morning. Some of us enjoy hunting while some of us wouldn't even kill a fly.

Some of us are mathematicians and some of us are poets. Some of us are single and some of us are married. Of those that are married, some have children and some do not. And of those that have children, some adopt and some do not.

When I was younger, my parents told me to look down while they scolded me, but in contrast, my friend's mother would say, "Look at me when I talk to you!" whenever she would scold my friend.

The list of our diverse society is dynamic and multiplying. It was not the same as it was 20 years ago, and it will not be the same 20 years in the future. Just think back to twenty years ago, nobody had a personal computer or a VCR, and people could smoke a cigarette anywhere. There were also less women in the workforce. The times change fast.

That is why it is important for corporations to address such a topic. Companies have diverse workforces and they also service an array of different customers. But business doesn't stop there. Business is now demanding global interaction. It is now integral to do business internationally in order to stay competitive.

In less than ten years it will be mandatory. If we are not aware of our own country's diverse society, how are we going to be aware of Asia's? If we can not respect the diversity of our own society, how can we respect Europe's? Or Africa's? Or South America's? Anyone can tell you a successful relationship, not just a business relationship, includes respect on both sides.

But let's get back to basics. Probably the first thought that comes to mind, and one of the most heated issues of diversity, is ethnicity. Our society is a melting pot and it's growing rapidly.

The walls that separate different races can no longer hold up. We all have to work and communicate with people of different racial backgrounds. There are more minorities in colleges as well as the workforce.

When addressing the issue of race and language, I like to think of two scenarios. First I ask myself, if I was blind, would I judge people on the tone of their voice since I can not see the tone of their skin?

Second, I like to think of a little story I once heard. A professor and his student were walking around the city. Two foreign women walk by them speaking a different language. The student says to the professor, "I don't understand why they're speaking Chinese and not English. After all, they're in America." The professor chuckles and smiles to his student and replies, "Yes, they're in America and they're speaking a language that is foreign to you. They were speaking Japanese not Chinese. And they probably know English too. How many languages do you know?"

Diversity covers many avenues of differences. As individuals, we are all different from each other. But we all have one thing in common, and that one thing encompasses many other characteristics that we all share. We are all human beings. We have personal feelings, talents and shortcomings.

Through education and communication tools such as newsletters and company training programs, we can be comfortable addressing such a theme because of the exposure. Only our fears are holding us back. Differences do not make a person wrong or right, it makes a person an individual. That is what makes you diverse too.

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@olt.rms.oit.umass.edu

QUESTION BOX
Q. Haven't states demonstrated the ability to get rid of pollution without a lot of complicated federal requirements?
-S.L., Buffalo
A.
STATE LINE
TOXIC
UNIVERSAL MEETING EXPOSES THE POPPED BOY!
FROM THE MOUNTAINS TO THE VALLEYS I RUN OUR RIVERS GRAY WITH FOAM

Wouldn't you like to be a pepper too

I need to tell you about The Pepper. But first, I want you to realize that the story you are about to read is entirely the truth. I am not exaggerating, and I am not insane.

Okay, here it is. The story of The Pepper:

No one really knows who picked The Pepper on my family's vegetable farm in Paxton, Ma., but that hardly seems important now. The important thing is that it was picked, and because it was solid red, it was not packed with all of the other peppers into crates for the wholesaler. It was put aside to be sold in our store.

I can say without boasting that I discovered The Pepper because it was I who happened to be filling the red pepper display when I spotted it ... or it spotted me.

Two eyes, a nose, a smile.

I couldn't believe what I was seeing. The more I looked, the more realistic the face in this pepper became. The big, goofy nose and the endearing grin were so perfect. It was beautiful and hilarious at the same time. It was absolutely unbelievable.

Of course, I don't expect you to understand, unless you've seen The Pepper, how fascinated I was by it. It made me smile just to look at it. In fact, it made everyone smile. And so this pepper with the face in it, The Pepper, was put on display.

The reactions from the customers were wonderful:

"Is that really a pepper?"

"That's the funniest thing I've ever seen in my life."

"Did you carve that or something?"

"It's the closest thing to a human face that's possible in a pepper."

"That's incredible!"

A few days passed and we decided that The Pepper was too incredible to keep to ourselves. We needed to spread the news of this magic pepper that made children laugh and adults stare in awe. Following the suggestion of several customers, my mother called the Worcester daily newspaper and told them about an interesting pepper that they may, if they had time, want to photograph.

In the meantime, my sister and I took pictures of it with the idea we would blow one up into a poster with a caption like, "Have a nice day" or "Thank you for shopping here," and hang it in the store.

I also took The Pepper (wrapped carefully in paper towels of course) to a friend's house so she could see the vegetable that I hadn't been able to stop thinking or talking about for the past three days. Her father took several pictures and I was beginning to believe this had to be the most photographed pepper in the world.

Little did I know The Pepper's fame was only in its infancy.

The next day, The Pepper and my mom made the front page of the Worcester Telegram & Gazette, and my parents were interviewed by telephone on two radio stations — one from Worcester (WXLO) and one from Seattle, Wa. (I'm not kidding.)

We live in a fascinating place, but half the time we just don't realize it because we've taken it all for granted. Sometimes we need something like a perfect face in a pepper to make us stop and take notice.

Nicole Cournoyer

People began to come to the farm asking, "Where's the pepper?" and we'd point to our little miracle sitting on his own little box under the sign my sister made — "The Pepper."

Two days later, it made The New York Times.

The Pepper (and my mom) were famous. We got reports from New Hampshire and Indiana that the picture had appeared in papers there. One woman came into the store asking if she could get her picture taken with the vegetable. A man asked for my mother's autograph. I was beginning to feel the whole Pepper saga was getting out of hand.

After a while, I grew tired of seeing that face, adorable as it was. I felt like The Pepper had risen above us, become its own entity, and swallowed me in its shadow. Too many people knew about him now. He'd begun to lose his magic.

The Pepper guy just wasn't doing it for me anymore.

But then I looked at him again closely — not as a face, not as a "he," not as The Pepper, but as a pepper — and I was fascinated all anew.

How could I have begun to take this beautiful creation for granted? There are so many things that we take for granted. The complexity and beauty of our universe, from the stars to the peppers, is astounding. We live in a fascinating place, but half the time we just don't realize it because we've taken it all for granted. Sometimes we need something like a perfect face in a pepper to make us stop and take notice.

The Pepper is beginning to soften and wrinkle. Although we've refrigerated it every night, it has been picked now for almost 3 weeks. Its time is drawing near. Everyone says we should find a way to preserve it, but I don't know. Some of the most enjoyable things in life are temporary.

The trick is to keep finding more to enjoy.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

A warning to some, a reminder to others

Editor's note: The author's name has been withheld for safety reasons.

This is a column to all the women who did not see the Collegian on Sept. 11. There was a composite sketch of a man who attacked a woman in Southwest at 10:15 p.m. the previous Wednesday, inflicting minor lacerations and abrasions on the victim.

The article reported that the victim "in this particular incident did scream." This implies that there have been other incidents which were not reported to the public. I have since been wondering about how many other attacks on women we do not hear about.

Although I have been aware of the precautions to take to ensure my own safety, there have been times when I have let my guard down, so to speak. Coming from a city, I found the atmosphere here to be relatively safe. I did not think twice about walking around campus at night.

It is because I too have felt a false sense of security being in a college town that I feel an even greater need to inform women about the attack in Southwest.

It infuriated me the story ran for only one day. A majority of the people I talked to had not heard of the story or had seen the picture. Perhaps it is because the University of Massachusetts does not want to scare women, or maybe the story is more common than we would like to believe.

In the Sept. 18, issue of the Collegian, there was the story of a tragic death in Southwest. In this case there was a letter sent to everyone living on campus notifying them of the incident. Professors were even mentioning it in classes. I am not trying to make light of this young man's death, but I feel the campus should have responded just as strongly to the attack of this young woman.

Every woman on campus should have received a letter notifying them of the story and reminding them this campus is not in some protective bubble away from the problems of the real world.

Every woman on campus should have received a letter notifying them of the story and reminding them this campus is not in some protective bubble away from the problems of the real world. When comparing the two incidents it does not make any sense to emphasize the death of a young man who was only a threat to himself over a person who is a danger to all women.

I do not understand why the sketch of this man's face is not plastered all over campus. This situation will soon be rectified with the help of other concerned women. I felt compelled to write this before I had to read of another attack of violence against women.

I do not wish to portray this man as the only perpetrator of violence in this community. I hope his actions will serve as a catalyst to some women to take precautionary measures such as not walking around campus at night, especially alone, and to utilize the Escort service, as inconvenient as it may be.

The fact that an escort service is in place should tell women that there is known danger on this campus. As for the women who are already aware of the potential acts of violence, keep your guard up at all times and encourage other women to do the same. The University has failed its female population by not encouraging all women to do the same.

Multicultural Affairs

Wednesday, September 20, 1995

A call to arms

Greetings from the Multicultural Affairs Desk. This statement shall be brief and concise, for this space could be otherwise filled by the words of talented writers.

Basically, what I wanted to throw out is the following: although this university and its student organizations lack by and large a full ethnic and cultural element representative of this country, let it be known to the readers that this does not mean that there are not people out there who are not doing something about it.

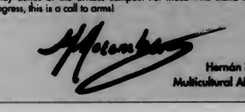
We are particularly concerned here with the issue of adequate and just ethnic representation in this paper, the Collegian, the biggest student publication on campus. While there have been grave problems concerning the treatment of minority students at the paper in years past — and undoubtedly for years to come — this should not, and cannot, mean that ALANA students have to turn their back and neglect current opportunities to express their concerns within a space that is there for them.

So what are you trying to say, you ask? And the answer is: to give it a chance. Last semester this desk received many compliments as a "little oasis," if you will, where students of color could feel comfortable to be themselves, to voice their true opinions, without any fear of instant confrontation or rejection — a place of their own, if you will. Asians, Latino(a)s, Blacks, and Native Americans students: there is no reason why this should change this semester.

The Multicultural Affairs Desk is open to each and every individual who wants to see a positive progression of minorities toward full equality status in this land of the free. However, it should be noted that it is first and foremost a forum where such minorities should feel at home and where they truly feel that it is by them and for them. No one should take offense at this, for one should recall, it has not been that long that minorities have had a chance to begin standing on an equal footing to other ethnicities.

Without forgetting a second of the turbulent past that minorities have gone through at this paper, and without denying any of the present obstacles that still stand in the way, let this desk be a point where ALANA students at UMass can envision a future with, if anything, a promise that if they don't give up even the remotest of chances, they shall continue letting themselves be known and continue setting a right path for those who have been so privileged to make it here so that they can do the same for the following generation after them, thus keeping the spirit alive.

Racism and derivatives thereof will not cease just because minorities have a space in the Collegian. However, this page can always continue to be one more "little oasis" for many people who are treading on the white, sandy dunes of the UMass campus. For those who stand in the line of progress, this is a call to arms!



Hernán Rozemberg
Multicultural Affairs Editor

The chameleon children

Social interaction creates a new level of communication, noting that society is a cauldron of cultures. The difficulty of adjusting to differences can initiate repulsion, yet curiosity of our senses can beckon attraction. There are individuals in society that have enriched their forces of attraction due to their constant engagement with different cultures. They are known as chameleon children.

The term chameleon children follows the distinct habitual patterns of the lizard creature — the chameleon. Its ability to change color in various environments definitely makes it a fascinating creature. The chameleon travels throughout earth's landscape absorbing experiences that no other creature can imagine, for the chameleon can disappear into the physical patchwork without revealing its identity.

Likewise, chameleon children have experienced this similar journey. The purpose of this journey serves as beneficial to society's debacles which include relations with foreign and less known cultures, and the lack of ambassadors to account for the overly abundant popular movements of the 20th century.

Chameleon children mold into an adaptive role at birth. In a majority if not in all of the cases, these are children growing in a country not their own and being educated in an international circle comprising of different cultures.

As they mature, they learn to adapt to others of different cultures and use the knowledge they have learned to apply it in a constructive manner. This knowledge will always be used to share experience with others, but the range for the expression of these experiences differs. Some may express their knowledge in writing, some in art, or some other form. Regardless, they attempt to show other people the many lifestyles chosen by different people all over the world.

There are individuals who might be considered chameleon children but do not fall into the proper characteristics, because it is quite difficult to establish criteria that determine who falls or does not fall under this unique category.

There are three general characteristics of chameleon children. First, they are raised in a country apart from their land of birth. In this sense, they are third-culture children, which is just one more way of identifying them. Also, they may be born in a country that is not favorable to their ethnic origins.

Second, they learn three basic cultures: one being from the country of their ethnic origin, another being from the country they reside, and the last being the international culture. International culture means an environment where children like their own understand one another better, like an international school that amalgamates ideas from different cultures to educate children with a global perspective.

Zaw Min Oo

An international school considers the differences among chameleon children and tries to solve the problem of identification in a world of confusion and diversity. The setting of an international school creates an atmosphere that unites differences. Instructors are well aware that whatever they teach their students must be done in order to respect the cultures of each and every one of them.

Third, is having exposure to many cultures. It is common to find chameleon children wanting to meet others different from themselves because they want to be as international as they possibly can. Eventually, they hope not to be a citizen of one country but rather of many countries—that is, hoping to be a citizen of the world.

If the second characteristic were removed, it would make it easier to identify more and more people as chameleon children. The second characteristic mentions a third culture being an amalgamated international culture. This international culture may be learned through travel, yet it is only an attempt that holds more fortification than instruction.

Respect is the key to educate these chameleon children and social interaction is the tool that screws the nuts and bolts of their understanding. It is not enough for them just to know about the living patterns of their colleagues, they also have to experience these situations.

How do chameleon children experience this interaction? Simple. They make friends from different parts of the world, and learn more about each other — and about themselves — this way. Because they start learning and absorbing these differences at a young age, they are more susceptible to adaptations and more sensitive to others' ways.

At a young age, ideas learned become inborn. The sense of differences in cultures become so innate that chameleon children feel isolated when they are not around people who are culturally different from them. The attachment gets stronger as these children grow older. They may later discover the meaning of racism, but soon understand that it is relative to the childhood experiences that one has gone through, and that mutual respect provides a shield against it.

Chameleon children possess an obvious talent in communication skills, since in most cases, they tend to be multi-lingual. They also have excellent public relations skills, as they have encountered many different cultural situations from childhood. When they mature, they become frequently requested speakers everywhere and the world uses and considers them a natural resource.

Although chameleon children are the admiration of most individuals, they are not fully understood. Due to their exposure, they feel attached to many things which in turn leave them struggling to find a definite self-identity. Because they adapt, they are like clones that absorb everything, often leaving out their own independent identities.

I am one of these chameleon children. Born in Burma and raised in the Philippines, I know a lot about myself and others from having experienced many different cultures. I grew up in what I regard as the sanctum to my education, an international school. The life I live is a blessed one.

Yet I wonder who I really am and what I stand for. I have seen so much of the world that I want to live in every part of it. I mention this because my life has been dynamic; this causes me sometimes to feel lost. I can not settle anywhere because I am constantly unsatisfied with what I have and I want to amass more knowledge. In a sense, I am homeless. I belong nowhere but everywhere, and I claim myself as a ever-changing creature with no permanent path in life. I continue to cross paths. I am and always a chameleon child.

Zaw Min Oo is a Collegian staff member. This is the first of a series of articles that focuses on similar cases of "chameleon children." People particularly interested in participating in this series should contact the editor.

From death row, Mumia Abu-Jamal: a jaundiced "Eye on America"

The urbane Dan Rather, sitting as the sole anchor of the evening's newscast, premised the segment coming up as one which would deal with a case of a criminal "who profited from his crime," a theme seconded by correspondent Anthony Mason, and the subjects of the segment.

Mumia Abu-Jamal

Viewers were left with the unmistakable opinion that the man depicted in the segment, was getting "rich" off the killing of a cop in Philadelphia ...

Nothing could be further from the truth.

That edition of "Eye on America" is Exhibit A of "How to produce a biased, prejudiced and non-objective report." It was an attack on a book; a book that deals with many things, but not the crime for which the writer has convicted — a fact obvious to anyone who can, and does, read.

It is undisputed that the writer was convicted of a crime, and yes, the book — Live From Death Row — does deal with crime — but it deals with the crimes committed by this system, this government, members of the Philadelphia Police, and the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections — crimes that no court has condemned! It illustrates that some crimes are punished, and others are not. That is the real reason why this system, and its media mouthpieces (themselves huge multinational corporations) are attacking this book.

Isn't it ironic that the very entity that claims its lifeblood, is the First Amendment to the Constitution, attacks someone for daring to practice the identical claimed constitutional guarantee?

What is more important, however, is the case that wasn't mentioned in that segment that claimed to deal with "those who profited form crime," and why.

Who recognizes the name "Stacey Koon"?

If you say, "one of the cops who almost beat Rodney King to death," you would be half-right. He is also the author of the book, Presumed Guilty: The Tragedy of the Rodney King Affair (Regnery Gateway, 1993). Mr. Koon is also a beneficiary of the Koon Defense Fund which has collected, as of 4-5 months ago, an estimated $4.6 million dollars — million!

In his letter soliciting funds for the support of his legal efforts on appeal, and his wife and five kids, the call for financial support is under the title: Sgt. Stacey Koon, L.A.P.D. Sgt.? L.A.P.D.? Isn't Koon a convicted criminal?

Further, isn't he, by writing a book about the crime for which he was convicted — "profiting from his crime"?

Apparently, to the editors at CBS, not so, for who among the readers who are reading this column, has not seen the brutal videotaped beating of Rodney King — for the crime of being a "big nigga"? In his letter soliciting funds, Koon writes, "Rodney King, a muscle-bound, 6-foot-4-inch, 240 pounder, had attacked LAPD police officers before the famous video tape was made."

"At one point," Koon adds, King "exhibited superhuman strength."

When is a criminal not a criminal? When they are cops convicted of crimes? How many of the cops across the country contributed to this convicted criminal?

You would probably not learn this from "Eye on," for this was not, apparently, "news." In truth, it isn't news when white cops beat, kill, or torture black men, women and children; that is the status quo.

At the night before the event at the law enforcement memorial in Washington, D.C., over 100 cops (mostly from the New York City Police Dept.) wrought havoc upon the Washington Regency Hotel, by acting like a squadron of drunken louts — they ran through the hotel buck naked, sexually harassed innocent women who lodged therein, they sprayed fire extinguishers into the air conditioning system, and beat on doors, shouting "Open up! Federal Police!"

What constitutes crimes for average people, becomes "boys getting a little steam off."

Who profits from crime?

Don't the cops?

Doesn't the media?

Mumia Abu-Jamal is a Black journalist who has been sitting on death row since 1981, after being convicted for the first-degree murder of Daniel Faulkner, a Philadelphia police officer. Certain evidence shows that Abu-Jamal may have been framed up, and that his past affiliation with the Black Panther Party was unfairly used to portray him as a cop killer. Currently, he is under a stay of execution and appealing for a new trial at the federal level.

A question of cultural geography

The other day I was talking to a Bohemian poet, one of those who sits at your local bar and has a lyrical answer to every question that you could conceive under the influence of some spirits, and he asked me "are you Puerto Rican?" I said "yes," and then he asked me so what are you doing living out there in "el extranjero?" I replied, "Well, I am a student, and I can't make a decent living in the island." He then told me "You sold out! You need to be here working for the island's progress!" "You are no longer Puerto Rican!"

All I could think of was "what difference does it make whether I am physically living in the island or not?" What does the geography of my temporary home mean? And what is its relationship to who I am? My identity? Clearly, and by definition, the law treats Puerto Rico as a territory of the United States, neither making the island a state of the union, nor making it an independent country. This means that by juridical definition we are "gringos," we are citizens of the United States, and members of the Anglo-American nation.

El Pirata

Granted our membership is a condition of our historical experiences, as well as that of those who have also been placed at the margins of the Anglo-American nation, but we are still U.S. citizens in difference to citizens of any Latin American nation, such as Mexico or Chile. But what about my culture? How can I measure my identity? How can I physically define my culture? Where do I draw the lines or borders of who I am and/or who I am not?

Culture transcends these imagined physical spaces. I say imagined because the map is simply a graphical representation of our island in a piece of paper or however one may want to mentally picture it. I mean, if I travel, I carry my identity wherever I go, to wherever I visit.

My culture is not something that I can put in my back pocket and wear it as a t-shirt whenever I want to. It is not something I constructed as I traveled or grew up. As a matter of fact, I did not choose to be born in this culture, or that place. To be sure, I did not choose to be born into a family, or a home with a particular notion of the world. Yet I embrace these values, and I like that food, I enjoy that music, and I laugh at those jokes.

I am who I am because of many accidents, many interpretations, many experiences clashing and coming together. Within this context, I want to propose that a definition, or rather a territorialization, of the idea of culture should rely on reference points, on guiding lights in a sea of confusion.

Culture is something that flows beyond the physical borders of a nation, a state, an island. Culture is something that is always changing and transforming, always in flux. Culture respects no boundaries, no locations, no physical spaces, no time-freezing definitions. Perhaps the best way of articulating this is by relying on a traditional Zen saying: "Culture just is!"

El Pirata is a UMass graduate student.

Student trustee struggles to success

Daniel Rivera relates stories of personal & communal triumphs

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

Midway through the spring semester of 1994, Daniel Rivera was elected to the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees to represent the students of the Amherst campus. Just four years earlier, this accomplishment would have hardly seemed possible.

A native of Lawrence, Rivera grew up in public housing within one of the city's predominately Latino neighborhoods.

"When I got out of high school, I was a little unsure about college," Rivera said. Seeking a viable alternative, he enlisted in the army and was promptly shipped off to Germany as part of the 3rd Armored Division.

Serving as a military police officer, Rivera spent a year and a half in Europe until 1991, when he was sent to the Persian Gulf as part of Operation Desert Shield.

"It was a horrible experience," said Rivera, who was assigned the duty of policing the streets of Kuwait City at war's end. "That was really the toughest thing we did."

Upon his return home, Rivera became involved with the Lawrence Community Partnership and worked on voter registration campaigns as well as violence and substance abuse prevention programs.

"We also got into the politics of the community," said Rivera, who along with some of his like-minded associates, formed the Latino Policy Institute. "We were a real positive group," he said, brought together to analyze the political issues which affect a city where people of color are in the majority.

Rivera's work with the Institute enhanced his interest in activist issues, prompting him to apply and receive an internship in June of 1993 with the Lawrence Community Redevelopment Department (LCRD), a subsidiary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"I didn't have the technical skills, but I acquired those as I went on," Rivera said, whose two primary concerns involved investment patterns of local banks as well as the city-backed building demolition campaign.

This was of great concern to Rivera, as most of the buildings designated for demolition were located in low- income, Latino areas. Many of the structures, he pointed out, were suitable for those in need of low-cost housing. However, the mayor and other city officials ignored Rivera's protests, which eventually came back to haunt him as he was quietly demoted to "clerical work status," at the LCRD.

"I became a political casualty," he said.

With few options left in Lawrence, Rivera opted this time in favor of college and enrolled in the University of Massachusetts in the fall of 1993 as a political science major.

Early on he became involved with Casa Dominicana, a UMass student group which seeks to "raise consciousness about issues" which concern Latino students with descendence from the Dominican Republic, Rivera said.

Rivera's involvement with Casa Dominicana brought him into contact with students throughout the school who shared his passions and ideals. Such support eventually took its toll: in the spring of 1994, Rivera was asked by current SGA President Christine Lopes and Nelson Acosta, Director of the Office of ALANA Affairs, to run for Student Trustee.

After a two-month campaign, Rivera assumed the position of trustee at a time when it is enjoying a expanded influence on campus — largely due to Al Lizana, the trustee for the previous two years, who worked hard to increase the power and importance of the office.

"We've learned the game," Rivera said, citing many recent student fought victories at the state level, such as the freezing of fee increases for the academic year 1994-95, and a reduced fee increase this year.

"I have made my voice more important. If [the Board] sees you working with the same issues they are struggling with, they'll have more interest in [student] issues," Rivera said.

Having firmly established a reliable and hard-working reputation, fellow trustees now count on Rivera for his valuable, first-hand insight about UMass.

His work however, is far from easy. Recent appointments by Governor William Weld to the Board have overly politicized UMass and put a strangle hold on the efforts of those such as Rivera, who are striving to make needed improvements to the system.

While only a junior, Rivera will graduate this year. What's the rush? Curiously enough, he wants to get back to the place which drove him to UMass initially.

"I went home last summer and realized why I came here," Rivera said.

With a community in need of leadership, Rivera knows that the struggles he has faced at UMass as a Latino will continue after graduation; this in turn he concluded "will make my struggle at home easier."

Arts & Living

~ Preview ~

COURTESY PRIVATE MUSIC

Leon Redbone will play the Iron Horse this Thursday night bringing his special mix of wacky guitar playing.

Redbone to hit Pioneer Valley

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

The 1990s are shaping up as a decade obsessed with technology from compact disc players to digitally recorded music. So much so that bands often forget that it is the music that counts. Leon Redbone is a throwback to those good ole days before CDs, laserdiscs and VCRs.

Redbone is a performer known to sing old Confederate songs from the 1870s such as "Polly Wolly Doodle" which, for sure, sounds nothing like the Nirvana song of a similar title.

Redbone is a performer and throwback balladeer, who will be bringing his show to the intimate setting of the Iron Horse Music Hall tomorrow night. His voice has been described as sounding like, "an alligator from New Orleans," and comparisons to Tom Waits are numerous. His voice has been used in several well known television commercials including one for Budweiser singing, "This Bud's For You."

On his last album, Whistling In the Wind, Redbone collaborated with stars such as Ringo Starr, Merle Haggard, and Roger McGuinn to produce an album mixing old time hits with artists more in tune to today's music world. It is a wonderful combination.

Thanks to Johnny Carson, Leon Redbone has become a near household name even for the musically illiterate. Carson named Redbone as one of his favorite performers on "The Tonight Show."

Since his first album in 1975, Redbone has been continuing to entertain audiences performing the hits we were too young to know about.

It has been stated, "Leon Redbone's music is America's music — the best of where America came from and the place where American roots and imaginations still dwell." Tomorrow night's show at the Iron Horse should as American as Apple Pie even if he sings a Confederate song or two.

Leon Redbone will be appearing at the Iron Horse Music Hall on Thursday September 21, the show starts at 7:00 p.m. and tickets are $16.50 in advance at the Northampton Box Office located in Thorne's Market, 150 Main Street, Northampton. Call (413) 586-8686 or 1-800-TIE TICK.

New talk show hosts hit television

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Among the producers of this fall's bumper crop of syndicated talk shows, two stand outs, Dick Clark and Brando Tartikoff, are regarded as two of the savviest guys in television.

"Tempestt," with 22-year-old ex-Cosby kid Tempestt Bledsoe, is Clark's production. "Mark Walberg" is Tartikoff's.

They face a crowded field - newcomers Danny Bonaduce, late of "The Partridge Family"; Gabrielle Carteris, late of "90210"; Carnie Wilson, late of the singing group Wilson Phillips; George Hamilton and Alana Stewart, late of connubial bliss.

Not to mention veterans like Oprah, Sally, Rikki, Jenny, Rolanda, Geraldo, Montel and Phil.

"There is a lot of clutter," acknowledged Tartikoff, the former NBC Entertainment president, "but I'll say out of the other side of my mouth that there were a lot of talk shows when Rikki Lake came on, when Jenny Jones came on and when Montel Williams."

"There's nothing new. They're all spun from something," said Clark, a 26-year-old disk jockey when "American Bandstand" called in 1956. "It starts with the show, or the talent."

Both producers, interviewed separately, agreed that the relationship the viewers form with the show's on-air personality is all-important.

"This isn't an acting job," Clark said. "People fronting something, they're there standing virtually naked in front of the audience in terms of what they are. You either like 'em or you don't like 'em. And if you don't, you go down in flames.

"Form that relationship — then they're going to appreciate her intelligence, her conversational abilities, her

Turn to TALK SHOWS, page 8

~ Movie Review ~

Latest release can't hack it

Hackers makes nerds cool; lacks realism, reality & interest

By Michael Pessah
Collegian Staff

HACKERS
Directed by Ian Softley with Johnny Lee Miller, Angelina Jolie, Fisher Stevens

Dade (Johnny Lee Miller) is crouched over a laptop computer, his fingers dancing frenetically over the keys, oblivious to the techno music thumping in the background. Unknown to him, Kate (Angelina Jolie) slinks up behind him and whispers "I hope you don't screw like you type."

If you pine for those heady days in the 80's when the silver screen was overflowing with horny computer geeks, then Hackers is the movie for you. It's a movie completely preoccupied with sex, probably more so than any recent movie although the upcoming Showgirls might change that. Hackers never misses an opportunity to slide in a quick double entendre or to squeeze a gratuitous wet T-shirt onscreen.

The difference, however, between Hackers and Weird Science is that in the 90s, computer geeks are cool. The explosion of home computing, rave culture, the Internet and digital effects technology have made being a computer geek awfully trendy. Now, instead of horny underdogs with acne, computer geeks sport a new image: horny with bleached hair.

For a movie that is presumably marketed towards hip young people, Hackers is culturally out of touch. The computing scenes in Hackers are unrealistic and even a totally computer illiterate person knows that a virus doesn't make a Jim Morrison look-alike come out of the computer screen

The Hackers squad includes: Dade (a.k.a. Crash Override), a homogeneous looking kid with blue eyes, bleached hair and an affinity for vests; Cereal Killer, a neo-hippy designated for comic relief and profound comments like: "Whoa — you're like the king of the techno dweebies;" and Ninon a stereotypical character who does little besides providing a laugh-track and getting slapped by his mom.

Kate (a.k.a. Acid Burn) plays the dual role of the "feminist"/love interest. The primary manifestations of her "feminist" streak (presumably introduced as compensation for Hackers juvenile locker-room mindset) are writing male bashing manifestos on the blackboard ("the reason men have bigger brains than dogs is so that they don't hump women's legs at parties") and constantly questioning Dade's manhood ("That computer's too fast, you're not man enough for it"). Of course she "does it" with Dade at the end, but not without first having fantasies of him in a dress.

The villain in Hackers is Plague (Fisher Stevens), a slick, black suited, skateboarding, computer security expert. His scheme is to steal $20 million from his company by planting a virus and blaming it all on those pesky hackers. Of course, the hackers accidentally stumble on Plague's plan, and try to foil it with their amazing computing prowess.

For a movie that is presumably marketed towards hip young people, Hackers is culturally out of touch. The computing scenes in Hackers are unrealistic and even a totally computer illiterate person knows that a virus doesn't make a Jim Morrison look-alike come out of the computer screen. It may be hard to make 'hacking' look exciting, but resorting to glitzy graphics doesn't help this movie much.

Hackers isn't very exciting because there is absolutely nothing in the movie to care about. The characters are unreal and the 'hacking' sequences are boring. It provides little more than PG-13 level titillation and it makes one appreciate how good Wargames was. C-

Arts and free love

express yourself ~ Write for Arts & Living

LONG RIVER TAI CHI CIRCLE

"The softest in the world overcomes the hardest. The inobstantial can penetrate where there is no opening."
—Lao Tzu

Wolfe Lowenthal, head of the Long River school and a leading teacher of the Cheng Man-ching style of Tai Chi Chuan, will be offering classes in Amherst, MA and Putney, VT.

"Our Tai Chi has great benefits for health, relaxation and self defense. Of even more value, it is a tao, a balanced and harmonious way of living."

AMHERST CLASSES: Cushman Hill Children's Center, 71 Henry Street, Fridays: 7 to 8 pm, Starting September 22, 1995

PUTNEY CLASSES: Putney Community Center, Mondays: 5 to 6 pm, Advanced 6 to 7 pm, Beginners, Starting September 18, 1995

For more information about classes at either location call: 413-549-4160

What are the Most Powerful Words In Your Permanent Record?
(check one)
☐ Transcript
☐ Resumé
☐ Diploma
✓ The Wall Street Journal
For special student rates send in coupon below or for faster service call (800) WSJ-8614
7am-10pm Eastern Time Mon.-Fri.
☐ Send me a one year subscription for $67.00
☐ I'd prefer a 15-week subscription for $33.00
Name
Address
City State Zip
School name Graduation date
☐ Check enclosed ☐ Bill me later ☐ Charge to my: ☐ AMEX ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ Diners Club
Card no: Expiration date
Signature
THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.
Mail coupon to: The Wall Street Journal 200 Burnett Road, Chicopee, MA 01020

迎新晚會
主題：另一番的連繫
時間：1995年 9月 23日 星期六 下午六時起（晚餐招待）
地點：First Baptist Church of Amherst 434 N Pleasant St Amherst, MA 01002
講員：樂大端 博士 新澤西州華裔教會長老 AT&T Bell Laboratory 資深工程師
主辦：安城華人基督教會

Minutemaniacs

UMass' student athletic booster club, the Minutemaniacs, are looking for new recruits for the '95-'96 season!

New Member Registration

Applications will be available and accepted at: UMass Women's Volleyball vs. Connecticut

September 20, 1995 7:00 P.M. Mullins Center

UMass Students FREE with Valid Student I.D.

[Only one application per person will be accepted]

[Applications will also be accepted at the Athletic Ticket Office on Thursday & Friday]

$25.00 to Join! New Members Will Be Picked By A Lottery System. Undergraduates Only!

Minutemaniac Benefits:
- Advance Ticket Pickup
- Minutemaniac T-Shirt
- Game Receptions
- "The Maniac" Newsletter
- Membership Card

Minutemaniacs

There's At Least One Out There For YOU!

Check Them Out...

Campus Activities, University of Massachusetts, 416 Student Union, Box 37310, Amherst, MA 01007-7310, (413) 545-3600

Registered Student Organizations & Agencies

ACADEMIC Accounting Association
Alive With Dance
American Institute of Industrial Engineers
Anthropology Undergraduate Caucus
APICS
Arnold Air Society (ROTC)
Biological Sciences Student Association
Business Club
Chamber Choir
Club Communicators
Club Managers Student Chapter
Communication Disorders
Debate Union
Design Student Club
Independent Restaurateurs*
Marching Band*
Marketing Club*
National Society for Black Engineers
Poetry Society*
Pre-Medica
Pre-Vet & Animal Science Club
Russian Club*
Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers
Society of Landscape Architects
Society of Women Engineers
Student Hospitality Marketing Association International* Student Nurses Association
Travel & Tourism*
Wildlife Society
Women in Sports Management*

SERVICE
Alpha Phi Omega
Bottomoad Project
Circle K Club
Collegiate 4-H*
Fire and First Aid
Hands
Kappa Kappa Psi/Tau Beta Sigma
LBG Counselling Collective*
Nia Student Organization
Peer Mentor Network
Share STARS
VIVA

STUDENT BUSINESSES
Bicycle Co-op
Campus Design & Copy
Earthfoods
Federal Credit Union
Greenough Snack Bar
People's Market
SOM Food Services
Sweets And More
Sylvan Snack Bar
Tickets Unlimited
Valley Women's Voice

HONOR SOCIETIES
ALANA Honor Society
Alpha Lambda Delta
Alpha Zeta
Beta Alpha Psi
Eta Sigma Delta*
Golden Key Honor Society
Mortar Board
Phi Alpha Theta
Pi Sigma Alpha*

PERFORMING ARTS
Dance Team
Juggling Club
New World Theater
Student Valley Productions
UMass Theatre Guild

SPORTS
Bicycle Racing Club
Cheerleaders*
Club Volleyball
Crew Club
Croquet Club
Equestrian Team
Fencing Club
Golf Club
Rugby Club
Tennis Team*
Women's Ice Hockey
Wrestling Club*
Zoo Disc Frisbee Team

ETHNIC/CULTURAL African Student Association
AFRIK-AM
AHORA
Armenian Student Club
Asian American Student Association
Black Student Union
Boricuas Unidos
Cambodian Student Association
Cape Verdean Student Alliance
Casa Dominicana
Chinese Student Club
Haitian American Students Association
Hellenic Association*
Hillel
Hui Hawaii Ohana*
Irish American Student Assoc.*
Italian American Students Union*
Japan America Club
Korean Student Association
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance
Native American Student Association
SETA
Shades
South Asian Club
Vietnamese Student Association

RECREATION
Ballroom Dance Club
Chess Club
College Bowl Team
Grenadier Society
Hang Gliding Club
Japanese Animation & Manga Society
Kodokan Martial Arts
NE Collegiate Karate Club
Outing Club
Pioneer Valley Combat Club
Racquetball Club
Shotokan Club
Ski Club
Snowboarding Club*
Sport Parachute Club
Tae Kwon Do
WTF Tae Kwon Do

GREEKS
Alpha Chi Rho
Alpha Delta Phi
Alpha Epsilon Pi
Alpha Epsilon Phi
Alpha Kappa Alpha
Chi Omega
Delta Chi
Delta Sigma Theta
Delta Upsilon
Delta Zeta
Iota Gamma Upsilon
Iota Phi Theta
Kappa Alpha Psi*
Kappa Kappa Gamma
Lambda Chi Alpha
Omega Psi Phi*
Order of Omega*
Phi Beta Sigma
Phi Kappa Sigma
Pi Kappa Alpha
Sigma Alpha Mu*
Sigma Delta Tau
Sigma Kappa
Sigma Phi Epsilon
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Zeta Psi*
Zeta Psi Theta

RELIGIOUS
ALANA Christian Alliance
Alliance Christian Fellowship
Ananda Marga
The Ark*
Baha'i Club
Campus Crusade for Christ
Chabad Students
Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship
Hillel
Hindu Students Organization
Intervarsity Christian Fellowship
Meditation League
Muslim Students Association
Newman Club
Pagan Students Organization
Upside Down

POLITICAL
Allied Students Against Prejudice*
Amnesty International*
Animal Rights Coalition
Cannabis Reform Coalition
Clean Rivers Coalition*
European Club
Friends of Bosnia
MASSPIRG
Out of State Student Association*
Progressive Organization for Women's Rights
Radical Student Union
Rainforest Action Group
Republican Club
Soviet Community Empowerment Program*
Students Advocating Financial Assistance
Students Against Driving Drunk
Students for Life
Truth Task Force*
Twenty/Twenty Vision*
University Democrats*
Young Americans For Freedom

SOCIAL
Bridge Club*
Honors Students Association*
International Student Assoc.
National Exchange Club
PHNORD*
Science Fiction Club
SCUM
Single Parents Association

CAMPUS WIDE PROGRAMS
Distinguished Visitors Program
University Productions & Concerts

GOVERNMENTAL
Campus Center/Student Union Commission
Central Area Government
Commuter Area Government
Interfraternity Council
National Pan-Hellenic Council
Northeast Area Government
Orchard Hill Area Government
Panhellenic Council*
Southwest Area Government
Stockbridge Senate
Student Government Association
Sylvan Area Government

MEDIA
Black Mass Communication Project
Collegian
Concepto Latino
In Focus
Index (Yearbook)
Nonatoo News
Silent Majority
Spectrum
Union Video Center
WMUA Radio Station

AGENCIES
Center for Student Businesses
Commuter Services & Housing Resource Center
Student Legal Services Office
Office of Third World Affairs
Student Center for Education, Research & Advocacy
Student Union Art Gallery
Student Union Craft Center

 These groups have been inactive during the 1993-1994 year.*

UMASS Hang Gliding Club
UMASS H[illegible] Gliding Day September 28th
Hotline: 545-0804
Meetings: Thursdays 5:30, Campus Center
"LIVE LIFE HIGH, LEARN TO FLY!"

STUDY ABROAD
Semester, Summer and Year Programs
Ecuador • Spain
England • France
Canada • Mexico
Costa Rico • Italy
isa INTERNATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE
817 W. 24th St Austin, TX 78705 (800) 580-8826 •SINCE 1987•

UMASS Cannabis Reform Coalition
322 STUDENT UNION
HEMP SEED FOOD DAY THIS FRIDAY - ALL DAY AT EARTHORDER IN THE STUDENT UNION
A registered chapter of NORML
545-1122
Another Marijuana Arrest Every Two Minutes
DESIGN BY: THE FUTURE 586-2061

SGA ELECTIONS
FOR SENATE, AREA GOVERNMENT & HOUSE COUNCIL WILL BE HELD TODAY, 11 - 2PM AND 4:30 - 7PM
Northeast and Sylvan Residents Vote at Worcester Dining Common
Central and Orchard Hill Residents Vote at Franklin Dining Common Southwest South Residents Vote at Berkshire Dining Common
Southwest North Residents Vote at Hampshire Dining Common
Residential On Campus (Greeks, Hillel, Lincoln, and North Village) Vote at Newman Center
Commuters Vote at the Hatch

YES,
LIFE IS OFTEN
LIKE A BOX OF CHOCOLATES.
Empty. Desiring something more.
Your life ever been like that? Your life like that now? Maybe there's a part of you that can't be satisfied by anything in this world. As someone has said, "There's a God-shaped vacuum in the heart of every person that only God can fill."
God has a great way of bringing depth and meaning to life. Jesus said, "I came that you might have life, and have it more abundantly." Find out what God can do in your life. We've found that He can make the difference.
"Breakaway" 7 pm Friday nights. Room # posted at info. desk in the Campus Center.
For more info. call Greg at 546-3229 or Cheri at 546-3324 don't settle for anything less.
Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ

~ Art Exhibits ~

Gallery features new exhibits

By H. Varick Pelton
Collegian Correspondent

IN VIVO/NATURE STUDIES
University Gallery
Sept. 9 – Oct. 20

The University Gallery is currently showing two separate exhibitions. The first, titled "In Vivo" features sculptural works by Rebecca Horn, Jon Kessler, Dennis Oppenheim and Alan Rath. Each work in this exhibit is ingeniously animated through electrical and/or mechanical means.

Some of the works exhibited include "Super Wallflower" by Alan Rath, which consists of an arrangement of pulsating and unexpectedly silent speakers. "Fool Box," also by Rath, features an exposed cathode ray tube displaying a mouth and tongue. "Blue Tattoo" by Dennis Oppenheim uses a live video camera to project a blue heart onto a hanging screen. "Bush Wings" by Rebecca Horn is a pair of wings made from paint brushes which flap gracefully when activated by sound.

In addition to the cleverness and fascination of the individual sculptures, there is an interesting effect created by the assemblage of all these works together in one room. For example, Dennis Oppenheim's "Attempt to Raise Hell," sounds a large bell at random intervals. The noise in turn causes "Brush Wings" to begin its (stationary) flight.

The exhibit is supplemented by a video tape presentation of the film Der Lauf der Dinge (The Way Things Go), 1986–87, by Peter Fischli and David Weiss. This fascinating and fun film shows a chain reaction of bags, balloons, buckets, tires, fireworks, flames, chemical reactions and foam which lasts an astonishing 30 minutes.

"In Vivo" is a fun, technological exhibit which should not be missed.

The second exhibit, titled "Nature Studies I," is the first of a two–part series presenting painting and photography in the landscape genre. The current exhibit features paintings by David Bierk, Michael De Jong, Catherine Murphy, Joan Nelson, Alexis Rochman, Rich Shaefer and Brenda Zlamany.

Although presented under a common theme, the works in this exhibit are dramatically diverse. From the peaceful duskiness of Bierk's "A Eulogy to Earth" series to the colorful fantasy of Rockman's underwater scenes, from the simple familiarity of Murphy's streets, to the vivid detail and scientific feel of Zlamany's animal studies, "Nature Studies I" displays the power, diversity and simple harmony of nature.

The University Gallery is open Tue.– Fri. 11 a.m. – 4:30 p.m., Sat. 2:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m, Closed Mon. "In Vivo" and Nature Studies I will be on exhibit from through October 20. Nature Studies II opens November 3.

UM students show summer art work

Herter Gallery showcases exchange students pieces, works

By Wiebke Schweer
Collegian Correspondent

"FRANCE '95"
Herter Gallery
Sept. 18 – Sept. 28

"I learned more about art history in these six weeks in France than in four years at school. It was great," said Jacelyn Faces, a University of Massachusetts student, at the opening of the new exhibition "France '95" in Herter Gallery this past Monday.

Faces is one of 40 students who presented the results of their work within the University of Massachusetts art summer program at the Chateau de la Neopallia near Cannes. The group was directed by Professor Frank Ozerka and Susan Jahoda, professor of photography.

The UMass students lived, worked and studied under the instructions of Francine Ozereko, Gallery Director Carol Struve, Stephen Niccolls and Robert Blake, in the old castle located right on the coast of the Mediterranean.

The days started with a critic meeting, where works and ideas where discussed, followed by independent studies. The art majors experimented with paintings, drawings, 3–D and 2–D Design, sculptures and photography.

"Everybody worked for his own level," said participant Susanne Rodilosso.

Creative work filled the days but there was also plenty of time to travel and have fun. Students discovered France by several trips all over the south of France. The students were given the opportunity to visit and experience Avignon, the Matisse and Chagall Museums in Nice and the Picasso Museum in Antibes.

"At the beginning I painted what I saw," Rodilosso said, "but after visiting the museums about Matisse and Picasso, their style began to influence my work."

The influence of the French environment, the people, the architecture as well as the works of famous artists can be seen in all the works at the exhibition.

Black and white photos of French villages and people are shown next to scenery from Provence and abstract colorful paintings. Many handmade books show photos of the castle and the places the students travelled to. Others give away some little secrets like diaries or show private drawings. Several videos made from and of the young artists can be seen in the second showroom.

At the opening, Struve explained the meaning of some puppets, hanging in the middle of the room.

"We all had to make a puppet of one of the participants and play theater with them on one of the last evenings," she said.

The results of these exciting days can be visited till September 28. Herter Gallery hours: M–F 11–4 PM. Herter Gallery is located in the Herter Annex, 125A Herter Hall, at the top of Haigis Mall on the campus of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. All events are free & open to the public.

■ talk shows

continued from page 6

insight, her thoughts, and whatever else comes along with the package."

Walberg — not singer Marky Mark Wahlberg, but a 32-year-old father of two who has been a member of the singing group Young Americans, an ESPN host and a warmup comedian — provides an appealing male focus, Tartikoff said.

"Television has a lot of surrogate relationships," Tartikoff said. "When they see Mark Walberg, they see the guy next door ... and ask, 'Why can't I have a guy like that?' A shoulder to cry on, somebody to talk to, somebody who's genuinely fun.

"He emotes on camera. He comes through that tube. He has what I used to call 'the airport factor.' If you ran into this guy in an airport and you'd seen him on TV, you'd go up to him and say hi."

With the talent in place, Clark said, the producer has to ask: "OK, then what segment of the market are we assigned to? How do we harness this thing? And can we do it with a reasonable amount of taste and still get an audience?"

That task hasn't changed; the audience has. A decade ago, the typical daytime viewer was an older woman with deeply ingrained viewing habits, Tartikoff said. In the last five years, she has grown much younger.

"There's a new generation locking into place," he said. "The loyalty that the viewers have in daytime television is less to the program and more to the content of the program on a particular day."

The success of the younger-oriented "Rikki Lake" show wasn't lost on talk show producers. "If you come out with a different attitude, a different style of show and sensibility ... you can just come in and suck all the younger viewership out of the older programs," Tartikoff said.

"It's really been the younger shows that have been the growth properties, and all of the older programs for several years, have been showing the erosions," Tartikoff said.

In such a crowded field, there will be casualties, Clark said.

"We all have pretty good distribution, with pretty big companies and promotion behind us. I'm sure everybody has a capable staff," Clark said.

"You don't want to root for anybody's lack of success, but somebody will drop by the wayside and that'll make life easier," he said.

HELP WANTED

Drivers Needed to Deliver the UMass Collegian on Campus

Must Have a Car

Stop in at the Collegian in the basement of the Campus center or Call 545-3500 and ask for Ryan or Earl

Boricuas Unidos
The Puerto Rican Student Organization
404 Student Union
C.A.O Box 206 ~
University Of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
(413) 545-0054 Fax(413) 545-4751

Come down to the Collegian...
~
We need people to make better filler ads

the INDEX
Yearbook of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Q: What do the Index Yearbook and an elephant have in common?

The Index is:
- The only all-color college yearbook in New England.
- Great for increasing your resume with real experience.
- Offering paid positions or internships in Copy, Layout, Photo, and Production.
- Always hungry for free pizza.
- Three computers networked to a laser printer and CD-ROM.
- A financially independent organization with an operating budget of $100,000.
- Trained by professional publishers, photographers, and a desktop layout specialist.
- Completely student run.
- Dressed in funky staff clothes.
- Produced in its own office by about twenty close-knit people.
- An opportunity to get published.

A: They both have good memories.

304 Student Union . University of Massachusetts . Amherst, MA 01003-0146 . (413) 545-0848

THE INDEX YEARBOOK
NEEDS
NEW STAFF FOR
PAID POSITIONS:
($$$$$$)
PHOTO, LAYOUT,
COPY, & MARKETING
WORK FOR THE ONLY ALL-COLOR YEARBOOK IN NEW ENGLAND
COME TO
WEEKLY MEETINGS
Mondays 7:30pm
304 Student Union
FREE FOOD!!
PRIZES!!
WIN $$$!!
MEET PEOPLE!! or drop by anytime
or call anytime
545-0848

COURTESY TOP ARTISTS PRODUCTIONS

moe will hit the Valley tonight with Chin Ho! an improv band with Phish like qualities.

moe & Ho! to take the Iron Horse

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Remember back a few years ago when the majority of people on this campus still spelled Phish with an F?

Back then those lovable hippies from Vermont could still be seen in the comfort of your local watering hall, jamming for hours on end while you and your pals were sipping some brew. Oh you weren't there? Too bad. But now you can be.

Wednesday night, The Iron Horse will showcase two upcoming bands who appear to be headed for crunchy heaven.

Like so many of their neo–hippies counterparts both moe and Chin Ho!, mix jazz, rock, funk, country and lots more to process a sound that is often compared to Frank Zappa and Phish.

Forever on tour, the Buffalo band has gained a loyal following over the past three years. The Village Voice even dubbed moe, "among the best of the third–generation stoner jam bands." Their self released tapes, only available at shows, have sold very well and they have charted on radio stations all over the country. Amazing considering lack of support from any label.

Appearing along side moe will be Chin Ho! a band in the same shoes of Phish circa 1991. Hailing from Burlington, they just released their third full length on their own label, Monastery Records. The hype around them has been enormous. One paper went as far to ask, "Will Phishtory repeat itself?" See for yourself.

moe and Chin Ho! will be appearing at the Iron Horse Music Hall tonight. The show starts at 8:30 p.m. and tickets are $6 available at the door or at the Northampton Box Office located in Thorne's Market, 150 Main Street, Northampton. Call (413) 586–8686 or 1–800–THE TICK.

New opera to premiere at Smith College

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Smith College Music Department will present a new opera entitled S. this Thursday and Saturday evening.

The two–act work, based on the 1988 comic novel by John Updike, reunites composer Ronald Perea, librettist Constance Congdon and stage director Mark Harrison, the same creative team responsible for the opera The Yellow Wallpaper (1989).

S. relates the story of Sarah Worth a.k.a. S., a North Shore matron and wife of a prominent Boston doctor. In a radical and sudden change, Sarah exchanges her life of social responsibility for that of a pilgrim at the Arizona ashram of a Hindu spiritual leader. Her spiritual progress is chronicled in a stream of letters to the people of her "old" life who include her husband, daughter, mother, dentist and of course, her psychiatrist.

Rising through the hierarchy, Sarah finds things are not quite what they seem. Along the way, the audience is led on a hilarious romp through 1980's American culture.

The cast for this production is made up of Five College faculty and students, as community members. Guest professional artists include Jan Curtis, Brenda Dawe, James Maddalena, recently praised for his appearances with Glimmerglass Opera and Douglas Perry. Perry is best known for his universally acclaimed portrayal of Mahatma Gandhi in Phillip Glass' opera Satyagraha.

Jane Bryden will play the title role, supported by Jon Humphrey, Karen Smith Emerson, Paulina Stark, Stephen Curylo and Cheryl Cobb. Smith College's new Acting Director of Choral Activities, Paul Flight, will conduct.

S. is sponsored in part by WFCR 88.5/Public Radio for Western New England.

Performances will take place at Smith College in Theater 14 of the Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. Both shows begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $16 gen.; $14 for students and seniors over 65. Tickets can be purchased at the Northampton Box office located in Thorne's Market, 150 Main Street, Northampton. Call (413) 586–8686 or 1–800– THE TICK.

'Law & Order' has staying power

Benjamin Bratt joins all star cast; show wasn't expected to last

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC has taken to hyping "Law & Order" as "the second-longest-running drama series on network television." No one mentions it would have to stay on the schedule through 2001 to match "Murder, She Wrote's" tenure right now.

